VERMILYEA MURDER HEARING MAY END TODAY

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Cortland, N.Y., Dec. 1 (CP) — A big smile on his face, a 6-year-old youngster stood beside a big truck yesterday watching men loading cabbage into a freight car.

A farmer and his helpers were tossing a cabbage from truck to car and failed to notice the youngster even when he called.

"Hey, Mister!"

The lad called again, a little louder, and a farmer peered over the side of the truck. "What's the matter with you?" he asked.

"I'm a good football player; try me on a forward pass, will ya?" the tot queried.

A big head of cabbage sailed through the air, and the boy braced himself to receive it. It staggered him, but he hung on and raced for home. A friend saw the running boy and called after him, "Kenny, how many passes is that you've caught, now?"

"Sixty-five," Kenny replied as he disappeared into his house to place the 65th head with the supply he had provided for his mother, who does not always know where the cash for groceries is coming from.

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 1 (CP) — Bigger and barter weddings is the slogan of Miss Jessie Barley and Roy C. MacDonald.

Even the clergyman will trade his services for something of value (not money) at the ceremony set for December 16, the couple announced today.

The bride's trousseau, the bridegroom's suit, the flowers and wedding breakfast have all been arranged for on the barter plan by the Berkeley self-help co-operative of which Miss Barley and MacDonald are members.

Oklahoma City, Dec. 1 (CP)—A questionnaire 22 1-2 inches long and 12 inches wide will confront political job hunters under the administration of Governor-Elect E. W. Marland. There also will be space for a picture of the applicant. Twenty-five thousand application blanks have been printed.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Dec. 1 (CP)—A report that an unclad baby was lying unprotected from the chill weather in the back seat of a parked car sent police racing to the scene, vowing to "threw everything in the law book" at the parents.

They found the baby as re-reported, its sawdust torso stared stiff by the cold.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 1 (CP)—Some 4,000 men, women and children are Kentucky Colonels, but there's only one "skipper of the Ohio River." Governor Ruby Laffoon issued that title to Fred Erhart of Louisville.

FLOODS DO HEAVY DAMAGE IN AUSTRALIA

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 1 (AP) Five persons were dead in the worst floods in the history of the district of Melbourne today, following 30 hours of continuous rain and gale.

The damage was estimated at $1,000,000. About 1,500 persons were homeless in the city and thousands of livestock had perished in the country. Three men were killed when they entered water in which a live wire was submerged.

The floods devastated large areas near Melbourne. In many places trees were torn up by the roots and Centenary decorations were ripped to pieces. Thousands of sheep and cattle were drowned in Gippsland and trains were marooned.

Municipal Candidates Given Attentive Hearing In Outlining Policies

Meeting at City Hall Largely Attended And Orderly

NO HECKLING

Members of Council Give Resume and Aspirants Program

At one of the most tranquil and orderly pre-election meetings in the records of the city, candidates for the Mayoralty and Aldermanic offices of the municipal elections on Monday, made their last pleas to electors of the city from the stage of the city hall auditorium last evening.

Upward of eight hundred citizens, who crowded into the filled auditorium and overflowed the corridors sat silent and interested, indulging only in sustained outbursts of applause for their favorite speakers as the new candidates for municipal honors outlined their policies if elected for the coming term, and the present members of council gave an accounting of their year just closing.

Ex-Mayor Morley Duff, present Commissioner of Hydro, and chairman of the evening opened the proceedings with the invitation for speakers to hold themselves to a certain time limit "I'd suggest a ten minute period for the Mayoralty candidates; five minuteh for the aspirants for alderman," he added.

In his opening remarks, ex-Mayor Duff called attention to the fact that there were plenty of other speakers without the necessity of him interjecting any remarks. "And I would appreciate it if the audience will give every candidate an even chance to speak. Then, when they're through speaking, you may ask all the questions you wish," he invited.

Ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid, present chairman of the local Hydro Commission, given the courtesy as the first speaker of the evening, thanked

BURIED BY BRICKS FIREMEN RESCUED

Ten Members of Denver Force Reported in Dangerous State

Denver, Dec. 1.—Ten firemen, rescued from a blazing building after they were trapped in a cave-in, were in serious condition today in a hospital.

Three were reported in "very dangerous" condition, while the seven others were not entirely out of danger.

The men were catapulted from ladders near the top of the three-storey Midwest Trunk and Bag Manufacturing Company plant in the midtown wholesale district last night after a section of wall collapsed. Other firemen dropped hose lines, and risking danger to themselves, dug the ten from the pile of red-hot bricks and twisted debris.

The cause of the fire and the amount of damage were not immediately determined.

FAVORS COALITION

C. H. CARLISLE

In addressing the Toronto board of trade, Mr. C. H. Carlisle, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., advocated a coalition government for Canada, stating that one party should not have control of Canada's increasing national debt Mr. Carlisle also expressed himself as in favor of abolishing provincial governments.

PREMIER SPEAKS OF DISMISSALS

Recommendations Largely Made, He Says on Word of M.P.P.'s-Elect

PREMIER ETC coas

Toronto, Dec. 1.—(CP)—Dismissals in the outside service of the Ontario government were made largely on the recommendation of local members-elect of the legislature, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn said today in commenting on a meeting held at Grimsby last night protesting dismissals of small government employees.

Mr. Hepburn suggested the Grimsby people registering the protests communicate with Major F. H. Avery of St. Catharines, member-elect for Lincoln-St. Catharines.

The dismissals were made for just and sufficient reason, the Premier said, adding that in the case of the Government Liquor Stores, the dismissals followed a survey by Commissioner E. G. Odette which indicated the service was overstaffed.

Mr. Hepburn charged the officials in the Liquor Stores had been "arrogant and fomineering believing their positions secure."

BODY OF WOMAN WILL BE EXHUMED

TORONTO Dec. 1.—(CP)—The body of a young woman who died at Alliston presumably from a haemorrhagic condition will be exhumed over the week-end and an inquest held, Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck announced today.

The Attorney General revealed the girl's name as Grace Howard, and her age as 21. Her death occurred on October 30.

FREIGHTER CREW ESCAPE BY ROPE HAND ON HAND

Twenty-Five Men Make Way to Breakwater And Then to Shore

TUGBOAT FOUNDERS

Crew of Two Leave Steel Tug in Detroit River

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 1—(AP)—Twenty-five members of the whaleback freighter Henry Cort's crew reached shore safely this morning, 11 hours after the ship struck the Muskegon harbor breakwater last night in a 60-mile gale.

Making their way to the breakwater, hand over hand, on a long shot to the freighter by coast guardsmen, the sailors fought their way over a mile of the wave-lashed breakwater to shore.

All Exhausted

All were exhausted and suffering from exposure. Some had to be assisted to shore, apparently injured.

The Cort was wrecked on the breakwaters at the harbor mouth shortly after 10 p.m. last night after having been blown off its course and apparently disabled, while enroute from Holland to Chicago.

The revenue cutter near the freighter Escanaba reported that there was a wide crack near the vessel's bow and that the boat had settled and apparently was resting on the bottom.

The Cort is a 315-foot whaleback, a type fast disappearing from the lakes. December 24, 1933, the Cort scraped over Balland Reef in the Livingstone Channel at Detroit and sank. It was then loaded with 3,000 tons of pig iron. Later the craft was raised and refitted for service.

Steel Tug Sinks

Cleveland, O., Dec. 1—(AP)—The steel tug boat Lakeside III sank near the mouth of the Detroit River today according to a message to coast guardsmen here.

According to meagre reports the boat a 50 foot steel tug propelled by gasoline and owned by W. R Brown, of Lakeside, was abandoned by its crew of two, three miles off the Detroit River light. The two men, according to coast guardsmen, floated away on the superstructure.

The boat has been carrying grapes from Lake Erie islands to Cleveland and Detroit this fall.

It was captained by Jack Meatsaw. The name of the other man aboard was not immediately available.

HUNDREDS ATTEND I.O.O.F. BANQUET

Thomasburg Lodge No. 293 Entertain Many Guests

Thomasburg, Dec. 1.Despite the adverse weather between three and four hundred people attended the fowl supper of the Independent Order of Oddfellows Lodge No. 293 Thomasburg. A delicious supper was served by the ladies of the community.

Mr. J. E. Bateman, District Deputy Grand Master of I.O.O.F. of Lodge 293, Thomasburg, was the chairman of the evening. Mr. Jack Elder, entertainer of Kingston, gave several interesting numbers. Rev. H. B. Herrington of Thomasburg United Church gave a short but inspiring address. A reading was given by Rev. D. C. Hill, Presbyterian minister of Roslin. Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., delivered an address on the political organization of Soviet Russia. Rev. F. C. Beazer of Roslin Anglican Church delighted the audience with a solo, "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes". Short talks were given by Mr. Millar, District Deputy, Lodge 47, Belleville Mr. N. Foster, Past Noble Grand Master, Lodge 10, Cataraqui, and Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, Past Chief Patriarch, Lodge 47, Belleville.

The proceeds of the evening were used for the remodelling of the hall. The remodelling and beautiful decorations brought forth many complimentary remarks.

FEES RETURNED TO HOTELS

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Arnold Smith, director of hotels and personnel for the Ontario Liquor Control Board, said today hotelkeepers in Galt, Alexandria and Lancaster would be refunded each $300 paid for beer and wine authorities cancelled by the Board under the ruling that a vote is necessary in those municipalities.

Farmer's Death Caused by Bear Scaring Horses

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—William Clarke of Wilberforce who was seriously injured when a bear frightened a team of horses which he was driving died in the hospital here at 7 o'clock last evening.

Mr. Clarke had been driving a team of horses to Essonville with a wagon and cart and while going through an old bush road about two miles from Tory Hill the horses were frightened by a bear crossing the road. The team ran away and Clarke was thrown off, the cart passing over his right leg breaking the bone and cutting it badly. He lay on the ground for half an hour before he was discovered by John Noble of Essonville who brought him to the Red Cross outpost. Infection due to exposure caused death.

REPORT ACCURACY WILL BE STUDIED

Executive Session of Mass Buying Probe Will Compare Wages

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Chain stores won a partial victory on Friday afternoon when the mass buying commission decided to hold an executive session on the accuracy of a report submitted by A. S. Whiteley of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on wages paid by independent merchants.

The Whiteley report showed independents paid higher wages on the average than chain stores. Lawyers for the chains attacked it on the grounds it was not a true reflection of wage conditions and finally the commission agreed to hold an executive session and decide whether [illegible] basis of comparison [illegible]. The report was limited to Ontario and the names of the stores, each with a volume of $20,000 a year or over, were selected at random. From a list of 1,200 stores, 300 were selected, the chains claiming this could not be compared to the audited reports of wages paid by them.

HOLLYWOOD GIRL TO BE EXPELLED

Lillian Steele Held on Suspicion is Not "Professional Spy"

Berlin, Dec. 1.—Douglas Jenkins, United States Consul General, was informed today by the Prussian Ministry of Justice that Miss Isobel Lillian Steele of Hollywood, Calif., who has been held in Moabit prison four months, will be expelled from Germany because investigations had revealed she is not "a professional spy".

Secretary Preisler of the Prussian Ministry of Justice said the government would ask the Department of Justice to issue the expulsion order against the Toronto-born woman.

Preisler revealed, however, that the authorities regard the case of Richard Roiderer of Chicago, who has been in prison for the last five months in Bavaria, as more serious.

It was said that he might be tried for espionage, since it was alleged that military notes were found in his possession.

ONE POLICE FORCE MACBRIEN'S HOPE

Head of Mounted Police Says Fewer Forces Mean Efficiency

Stratford, Ont., Dec. 1 (CP)—Expressing the hope that the day would come when there would be one police force in Canada, Major General J. H. MacBrien, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, expressed the opinion that the fewer police forces there are in a country, the more efficient is the police work. It was quite possible to have one police force in Canada, with the resultant saving in money, Major General MacBrien said.

In addition to this national police force, there would be of course, he explained, the city police forces in the larger centres.

The commissioner was the guest speaker at the annual mess dinner of the officers of the Perth Regiment, of which he is the Honorary Colonel. He addressed the officers and their guests in the mess at the armouries, following the St. Andrew's Day haggis dinner.

FINDS ARSENIC ADMINISTERED BY UNKNOWN PERSON

Jury at Port Hope Favors Continuance of Investigation

FAMILY AFFAIRS

Trouble in Wilson Home at Port Hope Over Baby Revealed

Port Hope, Del. 1 (CP)—Donald Wilson, Port Hope editor, died from arsenic poison "administered to him by some person or persons unknown," declared the verdict of a coroner's jury here last night. "Donald Wilson did not commit suicide," the verdict said.

After sitting all afternoon to hear evidence, the jury announced its findings and recommended investigation into Wilson's death be continued. Its complete verdict read:

"Donald Wilson did not commit suicide, but came to his death by arsenic poison administered to him by some person or persons unknown. He died on October 28 at about 3.45 a.m. in Port Hope Hospital and the jury recommends that further investigation be carried on."

STERILIZATION IS NOT PLANNED

Hon. Dr. Faulkner Says He Has No Intention Regarding Insane

Toronto, Dec. 1. — The Ontario Department of Health has no intention at present of advocating inmates of provincial mental hospitals be sterilized, Hon. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, said.

Commenting on a resolution passed yesterday by the York County Council, the minister said "that would be a very serious move for any government to take up and I have no idea of taking it up with the cabinet at present".

PARLIAMENT MAY OPEN JANUARY 10

Expect Session Will be Last Before General Election

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP)—With prospects of parliament being called to meet in January becoming brighter, political activity in Ottawa is speeding up. It is expected a special issue of the Canada Gazette will make its appearance shortly containing notice of the opening of parliament though whether a definite date will be named is still doubtful.

Parliament usually assembles on a Thursday with the remainder of the week being devoted to formalities and social functions and Jan. 10 is now looked upon as the most likely date.

As the 1935 session will be the last before a general election much depends on the course of events during the next few months. The length of the session will likely be determined by the attitude of the Liberal opposition and that in turn by the government's program of legislation.

While Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and the other cabinet ministers are busy preparing the sessional program Liberal leader Mackenzie King, recently returned from a trip to Europe, is quietly studying the Canadian political situation.

Last session was one of the heaviest from the point of view of Legislation in many years with a new Bank Act, a Central Bank Act, a new Companies Act, a Marketing Act and a Shipping Act coming from the legislative mill. Compared with it the new session is expected to present a much shorter legislative programme although it may be more spectacular.

Measures based on the investigation of price spreads and mass buying, unemployment insurance and some unknown spectacular measure designed to raise a sharp election issue are talked of in political circles.

HOURS OF VOTING

Stain on Overcoat Not of Human Blood Inspector is Told

TESTIMONY AS TO CALLS

Medical Testimony Expected to be Given Late Today

That Charles Nichols, a salesman for the Simpson Company of Toronto picked out Vermilyea "the fourth man from the left in the line-up" as the man to whom he had sold a hatchet, was the evidence given by Inspector Gardiner this afternoon at the resumption of the hearing of the charge against Harold Vermilyea, of murdering his mother, Mrs. Nathaniel Vermilyea, with a hatchet on the night of Oct. 4th. The "line-up" in question was at College Street police station, Toronto, on Sunday, Oct. 21st.

Nichols will not appear at this hearing it was intimated.

Stains found on the overcoat taken from the accused, Harold W. Vermilyea in possession of Dr. Frankish and not produced until today by Inspector Hamar Gardner of the C.I.D., Toronto, at the adjourned hearing of Harold W. Vermilyea, charged with the murder of his mother on the night of October 4th last, were not human blood stains according to a verbal report given to the Inspector by Dr. Frankish before the Inspector left for Belleville today.

The preliminary hearing, which has continued for the past three Saturdays, will likely be concluded late this afternoon and a decision given by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., as to whether the accused will have to stand trial for the crime charged against him. At the hearing today Inspector Gardner was the chief witness, he giving in detail his connection with the case from the time he was called to Belleville early on the morning of October 5th until he returned to Belleville with the accused on Oct. 21st. In the course of his evidence, Col. Greer opposed some statements being recorded unless the Crown was prepared to corroborate them and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., assured the defence counsel, that this would be done.

Gardner Testifies

Inspector Gardner told of his trip to California by train and plane and of the conversations he had with officials in that city and at Ontario California, the home of the accused, and he also identified the articles produced by Chief John Locke at the hearing on Saturday last as the ones taken from the contents of the accused's personal belongings at the time of the search made by Chief Locke. The Inspector told of his conversation with a Mr. Fontaine, manager of the Los Angeles garage where a car, allegedly owned by Vermilyea, was stored from the 25th of September until the morning of October 6th. The witness produced a claim stub from that garage and also the ledger sheet on which the car was entered in the garage, but this was objected to by Col. Greer unless Mr. Fontaine was brought to identify same.

Miss Kelso again gave evidence but it differed but little from the testimony she gave at the inquest to inquire into the death of Mrs. Nathaniel Vermilyea, which inquest has been adjourned until the second Monday in April. The witness was positive that she saw a light colored coat through the door which was ajar but at the time the coat was stationary. Col. Greer was sollicitous to know if the witness turned her head to the left to look through the door that was ajar and Miss Kelso said that might be so. Miss Kelso also stated that she distinctly heard Mrs. Vermilyea say when she went to the door the second time when the bell rang "Is it you again?"

Hearing May Close Today

At times today Vermilyea sat on the chair with his legs sprawled in front of him, while at other times he placed his hands deep in his pockets and walked about, stopping every once in awhile to look out of the window upon the market square. Before the court rose for the morning session, Col. Greer informed the court that his cross-examination of Inspector Gardner would not last more than ten minutes and he hoped that the Crown

12,000 Nobles Of Animal World At Chicago Show

(By James J. Strebig)

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—The 35th annual live stock exposition opened today, answering the challenges of drought, depression and fire.

The thousands who came saw a double rebuke to the threats against the great fat animal and grain show which were first manifested in the stockyards fire last May and reached great proportions in the drought of last summer.

The $1,250,000 ampitheatre housing the show replaced the one destroyed by flames; the exhibits equalled in number and quality those of 1933.

Spread over the acres of display were 12,000 members of Canadian and United States animal nobility from which the royal family will be chosen.

RURAL RESIDENTS WELCOME THE RAIN

There was little gloominess on the faces of rural residents from throughout this section, despite the fact that they stood in a penetrating drizzle of rain all morning beside their offerings to local buyers.

"A fine growing rain" was the general opinion of the majority. In referring to the almost continuous drizzle of the past three days.

"Badly needed," commented Mr. Wm. Michael, Dominion Seed Inspector of the local office. "The rain is just as necessary to the land as it will be to the wells of the district that have been dried up. The land had been exceedingly dry from the weeks of drought previously," he added.

LOCAL CUSTOMS SHOW INCREASE

A decided increase over the previous month, and the corresponding period of one year ago was registered at the local port of customs it is shown in the statement of customs returns for the past month, issued today. A gain of $14,294.46 over the same month one year ago is noted. The following returns are given: For November 1934 a total of $77,615.53. For November 1933 a total of $63,321.07. During the month of October this year a total of $76,635.09 in receipts was registered.

WINS FIFTH PLACE IN BARLEY EXHIBIT

Mr. Dave Thrasher of the third concession of Sidney who has gained considerable recognition in the past as a grower of prize grain and seeds was given the ribbon for fifth place in the registered barley exhibit at the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto. He competed with exhibitors from throughout the province.

MARIGOLDS PICKED IN CITY GARDEN

Mild weather which has prevailed for some days with rain moistening the ground has had the tendency to induce outdoor flowers to bloom. Today Mrs. Frank Hannah, who resides at 17 Evans Street, city, picked from her garden several marigolds.

LOCAL DISTILLERY BUSY ON EFFORT

Exports of bulk spirits from Corbyville during the past few weeks is said to have materially increased with many old hands being returned to work by the company. Exports now leaving the plant are destined for points across the border of the United States and are greater in volume than they have been for a considerable period.

ARCTIC OWL SEEN LOOKING FOR FOOD

A scarcity of mice and other small rodents in the north is believed to be responsible for the appearance in the city of a large Arctic or snow owl in the vicinity of the old Tickell Furniture Factory building on upper Pinnacle Street last evening. The large bird was diligently engaged in hunting when observed.

LIGHT VOTING AT ADVANCE POLL

Last year during the three days the advance poll was opened to allow railway employees and others who would be absent on election day to exercise their franchise, 129 votes were recorded. This year the prospects are that not more than half that number will vote. Up to noon today only 40 had voted. The advance pole closes this evening.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR MARKING BALLOTS

To clear up any misunderstanding which is said to exist among electors of the city regarding the marking of ballots on Monday, election day, City Clerk Wilfred J. Holmes today warned.

"You don't have to mark your ballot for every candidate who appears on the list. You may put only one or two or three crosses on the whole ballot if you wish. But do not mark more than thirteen crosses on the aldermanic list. If you do the ballot will be disqualified."

A well known alderman of the present council stated he had been approached by many citizens who confessed themselves hazy regarding the matter of marking ballots.

BUILDING PERMITS GIVEN OVER 1933

Alterations, improvements and new construction in the city during the past month resulted in a considerable gain in building permits over the corresponding period of one year ago. During the past month of October, a total of $5,025 in building permits were issued by the city engineers. During November 1933, the total had been registered at $1,200.

ABSENT STUDENTS MUST VISIT DOCTOR

To forestall the threat of scarlet fever in local schools following the discovery of two cases at the local Collegiate and Vocational Institute, Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H., for the city has instructed principal of the Collegiate Mr. P. C. MacLaurin to demand a doctor's certificate of health from all pupils absent from classes for even a half day. Although the discovery of the two cases does not imply that an outbreak of the disease is expected the measures are taken as precautionary ones. No similiar discoveries have been made in the local public schools, as far as known.

CONVENTION TO BE HELD BY DAIRYMEN

Dairymen from throughout the Eastern Ontario section will congregate in Napanee on Thursday and Friday, January 3rd and 4th at the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association. The eastern convention will be held just one month after the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, being held this year in Picton on December 4th and 5th.

HAGGIS PIPED IN AT SCOTS SUPPER

St. Andrew's Nicht is Celebrated at John Street Church

The Scotch dinner and program arranged by the men of John Street United Church last night was attended by a capacity crowd which found the evening delightfully different from start to finish. The guests, assembled in the church to await their turn at table, heard a group of Scottish airs played by the organist, Mr. Alec Gordon. Supper was served in the church hall, a supper which will long be remembered by those who had the pleasure of attending.

Heather, Scotch thistle and St. Andrew's flags were used as decorations in keeping with the occasion, St. Andrew's night, and the bill of fare was one to delight the heart of any Scotchman. As a toast to the dinner Miss Leona Riggs sang "The Hieland Man's Toast". Roast pork, champet tatties, bannocks and kale were served, and then the feature of the evening, the arrival of the haggis. Jamie Clark piped in the haggis, four stalwart assistants parading with the dish and Mr. James Bankier sang "The Toast to the Haggis".

Oat cakes, seed cakes and scones were served with coffee, and after the delicious program an interesting program was held.

The delightful numbers included a skit from "The Window in Thrums" those taking part being Mrs. Laurie Lewis, Mr. James Bankier, Mr. Jamieson Bone and Mr. Russell Hachborn. Miss "Tootsie" Clark contributed a Highland Fling and a Sword Dance, her father piping for her.

Her other numbers were Sheen Trues and an Irish Jig. Mr. Clark also gave numbers on the pipes. Miss Jessie Tuite gave interesting readings and Mr. Bankier was heard in solo numbers. The program came to a close with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne".

The evening's entertainment was in charge of the men of the church. Mr. Douglas Bews and Mr. P. G. Denike acting as conveners.

FAULKNER PRAISES RED CROSS NURSE

Toronto, Dec. 1—While assuring the Ontario division of the Red Cross Society that it will receive as large a grant from the government this year as the treasury will allow, Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, yesterday paid warm tribute to nurses in Red Cross hospitals.

Speaking before the 15th annual meeting of the Ontario division, he said he had considerable experience in working with Red Cross outposts and the nurses therein were most competent.

"I never ran across a Red Cross nurse yet that I would hesitate to take into the humblest home in this province to perform a major operation," he said. "In some of these hospitals you have Red Cross nurses that can go as superintendent in any hospital in Toronto. I don't know who selects them, but they are most efficient and competent."

PATRON SAINT OF SCOTCH HONORED

Banquet and Program Given in I.O.O.F. Hall to Large Gathering

The sound of the pibroch and the ever-welcomed songs of Scotland swept over the I.O.O.F. Hall last evening, when the Sons of Scotland held their annual St. Andrew's night gathering last evening, when all local sons of the heather convened to celebrate the annual occasion of the organization in the I.O.O.F. lodge room, the gathering adjourned to the Scottish-decorated banquet hall where the Rev. W. J. Walker of S. Andrew's Church assumed the speaker's chair and delivered a most welcomed address on the subject of "Scotland and her patron Saint". The talk given by Rev. Walker proved most interesting and educational, insofar as the subject of the day was concerned. Rev. Mr. Walker gave a vivid and detailed address on the subject of Scotland, explaining why the heather was the emblem of the country.

During the evening Professor A. Johnstone rendered Scottish tunes on the bagpipes, while an excellent Scotch programme was presented with Mr. A. Clazie as Chief. The programme was as follows:

Selection—Prof. Johnstone, pipes.
Solo—Mrs. Bell.
Violin solo—N. Meldron.
Tap dance—Bob Claire.
Solo—Claire Patterson.
Wagner pupils—Miss G. Leaming.
Reading—Mrs. Hickey.
Speaker—Rev. W. J. Walker.
Scotch dance—Jean Blair.
Solo—Mrs. Gillitt.
Piano solo—Misses Shorey.
Solo—Mr. S. Hector.
Finale—Wagner pupils.

The committee in charge were—Robert White, Mrs. Byrne, Wm. Givens, J. Ingram, W. Logan and R. Browning.

CAR CRASHES INTO REAR OF TRUCK

Driver Claims He Was Blinded by Lights of Approaching Car

Allan Herring, 310 Albert Street, sustained severe facial injuries when catapulted through the windshield of the automobile in which he was riding at 7.10 a.m. today. Herring was rushed to the office of Dr. E. Connor by the local police, following investigation where he received medical attention.

Herring was riding in the front seat of a motor car, being driven westward by T. H. Kelly of this city, when the automobile crashed into the rear end of a parked truck a number of yards west of the lower bridge on West Bridge Street this morning. Kelly sustained minor cuts on the hands and arms from flying glass from the windshield which was shattered. Kelly was driving his automobile westward to proceed to work at the Trenton Airport. Mr. Kelly informed Sergeant Harman who investigated the accident, that another car was approaching from the west and hampered his vision with blinding headlights. Both Kelly and Herring assured the authorities that they did not see the truck that was stopped on West Bridge Street previous to the impact. The truck was owned and operated by Thomas Dall, 53 Baldwin Street, and had stopped in order to pick up a number of passengers to transport them to the Trenton Airport. The matter is being investigated by the police.

Four hundred guests were present last evening at the informal euchre and dance given by the American Hardware Corporation of Canada, Limited, for employees and their friends at their plant, 180 Coleman street. The first of its kind in the city, the function was an unqualified success, the guests keenly enjoying the thoughtful hospitality extended them.

The affair was held on the second floor of the firm's new building, artistic decorations transforming the long spacious room into an ideal setting for the party. Streamers of crepe paper in pale green and rose were hung from the ceiling lights, the pillars and draped at the windows in an artistic manner, while the lower lights were shaded with crepe paper. The whole effect, particularly when the lights were dimmed for dancing was very charming and reflected great credit on those in charge of the decoration.

55 Tables of Euchre

During the earlier part of the evening euchre was played fifty-five tables being in progress. At the conclusion of the games the floor was cleared for dancing and the walls which usually resounded with the hum of machinery, now echoed the melodies of the music provided by the Commodore Orchestra. A number of square dances were played as well as the usual dance program.

At midnight a delicious lunch was served and the winners of the prizes were announced. These were presented with their gifts by His Worship, Mayor Tice. The winners were as follows — euchre, ladies' first— Mrs. A. Stapleton (book ends); ladies' second—Mrs. R. S. Gibson (nut-cracker); consolation—Miss Redner (ash tray); men's first—Mr. Todd (cigars); second—Mr. Pat Drumm (nut cracker); consolation—Mr. F. D. White (ash tray). The handsome bridge lamp a door prizee, was won by Miss Stella Elliott, while the men's door prize, an electric toaster, was won by Mr. Clifford Gibson. The highlight of the evening was the presentation of a special prize to Mr. Harold Smith for being "such a wonderful euchre player".

Dancing

Dancing continued after the distribution of prizes and during the evening a number of awards were made for prize dances which were won as follows: Miss Ruth Plunder (book ends); Miss Muriel Leavey (box of chocolates); Mrs. Frank Dahmer (purse) Miss Helen Stevens (electric marcelling irons), and Miss Frances Magyiacomo (box of chocolates).

The prizes for the evening were generously donated by the Patterson Construction Company, Ontario Electric Construction Company Canadian Atlas Steel, Howe and Hagerman, L. E. McLean and K. N. Gerow. The hosts are also indebted to the following for their assistance in making the evening such a success—Walker Hardware, Bowra Electric Hardware, St. Michael's Church, Y.M.C.A., Loyal Order of Moose Board of Education, Canada Transport H. LaPalm and the Army and Navy Veterans.

The enjoyable party came to a close at one-thirty o'clock. The Committee in charge of arrangements for the dance included the following— Mrs. Edwards, Miss Nona Doxtator, Miss Emily Craighead, Messrs. Dawson Boyd, Clive Ryan, Bill Frawley, John Fitzpatrick and Jack Wilson.

SCHOOL FOR COPS IS CONSIDERED

Chief Kidd Thinks School For Entire Province Impracticable

"I do not think the idea practicable, for had it been so the authorities in England would have adopted such a method years ago," stated Chief Alex. Kidd in reference to a prediction of the formation of a training school for police forces in Ontario made by Attorney General A. W. Roebuck.

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Formation of a police school that would be of service to the Ontario Provincial Police and every municipality in the province is forecast by Attorney General A. W. Roebuck.

The Attorney General made this prediction in a letter he sent to General D. C. Draper, Toronto chief constable, expressing concurrence in his proposal for the establishment of such a school in Toronto.

"Some such institution is required because duties of the police in modern times are far in advance of mere laborers. The duties require the exercise of much good judgment and this can only be expected from the force when it is based on sound knowledge," Mr. Roebuck said.

He admitted there was considerable substance to the objection of Mayor W. J. Stewart that the school should be provincial rather than municipal but he considered General Draper's wide experience and his position as head of the largest municipal police force in the province gave him the necessary qualifications for carrying on the Toronto school.

CAR TURNS OVER SOUTH OF STIRLING

Mr. Fowlds, Hastings, and Miss Huycke, Warkworth, Receive Slight Injuries

Two persons sustained slight injuries when an automobile overturned a few hundred yards south of Stirling on Highway No. 37 at 10.15 p. m., last evening. The vehicle was driven by Mr. H. M. Fowlds of Hastings with Miss Vivian Huycke of Warkworth as a passenger. While proceeding northward the motor car failed to respond to the turn of the steering wheel, and crashed into the ditch on the right-hand side of the road. Miss Huycke suffered from shock while the driver, Mr. Fowlds, sustained minor facial injuries when struck by flying glass. Dr. Alger of Stirling attended the injured persons.

Mr. Geo. Fitspatrick of Stirling discovered the overturned automobile lying in the ditch and released the occupants subsequently driving them into town for medical attention. Traffic Officer S. Ervine investigated the accident.

RAIN LIMITS MARKET ATTENDANCE TODAY

Prices Show Few Changes Since Week Ago

Continuous rain had the effect of limiting the attendance upon the usually large market held on Saturday in this city. Upon the market square gardeners, meat and fish vendors were the principal sellers of their products. In vegetables there were no changes to note in prices over those of a week ago. A few loads of wood were offered for sale.

In the fruit line apples predominated with Snows being much in evidence. They sold at 35c to 45c per peck, according to quality. The ruling price for potatoes was 50c a bag.

The interior of the market building was filled with those who had products to dispose of. Dressed chickens were plentiful, retailing from 60c to $1.00 each. A large bird of the Black Giant variety was displayed and $1.25 was the price asked. One lady vendor offered for sale a dressed pair of Guinea hens and $1.25 was the price asked. Ducks sold from 80c to $1.00 each and geese from $1.50 to $2.00 each.

The ruling price for butter was 45c for a two-pound roll.

Home cooking was offered for sale and found many buyers. The display was varied and tempting in appearance.

FINDS ARSENIC ADMINISTERED

19 Witnesses Heard

Nineteen witnesses came before the coroner's jury under Dr. W. F. Diamond of Port Hope, evidence regarding the domestic difficulties of the editor and his wife, found drowned with her 21-months-old baby girl in Lake Ontario last Saturday, being given. Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg, assisted by W. B. Common, K.C., acted for the Crown.

Mrs. Wilson, 28 years of age, walked into Lake Ontario with her baby Clara in her arms. She left a note stating her husband "had got hold" of some rat poison and that "gossip" had killed her. The day previous she had been questioned by police concerning her 34-year-old husband's death.

Professor Joslyn Rogers, government analyst who examined the contents of Wilson's stomach following death, informed the jury that he found 54 grains of arsenic, of which only two grains would cause death. The arsenic was pure and not a compound, he said, explaining it was his conclusion the poison was the cause of death. Rat poison and calcium arsenate were 96 per cent. pure arsenic and easily procured, he added.

As the Crown probed the relations of Wilson, editor and publisher of the Port Hope Guide, a paper that had been in the Wilson family for a generation, with his wife, it was revealed friction had appeared in the household because of the baby girl. It was testified Mrs. Wilson did not approve of her husband touching the child or placing it on his knee.

Malcolm Bennett, news editor of the Guide, declared also that Wilson had complained of interference on the part of Mrs. Blake Symons, foster mother of Mrs. Wilson. Bennett also said the editor claimed his wife would not permit him to play with his child and the Rev. W. E. Honey, who married the Wilson's, told of efforts to smooth the troubles between man and wife.

Mrs. Wilson, the minister said, had gone back to her foster parents' home seven weeks after her marriage, declaring she could not live with her husband. Rev. Mr. Honey described how the husband wrote a letter which the minister delivered. The letter asked the wife to return but she refused.

"She evidently felt it was an incompatible relationship and this opinion was shared by Mr. and Mrs. Symons," said the clergyman. "He liked to go to the theatre and she didn't, Mrs. Wilson told me that she couldn't love him. She said he 'killed love.' Later they lived together."

Finances Sound

Crown counsel was informed by both Bennett, the news editor, and Eric Oswald, auditor, that Wilson's finances were sound and the news editor also stated Wilson had $5,000 insurance made out to his estate. The crown also inquired into Wilsons will which it was indicated, the publisher planned to change, but Bennett maintained Wilson "never mentioned any proposed change in the will to me."

Testimony of Harry Sing, postal clerk and friend of Wilson, injected the will into the evidence, Sing stating the publisher informed him three weeks before his death "he was going to have his will changed," Sing added. "He and his wife were having a lot of trouble, was what he told me."

After describing how he had given advice as a friend of Wilson regarding his domestic relations with his wife, Archibald Cochrane, solicitor for the Wilson estate, said following the publisher's death relatives met and the will was read. "Mrs. Wilson also made a will leaving everything to her baby, in care of her father," Cochrane said.

In a faltering voice, the foster-mother of Mrs. Wilson gave her evidence. Ruth Wilson, sister of the dead publisher, helped Mrs. Symons to the stand.

Approved Marriage

Mrs. Symons said her foster-daughter was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thompson of Toronto. At the age of six the foster daughter entered the Symons' home, coming from the Toronto Children's Aid Society. Mrs. Symons said she approved her foster-daughter's marriage, and she ridiculed statements that Mrs. Wilson objected to her husband playing with their baby.

With her husband, also a witness, Mrs. Symons agreed the difficulty in the Wilson household was because the husband disapproved of the presence in his home of anyone but his wife. Questioned if Wilson really meant he wished no interference by his in-laws, Mr. Symons reiterated the publisher "did not want anybody around except his wife."

When the couple separated seven weeks after marriage, Mr. Symons continued, his foster-daughter claimed "she had been turned out." Crown Counsel Common described this as peculiar in the face of Rev. Mr. Honey's testimony of Wilson urging his wife to return.

"Mr. Wilson gave Rev. Honey a wrong impression,' declared the foster-father. He admitted Mrs. Wilson did not "break down" when informed of her husband's death. "She was startled," Mr. Symons said.

Miss Jean Bosnell, maid at the Wilson home, declared she knew of no rat poison in the Wilson home. Mrs. T. Kirkconnell, who lived at the Wilson residence, said Mrs. Wilson had claimed her husband had a "bad temper," and Mrs. Kirkconnell also told of differences between man and wife over their baby.

Miss Bosnell testified she had assisted Mrs. Wilson in preparing the supper the night Wilson took ill.

George M. James, M. A.

(Interviewed by Former Student)

"I taught school for thirty-eight years and handed out only three real strappings and I still feel just a little guilty about them," George M. James confessed in an interview to-day. If I had it all to do over again I would never strap a student," he added.

George M. James

A brief sketch of Mr. James' career hardly seems necessary, but "just in case" here are some facts that will introduce one of Belleville's most remarkable personalities.

First saw the light of day in the spring of 1867, the village of Glen Meyer supplying appropriate background for the occasion. Went through public and high school. Then worked his way through college by teaching public school for a number of years.

One cannot talk with Mr. James without knowing that teaching is very near his heart. He will not admit it, but he is quite obviously one of those rare individuals who are born teachers.

He is an author, a man who has seen much of the world. He has done more than travel. He has observed. He is a Christian and a Churchman. He is a good man but he doesn't flaunt his goodness. He is deeper than most people realize possibly because he invariably talks their language just to make them feel at home. He has a sense of humor that forever lingers in his every thought and incidentally helped thousands of students to eat up mathematics without suffering the pangs of indigestion. But he won't tell you this. He is too modest and before you even start to pry into his past he informs you that he would much rather you would interview someone else, because he really doesn't think there is anything exceptional about his 67 years.

Finally we fired a few questions at our target and some apparently hit the mark.

"What did you learn while teaching school for so many years?"

"I learned this and I would ask the younger teachers to profit from my experience. Do not label any boy o dunce just because he fails in your particular subject. If he has applied himself to the best of his ability do not bawl him out in front of the whole class. You might not believe it but I have had several students who just couldn't get their school work or who were interested in something else at the time who have since taken their places as men of the world and in many instances have gone further than honour students who for the moment showed exceptional ability. A girl may only get ten marks in arithmetic and still make a perfectly good wife for some young man," smiled Mr. James just to drive his argument home. This unexpected comeback floored us temporarily so we inquired, "What is a teacher to do with such a student?"

"Find what the student is interested in. All have some special subject that they like better than the others. I am glad to say that vocational guidance helps many boys to get started on the right foot. If a boy insists on making a nuisance of himself punish him."

"What would you do? Give him five hundred lines?"

"I should say not. Any student who writes the same line five hundred times for a teacher is as ignorant as the teacher who makes such a stupid request. Make the unruly student remain after four and let him learn something. Don't teach him how to waste time by such a practice."

"Will they learn discipline this way?"

"Of course they will. They don't have to use their brains when they just repeat the same thought five hundred times but make them work something out or memorize a few lines and you are teaching them something and disciplining them at the same time."

"Are Belleville students different from the boys and girls in the other six places where you have taught?"

"Decidedly. Although I haven't taught since 1927, from 1917 to 1927 while I was teaching at the Belleville High School I say without the slightest hesitation that the boys and girls in this city were better-mannered than those of any other district where it was my good fortune to teach. This reflects directly on the parents of Belleville school children. They must come in for their share of the credit. The student reflects his home life in the classroom possibly more than some parents realize."

"Public school teachers must have a tremendous responsibility," we suggested.

"Yes. More than they realise at first, but they must have the co-operation of the parents during these all-important character moulding years," he replied.

"What do you think of Mr. Sorsolell's statement?"

"I would rather not discuss it. I will say this, that as far back as I can remember, boys and girls have always been the same. They may flare up a bit but they are good at heart and I love them the same as I always have. There is too much smoking and some pictures are not a good influence, but otherwise I see little difference in our youth of to-day."

"Do you miss teaching?"

At first his only reply was a nod of the head. Then as the kindly man's eyes grew misty, "I dream of it. Every night I dream I am teaching school. They are happy dreams," he said as a light flashed in his eyes and a smile spread across his face. "I see the faces of many of my old students. It all seems so real and when I get up and come down to the store I pass the boys and girls of to-day on their way to school. They stare at me like ghosts of the past. I want to turn and follow them. There is a bond between us, I suppose.

"I am teaching possibly more now than ever before. My son and I have more than 500 educational publications, most of them copyrighted, and only last week we sent some to Mrs. L. E. Walmsley, a teacher in a missionary school in Chengtu, China. Mrs. Walmsley formerly lived in Picton. In this way you can see that I am still teaching," he said.

His lips were speaking but once again his eyes betrayed him. He is still a teacher and more than that he is a boy at heart. Mr. James, we salute you. Please accept this tribute from one of your former students who liked arithmetic but just couldn't understand French or Latin.

B. C. SPORTSMAN DIES SUDDENLY

'Jack' Matson, Publisher of Victoria Colonist Widely Known

Victoria, Dec. 1. — J. R. "Jack" Matson, publisher of the Victoria Colonist and widely known sportsman, is dead.

Death came to the native son of the British Columbia capital last night after a brief illness which necessitated an emergency operation yesterday. He was 36 years old.

Known throughout the Dominion in journalistic circles and in sport, particularly golf, Mr. Matson's death was mourned by scores of friends here and in other provinces of Canada.

Educated at University School here and at Charter House School and Cambridge University, England, Mr. Matson succeeded his father, J. S. H. Matson, as publisher of the Colonist when the elder Matson died two years ago.

He took active control of the newspaper and guided its policy energetically. But he found considerable time to devote to sport and always was active in cricket and golf, he was probably the best left-handed golfer in Canada. He held the rank of paymaster captain of the 16th Canadian Scottish regiment.

Playing in the Canadian Amateur Golf championship this year, he survived until the fourth round when he was eliminated. Although he directed the Willingdon Cup team he was not a player on it. Returning home from the amateur in Montreal, he stopped off at Jasper Park and won the Totem Pole trophy.

Mr. Matson is survived by his mother, Mrs. J. S. H. Matson, one brother, H. T. Matson, and a sister, Mrs. P. A. Cousland, all of Victoria.

New Hydro Board Asks For Payment

Toronto, Dec. 1.—In a formal "demand" made upon two former Hydro officials for the payment to Hydro of $4,553.73, alleged to have been illegally paid out for "detective" services, the new Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission is understood to be taking definite steps toward action for the recovery of the amount.

The demand for payment of the $4,553.73 involved is made separately upon former Commissioner C. Alfred Maguire, former Commissioner Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Chief Engineer F. A. Gaby and former Hydro Solicitor I. B. Lucas. Letters signed by Hydro Secretary W. W. Pope have been despatched upon instruction of the Commission.

SHORTAGES USED UP COMMISSIONS

Witness at Probe Tells He Was Instructed to "Short Weigh"

Ottawa, Dec. 1—R. A. Sair, a former manager for Thrift Stores, Limited, old the Mass Buying Probe on Friday afternoon that he started to train at 5657 Monkland Ave., Montreal in Aug. 1933 and was given a store to manage in October. From October until December, he was manager of a Thrift Store at 192 St. Catharines Street.

Under the Thrift Store system, managers must balance their stock or dip into their salaries and commissions for the difference, said Sair.

For the goods received he had to balance with cash or stock at each stock-taking. Stock was taken every month.

Asked if he got no allowance for goods spoiled or for shrinkage, he could not honestly balance it.

Balance Stock

"Will you tell us what you did to balance this stock. I insist upon an answer and getting the truth."

"Well, we specialized in short weights," replied witness.

"Was that a practice followed generally by you in that store?"

"Yes, sir."

At the first store where he was employed he received from the manager how to balance the stock. This manager was Frank Bigman. One of the instructions was to weigh short.

"Did you not object to getting instructions of that kind?" asked Sam Factor (Lib. Toronto West Centre).

"I found out it was the policy of the store."

Bigman had had to pay shortages to head office which, while Sair was there, was taking all of his commissions and $3 a week out of his salary.

Captain, Engineer Held to Face Trial

New York, Dec. 1.—The Acting Captain and Chief Engineer of the Morro Castle, which burned at sea with a loss of 134 lives, were arrested late Friday and arraigned before a United States Commissioner on charges of negligence, misconduct and inattention to duty.

William F. Warms, Acting Captain, and Eben S. Abbott, Chief Engineer, were released in bail of $2,500 each to await a hearing Dec. 12 before Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter.

Federal statutes covering the case, which Assistant District Attorney W. F. H. Adams described as a "very serious crime," provide a maximum penalty of ten years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

The complaint against the ship's officers charged that, as a result of their "misconduct, negligence and inattention," to duties, "the lives of upward of fifty persons were destroyed.

Order of Succession to Throne Unchanged

London, Dec. 1—Although the Duchess of Kent, by virtue of her marriage to King George's youngest son, becomes the fourth lady of the land, the order of succession to the throne will not be changed.

The eldest granddaughter of the King and Queen, eight-year-old Princess lizabeth will retain her third position in that line. Elizabeth will not fare so well in the ranking of the ladies, of the land, however. She moves from fourth to fifth place.

The order of succession to the Crown follows:

The Prince of Wales and his issue (the Prince is not married); the Duke of York and two daughters, Elizabeth, and Princess Margaret Rose; the Duke of Gloucester and his issue (the King's third son, is also unmarried); Prince George, the Duke of Kent and his issue, and the Princess Royal, the Kings' only daughter (now the Countess of Harewood) and her issue.

First lady of the land, of course, is Queen Mary. The Countess of Harewood takes second place, the Duchess of York, wife, of the Sovereign's second son, third, and Marina, the Duchess of Kent, fourth.

The Princess of Wales, were Edward married, would take precedence over the Princess Royal. Marina, also would be pushed back one place should Gloucester marry.

Typical National Scenes Around World to be Heard In Christmas Day Program

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP)—An Empire Christmas Day programme in which microphones will pick up songs by Quebec lumberjacks, scenes from India and Australia and South Africa, a message from the King at Sandringham and, finally, a massed choir and orchestra whose members are separated by thousands of miles, will be presented this year by the Canadian Radio Commission in co-operation with the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The basic idea on which the programme is being built, the Commission announced today, is that of bringing into the broadcast typical national scenes from various Empire countries. The programme, starting at 8.55 a.m. (EST) and lasting an hour and 10 minutes, will be heard around the world.

Canada will enter the program with typical Canadian scenes at three different points. The first will be from a Quebec lumber camp, a microphone picking up songs by lumberjacks. This will be followed immediately by a broadcast from British Columbia, contrasting a scene on a snow-clad mountainside with activity on the warm Pacific seashore.

Broadcast Hockey Game

Later in the programme Canada will contribute a scene from a fisherman's cottage in the Maritime Provinces, and, still later, a brief pickup of a hockey game and children's skating party from somewhere in the Dominion.

Other broadcast scenes will come from a dairy farm in New Zealand, the famous Botanical Gardens in Melbourne, a tea garden in India, the home of the Chelsea pensioners in London, a Christmas greeting in Ireland and a power station on the Shannon in Ireland.

As in the former Empire Christmas broadcasts, the programme will conclude with a message from His Majesty, speaking from Sandringham.

Altogether Canada will be heard five times. The programme will open with the ringing of Christmas bells around the world, commencing with the bells of Bethlehem and including bells in India, Australia, Canada, Ireland and England. The carillon in the Peace Tower at Ottawa will contribute to this introduction.

TRY AMBRICOAL:

AMBRICOAL is easy to use. It ignites quickly and for hours holds a hot, even fire. It burns with scarcely any draft, therefore is economical, heating the house, not the chimney.

AMBRICOAL is an unusual fuel — it contains little waste. In its manufacture all slate and other non-combustible materials are first removed by washing. The fine particles of Coal are then mixed with a patented binder and pressed into hard water-proof nuggets of a uniform size. The uniform shape and size allows an even circulation of air when burning, resulting in a complete combustion, and eliminating wastage due to unburned particles falling through the grates.

LET ALL VOTE

On Monday to the polls the voters go to elect a mayor and thirteen aldermen.

As there is an election and as so many as twenty are offering for the aldermanic office, the voters should take sufficient interest to get out the largest municipal vote ever recorded.

The candidates deserve to have approval or rejection at the hands of the entire electorate not at the hands of those only who usually vote, even a sixty or seventy or eighty per cent vote.

GROUNDS FOR THANKFULNESS

In the United States on Thursday hundreds of thousands of persons on relief still had some measure of reason for thanksgiving, for despite unemployment which seems to be giving way, humanitarian efforts have been at work relieving distress. Those who have independent means or have jobs which insure a measure of safety and even those on relief have grounds for thankfulness, for life, and the home life, for the blessings which outweigh the sufferings, and for the influence of the social life in helping them to bear their burdens.

The work of brotherly love goes on tirelessly, not looking for praise or laudation. To these influences which save mankind in crises, both individual and public, a debt is owing which cannot be paid. Millions of persons engaged in trying to share the burdens of others—these are the best evidences of a brotherly civilization. In every community, large or small, in every organization, in every church and synagogue these people work for others. That is ground for thanksgiving—which shares the financial load but most of all, that load of loneliness which if not shared would mean loss of hope and failure in life.

Today men and women feel more their trusteeship as today they more clearly realize that what they have is merely in trusteeship, that even their talents, let alone their lands and buildings are but the blessings which have been showered upon them from on High and handed down to them by their antecedents.

"PUBLIC ENEMIES"

When the name of "Public Enemy No. 1" is given a man, it means that his end is near as far as infraction of human laws is concerned.

John Dillinger, 'Pretty Boy' Floyd, and 'Baby Face' Nelson are among the twenty desperadoes who have fallen to the guns of officers in the past eighteen months in the determined effort of the U. S. Federal authorities to put an end to crime in the West and Middle West.

Others are on the black list, to be exact, about six thousand outlaws living on the fringe of civilization. And the war against them goes on.

To meet such a menace is a problem which fortunately a land like Canada does not have to face, for criminal gangs have not had the opportunity for development, because the enforcement of the law is not a matter of politics, and because the courts of Canada have sternly impressed upon the criminal mind the fact that crime brings retribution and that the law generally "gets its man."

The death of 'Baby Face' Nelson is a warning to youths who are inclined to look lightly on the rights of others. Nelson was a criminal for four years, was 25 years of age and only last April with the killing of Dillinger did he come upon public attention.

He did not look his part, this 'Baby Face', short in stature, chunky in build, with deepset eyes of a yellowish grey color. Only the irregularly slanted eyebrows gave his pinkish face the quality of ruthlessness.

His crime life was not long as crime lives go. But he met the full justice which crime brings, be it swift or tardy in reaching the offender.

CANADA'S EASTERN ARCTIC

One of the most informative, and interesting—even fascinating—publications to be got out by the Government of Canada this year is "Canada's Eastern Arctic," just issued by direction of Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, Minister of the Interior. Canada's Arctic possessions are, geographically, divided by Nature into two parts—the Western Arctic, reached from the Pacific Ocean and down the Mackenzie River; and the Eastern Arctic to which access is gained from the Atlantic Ocean and Hudson Bay. It is with Canada's Eastern Arctic that this publication deals, and it will surprise many to learn that the region, which they associate with the mournful death of Henry Hudson and the last gallant but unsuccessful effort of Sir John Franklin and his followers, now contains a number of communities and organizations including nine Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachments, 5 direction finding stations, 60 trading posts, 2 medical officers of the Department of the Interior, 24 mission stations, 2 mission hospitals, and 2 mission reidential schools. (Day clases are conducted at other stations by the missionaries whenever they have an opportunity.)

There is in this publication, first, a very brief historical review of the period from the time of Ericsson, (son of Eric the Red), down to the present, with its Davis, Hudson, Baffin, Foxe, Parry, Ross, Franklin, Rae, McClintock and Back, adventurers all, searching for the Northwest Passage and to make known the mysteries of the Ultimate Pole. Then follows a series of chapters or sections on Location and Extent, Climate and Weather, Government and Administration, Population, Missions, Schools and Hospitals, Industries, Fluctuations in Wild Life, Mammals, Eskimo Dogs, Birds, Fish, Flora, and Geology. There are two appendices, one showing how a wild life investigator of the Department of the Interior lays out and pursues his work in the Arctic field, and the other giving a list of the places shown on the map with notes as to the population, police posts, trading posts, missions, medical officers, hospitals and so on.

All these sections contain most important, and at the same time, most interesting information. The size of the region is tremendous, and the means of reaching Canada's Eastern Arctic and of moving about therein are set forth. The climate is not so severe as generally imagined, comparisons with other parts of the Dominion being presented. The Government of the area by the Commissioner and Council of the Northwest Territories, responsible to the Governor in Council and the Minister of the Interior is described. Many interesting facts are brought out regarding the population, white and native, the industries and institutions of the North. For example the tiny lemming cousin to our field mouse, has been shown by Canadian Government investigators to be a most important link in the chain of causation which produces the violent fluctuations in the numbers of wild life.

The lemming which lives on vegetation multiplies rapidly during a four-year cycle then in the peak year from some cause as yet unknown, it dies in millions, the foxes whose normal food is the lemming starve in thousands, and the trapper has a lean year. These fluctuations greatly disturb Arctic life, especially the fur trade, and thus indirectly affect the welfare of every citizen of the Dominion. For these reasons the fluctuations are a subject of study by officers of the Canadian Government.

The mammals, the birds and the fish, all of them important, are described in the book by authorities on animal life in the North. These include the caribou, white fox, musk-ox, polar bear, seal, walrus, narwhal, and white whale. The last named is the source of a considerable industry centred in Cumberland gulf.

The Eskimo dog of Canada's Eastern Arctic is one of the finest of the different strains of Husky dog around the Pole and our veterinaries are studying how best to protect him from disease.

The vegetation of the Arctic is too often dismissed as of no account but it is upon this vegetation that all the land animals directly or indirectly subsist. It, too, is discussed in the bulletin as is also the geology. Coal is now in use, graphite and mica have been mined and there are already known to be deposits of iron and other valuable minerals.

All these matters bear upon the living conditions of that sturdy portion of our population, the Canadian Eskimos, and upon the future of northern Canada. The Northwest and Yukon Territories constitute over forty per cent of Canada's area and their development on sound economic lines must profoundly affect the future of the Dominion. This volume "Canada's Eastern Arctic," which is well illustrated, gives the latest information relating to the least known portion of our Arctic possessions. Copies may be had upon application to the Director of the Lands, Northwest Territories and Yukon Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

AIR FLEET INCREASES

That Germany would take the statement in the British Commons that there is an increasing sense of insecurity in Europe and that Britain would not have begun to increase her air armaments "unless Germany had left the League of Nations and unless her actions on armaments were shrouded in mystery," with some resentment was expected.

But the Right Honorable Mr. Baldwin in the face of the unrest does not feel that there is not some hope of limitation of armament, "even now with things looking blackest." He has announced that Britain will no longer postpone the strengthening of her air fleets. Right Hon. Winston Churchill has charged Germany with re-arming in the air, though he does say the fear is not so much of the German people as of the threat by Nazis who are in power and could foment trouble.

Only the hope of limitation pact has kept Britain from increasing her air squadrons so as to prevent any attacks from the strongest air force which could possibly be assembled for invasion.

King Boris is a man who does new things, he drives a locomotive and he speeds in his motorcar. Now he has done something else—something not so speedy but more sensational. He has taken the place of a nurse and wheeled a perambulator with his two year old princess Marie Louise around the streets of the capital city Sofia. His subjects were in ecstasy at the sight.

HUNGER

Stark hunger looks at me out of the eyes
Of the beggar I pass in the crowded street;
My heart is heavy because of his sighs
And my steps must stumble for his tired feet.
So out of my little I give a share,
For if he were left with a moldy crust
To shake in the sleet and the bitter air
I would choke on my food as men choke on dust.

In other eyes there is hunger, too,
The urge of a spirit that must be fed;
Ah, seekers, what can I offer you
Who have wants less simple than meat and bread?
I would not turn back, I would not deny
The light you carve or the truths half-guessed;
But what can I give that will satisfy
Your souls, when mine goes on the self-same quest?

COL. MALCOLM LANG, who has been appointed Chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, has spent many years in Northern Ontario, first in Sturgeon Falls, where he conducted a large fishing business netting sturgeon in Lake Nipissing and shipping fish and caviar to the New York markets. When the mining boom started in Cobalt Col. Lang joined in the rush as a prospector and mine developer, and has been a familiar figure in every mining camp of the north, being one of the first on the ground in Porcupine. He has followed mining ever since with more or less success, and nothing pleases him better than to start out in prospector's garb, with packsack, and pick, bacon and beans, and lose himself among the hills and valleys of the north country for a time. He represented Temiskaming in Parliament and one time he ran, strangely enough, was defeated by his superior officer in the overseas battalion to which he was attached. Mac Lang has a host of friends all over Canada including Belleville which he visited several years ago as a member of the Legislative Commission investigating the provincial hotel situation. No better selection could have been made to head the Government railway commission for Mac Lang knows the north country and its needs as few men do, has that grim, rugged Scotch honesty which is an asset to any government or community or person, and is one of the most popular men in the province.

"BABY FACE" NELSON, Public Enemy No. 1, who succeeded to this distinction upon the obliteration of former Public Enemy No. 1, John Dillinger, is dead. His body riddled with police bullets was found in a ditch where it had been thrown by his pals scurrying for shelter from the implacable police pursuit. Uncle Sam is thoroughly aroused after putting up with indignities and audacities from blatant gangsters who sought to found a kingdom founded on fear with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns. "Yes," returned the mother of this spoiled darling, "I know that, but you see, doctor, his granny, nurse and I have each had to take a teaspoonful, too, every time, before we could get baby to take it!"

We wonder now at our snipers—at their skill, courage and endurance, but most of all at the state of mind and heart to which they were hardened to make possible the performance of their deliberate, deadly duties. In those days, under those conditions, the difficult, special and peculiar duties of snipers seemed normal enough to all, the snipers themselves included—or at east no more abnormal than any other front line activity. It was the war!

Our snipers differed from their comrades only in the matters of markmanship and patience. They were the same kind of men and lads—the best kind in the world of all time!—intelligent, kindly, brave and long-suffering. They lost their tempers at times, but there was no deliberate hate in them. Their job was to inflict damage and loss upon the works and persons of their country's enemies, usually in a large and impersonal manner and spirit with rapid fire of rifles, hasty bomb throwing, battery fire, machine-gun fire, trench-mortar fire. It was the war. It was what they had undertaken to do upon enlistment, along with other perilous, painful, comfortless tasks. But the deadly tasks, the killings, of those who became snipers were less general and haphazard and anonymous. The snipers' grim tasks were highly individual in execution though the spirit of their performance was usually impersonal.

Killer Kill Killer

The regular Canadian snipers were not out to snipe any and every hostile person upon whom they could align the sights of their rifles. That was not their job or their game. They were out to get enemy snipers—to get them or to be got by them. Their game was sniper against sniper, marksman against marksman, specalised killer against specialized killer. They performed their grim duty in a grim spirit of duty, pepped perhaps by urge of professional rivalry but never by personal hate.

Major Gregory Clark, M.C., of Toronto, commander of a company of Canadian Infantry in those times but now a journalist and special writer of distinction, has written what I believe to be the best sniper story extant. It was published several months ago in a bulky Toronto weekly newspaper under the title "An Artist" or "The Artist". I wish I had it here, to quote from. It is short but perfect. I shall not attempt to give even the gist of it. The writer describes an episode, a day, in the strange life of a Canadian sniper at the time of the highest development of the art of sniping. When the art of sniping was at its peak, every regular Canadian sniper had an assistant known as an observer; and when his battalion was "in" he and his assistant slept and passed their time between jobs back at Battalion-headquarters. They came and went at their own sweet wills, except when summoned in a case of especial need. Major Clark deals with such a case—that is to say, with the way a certain sniper and his observer dealt with a case. A hostile sniper was getting men of the battalion through the head at a certain point in the trench system just behind the fire-trench. The battalion's best sniper and his man Friday came up, heard the whole story, laid a plan with the platoon-commander most concerned. The sniper arrayed himself in muddy sandbags and went out, leaving his observer at a point of vantage in the trench. But you must read Major Clark's account of it!

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 1ST. 1914.

Mr. Leo Morrow is visiting his parents at their home in Bogart.

Dr. Farrell, Dr. Allen and Mr. Tom Beatty of Tweed have enlisted for service overseas.

Mr. Ernest Barragar of this city recently visited friends in Foxboro.

A Home Guard has been formed in Stirling.

Capt. A. E. Bywater formerly of the 49th Regiment, who has recently been appointed to a high office on the military staff, is in the city today on a tour of inspection of the local armouries and companies' stores of the 15th and 49th Refiments and 34th Battery quarters.

Mr. Douglas H. Wright formerly of Albert College, now of Queen's University, Kingston, was in the city yesterday renewing acquaintances.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 1ST. 1904.

Mr. Douglas McIntyre, son of the Rev. Mr. McIntyre, a former pastor of Bridge Street Church, is spending a short time in the city. He is now a member of the staff of the Montreal Star.

At a well attended meeting of the Graduates' Club the following officers were elected: President, Col. W. N. Ponton; Vice President, Mr. W. S. Morden; Sec. Treas., Mr. J. T. Laton. It was decided to have a course of lectures during the winter and prominent lecturers will be secured.

Today the Intelligencer reminds its readers that in Mr. Charles N. Sulman, who will be a candidate for the mayoralty of this good city for 1905, they will have a candidate who has earned by several years of hard work in the city council as an alderman, the right to ask for their suffrages and to request them to work and vote for him in January next. Ald. Sulman is a bright, clean, popular man, who as Chairman of the Water Committee has filled for years with credit to himself and satisfaction to the citizens at large, probably the most onerous position occupied by any member of the city council. He has the right to aspire to and attain the gold chain of office.

DEC. 1ST. 1894.

W. S. Hunter died yesterday after a brief illness. He was born in the Province of Quebec 71 years ago and had been a resident of Belleville for 15 years. He was an artist and proficient in his calling. He is survived by his widow and one son, Mr. Chas. P. Hunter of this city.

The temperature last night was 10 degrees above zero.

A movement is on foot for the erection of a tower on St. Thomas Church.

The bay was frozen across this morning and boys were skating on the east side of the harbor.

The Rev. C. J. H. Hutton, the new Rector of Christ Church, will be inducted on Sunday.

Mr. James McCrudden, bridge tender at the Murray Canal, is spending a short time in the city.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 1ST. 1884.

The Rev. C. Fish will preach in Bridge Street Methodist Church on Sunday.

The parlor concert at the home of Mr. J. S. Powley, Catherine Street near the footbridge was a great success.

Mr. W. R. Aylesworth, Reeve of Deseronto, will leave on Monday for British Columbia.

The smallpox in Hungerford township is subsiding. There are no cases in Tweed or west of Stoco Lake.

A band is being organized in Trenton.

The young ladies of Prince Edward County have organized temperance societies for the purpose of saving young men from becoming addicted to strong drink.

The bay steamers now present a dreary and desolate appearance. Some have gone into winter quarters and others will do so shortly.

Badman Mercurio Steals Show Winning Prelim Bout of Good Wrestling Card at the Arena

Draws Ire of Fans For Rough Work on McIntyre

KATELMACH WINS

Defeats Koloff in Straight Falls of Main Bout of Show

Joe Katelmach retained his local wrestling prestige when he won the main bout of last night's V.O.N. wrestling card by tossing Jim Koloff two falls in succession in the main bout of the evening. Katelmach opened the main bout rather cautiously but once he assumed the offensive the Winnipeg lad never stopped until he had subdued the Macedonia challenger. For sixty minutes Johnnie Gyroffy and Jack Pearl wrestled to a drawin the semi final bout of the evening in a bout that saw the former continually on the offensive, while the curtain raiser of the night saw Nick Mercurio of Italy win his first local decision when he downed Eddie McIntyre of Detroit in a bout that literally stole the show with speed and action that proved a thrilling affair.

A few substitutions were made by promoter Meagher all proving to the uplift of the mat game. The main brawl of the night brought together Jim Koloff, a relation of the well-known mat celebrity, Dan Koloff, and Joe Katelmach of Winnipeg. Despite the fact that Koloff assumed an offensive attitude in the early part of the bout, Katelmach wrestled cautiously until he eventually wore the Macedonian down with a series of slams to win the initial fall with an arm lock and leg scissors in exactly nineteen minutes. The second round of the main bout opened fast and furious with both grapplers alternating punishing holds. Koloff applied a toe hold that looked like a winner but Katelmach squirmed out and assumed an aerial attack that eventually won for him when he hit Koloff with a face lifter after the former had missed a flying tackle. With Koloff lying prostrate on the mat, Katelmach hopped aboard for the second and final fall of the main bout in exactly eight minutes, giving him the two falls in something like 27 minutes in all.

Opening Bout a Thriller

The opening bout of the evening proved the thriller of the night when Nick Mercurio, the self-styled Italian badman, won his first local victory by pinning Eddie McIntyre's shoulders to the mat after about 17 minutes of fast and furious wrestling, even so much so as to bite McIntyre's toes and stamp referee Wells' feet in disgust, before he eventually terminated the bout with a body slam following a series of flying tackles. Alternatively during the hectic affair each wrestler strung his opponent mid-air in the rope, a la Howard "Hangman" Cantonwine, but each time Referee Wells came to the rescue of the suspended grappler and saved the situation. McIntyre wrestled in his bare feet which eventually proved his undoing when the cagy Mercurio repeatedly stomped his toes to shift him off guard. The bout was by far the most thrilling of the night and brought the ire of the fans upon Mercurio's head when he won. The victorious Italian left the ring amid the disapproval of some 600 fans, all of whom booed the winner. A pugnacious opponent for Mercurio would be most appropriate for a return bout.

The semi-final bout of the night saw Johnnie Gyroffy of Hungary wrestle to a sixty minute draw with Jack Pearl of Toronto. Both men extended themselves for the better part of the hour but the Hungarian repeatedly missed golden opportunities to pin Pearl to the mat when the latter seemed all but out. Gyroffy assumed the badman attitude in the dying moments of the fracas but seemingly could not pin his adversary to the mat. Gyroffy used Joe Savoldi's drop kick to lower Pearl, but the cagy Toronto youth managed to assume the defensive and was apparently satisfied to call the affair a draw. Gyroffy continually carried the fight and should be afforded a better spot on a future card.

The Summary

Main bout—Joe Katelmach, 215, Winnipeg, won over Jim Koloff, Macedonia, straight falls, first in 19.10, second in 8.09.

Semi-final — Johnny Gyroffy of Hungary, 205, wrestled one hour to a draw with Jack Pearl, 200, Toronto.

Referee—Bert Wells, Belleville.

SENIOR GIRLS OF COLLEGIATE CAGE CHAMPS

Defeat Picton 30-24 Having to Come From Behind to Win

JUNIORS OUT

Picton Eliminates This Team 20-12 in Fine Contest

With a last minute rally the Collegiate senior girls' basketball team assured themselves of first place in the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic competition last evening when they defeated Picton High School girls by the score of 30 to 24 while the juniors were forced to bow to the Picton juniors 20-12, the loss practically eliminating them from further competition.

In the senior game the locals led from the barrier to the wire, leading at half time 11-8. A determined effort by D. Smith and A. Cruji in the last half gave the home team their advantage. Close checking and rapid-shooting featured the first. A defence set up by Rea Symons and her assistants stemmed the Picton attack in the second half with the local forwards getting plenty of baskets. Doris Smith led the locals with 14 points, Artimese Cruji bagged 9 points, P. Tufts 5 and Rea Symons two. Mary Reid led the visitors with 18 points and was one of the stars of the game; June Gerow had 4 points and M. Cooper two. The senior line-up:

Belleville—Forwards, P. Tufts, A. Cruji; centres, R. Symons, D. Smith; guards, A. Post, M. Scott; subs, M. Chapman, P. Wright.

Picton—Forwards, J. Gerow, M. Minaker; centres, M. Cooper, E. Williams; guards, B. McMullen, B. Vandusen; subs, R. Walters, M. Brislin.

Referee—Mary Roberts.

Juniors Downed

In the junior game the Picton girls ran wild and led the home team throughout. At the end of the first half the visitors were out in front 16-2. In the last half Belleville assumed the offensive and outscored the visitor 10 to 4. The final score was 20-12. Nora Rorke and Mary Reid shared scoring honors for the winners with 8 each. P. McMullan had four. Mary Schrieder, D. Aselstine, S. Reddick and Mary Thompson standing out for the losers.

Belleville—Forwards, D. Aselstine, S. Reddick; centres, D. Carr, M. Schrieder; guards, H. Miller, M. Houston; subs, T. Kelly, M. Clarke, M. V. Thompson, D. Wallbridge.

Referee—Miss M. Roberts.

Scorer—Miss M. Hudgins.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Strong teeth are essential, and if they are not kept strong, they are sure to cause trouble later in the way of decay and indigeston because of the inability of the possessor to chow well. Calcium and phosphorus, necessary for healthy teeth and bone growth, are both contained in milk.

Canada's Schoolboy Athletes Win Invitation Meet from Track Team of New Zealand

Practically Every Event on Card Won by Canada

ZIZIS INJURED

Spiked Right Leg, When He Deserted Cinder Path For Pits

Wellington, N.Z., Dec. 1 (CP)—En route home after a successful invasion of Australia, Canada's schoolboy athletes stopped off here long enough to demonstrate their track and field prowess today and made practically a clean sweep in an exhibition track meet with the crack young athletes of New Zealand.

Howard McPhee and Marshall Limon of Vancouver, headed the contingent from the Maple Leaf Dominion as they repeated their successes of the Australian meet and captured the sprints and quarter-mile events.

The meet, held at the Basin Reserve athletic field was slightly marred by an accident to Zizis, the crack Canadian sprinter from Toronto. Zizis, deserting for the occasion the cinder paths in favor of the jumping pits, spiked his right leg while competing in the pole vault.

Dr. A. S. Lamb of Montreal, in charge of the Canadian party, took several stitches in the wound which he later said was not serious.

Just Short of Record

Slim Sam Richardson of Toronto Canadian and Empire broad jump champion and youngest member of the team, made the most impressive victory of the meet when he hurtled 23 feet ½ inch, just 8½ inches short of the Empire record he made at London, England, several months ago.

McPhee captured the first Canadian victory when he sprinted to the tape ahead of his field in the 100 yards with Zizis at his heels. Bill Savage of Hamilton, Ont., ranked next to Zizis as Canada's ace sprinter, was a close third.

Johnny Loaring of Windsor, Ont., Canadian schoolboy hurdles champion, hung up the second Maple Leaf victory in the 120-yard hurdles, winning handily from a trio of crack New Zealand timber-toppers.

McPhee came back to win the 220 yards after giving his opponents a 10 yard handicap. His clubmate, Limon, duplicated in the quarter mile with Lyle Fleming of Blenheim, Ont., a half stride behind in second place.

Top Places in Half

Canada captured both top places in the half-mile invitation run. Bob Mitchell, slender fair-haired star from North Toronto Collegiate, whose style reminded the New Zealanders of their great runner, Jack Lovelock, had no trouble in breasting the tape first. Tom Ferris of London, Ont., was second a few yards back.

Ray Jensen of Stevensville, Ont., Canadian high jump champion, found plenty of competition in that event and finished second with a mark of five feet, 11 inches, a scant inch and a half below his Canadian mark.

Jensen returned to the field to tie with Zizis in the pole vault.

Eddie Ware of Calgary, husky weight man of the tourists and one of Alberta's greatest junior athletes won the javelin throw with a heave of 152 feet, six inches.

The Canadians wound up their impressive showing with victories in the challenge and club relays. As all the track events were invitation affairs, no official times were announced.

TORONTOS WIN FROMOAKVILLE

Oakville Villans, the intermediate champions of the O.H.A. last year had points only in the loss column of the senior standing today but they have served notice they are no set-up for any of the teams in the upper strata of the league.

Last night the Villans bowed 6-4 to the Toronto Hockey Club at the Maple Leaf Gardens but it took an overtime period to decide the winner. Even then the senior debut of the lakeshore players was marred by more or less of a fluke counter. Teddy Oliver, Toronto center, shot from an angle and the puck bounced into the net off the skate of "Tilly" Moore, Oakville defenceman.

Twice Oakville came from behind to tie the score only to lose out in the overtime. Toronto went two up in the first period on goals by Olliver and George Parsons. Then in a wide open second period Townsley and P. Allen put Oakville in the scoring column. Allen assisted Townsley for the first Oakville goal. They reversed the order for the second counter and Townsley went in alone for the third.

Johnny Acheson and Robinson put Toronto in the lead in the third period and Allen scored for Oakville to send the match into overtime. Then Olliver got his lucky goal and Parsons added another to give Toronto a two-goal margin at the finish.

The victory left Torontos one point behind the high flying Hamilton Tigers who have won all three of their starts. Last night the Tigers entertained Port Colborne Sailors and swept to a 6-1 victory.

Smythe Asks Hammond 100 Grand for 'Busher' Jackson

(By A. E. Fulford, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A winning combination so precious to Conny Smythe that he won't disturb it to use one of the game's greatest playmakers will attempt tonight to add another link to the chain of seven wins Toronto Leafs has forged since the National Hockey League season started.

When Leafs clash with St. Louis Eagles at Toronto Joe Primeau, ace centre, who has been out of the game with a broken thumb, and Art Jackson, recovered from a heavy cold, will be on the sidelines although they are both in condition to start.

Smythe isn't particularly superstitious. But he isn't taking any chances with the luck that has kept his team undefeated. Primeau and Jackson will watch the game from the spectators' seats until one of the eight other N.H.L. clubs breaks the Leafs' string.

The Toronto manager figures his team is a cinch to take the renamed Ottawa Senators without Primeau's help. They came from behind to win 5-2 against the Eagles in St. Louis with Charlie Conacher starring and now Busher Jackson—on whom Smythe sets a price of $100,000—is going at top form, too.

Asks $100,000 for Jackson

Smythe set the $100,000 tag on the big left winger when St. Louis was angling for his contract and repeated it yesterday when Col. John Hammond of New York Rangers, offered $35,000 and Ching Johnson for Jackson and Headline Hollett, the defenceman who has remarked he thought he would do Toronto a lot of good but didn't expect to win seven straight games for them.

Hammond added that if the offer was not accepted it would be a clear indication the depression was over. Smythe didn't even nibble but came back fast with the $100,000 offer. Col. Hammond retired with a severe headache.

After a week's layoff the Leafs play three games in four nights, travelling to Detroit after tonight's encounter to meet Red Wings Sunday and then swinging down to Boston for a clash with Bruins Tuesday. They are the only team to play twice in the week-end's five games.

Winners only twice in six starts, Lester Patrick's Rangers take on Montreal Maroons tonight in New York, while Boston play Canadiens in Montreal. Besides the Leaf-Wing encounter Sunday night New York Americans stage a clash with Black Hawks in Chicago.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

One month from today, New Year's Day, local sport fans will be able to sit in front of their radio and listen to a vivid account of the Rose Bowl football game, annually played at Pasadena, Cal., on Jan. 1. Yesterday it was announced that Alabama had been selected to oppose Stanford University in this post-season colorful event.

Each day at noon "Toots" Holway, who is home convalescing after a serious illness contracted in London, drops in the sports department to look over the sport news of the day. Naturally "Toots" is interested in the progress of the London Tecs of the I.H.L., the club he was engaged to manage during the present season but was taken ill just as the season opened. Manager Holway informs us that he expects Goldsworthy who is being given a trial with the Chicago Black Hawks, will soon be back with the Tecs, while the London club is angling for the services of Bernie Brophy who starred in the International loop two years ago. Brophy is a Midland boy and a free agent at present. Incidentally "Toots" informs us that the present warm weather is telling on the hockey players as it is too warm to manufacture good artificial ice under such mild conditions.

On Tuesday, Dec. 4, the annual meeting of the Ontario Rural Hockey Association is being held in Galt. This organization first saw the light of day four years ago and was formed solely for the purpose of banding together the rural districts into a provincial-wide hockey organization on similar lines to that of the O.H.A. Already a number of rural leagues throughout Western Ontario have embraced the new league while the field is open to any other rural hockey league in the province. For persons or surrounding rural leagues interested, Lorne Johannes of Blair, Ont., is the secretary and will gladly forward any information desired.

The receipts of boxing matches on this continent are not as high as they used to be in the Golden Era, but they are the highest in the world still. Pop Foster, manager of Jimmy McLarnin, the world's welterweight champion, revealed as much on his arrival from a six weeks' trip abroad. He told of turning down an offer from Jeff Dickson to have McLarnin fight Jack Hood in London. Pop said there wasn't enough money in it, and pointed out that other big matches did not draw well.

After a lapse of some two weeks the V.O.N. staged another of their semi-monthly professional wrestling bouts at the arena last evening when three thrilling and hair-raising bouts were enjoyed. Incidentally the opening bout of the evening literally stole the show when Nick Mercurio, the Italian badman, won his first decision in a local ring. Mercurio, public enemy No. 1 insofar as local fans are concerned, made the late Dillinger look like the ordinary fiddle player when he made short work of Eddie McIntyre of Detroit. Mercurio stamped the toes of Referee Wells and his opponent McIntyre, to a fare-thee-well before he pinned McIntyre's shoulders to the mat while Johnny Gyroffy and Jack Pearl grappled for one hour to a draw in the semi-final night attraction. The main bout proved a crowd pleaser when the local fans' favorite Joe Katelmach, defeated Jim Koloff in two straight falls. Incidentally Koloff is a nephew of the famous Dan Koloff who has carried the Russian emblem high in worldly wrestling circles. In reality Johnnie Gyroffy covered himself with wrestling glory when he literally carried Jack Pearl over the sixty minute period. Gyroffy deserves a better spot than was afforded him on last night's card while Mercurio literally asked for a more pugnacious opponent in his next local appearance.

A last period rally assured the B.C.I.V.S. senior girls' basketball team of first position in the Bay of Quinte basketball group last evening when the Allison-coached crew downed the Picton seniors 30 to 24. Doris Smith proved the local heroine of the night by sinking the much needed baskets at the most opportune time. A reverse 20 to 12 score in the junior game practically eliminated the B.C.I. juniors from further cage competition in the dual bill of the evening, the Picton juniors taking the second tilt. According to information received the competition in local girls' interscholastic basketball group has been rather keen and competitive this season.

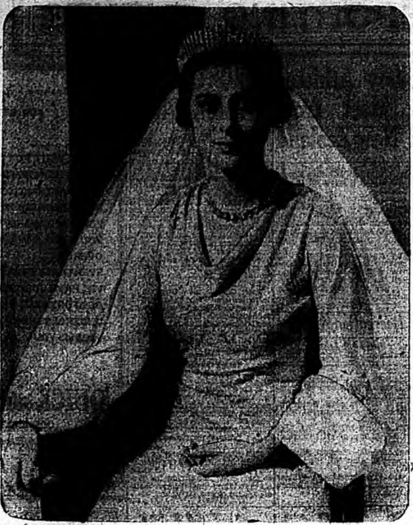
DUCHESS OF KENT BEAUTIFUL IN HER WEDDING GOWN



This picture shows the beautiful Grecian Princess Marina posed in her bridal gown before her marriage to Prince George on November 29. The picture was made by Meerson, the celebrated Parisian photographer, and obtained from Harper's Bazaar. It was created by Molyneux, the famous fashion designer of Paris. It is of silver and white lame in English rose pattern. It is cut on the bias and clings softly to her figure. The long bell sleeves and the capuchon decolletage are other features that show to even greater advantage the beauty of the bride. A long tulle veil cascades from the diamond-studded tiara and a priceless diamond necklace is worn. The princess changed her coiffure four hours before the wedding— Photo copyright by Harper's Bazaar.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR NEIGHBOURS

Mrs. J. J. Wilson, Lorne, Honored by Community

WEST HUNTINGDON, — On Thursday evening, Nov. 29th., the spacious home of Mrs. J. J. Wilson and Lorne, was filled to the doors with friends and neighbours who had gathered to say farewell before they left to go to their new home at Stirling.

Rev. R. J. Merriam capably took over the duties of chairman. Mrs. Wilson and Lorne were escorted to seats of honor in the parlor. Mr. Merriam was leader for the community singing with Mrs. W. Fitchett officiating at the organ. The first number being "The Maple Leaf Forever" in honor of the marriage of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina. This was followed by "Love's Old Sweet Song"; "When You and I Were Young, Maggie".

Mrs. Edward Pitman and George then sang "Jesus is Tenderly Calling Thee Home". Mrs. Sam Donnan gave a very delightful reading "My Neighbour". Mrs. Wm. Fitchett sang a solo "Look for the Silver Lining". Then the following address was read by Mrs. Geo. Cook.

"Dear Mrs. J. J. Wilson,—

"We, the people of this Community have known you through storm and sunshine for nearly fifty years. We remember your coming as a happy bride to the home over the road, some forty years ago. Through all these years you have shared life with us in this community, endearing yourself to everyone with your kindness and willingness to share: thereby making others happy and successful.

No one ever had need to ask twice at your door for aid. In fact very often you saw what was needed and supplied the thing lacking before it was asked for.

In trouble or sickness you gave sympathy and help so that the clouds showed a silver lining, the burden was lightened and the weary heart was strengthened.

When death came to our homes you were a real ministering angel to those in deepest sorrow, and your comforting presence helped to cheer and restore faith and hope.

With all the many demands upon your time and strength you have found it possible to give most capable leadership and help to all departments of our church and community work such as the Women's Association, Women's Missionary Society, Mission Band, Sabbath School and Women's Institute. It will be quite impossible to find any one in the community to take the place you have filled among us.

Although you are not going far away, yet we will miss you very much in all the affairs of the community. We sincerely wish you every happiness in your new home to which you are about to move and we hope and pray that you will find as warm a place in the hearts of the people among whom you will reside as you have made in ours.

We would like to express our esteem and good will for you and Lorne, before you leave us, therefore we ask you to accept these gifts from your friends of West Huntingdon, with the hope that,

Oft, in the stilly night,
Ere slumber's chain has bound you
Fond memory may bring the light
Of other days around you.

And that that light may comfort and strengthen you for the journey that lies before.

Lorne and Mrs. Wilson both replied graciously thanking one and all for the lovely gift of a chair and floor lamp.

Mr. James Vanderwater spent last week-end with friends in Toronto.

Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Merriam took dinner on Sunday with Mrs. Lottie Vanderwater.

Mr. Dave Thompson went to Toronto for the week-end.

Mrs. Fred Ketcheson and Lillie, were at the parsonage for tea on Tuesday.

Miss Lillie Ketcheson visited with friend in Toronto over the week-end.

Weddings

DOOLITTLE—O'FLAHERTY

Buckingham, Quebec.—A solemn event took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. O'Flaherty, on Thursday, November 15, at 3.30 p.m., when the marriage of their daughter Marjorie Eames to Lorne Eugene Doolittle, son of Mr. and the late Mrs. Doolittle, of Belleville, took place. Rev. J. E. L. Joyce, rector of St. Stephen's Church, officiated at the ceremony, and the fair young bride was given away by her father. Miss Dorothy O'Flaherty, niece of the bride, played the Wedding March. Miss O'Flaherty looked charming in a gown of old rose crepe and cut velvet, and wore a shoulder knot of butterfly roses and lilies of the valley. Just the immediate relatives witnessed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle left after the wedding for a motor trip to Belleville, Toronto, and other points west. Mrs. Doolittle's going away gown was a suit of English tweed, with blue velvet hat, blue shoes and purse to match.

Mrs. Doolittle is one of Buckingham's favorite daughters, whose career in the old town has been watched by those who take more than a passing interest in her welfare. Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle will take up residence on Church Street.

Parents of young children will be interested in Henry James Forman's book "Our Movie Made Children" which is now in its sixth edition. The facts on which this thesis is based took four years to collect and cover the fields of health, conduct and morals. The contributors are the scientists, psychologists, sociologists and educators who are working for the Motion Picture Research Council.

"It is estimated that 115 million people in the United States attend the movies every week—leaving out the blind, the halt, the maimed and the infants, about 106 millions are free to attend, which yields an average of over one attendance weekly for every hale and competent person in the country. Thirty-seven percent, of the people attending the movies are minors, while four hundred out of five hundred pictures deal with love, sex or crime."

No other factor in public life, either the home, the church or the school has the universal appeal that the motion picture possesses.

The book discusses the effects that motion pictures have on a child's sleep; the influence exerted by horror pictures; the race prejudices which are stirred up; the disastrous effect on nervous or excitable children. In fact, the movie as it affects young people is considered from every angle. This is a book which interested parents and teachers should read.

"Gold-Dust and Ashes" by Ion L. Idriess is the romantic story of the New Guinea goldfields. This book is the authentic record of some of the struggles and adventures, the failures and successes of men who risked their all in a luring quest in a fascinating country.

None of the incidents are fictional and all the names are of actual persons who played their part in them. All who like adventure will appreciate this book.

Politics are everybody's business for unless we are content to be handed about helpless from one form of government to another we have to take part in choosing under what political system we are to live.

The purpose of "A Guide To Modern Politics" is to discuss as dispassionately and as objectively as may be the various political systems which are at present rivals for men's allegiance. A considerable part of the book is devoted to descriptions of the outstanding features of political life in a number of countries to illustrate the differences between the rival systems in action.

The authors begin by describing political conditions in the great parliamentary countries — Great Britain, France and the United States and goes on to describe the outstanding Fascist systems—those of Italy and Germany. Next they outline the conditions of politics in the Soviet Union embodying the dictatorship of the proletariat under the leadership of the Communist party trying to bring out the main differences between this form of dictatorship and that of Fascism.

To those who are interested in how the world is being governed today this book is heartily recommended.

In "Tendencies of the Modern Novel" such internationally famous authors as Hugh Walpole, Hamish Miles, Milton Waldman, Jacob Wasserman, V. S. Pritchett, Luigi Pirandello and Erik Mesterton discuss the main trends of the novel in the chief countries of Europe and America. Although a great many of us know only a little about the writing of other countries, this book gives us an intimate glimpse of the novels written in Italy, Spain, Germany, Scandinavia and other countries of Europe. The names and work of the most promising of the young writers are given and a short analysis and description of the best-known novels by these young writers.

Many of the better novels of the different countries have been translated into English in order to enable English-speaking people to read them and "Tendencies of the Modern Novel" tells of some of these books that have been translated.

This book is an admirable guide to contemporary fiction in other countries as well as our own.

MONEY USED AS MEANS TO CERTAIN END

Desire to Accumulate Money Has Become Disease With Many

(By Louis E. Bisch, MD, Ph.D.)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Whether you have all the money you need, or more than you need, or whether you require much more for your wants than you possess, there can be no doubt that you harbor a "money complex".

What I mean by this is that you tend to become emotionally upset over money; it means too much to you.

At one time, as you all know, money was non-existent and people bartered directly one with another, exchanging what they did not need or want for something they desired.

Nowadays values are interpreted in terms of money. The "how much" in dollars signifies the accepted worth of the commodity. Small wonder, really, that people have placed a money value on things other than commodities.

Take natural talent, for example. Suppose a person has the gift of writing. At once it is figured out whether what the individual writes is salable and how much it might bring.

The joy, the satisfaction, the emotional rousing that the writer may experience are brushed aside as non-essentials. "What good is his stuff?" some one will ask. "He can't make living out of it."

It is trite to say that money is not everything. But if only we would believe it and live by it!

People often admit that there are many worthwhile values in life beside money, but too often it is said as an excuse for failure to have money.

When a girl marries a man in moderate circumstances, how common it is to hear her say to an acquaintance "Of course ,John isn't rich, but money isn't everything."

I am not one of those who claims that money is the root of all evil. Money is necessary and money is desirable. There is nothing intrinsically wrong with money.

On the other hand, there is a great deal of wrong with some people who have it and who worship it as a fetish.

How absurd it is to accumulate thousands and millions just for the sake of outrivalling somebody else! How silly to work like a slave to gather in the gold, when there is plenty in the bank already!

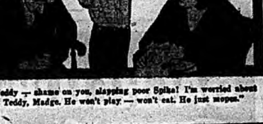
The desire to accumulate money has become a disease with many of us. That is why I call it the "money complex".

A complex is an emotional disturbance of which, technically speaking, we are unconscious. The money grabbers do not seem to realize what they are doing because, apparently, they cannot stop themselves.

Money should be a means to an end—right living and right thinking—never an end in itself. When it is an end in itself it is a neurosis and should be treated the same as any other functional disorder.

I am not joking when I say this. The mere making of money for money's sake leaves its victims utterly desolate and unhappy in the end.

Barbara Stanwyck in "A Lost Lady", coming Monday to the Capitol.



"Teddy — shame on you, slapping poor Spike! I'm worried about Teddy, Madge. He won't play — won't eat. He just mopes."

"His color is bad, Marian, and his eyes aren't bright. Often these are signs a child needs a laxative. Give Teddy some Castoria tonight."

"Come for a walk with us, Madge. Teddy's feeling fine. I gave him Castoria last night. It was just what he needed."

"I was sure of it, Marian. Castoria is an ideal children's laxative. And it's the grandest thing to relieve colic in babies, too. It clears out little systems thoroughly — gently, too. There are none of the harsh drugs in it that make some laxatives so harmful for children."
CASTORIA
The children's laxative from babyhood to 11 years

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyrght, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

GODPARENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I have been asked to stand up for a baby baptismal. I would like to know who should hold the baby and who pays for the services? Do we give gifts to the child?

J.

The godmother holds the baby in her arms, standing directly in front of the clergyman. And it is the godmother who pronounces the name of the baby, very distinctly, so that the clergyman hears the name correctly. The parents of the baby make all arrangements for the ceremony, and pay all expenses.

2. The godmother and the godfather give gifts to the baby...... you and your husband may give a gift together, if you prefer. The gift may be a dress or other article of wearing apparel, a silver mug, a porringer, a set of knife, fork and spoon, marked with the baby's name or initials. Or you and your husband might start a bank account for your godchild, with a sum as small or large as you wish, and add to it on the baby's future birthday anniversaries and at Christmas. This is a very practical thing to do, for there are so few things to give a baby, and these things are so apt to be duplicated by relatives and friends of the parents. And you can begin the bank account with the sum that you have budgeted for your gift.

WIFE'S SIGNATURE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a married woman in a secretarial position. My husband's name is Paul M. McGovern and my name was Muriel Leigh. When I write my own letters please tell me how I should sign them? I have been in the habit of signing them "M. McGovern" and in the far left corner in parenthesis like this "Mrs. M. McGovern". However, I have an idea that it is just not the correct way and as I have so much confidence in your expressions, would appreciate one in this instance.

Reader.

Your business letters should be signed:

Very truly yours,
Muriel Leigh McGovern or Muriel McGovern
(Mrs. Paul McGovern)

CLUB SANDWICHES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. What is the correct way to eat a club sandwich?

2. When going out to drink or dine and dance, when does a young lady check her coat or wrap, and when does she leave it over the back of her chair?

Constant Reader.

1. By all means use your knife and fork when you eat a club sandwich or any other kind of three-decker sandwich. Cut off a mouthful at a time, eating this piece before you cut off the next piece.

2. Usually at a formal dance a woman checks her wrap, in the coat room provided. When she goes to a restaurant where there is dancing, whether it's a formal or an informal place, she does as she wishes about checking her wrap. So often now formal evening clothes are an ensemble of dress and wrap that she prefers to wear her wrap to the table. When a woman is dressed informally and is dancing at an informal place, she usually prefers to leave her wrap over the back of the chair.

BRIDESMAID PAYS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to be a bridesmaid next month, and I would like to know who pays for the dress and flowers?

2. Is it proper to give the bride her gift before the wedding?

M.

1. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids pay for their own costumes. It is very exceptional for the bride to pay for the costumes of her attendants. However, sometimes she presents her attendants with some detail of their costumes, their hats, for instance.

Usually the family of the bride or the bride herself provides the flowers for the attendants. The flowers are carefully planned, of course, to harmonize with the color scheme for the wedding. Sometimes the groom asks for the privilege of presenting the flowers to the bridal attendants, and, if he sends the flowers, he and the bride usually go together to the florist's to choose the flowers.

2. Yes. The wedding gift is sent to the bride well before the date set for the wedding, two weeks or ten days before, if possible.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Winnipeg Bacon Hogs Eased 50 Cents Cwt.; Week's Prices Lower

Bacon hog prices declined 50 cents per cwt at Winnipeg yesterday. Quotations were unsettled Thursday, with no price trend established. The other two major Canadian live stock markets were closed. Outside points were unchanged. Offerings were light. Heavier runs during the past week, were responsible for sending prices lower. Winnipeg led major markets down with a decline of 50 cents per cwt., while Montreal dropped 35 cents and Toronto closed 30 cents lower. Outside points recorded losses during the week.

Hog prices dropped 30 cents per cwt, locally, during the past week. Bacons closed at $7.10 f.o.b., $7.35 off truck and $7.85 weighed off cars. Butchers, lights and feeders sold at a discount of $1, with heavies $1.50 per head. Selects drew the usual $1 premium. Sows closed at $4.85 per cwt. Receipts for the week totalled 5,315 head, compared with 4,510 the previous week and the same amount for the corresponding week last year.

MACLEOD—COCKSHUTT

Port Arthur — Fred MacLeod President and Arthur Cockshutt, director were here yesterday enroute to property where today with F. M. Connell and resident engineers, they will have another look underground before final decision about quitting work as intimated a few days ago. Conditions have been some better according to last reports question is whether they continue.

GATINEAU POWER

With earnings for the third quarter of the current year practically unchanged as compared with same period of 1933 net for 12 months ended Sept. 30 was also on a par with preceding 12 months ended Sept. 30 was also on a par with preceding 12 months. After depreciation and amortization of $646,569 first mortgage and prior lien bond interest was covered 2.17 times in the twelve months while combined first mortgage and prior lien and debenture interest was earned 1.50 times.

SYLVANITE GOLD

From figures recently released by Ontario Dept. of Mines it is estimated that Sylvanite in the first 6 months of its current fiscal year will show a total bullion recovery including exchange compensation of about $826,000 as compared with $1,558,913 for the entire fiscal year which ended March 31, 1934. During 6 months ended Sept. 30, 1934 the mill treated 53,545 tons of ore averaging .44 oz per ton whereas during twelve months ended March 31, 1934, a total of 98,211 tons of ore averaging .49 oz per ton was milled.

CANADA CEMENT CO.

The firming of the common stock and sharp advance in preferred appear to be based on brighter projects before company from real start being made in public works program of Federal Government, which is expected finally to reach $40,000,000. Definite plans have seemed rather slow in being carried out but gradually here and there in various centres contracts are being awarded and in nearly every case this company may expect a substantial volume of business. The advantage of the Government program is that it is showing activity at a period when ordinarily the bulk of construction is on the down grade.

We Recommend and Offer—

New Issue, McLaren Quebec Power 5½% Bonds at $100.

Clients who purchased Dominion, Eastern Provincial and Western Provincial Bonds during the past few years now have very substantial profits. We recommend accepting current prices for a proportion of these and reinvesting the proceeds in other high grade securities.

INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Massey-Harris had a splurge today on the industrial section of the Toronto Exchange, trading in heavy volume on a price advance of 1-4 to 3 7-8. Other active issues were Ford A, Loblaw A and Distillers Seagrams, all at firm to strong prices.

Seagrams sold up above the 16 mark but surrendered part of the gain before the close. Walkers Common advanced 1-4 and Industrial Alcohol A finished the day unchanged. Other interlisted leaders moved within a narrow range and closed unchanged to 1-8 lower including Nickel and Brazilian.

MINING CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP) — The opening of the new month was just another day on the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange and Prices continued the slow decline of recent weeks. Senior golds were again slow and steady but recession were general in the secondary and penny golds.

Eldorado singled out again for a selling drive and the close at 96 showed a loss for the day of 7 cents. The turnover was heavy in God's Lake and Gunnar Gold, the former at a loss of 4 cents to 1.65 and Gunnar at a loss of 2 cents. San Antonio lost 3 cents, McKenzie 2, Howey 1 and Central Pat 1.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — The stock market moved over into December today without displaying any notable strength or weakness. Some of the alcohols and amusement issuse were in moderate demand, as were a few of the rails and specialties. The close was steady. Transfers approximated 440,000 shares.

Municipal Who's Who

Thumbnail Sketches of Candidates

Mayoralty

Mayor Geo. O. Tice:

Has been a member of the city council for the past nine years and during that period has held many important offices connected with that executive body. His first chairmanship was that of printing and stationery, after which he assumed the chairmanship of gas. It was during this latter term as chairman that the city negotiated one of its biggest deals, the sale of the gas plant to the Ontario Shore Gas Company. Mayor Tice is a descendant of one of the oldest families in this section and has been a continuous resident of the city for the past fifteen years. He carries on the business of insurance adjusting and auctioneer.

Ex-Alderman Harold Armstrong:

A candidate for the mayoralty, he is one of the younger citizens whose interests in municipal affairs has always been keenly maintained. He has been a continuous resident of the city for the past twenty-three years and has a record of having served with distinction for four years on the city council. His chairmanship was that of light. During 1934 he served as trustee on the local school board, representing Bleecker Ward. E-Alderman Armstrong is an employee of the Canadian National Railways.

Aldermanic Field

Richard D. Arnott:

If elected to the office of alderman will bring with him a legally trained mind. A barrister and attorney-at-law, he is a member of the well known firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott since his graduation from Osgoode Hall in the year 1927. Mr. Arnott is a native of Belleville, having resided here almost continually since his birth. As one of the younger residents of the city he has been active in promoting its welfare. He is a member of several local clubs, and has a record of accomplishment in the amateur sports field. "My platform will be that of progressive economy," he announced.

Ernest J. Baldree:

Has for the past several years been president of the Belleville Unemployed Association, later the Unemployed and Labor Association, and has been for several years prominently identified in local labor circles. Mr. Baldree is one of the younger aspirants to municipal office and is a commercial traveller and salesman by profession.

J. W. Barlow:

In seeking office as alderman brings with him a record of four years as trustee on the local school board. During his term he served as chairman on the important committee of sites, buildings and repairs. Mr. Barlow is one of the native residents of this city, having been born within the city limits. A locomotive engineer for forty-two years, he was retired from the Canadian National Railways six years ago.

Ald. George Clinton Brickman:

Seeking re-election for the fourth term, is also one of the younger members of the present city council, and during the past two years held the chairmanship of printing and stationery. He has been a resident of the city all his life, and carries on a successful seed and produce business in his own name.

Ald. Thomas Henry Cushing:

Who is seeking re-election to office for his second term as alderman has been a continuous resident of the city for the past thirty-five years, and has behind him a long and faithful record with the Canadian National Railways from which he was recently retired. He has always followed with keen interest the various phases of municipal politics and during his past term in office in which he served as chairman of tourist and publicity, his tenure was marked by the same principles with which he gained his election.

Ald. Frank Anthony Domenico:

As one of the younger members of the city council is offering himself for re-election for the second term. Born and raised in Belleville, he has carried on a successul wholesale fruit and produce business. He is secretary of the Belleville Fruit Company and has many varied interests in the city. Recognized as one of the leaders in amateur sport in the city, he has been successful in imparting his enthusiasm in this matter to many others in the city. During his past term in city council he held no chairmanship but was active on the various committees named.

Kenneth Edgecombe:

A younger resident of the city has been active in the city's public and social life during the many years he has resided here. He is making his first bid for municipal honors. He firmly believes that new blood from time to time in the city council is the best assurance of efficiency in that executive body, but has no criticism to offer regarding past actions of the present city council. He is employed on the Canadian National Railways as clerk.

Ald. Frank B. Foley:

A successful manufacturer in the city of his adoption, is president and general manager of the Belleville Fruit Machinery Company and is offering himself to the electors of the city for the third term in city council. He is an inventor as well as manufacturer and a close student of municipal affairs. He has held the chairmanship of power in the council, and is one of the heavier taxpayers of the city.

Making his first bid for municipal honors, is convinced that he can be of benefit to the city. He enters the municipal field with an enquiring mind, keenly interested in municipal affairs. He is one of the leading members of the dental profession in the city and during his past many years' residence here he has gained a wide acquaintanceship. He has outlined no particular reforms but believes that the city should be represented by the men most keenly interested in the city's welfare.

Ald. William B. Harvey:

Who seeks re-election to the city council for the second term held the chairmanship of labor during the past year and was active in the interests of those whom he represented. Previous to his election as alderman he had a long and efficient record as school trustee and chairman of the local Board of Education. He has been a resident of the city for the past many years and has always evidenced a keen interest in municipal affairs. An employee of the Canadian National Railways, he has a long and faithful record of service with that organization.

Ald. Harry Hill:

For the past four years in city council, has held the office of chairman of fire, and behind that a long and efficient record of other departments of the city council. A continuous resident of the city for the past many years, he has carried on his own business here, and is well known as a car salesman and dealer. He has become noted for his efficient organization of the local fire department and his continuous interest in that important department.

Ald. Thomas Marshall:

Seeking re-election to office has a lengthy record of accomplishment in that body. During his past two terms he has served as chairman of market and city property and has succeeded in making many welcome and needed changes and improvements to the municipal buildings under the department he repreesnts. His retirement from the Canadian National Railways some time ago became effective only after many years of faithful service as locomotive engineer. Since then he has devoted his entire time to the welfare of the city in which he resides.

Ald. W. R. McCreary:

Noted for his direct action and aggressiveness of speech, Alderman W. R. McCreary has always evidenced a keen interest in the welfare of the city and its many problems of government. During the past year he served as chairman of the waterworks department with distinction. He has been alderman of the city for several previous terms and had also served as trustee on the local school board. He carries on a successful produce business in this city in which he was born, and is also head of the Canada Transport Company.

Ald. Benjamin Safe:

One of the younger members of council, is seeking re-election for the third term. For the past two years he has held the chairmanship of industries and has led the fight to secure new and needed industries for the city. Alderman Safe is a native of Belleville and has always been active in this city's welfare. He carries on a heavy business in the metal trades. He is noted for his frankness of speech and his championship of labor and the working man.

Isaac Stephenson:

One of the new candidates for municipal honors has been for the past many years a resident of this city where he carries on the occupation of auto painting and decorating. He is a staunch adherent of labor and better wages. For many years he has assisted in numerous other interests for the welfare of the city, deciding to offer himself for candidate at the last election.

Addison Thompson:

Has been a continuous resident of the city for the past thirty-four years, and during that period has been employed on the Canadian National Railways as machinist. Has been a consistent worker in the interests of the laboring man, and for many years has favored the idea of a Ratepayers' Association for the freer exchange of ideas between the elected representatives and the citizenry in general.

Glencoe E. Thompson:

Who is making his first bid for municipal honors is a native of this city and for the past eight years has been owner and manager of the Purity Bakery. Mr. Thompson brings to council, if elected, a fresh viewpoint on old problems, and an enthusiastic interest which has been developed by many years of study of local problems.

Frank Powers Ward:

For the past twenty-five years a resident of this city has built up a successful grocery business and numbers himself among those who seek to better conditions for the ratepayer. He enters the municipal field with an open mind on the administration of civic affairs, plus a keen interest in matters that concern the city. "Economy within reason", is his platform.

Ald. Thomas Y. Wills:

Is offering himself for alderman for the second term. He is a native of Belleville, the son of the late Judge J. Franklin Wills. He is one of the leading barristers of the city, entering into practice in his native city in the year 1925 in the offices formerly occupied by his father. Alderman Wills has always evidenced a keen interest in affairs of his city and in 1930 was appointed a member of the Belleville Board of Harbor Commissioners, acting as a secretary of that body. In 1921 he was given his commission in the 34th Battery of this city and has commanded that unit since. He is offering himself to the electors again in the belief that the legal experience which was found of great benefit to the council during the past term may again be useful in the interests of his city.

Ald. W. A. Woodley:

Dean of councillors, is again offering himself to the electors for the seventeenth time. During his lengthy term as alderman he has invariably held the important office of chairman of finance and has been successful in steering the city through many trying periods. He is one of the oldest and most experienced councillors on that body and has been annually elected with a good vote. He is a property owner and a life-long resident of the city. He has gained the distinction of being the "anchor" for new incoming councils.

Belleville and the Railways

In 1852 a Statute was passed by the Parliament of Canada incorporating the Grand Trunk Railway. The application was made by Messrs. Jackson, Brassey, Peto and Betts from England, who had experience in railroad building in Europe. A. T. Galt and other Canadians had previously received a charter for the construction of a railway in Upper and Lower Canada. Their interests however, were merged with the first mentioned company.

The authorized capital was £3,000,000 which was increased to £12,000,000.

On October 27, 1856 the first through train travelled from Toronto to Montreal. The trains did not then run on Sunday and the train leaving Toronto Saturday night stopped at Belleville, and the train leaving Montreal stopped at Brockville.

On November 12th and 13th, 1856, the opening of the Grand Trunk Railway was celebrated at Montreal by an banquet and ball which were attended by between seven and eight thousand persons.

In 1855 the Government of Canaded made a loan to the Company of £900,000 and later on this sum was increased until it reached £3,000,000.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and Grand Trunk Railway were taken over in 1919 and 1921 respectively, and these lines with the Canadian Northern, taken over in 1918, the Intercolonial and some smaller roads, were amalgamated into the Canadian National Railway system, which was placed under the direction of an independent and non-political board.

In 1852, November 10th, a Statute was passed by the Legislature of Upper Canada incorporating the Grand Junction Railway Company to operate from Belleville to Peterborough, then to Toronto and to connect with the proposed Grand Trunk Railway. The applicants for the incorporation were George Benjamin, Warden of the County of Hastings, W. H. Ponton, Mayor of the City of Belleville and James Ross. The first Directors of this Railway were: George Benjamin, Edmund Murney, James Ross, Henry Bull, of Belleville and Peter Robertson of Peterborough.

The announcement of the opening of the old Grand Trunk Railway appeared in a number of newspapers and is as follows:

The following advertisement appeared in the newspapers of Montreal and other places during the latter part of 1856 advertising the opening of the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto:

Grand Trunk Railway

The public are respectfully informed that the railway will be opened throughout to Toronto on Monday, October 27, trains will run as follows:

CARRYING PLACE W. A. MEETING

Carrying Place, Nov. 30.—Members of the Women's Association of the United Church met on Wednesday of this week in the United Church hall for an all-day meeting.

Mild weather continuing and setting new local temperature records for the month of December have made the heating problem a very negligible one thus far. Coughs and colds have had their inning, however, and there are few who have not found it necessary at some time or other recently to try a little doctoring. Boys who are looking forward to the winter skating and hockey season are hoping that a little more rain will fall to fill up Corrigan's Pond and the pit near the Consecon corner where many a merry battle raged last winter. At present the water level in the pond is low but no well shortages have been reported here as in other parts of Eastern Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. George Leeman of Belleville spent the week-end here with Mrs. Leeman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ernest Weese.

Several trips were required when G. V. Westfall with his truck began the moving of some stock from the Harbour stables to the R. Dempsey estate at Albury on Wednesday. The young horses are not as a rule very difficult to handle, but must be carefully tended. One load was taken from the Hardy stables to Albury while others were returned here after being kept there for some time.

Mrs. F. Weese, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese and Norman and Mr. and Mrs. George Leeman of Belleville attended a jolly birthday party in Trenton on Friday evening last in honor of Miss Hazel Weese.

Mrs. Arthur Bongard and Mrs. George Bongard were Tuesday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese.

PLEASE —DON'T LET THE KIDDIES SUFFER FROM WHOOPING COUGH —and CROUP

Just give them Buckley's mixed with equal parts honey and you'll be astonished and delighted to see how quickly those terrifying coughing spells are relieved, and the vomiting reduced or stopped entirely. Same applies to croup. Buckley's relieves the congestion and constriction of the larynx almost instantly, and soon the little sufferer is sleeping soundly. Buckley's is entirely different—it is so superior to anything you have ever tried for coughs, colds, 'flu and bronchitis. Play safe. Refuse substitutes. Buckley's is sold everywhere. M-6

Recommend Religious Course Of Study for P. E. Schools

Unanimous Decision of Trustees' And Ratepayers' Association

Picton, Nov. 30. — The annual meeting of the Prince Edward County Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association was held at Wellington on Tuesday, Nov. 27. The meeting unanimously decided "that this association believes that a regular graded course in religious education is to be desired and is necessary in the schools of Prince Edward county". The resolution further stated (1) "that if approved and requested by the Board of Trustees of any school or school section one half hour be given over to a minister who is a member of the Ministerial Association of Prince Edward or to his representative"; (2) "that a set form of study satisfactory to this committee be conducted and followed"; (3) "that a committee of three (two to be appointed by the president of the association and the public school inspector) have authority to act for the Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association in this matter"; (4) "that this committee present this matter to, and fully cooperate with the Ministerial Association"; (5) "that a sum not to exceed $10.00 be placed at the disposal of the said committee".

The adoption of this resolution was moved by John Maher of Picton and seconded by Dr. McQueen of Bloomfield and passed.

A course of single entry bookkeeping to be given in the fifth classes of the public school was recommended by the association.

The meeting expressed opposition against any legislation or regulation which would lessen public school revenue or would in any way divert government grants or local taxes for school purposes to which they are now legally entitled towards the upkeep of R. C. separate schools or of any system that is sectarian or denominational.

Motions were passed by the association (1) that entrance examinations to high school be abolished and that the student be passed solely on his year's work with the inspector to be the judge as to his fitness; (2) that a school nurse be [illegible] county schools.

The [illegible] and evening program featured a public speaking contest open to pupils of the different ~~sections of~~ the county. Prize winners were John McCaw, Milford; Phylis Holmes, S. S. No. 11, Sophiasburg; Lorne O'Hara, S. S. No. 16, Ameliasburg; Jean McCaw (twin sister of John McCaw), Milford. Prizes to these were presented by A. A. Morden. Inspector Stothers gave books to the nine other pupils who competed.

Inspector A. A. Martin of Northumberland county gave a splended address. Miss Velma Vandewater of Wellington was heard in a piano solo. The Wellington Consolidated School choir gave several selections. Prof. Iva E. Martin of Picton and Judge E. H. McLean each spoke briefly, the judge favoring examinations. A piano solo by Evelyn Mitchell of Waupoos was much enjoyed. Short addresses by A. Morden, Mr. Stothers, Principa Brown of W. C. S., Rev. H. H. Hillis of Wellington and T. E. Spafford of Bethel, who urged the planting of more trees. The following officers were elected: Hon. presidents, Prof. Martin, Judge McLean, T. P. Spafford; president, Dr. P. A. Scott, Picton; vice-president, Ross Fairman; secretary treasurer, Dr. McQueen, Bloomfield; executive —Ameliasburg, Thomas Nightingale; Athol, Norman Fennell; Hillier, Fred Morton; North Marysburg, Sam Martin; South Marysburg, Clayton McCaw; Wellington, Harry D. Cleminson; Bloomfield, L. C. Ward; Picton, John Maber.

The tag day and donation day under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of Prince Edward County Hospital on Saturday last went over exceptionally well. Over three hundred and fifty dollars was raised, while a very large amount of canned goods, fruit, vegetables and food products of all kinds was received. The president of the hospital auxiliary, Mrs. Frank Minaker, expressed her gratitude to those from all parts of the county who co-operated to make this success possible.

Cherry Valley Women's Missionary Society marked its fortieth anniversary with a banquet at which over one hundred members and charter members were present. Rev. P. P. Gardiner acted as toast master. Mrs. Edward Rorke proposed the toast to the W.M.S., the charter members, and guests. Mrs. Manly Scott of Picton, a charter member, responded to the toast. An address on her visit to Palestine by Mrs. Iva E. Martin was much enjoyed. The huge birthday cake with its forty candles was cut by Miss Mary Sykes. Mrs. W. T. Bell, president of Cherry Valley W.M.S., explained the work the society is doing. Miss Shirley Ostrander of the Mission Circle gave a reading which was followed by a vocal trio by Alice and Ruby Wiggins and Charles Harrington. A solo by Mr. Horatio Spafford, an octogenarian, and the remembrance service conducted by Mrs. W. C. Haggerty brought the program to a close.

MRS. S. ROLLINS DIES AT MELROSE

Melrose, Nov. 30. — The W.M.S. social evening which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Badgley on Wednesday evening was a fine success. About seventy were present. A splendid program was enjoyed consisting of music, readings and contests. After the program dainty refreshments were served and a social time spent.

The many friends of Mrs. S. Rollins were sorry to learn of her death which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Weese, on Saturday evening after a brief illness. The many floral tributes bore testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The funeral was held on Monday from her late residence to Ivanhoe United Church. AT THE CAPITOL

"A Lost Lady"

Barbara Stanwyck Displays Wonderful Gowns

A new Barbara Stanwyck, displaying an artistry that astonished even those whose favorite actress she has always been, portrays "A Lost Lady", of the dramatic romance of the same name at the Capitol theatre Monday.

There was no trace of the drab heroine of "So Big" and "The Purchase Price". The "bad" girl of "Baby Face" had vanished as had the sporty girl of "Gambling Lady". In their place appeared a society girl of cultural background, resplendent in the latest and most fashionable gowns.

The picture, based on a story by Willa Cather, winner of the Pulitzer prize, combines sequences of gayety and laughter with scenes of dire tragedy. There are episodes when a woman's heart is laid bare, torn by conflict between duty to a husband who loves her and her mad infatuation for an impetuous lover.

There are four leading men in support of Miss Stanwyck, all her lovers, with Frank Morgan heading the list as the one who marries her on a basis of trust and friendship rather than love. Morgan gives a fine interpretation as the great corporation lawyer whose unselfish love for his girl wife finally triumphs over that of her more volatile lovers.

Ricardo Cortez has the role of the bold and debonaire lover whose dashing, imperious love-making sets the feminine heart aflutter as he sweeps the object of his desire from her feet into his arms. Cortez gives a splendid portrayal as also do the other two lovers, Lyle Talbot as the unsuccessful suitor, and Phillip Reed, as the first lover in Miss Stanwyck's life who is slain at her feet on her wedding eve by the husband of one of the many women with whom he has been trifling.

Those discriminating patrons of motion picture theatres who demand entertainment that appeals equally to the intelligence as to the emotions and expect to have a finely written story portrayed by capable players, will delight in "A Lost Lady".

King Kelly

The lowly mop — a necessity in every household — can be the means of overcoming the depression. Guy Robertson shows just how it is done while making his motion picture debut in the musical comedy, "King Kelly" the supporting feature on this same bill.

The Kingdom of Belgardia, ruled over by that grand character of the theatre Ferdinand Gottschalk, is fast going into debt and is apparently headed for bankruptcy when Robertson steps in and with the same grand flourishes that make him the premier show, producer of the world, he makes the mop industry of the Belgardian a paying proposition.

With a musical score compiled by Joe Sanders, late of the famed Coon-Sanders orchestra and Bernie Grossman, Robertson is starred in his first effort in pictures with the lovely Irene Ware playing the feminine lead opposite him and Edgar Kennedy and Franklin Pangborn heading the supporting cast.

LEAVING TO-NIGHT

AT THE BELLE

"The Count of Monte Cristo"

Romance, Intrigue and Mystery in Thrilling Dumas Classic

"The Count of Monte Cristo". United Artists million dollar production of the Alexandre Dumas novel which has thrilled millions of readers in every civilized country in the world, was brought to the screen of the Belle Theatre today.

Produced on a lavish scale, with a score of principals and hundreds of supporting players, it offers Robert Donat, handsome young English screen and stage actor, whom film fans will recall at the King's love rival in "The Private Life of Henry VIII", in his first American-made film. Charming Elissa Landi appears opposite him in the role of Mercedes.

Louis Calhern, Sidney Blackmer, O. P. Heggie, Irene Hervey, William Farnum and Raymond Walbura head the imposing supporting cast which includes Georgia Caine, Lawrence Grant, Luis Alberni, Douglas Walton, Juliette Compton, Eleanor Phelps, Holmes Herbert, Mitchell Lewis, Lionel Belmore, Wilfred Lucas and others under the capable direction of Rowland V. Lee who also collaborated with Phillip Dunne and Danforth Toteroh on the screen adaptation.

Peverell Marley, who has to his credit the distinction of having photographed "The House of Rothschild", and other outstanding screen productions, is responsible for the fine camera work while Gwen Wakeling created the stunning costumes and John Ducasse Schulz designed the magnificent atmospheric backgrounds of the period.

"Dumas' stories are perfect screen material", declared Rowland V. Lee, ace Hollywood director. His characters are so vital and real and his plots build and move with such powerful action that they are as intensely entertaining today as they were when crowds waited outside Paris newspaper offices for the next installment of his romantic thrillers.

Was Hero of Paris

"He was at the zenith of his fame and powers as the greatest novelist of his day when he wrote "The Count of Monte Cristo"—the favorite hero of Paris the best-sellers literally rolling from his pen, and his private life as romantic and thrilling as his stories.

"Dumas got the title from an island which his boat had passed in the course of a Mediterranean cruise. He had been unable to land because the island was 'en contumace'— wilfully disobedient to a lawful order of a judicial or legislative body.

The incident and the name of the island stuck in his mind, and a few years later, he arranged with an editor for the publication of a work for which he needed a romantic plot. One day he read a short story, "Le Diamant et La Vengeance', laid in the period of the second Bourbon Restoration, which intrigued him. The idea for a real Dumas plot began taking shape.

It is a matter of record that Paris waited breathlessly each morning for a new installment of "The Count of Monte Cristo" to appear in "Le Journal des Debats".

Dumas, like Shakespeare created history and made legends come to life, and his characters will be as real to future generations as they are to this one.

"The Count of Monte Cristo", comes in answer to the cry for a great motion picture that will satisfy the tastes of every filmgoer of every age. It's ace entertainment from start to finish.

Popeye in "Axe Me Another", and the Belle Latest News of the World will be exhibited on the same program.

his hearers for the faith and confidence they had reposed in him by his acclamation to the office of Commissioner again. He was greeted with salvos of applause from the crowded aisles.

Harmonious Year

"The past two years have been exceedingly harmonious in your Commission. Our discussions have been fair and open ones. Our vote has been unanimous on all questions that were brought up. In our work we have been assisted nobly by the officers and employees of the local branch. They have been hardworking, loyal and true throughout."

Tribute was paid by Commissioner Reid to the memory of the late J. R. Cooke, former Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission. That he was missed in Hydro circles was apparent to all.

"Three years ago tonight I stood on this platform under different conditions. I was then contending, that Belleville was not receiving a fair deal with Ontario Hydro, in accordance with what some of the other cities were getting. I had previously tried to have this adjusted but was unable to do this as the former Commissioners were against it. My efforts and the efforts of others, however, have borne fruit."

Bills Rebated

Commissioner Reid referred to the rebates during 1933, secured by the local Commission. A rebate of $42.00 had been returned back to the local Kiwanis Club. To the V.O.N. the rebate had been cancelled bills for a total of $131.00 and $12.00. The Liberal Association, $14.00 cash; St. Michael's Church picnic, $4.62; Belleville Fair $153.40. "These were the first four cheques I had the privilege of signing after being appointed chairman of the local Board. Now we have a fixed rate, not only in Belleville, but for the Province of Ontario, and as long as I am a member of your Commission, I will see, that the municipalities live up to it," he promised.

"Why does not the Hydro pay taxes?" he asked. "We do. The Commission is not asking that the local Hydro be exempt. We pay heavily. We paid during the year, 1934, a total of $645.47, and besides that the Commission gave the city treasurer a cheque for $3345.18, making a total of $3990.65. This has been done without taxing the city of Belleville, one five cent piece."

More street lighting could have been purchased with the money thus given back to the city, claimed the chairman. "I suggested that some time ago. It would have given men work, the placing of poles, wires and other jobs. I felt that I'd like to see two or three streets done each year. But we can't force the council to do it. We can only suggest."

Last year we assisted the city in street lighting and decoration for Christmas. We gave the light free, but we received a complaint from the Ontario Commission about it. We did this illegally. So this year city council had to put up the money to assist the citizens in putting on their own lights and decorations.

Electricity is very much cheaper in this city than in other municipalities it was shown by a contrast in local and outside prices. A bill in Verdun, Quebec, totalling $2.39 would cost the local user only $1.84, claimed the chairman. A communication from the Saskatchewan Power Commission of Regina gave the cost of $2.10 per killowatt hour. In Belleville this bill would have been .75 cents.

Statement Read

A complete financial statement was read by Mr. Reid showing the financial results to the electrical users of the city since the purchase of the plant on April 1st, 1929 to October 31st, 1934.

Savings to domestic, commercial and power users based on killowatt hours used in this period, at the rate in force over the 1929 rates—$280,108.80.

Saving to Waterworks, including rebates—$7,270.74.

Savings to street lighting—$17,270.85.

Total savings due to rate reductions and rebates—$304,650.39.

Debentures paid—$139,000.00.

Liquid assets, less liabilities—$592.94.

Savings and profits—$516,539.11.

"Ladies and gentlemen, if we had bought this plant, when Sir Adam Beck stood on this platform some years ago and urged us to buy it, we would have been entirely paid up and returning a neat profit each year," he added when the statement was read off. "But, we can't stop here; we've got to keep right on working for the good of the Commission, and incidentally, the good of the city. We're out to get everything, that is due Belleville."

Ex-Mayor Reid concluded his remarks by wishing his hearers the compliments of the season, and the thanks for the excellent hearing given him.

Applause for Mayor

Rousing applause greeted the introduction of Mayor George O. Tice by Chairman Duff. Striding to the centre of the platform, Mayor Tice waited silently until the broadside of handclapping and cheering had died down.

"This is my tenth time before you on this platform; the tenth time I have appeared before you asking your support for election. Perhaps you are wondering why I am coming back to you again," he finally made himself heard. "There is a reason for it.

"Three weeks before nomination day as we sat around the council table I brought the matter of mayoralty up. I asked every member if any of them had any intention of running for mayor this year. 'If any of you have any notion of offering yourself for that job I'll be happy to withdraw from the race.' I told them. No one wanted the job. They said 'George, if you want to run, run. We're behind you on it. You have our support.' I didn't want to see some green outsider run this year for Mayor. I didn't want some inexperienced man come along and take over the reins of the city at one of our most critical times. Shortly after that I announced my candidature. If some alderman who had been in there from nine to sixteen years didn't want to take the job over I was going to. You'll need experienced men this coming year.

"If you think that I have served the city faithfully during the past three years then I ask you to consider this when you go to the polls on Monday. If you don't think I merit the confidence then don't vote for me. The man whom you elect will get every assistance from me. I'll still be working for the good of the city at large."

"Thirteen other men served with me on your council during the past year. For every one of them I have nothing but the highest praise. It has been one of the best councils you have seen fit to elect in years. We have received criticism, some of it just, a lot of it unjust. But the criticism that was given us in good part we have acted or tried to act upon it. Under me, or with me, were men who held their chairmanships wonderfully well. There should not be a single fault to find with them."

City Officials Praised

The highest praise was given the city officials of all departments by Mayor Tice. "We are blessed with the most efficient servants of any city in this province. Last year the city treasurer alone handled one million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars of your money. Every cent was accounted for. The books are audited every day. Everything from one cent to a million dollars is subject at all times to careful scrutiny. Our sinking fund also is in the finest condition of any city in Canada. We are in excellent shape. All that I can find wrong is that the officials who do our work are not getting enough for the job.

"During the past year or so there has been a hue and cry about taxes in the city. Who put them on you? There hasn't been any increase in the past three years. In 1931 the tax rate was 48 mills. Today it is 47 mills. And if we didn't have this relief to take care of we would have a tax rate at the present time of 40 mills. Your council can't help the tax rate. You got your schools and roads and bridges and sewers and other things you said you wanted, and now comes the time to pay for them. You wanted to keep up with the other cities and it took money to do it. Even the government was pressed in that direction, urged to spend money on improvements by delegations at their door. There is always a pay day for this sort of thing.

"But," emphatically promised the Mayor, "as long as I am able or as long as I am Mayor there will never be a debenture issue for the city except in the case of needed material for work for the unemployed."

"And, I'm frankly for work for the unemployed. Although I'm not the instigator, I've helped carry it along, after it was mapped out by council. I've exerted every energy in that direction. I've even lost much of my private business over it. Couldn't get time to turn around. You will soon, if this keeps up, have to pay a man to sit in the mayor's office and take charge of these many duties. It takes hours a day to do it. And not all business is done there. I couldn't start from here at the city hall at any time of the day and walk to the upper bridge in less than an hour and a half. I can't get time any more for anything. I wanted to listen to Amos and Andy tonight on the radio, but there was something else to do. When they don't get what they want at the city hall they come to the house. And I want to say right here and now that anyone who ever came to my house at any time and found me anything but a gentleman will get a public apology from me."

Cites Things Needed

Two vital things are needed in this city during the coming year. One is lower taxes or taxes no higher than at present. The second is relief, stated Mayor Tice.

"Relief, I've heard that until . . . . . ", a ripple of laughter swept through the crowded hall at this remark.

"These men are on the work thru no fault of their own, the most of them. But there are others too, that must be looked after. I refer to the man with a home who is in arrears of taxes. I had five of them today about this. One man was going to lose his home if he didn't get help. He asks me what will he do to save it. Is it fair for him to lose his home? The people who can afford to pay taxes in this city should be heartfully thankful they are able to. And even at that the tax collector of the city this year has collected 84 per cent. of the city's taxes.

"Belleville has been the mecca for needy families seeking relief and moving in here from other points," said the mayor. During the past year this city's population has increased by about one thousand," he said. This prompted the local delegation which he headed to go to Toronto to attempt to have the bill passed that no family be entitled to relief unless they had resided here for a year. The city had no alternative but to look after the hardest up.

"It's not the older people we're concerned about," stated Mayor Tice. "It's the little fellow, the little babies, the youngsters, whom we can't let starve or freeze."

"That's right, George," sang out a voice in the rear of the hall.

Mayor Tice told his audience of Belleville being the first city in Ontario outside of Hamilton, to get relief work started. Belleville's program had been laid on the Hon. Mr. Croll's desk at Toronto before any others. He spoke of the trip to Toronto to see Mr. Croll.

"Under the regulations first set for this city on the relief we found that it would cost some five or six thousand dollars to administer it the way they wanted. So we went to Toronto. We explained that a time-keeper would be needed on every small gang to keep track of the split hours worked under regulations. Hon. Mr. Croll told the three of us to go back to Belleville. 'Carry on as we see fit,' he told us. 'Your city has been a clean one. There has been no trouble or agitation from there during the three years. Work out your own salvation,' he said. So now our workmen work ten days and get their thirty-two dollars. Then they make room for some one else. They aren't on relief. They don't have to line up for this and that. It's a job just the same as any other job."

Appreciate Support

Mayor Tice in his closing remarks pleaded for the little ones of the city. "Give this Christmas all you can to help them. Don't let one child in the thousand children in this city wake up and find that Santa Claus didn't come. We will have some two thousand children in this city this Christmas to take care of. And this isn't election talk," he added.

"If you think that I deserve your patronage, that I have carried this city along as it should have been carried during the past three terms then no one in the world will more appreciate the confidence you will bestow on me by electing me again than I will. You have always elected a good clean council. I have always fought a good straight fight. George Reid, sitting there, was the biggest opponent for this honor I ever had, and the fight was spirited. But we didn't even in the heat of argument ever descend to personalities. We've always been friends and we always will be friends. Elect whom you wish and if it is your desire to have a new man this year to represent you I will be happy to assist in any way I can."

Round after round of applause rolled through the hall as Mayor Tice took his seat.

Armstrong Introduced

Again the popularity of the mayoralty candidate, ex-alderman Harold Armstrong was evidenced by the boisterousness of applause and prolonged hand clapping, which greeted his introduction.

"Your spirit of interest in the affairs of your city is amply evidenced by the splendid attendance here tonight" complimented the speaker.

Ex-alderman Armstrong plunged without formality into the subject at hand.

"The question most prevalent during the past few days has been, why do you want to be mayor, why are you a candidate. I was first approached by many citizens requesting me to run for that office. I hesitated for a considerable time, but finally decided to offer myself. Last year I fought a clean, square fight for the honor. I was defeated. But I have no regrets, no apologies to make for facing you the second time."

"I'm a tax payer here, interested in the welfare of my city. I am a property owner here, have invested here, raised a family here. My interests are in Belleville. That is sufficient urge for anyone."

Ex-alderman Armstrong in referring to the question of the taxpayer who needed work and was hard up, said it had been pretty thoroughly covered. In June 1933, upon investigation we found that 68 tax payers at that time were on relief. We took that list and found, that five of them had the taxes paid. The rest of them were from two to three years in arrears. I brought up the question then regarding work relief for them, to assist them in their equity in the city of Belleville. The suggestion that didn't get much encouragement.

Could Rate be Raised?

"Mayor Tice states tonight his feelings, and how sorry he is regarding the same unfortunate tax payer, yet he advances no program for their benefit. I wonder if there isn't some sensible work program, that could be drawn up for their benefit, work, that might in years to come return some benefit to the city. Would the tax payer of the city object to the few cents extra on the tax rate to keep this work going?"

"There are more ways of losing a hard won home than by unemployment. There are foreclosures of mortgages, sickness and so on. Wouldn't it be a good idea for the city to create some work that would help. Work that could be done without showing any class legislation or partiality?"

In speaking of relief, the ex-alderman reminded his listeners that he was no stranger to problems of the city council. Four years in council had given him some experience. One year on the Board of Education had helped.

"Relief is serious. It is affecting all municipalities of the country. Belleville is not a bit different in meeting the conditions than any place else. Now the most of the work needed in the city is caught up, sewers, schools, roads and bridges have been built. Yet, does it look as if relief will be over in a year or three years. It will get worse as time goes on for a while. We've got to face the issue. We've got to provide work, or the equivalent, to maintain these families. Wouldn't it be good business, therefore, to scrutinize the necessity of the municipality and to work out some program, which would return some good to the city after it was finished. Do you think it good business?" he asked the audience.

"The Mayor has outlined to you, that the government had laid down certain regulations on this relief work. He said the last regulations didn't seem workable in Belleville. He applied to Hon. Mr. Croll, and got permission to change them. I don't think he did any great thing. It was merely representation made by the city, which he represented, to facilitate the handling of the situation."

"The rank and file of the city is all taxed. But yet lots of them can't get work. I feel that council should be considerate of any legislation, that is not affecting the masses of the people."

Politics or creed have never entered into any election campaign in which he was engaged, stated ex-alderman Armstrong. "I've been before you on this platform five times. Four times I was elected. I'm back again trying to convince you, that you need me for mayor and that I should be elected. If I can't be elected honorably, then I don't want to be elected at all. But if I am elected, my object will be to serve the city to the best of my ability at all times. I want you to vote for the man you think best, and whoever goes in I know he will do all he can for the city. Whatever your selection will be, I'll still be here. It is up to you to decide on Monday. If you think I can fill the place then I ask your vote and influence."

As was his perogative, Mayor Tice was allowed a few moments to answer his opponent, Mr. Armstrong. He plunged at once into the relief trip to Toronto.

"I think Harold misunderstood me on one point in my address. I didn't go to Toronto to get the regulations changed. It didn't matter to me, personally how much the city spent on this. But I was after that saving of between five and six thousand dollars to the city as the result of cutting out the split hours and the necessity of hiring a dozen or more time-keepers."

Mayor Tice brought up one other subject.

"For the last three years this "taxpayer" business comes up. I never said this before. I will tonight. I'm a taxpayer of this city. I own a home here. I pay $69.00 in taxes. My auctioneer license is another thing. It costs me just $449.00 per year to live in this city." The Mayor explained under the relief regulations laid down by the government, that the taxpayer of the small home could not get relief and that is what I have been fighting for, work sufficient to allow him to pay his taxes and save his home.

Alderman W. A. Woodley Chairman of Finance,

Again a barrage of good natured applause greeted the appearance of Alderman Woodley, seeking re-election to office.

"There doesn't seem to be much left to say since the Mayor and the candidate for Mayor got through. Ladies and gentlemen, I've always tried to be fair and square and do my duty to the best of my ability. I have the interests of the city at heart. It doesn't matter much to me if I'm elected or not, but if I'm not then I'll just go on fighting for the city just the same. All I want to do is do something for the city, so when the time comes you can say, that I've helped a little. I want to leave this record behind. I'm here to ask for your continued support on the platform of economy for the ratepayer and a living wage for the workingman. The property owner just now has got about all the taxes he can pay. Some of the people, whose forefathers lived here, when the place was called Meyer's Creek are actually losing their homes. We don't want to tax to the limit, or apply the test of the last straw to the camel's back. We want to reduce, if we can."

In referring to assistance for the needy home owner, Alderman Woodley stated, that representation had been made in his behalf, but so far nothing had been heard from Toronto. "We believe, however, that it will be worked out."

"At present a by-law of the city regulates a laboring wage at 40 cents per hour. This will not be repealed as long as I have anything to say about it," he promised.

"This relief question is a burning one. We are trying to the best of our ability to meet it as it comes. Just now we think that it is working out satisfactorily to all."

Alderman Woodley in conclusion thanked publicly the city officials, who during the past year had assisted the council in every manner possible.

He invited his audience to look at the ballot closely on Monday. "You will find at the top of the list the name of Arnott. You'll find Woodley at the bottom. Just take that ballot, turn it upside down and then vote for the last name on it." he requested.

Alderman Wm. Donahue, Chairman of Public Works

Whose appearance was a signal for renewed applause stated, that he was not in the field this year for re-election. He had appeared merely to present his report of the department for the present year as well as the previous two. Clearly he indicated the saving, that had been made in spite of the drain of many little items occasioned by relief.

"In the year 1931 the Department of Public Works expended a total of $42,000. In 1932 that was reduced to $27,000. And in the year 1933 we again reduced it to $22,000. So far this year, with the extra work required we have spent $22,000. Our appropriation of that amount was not enough and there will be an overdraft of some five or six hundred."

"The money spent on public works does not apply to relief work, although if there was no relief work in the city, it would have been carried with less money," it was explained by Alderman Donahue. "Your department has been very careful during the last three years, and it was necessary to be careful. And the chairman who takes over that department next year will also have to be careful and not let it go to pieces as others have allowed it to go in the past."

Alderman Donahue introduced an itemized account of the activities and expenses of the department of the past year up to the present date.

"Last year you probably had one of the best councils this city has ever had," he stated in referring to the men, who had assisted him during the year. "The council was headed by one of the best Mayors you have ever had. I have never set with a better bunch. I'd like to be there again this year, but owing to several circumstances it will not be possible."

"Don't listen to election promises" was the experienced alderman's final warning. "Every year a certain number of candidates get up and bring in the question of the downtrodden, horny handed son of toil. Don't pay much attention to these promises." (Applause.)

In conclusion the wage question was introduced. "Several times last year I was approached by many citizens with a request to have the wages cut down of the men, who were working for the department. But if you stop to consider the yearly salary of those men, who manage to get a job with the city works, you'll find, that none of them are overpaid. Personally I didn't feel and won't feel disposed to have any hand in this. Good luck to you all", he concluded amid the rippling applause.

Alderman W. McCreary,

Said if he followed his own inclinations he would speak for just one moment and then quit, but felt he owed a reply to some of the criticisms of his department. Again Alderman McCreary went over the matter of disputed water accounts with two local institutions which were finally settled by compromise with the city council. "I didn't take it upon myself to settle these accounts. The council okayed them and accepted the compromise. I hope this explanation will assist in clearing up some of these barber shop and street rumours".

Belleville's water works plant is an asset second to none in Ontario, stated Alderman McCreary. It is operated most economically and is showing a splendid return each year. The complete administration, insofar as wages are concerned costs about $4,000 a year. Revenue of the plant is placed at $55,000 a year. Cost of the plant was $1,500,000 against which there was a debenture debt of only $150,000.

"Our cash surplus this year is in excess of $5,000, notwithstanding the fact, that we gave a five per cent. discount on water rates last year, and notwithstanding also, that all services thawed out by us last year were done free at a cost of some $5,000 to us". Hydrant rentals were also considerably reduced to the corporation, he also pointed out.

Again Alderman McCreary came out flat-footed with the announcement that a water pumper for the city fire department was a dire need.

"If we had had a fire say at the hospital, or at one of the churches or even the city hall this summer, when we were bothered so much with algae in the bay, and had to backwash our filters at the plant twenty times in twenty-four hours, then we might easily have had a major catastrophe. Our pressure then in the mains was in the neighborhood of thirty pounds. We could have boosted it up normal by filling the mains with raw polluted water, treated hastily with chlorine, but it wouldn't have been safe. If we had the pumper we could easily reach the highest point in the city, where fire might occur.

"Unless we do buy a pumper, there will always be, that reflection on the city council if something does happen for which we are not prepared", he warned. "I'm behind Alderman Hill on this matter. He has mooted the subject for the past two years. And if the city does buy the pumper, the waterworks department will absorb the interest charges on it".

"One of the most decent and attentive audiences I have ever seen in this hall," the speaker characterized the assembly. "It is a contrast from that of one year ago." In conclusion Alderman McCreary thanked Mayor Tice for his cooperation and assistance during the past year and confirmed Alderman Donahue's remarks that it was a "real council last year". Tribute was also paid to the loyal and efficient service maintained by the city hall staff.

Alderman Harry Hill

Chairman of Fire in the council for the past four years, the speaker thanked the electors for their support and asked for a continuance at the coming election. Alderman Hill stated, that the fire department had tried to save every dollar possible and showed that with appropriations being cut each year by the council, the department was able to end the year with a surplus. The speaker stated that the council of 1934 had promised economy and it had certainly been carried out. "The department is in good condition considering the equipment on hand but Fire Marshals and Inspectors tell us, that for a city of its size, Belleville has the poorest equipment in the Province," said the speaker. "We need a pumper badly and a 1,000 gallon pumper could be purchased for at least $15,000.00. There could be a saving of two to three thousand dollars in pumping costs as the pressure would not have to be kept at such a high level. "The speaker praised the audience for their continued attention. Alderman Hill in closing, solicited the support of the electors on Monday and wished them all the compliments of the season.

Alderman Thomas H. Marshall

As chairman of Market and City Property in the council of last year, the speaker gave a resume of that department's work, which showed, that the city had derived a great deal of revenue from that source. Alderman Marshall believed a man could devote his whole time to the department so important had it become and it was ranked second in importance to the Public Work's Department. The speaker gave the revenue of the market for the past three years, showing part of the money going to the general fund and the remainder to remodel the buildings. "There is no doubt the work done in the city hall auditorium and the Treasurer's office is admired by those who have to do business with the city," said the speaker. Alderman Marshall then outlined the work accomplished at St. Agnes Manor, since it was taken over by the city and he was sure, that a substantial balance would be on hand after all repairs had been paid for at the end of the year. He believed, that with proper management and some more work on the building next year a revenue of nearly $7,000.00 could be effected.

The speaker referred to the Waterwork's Department, believing that it would pay the city to have a utility commission to handle this department.

Alderman G. Clinton Brickman

This alderman in reviewing the work of his department, that of Printing and Stationery, stated, that a balance would be on hand. He was in favor of relief but no other expenditures and if elected in 1935 would vote against the purchase of a pumper. Alderman Brickman thanked his supporters of the past two years and hoped for a continuance of the same at the polls on Monday.

Alderman Frank B. Foley

Alderman Foley was quite brief in his remarks as the hour was growing late. He asked for the same support as given him on two other occasions and hoped his services would merit their confidence.

Alderman Benjamin Safe

"All candidates have told you tonight they are for economy and they can't help but be, for the city has no money to spend. He agreed with the Mayor, that the small home owner should have some consideration in the matter of work on relief, providing he was behind in his taxes. He spoke at length on the coal question and thought the citizens should be getting coal at a cheaper price. Most of the coal sold in the city is brought in by water, the speaker stated, and hundreds of railroad men are being thrown out of employment. Speaking of Industries, of which he is chairman, Alderman Safe stated he had not done all he wanted to do but getting industries in these times was a proposition. He stated he had been criticized with the rest of the council for selling the property so cheap to the Belleville Foundries Ltd. Alderman Safe explained, that other cities are giving concessions and if Belleville wished to advance, the residents would have to give to get something in return. He asked all for their support on Monday after extending the greetings of the season to all citizens.

Alderman William Harvey

Alderman Harvey stated he had no apologies to make for his decisions during the year with regards to his chairmanship of Labor. He investigated all the cases brought to his attention and laid them before the council. He told of an exmayor asking him to cut the wages and extend the hours for the relief men and the alderman expressed himself as being opposed to such a move. "40 cents an hour is small enough wages to give justice to the job," said Alderman Harvey. He solicited the fine vote of a year ago on Monday when he was at the top of the poll.

Alderman Thomas Cushing

"The first year in a council is only one of education," said the speaker, "and I am now in a position to give you a full year of service. The chairmanship which I held last year, that of Tourist and Publicity was not a heavy one and because the tourist wanted everything for nothing, a small deficit was registered but not enough to be troublesome. The Alderman asked for support on Monday and if elected promised the best service to the electorate.

Alderman Frank Domenico

Before giving a resume of his work during the past year the Alderman thanked the council for the help and service they had given to the city's business and believed that the business was handled in an efficient and fine manner. As a taxpayer in the city he appealed for support first because he enjoyed the work and secondly because one could gain a great deal of experience. He praised the new aspirants to office stating they had not criticized the actions of the past council but were appealing on a service platform. He asked for support for his second term.

Alderman Tom Y. Wills

Although a member of the council the last year, Alderman Wills was making his first public appearance soliciting the vote of the electorate. Alderman Wills stated he was born and reared in the city and enjoyed his year of work in the council and he hoped that the voters would see fit to return him for a second term.

Richard A. Arnott

The first new aspirant for office stated he had been urged by a number of citizens to offer himself and agreed, that the old council should have the major portion of the meeting to give an account of their stewardship and if the electors were satisfied with them put them back in office. The candidate stated he was making no promises but that he was not satisfied with the relief question and not ignorant of this important phase of city government. He thought it was too bad that more economy had not been practiced years ago by former councils. "If you save a dollar today and have to spend three in the month, that is not economy," said the speaker. In closing he asked for the patronage of the voters on Monday.

Jesse W. Barlow

Mr. Barlow explained that he had been a member of the Board of Education for four years and believed he had an insight into the workings of the council. He told his listeners that he was a taxpayer and had been a workingman all his life and believed he appreciated their viewpoint on certain questions. "If you believe I can be of some help to the council in 1935 elect me and I will serve you to the best of my ability," said the speaker in closing.

Ernie J. Baldree

Mr. Baldree thought he was well qualified to handle the business of the city through the experience gained in working with other organizations on the relief question. He admitted that no thanks were coming to the persons trying to serve their city and thought that since the old council had been worked so hard during the past few years that some of them should be retired and given a rest. He asked for the support of the voters and promised, 100 per cent. service if elected.

Kenneth Edgecombe

Mr. Edgecombe stated he had no criticism to offer of the old council but that a great deal of credit was due them for their efforts in the trying times but thought that the younger men of the city should be given a chance. "I don't think there has been a red-headed Alderman in the council in some years and I would like the opportunity of service," said Mr. Edgecombe in appealing for support at the polls.

Isaac Stephenson

"I was an Alderman for five minutes last year," said Mr. Stephenson, "but I hope with more support this year not to be counted out in the last returns." He told of serving on the Board of Education and that he was a heavy taxpayer and he believed that he could serve the city to advantage if elected to the honorable position.

Addison Thompson

This aspirant for civic honors was not in agreement with others who spoke, who advocated paying $15,000 for a pumper for the fire department but believed a fire alarm system for the city would be better business. He was also of the opinion that the police of the city should have their hours of work reduced so that they would not have to work seven days of each week. "We ask them to keep law and order and in the same breath ask them to break the law by working on Sunday," said the speaker. Mr. Thompson also inquired of Alderman Marshall if outside help was not used in repairing the roof at St. Agnes Manor. Ald. Marshall explained that McLeod of Peterboro, tendered on the job and he being the lowest tender by $90 was awarded the contract but only himself and a foreman worked on the job, the remainder being local help. In closing the speaker asked for support at the polls on Monday.

Glencoe Thompson

Glen as he is familiarly known to many in the city asked for support on Monday and hoped that electors would not get the names confused. He hoped, if elected, to bring business ability to the board and take part in every worthwhile effort for the betterment of the city.

Frank Ward

He thanked the electors for support last year and hoped it would be better this contest. He was not playing around, he explained to the listeners but trying to be of service to the city as he was a heavy taxpayer. The speaker stated he was not criticising the work of the council last year but as a young man was appealing to give this class a break. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Ann Steps Out

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

"I hate myself when I think of the way I treated you—like a jealous schoolboy."

"It's over now and forgotten."

"Forgotten?"

Her eyes met his. "Yes, forgotten. You're married to Gail. Have you forgotten that?"

She looked at him, remembering how many times they had said they loved each other, how many, how many times he had bent his dark head to kiss her. Moonlight nights in a canoe—promises smothered in kisses. Was it too deep a love, she wondered, to be cast aside? Could she never put behind her that old love for him? Would she never get over it?

Briefly their eyes met. The music played softly from the club house.

"I can't forget that I'm married to Gail—nor can I forget that I had you and let you go."

As Nick had wisely predicted, after Betty's dance Ann's telephone rang constantly. "Golf at two at the club. Don't forget, Ann," or "We're riding, the whole crowd of us, at six tomorrow morning."

She had sent her mother and father on a trip through the Panama Canal and the big house was filled every afternoon and evening with people. Roadsters lined the driveway and Wang was kept busy mixing his incomparable cocktails.

Gary Hinton the son of a prominent banker, was one of Ann's most devoted admirers. There was a swimming pool on his father's estate and when she wasn't golfing or riding, she was at the pool with Gary and a host of other friends.

She met many other men. A midshipman from the Academy who said, "You're invited to all the hops next year—in advance." And yet around her always, hovering near, was Doug—at the club, at the pool cutting in on dances with Gary Hinton, manouvering to be with her.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Ann drove down to Gibson Island one afternoon to see Nick and found him on the beach. There were so many people there, sitting under gay umbrellas, coming out of the water, so much a mixture of color and voices, that she saw him only because he was taller than most men.

He came up to her, tying the cord of his beach robe. "The water is fine," he said. "Get on a suit and come in."

"Come back to the house with me first," she said. "I want to talk to you. We'll go swimming later. Luckily, I have my suit with me. I was swimming with Gary this morning."

He rode back to the house in her car. Nick didn't take time to dress. They sat on the verandah and he passed cigarettes and held a lighter for her.

"What's on your mind?" he asked.

Ann came to the point at once. "Doug".

"I thought so," he nodded, watching her smoke thoughtfully, heeding her soft blue dress and hair still damp from her morning swim.

"People are talking", she said.

"I know. I've heard some talk down here. When a girl is as popular as you, people know all about her private life."

"But I've done nothing," she protested, mashing out the cigarette with the tall heel of her white sandal. "I haven't encouraged him. He hasn't tried to make love to me."

He looked at her wondering how many men had tried to make love to her. Gary Hinton, of course. And the blond midshipman. And the Hopkins lacrosse star. How many others? "I've lost her," he thought, "and I've never never really had her."

"What can I do?" she asked.

"Does Gail say anything?"

"I don't think she cares. She still has a string of men running after her. Nick, I hate marriage like that. It's no marriage at all."

"There is only one thing you can do while they are still married—see him and tell him that people are talking."

"That would be rather cruel."

"It's the only way. Do you still love him, Ann?"

She looked troubled but she smiled. "I don't know. I can't explain it. Oh, Nick, let's go swimming. I'll go upstairs and put on my suit."

He sat on the beach and watched her come out of the water—dripping, red-lipped, laughing. She took off her white cap and shook her short curls loose. She wore a dark silk bathing suit and her shoulders and legs had a covering of deep, even tan.

She sat on the beach beside him. "Nick, I haven't neglected you. But there are so many things to go to all the time. Sometimes I wish people would let me alone. I had no idea that being a social success was such a strain."

"The price of popularity."

"I had a letter from Louise from London. She apologized for everything she said to me. And when she comes back, she wants us to be friends. She said she didn't think your mother would ever unbend toward me—but she's changed her mind about me."

People passed them, women in gay pajamas, men in robes. People spoke to them. Ann lay full length on the sand and put her arms under her head.

"I don't like people to talk about me," she said with a troubled frown. "I haven't changed. I'm still the same."

"You're keeping something from me—about Doug."

She opened her eyes and looked up at him.

"Yes, I am." She got up, grasped his arm. "Nick—it's still the same—that same feeling when he's close to me, when I'm dancing with him. Can I help it if I can't stop loving him? I've tried. I've said I must not love him but I do! I do!"

He looked at her kneeling in the sand beside him, her hair blowing her hands on his arm.

"People can't help themselves when they're in love," he said slowly. "What are you going to do about it?"

"I don't know—I don't know."

She got up and went to the water's edge. He saw her plunge into the water and then swim that strong, clean stroke of hers. A finished product, he was thinking. She rides like the wind plays golf and tennis, dances superbly. Has she conquered all those things to go back to a boy who had her once and let her go? She can't be that blind! Doug wants her now only because other men want her. It had been the same with Gail!

Ann came out of the water again and they walked to the pavillion for drinks. Then they drove back to Nick's house. She went upstairs dressed, and joined him on the verandah.

"You're right," she said, "I've got to tell him to stay away from me. I'm not in love with any of the others. All this hasn't gone to my head—people saying when I drive down Charles street, 'There's Ann Hamill. She's worth several million.' It hasn't change me. I know that a lot of people like me only for my money.

"You're wise," said Nick, offering her a cigaret. "I've stood by and watched the mad scramble for your favors. I wondered what— it would do to you. It hasn't changed you at all."

"It never will Nick. And I'm getting a little tired of dashing around. It was thrilling in the beginning but I'm getting tired of it. It's the same thing—dancing, clothes, men who try to make love to you."

She put on her hat and smiled at him through the cloud of smoke.

"Thanks for your advice."

"It was nothing. I suppose you're going out tonight."

"Gary."

"He's made love to you of course."

"He has only tried. He says I'm breaking his heart but I know that next year at this time he will be telling another girl the same thing."

He walked to her car with her. She turned to him, put her hand on his sweater.

"Nick, forgive me, for this but when I'm away from you, I always think of you as an elderly uncle. But when I see you I realize how good looking you are." He felt the pressure of her tanned fingers on his arm: "I'm going to tell him. I love him—but he isn't for me."

She drove away, looking at Nick on the green slope, his white teeth shining from his sunburned face.

She drove back to town thinking of Gary and Doug and Gail and the whole crowd. Shallow lives they led——from one party to another. Clinking cocktail glasses, cigarettes.... ..

She thought of Jean and Dick Nelson. They joined in the parties now and then but Jean said, "Dick and I wouldn't last long if we tore around with that crowd. He and I are going to stick together. I've had one lesson I won't forget."

The next day she rode horseback alone just before dinner. She came in the house, warm from riding her silk shirt, open at the neck. When she turned to go up the stairs she saw Doug sitting in the living room. She came to him.

"You frightened me" she said. "I didn't know you were here."

He didn't speak. He took her in his arms and pressed her close to him. Ann strained away from him.

"I love you," he said, close to her face. "I've come back. Gail left me today—went back to her father."

She pushed him away from her.

"You've no right to come to me like this. What have I done to make you believe......"

"That you love me? I know you do. You always have. You can't stop loving a man when you've loved him for years. Not you. You have never loved anybody but me".

She contemplated him gravely and shrugged, knowing that it was no longer any use to pretend. Could she fight it—could one ever fight love?

"You're right," she said quietly. "I have always loved you. Even when I tried to hate you, I didn't."

"Gail is going to get a divorce. Only six weeks in Reno and then—then—"

She stood off from him, swayed by a sudden flood of emotion.

"I'm going to say a cold, cruel thing Doug. How do I know that it isn't because of my money? You loved me once and you let me go.."

He took a step nearer.

"I was a little boy then who did not know what he wanted. I know now. I was jealous of Nick. I didn't stop thinking of you even after I was married. In Paris...."

"But how can I believe in you again?"

"Only let me prove it" he said. "Ann....Ann....I've never stopped loving you." His arms were around her, his lips close, his eyes imploring. "You and I loved each other too much—that was our great trouble."

She pushed him away gently.

"I want to believe you. Contrary to what everyone else thinks or says I want to believe you."

"And when it's over, you'll marry me?" he asked impulsively.

"You'll have to give me time."

He took her hand that wore the emerald and kissed it. Then he was gone.

She stood there looking after him, her hair still damp from the night dew. She was breathing hard. What had she done? She turned; went out of the house and got into her car.

She had to see Nick, she kept thinking, driving to the island. What would he think? Could she be condemned because she had never ceased loving Doug? Was it so terribly wrong to be blinded to everything except Doug's love the worship in his eyes, his touch?

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

As Ann speeded towards Gibson Island, a thousand questions unasked and unanswered came to her mind. Is following love, she wondered, the wrong way? Is believing in a man in whom no one else believes the wrong way?

Nick had not gone to dinner. He was sitting on the verandah looking over the beautiful island wearing a white sweater, smoking his pipe. He saw Ann drive in the pebble driveway and dressed in her riding clothes, half run, half stumble up the stone steps.

"What's wrong?" he called out to her.

She was in his arms, her head against his shoulder.

"Nick, above all when I tell you don't blame me too much. Don't hate me—and try to understand. Try!"

He sat in a wicker chair and watched Ann walk up and down the stone verandah. She told him a little breathlessly, what had happened. He just sat there smoking his pipe earnestly.

"Now tell me, Nick."

He spoke with difficulty frowning. "If you love him, there is nothing I can say. Wait for him and marry him."

"Do you mean that?"

"If marriage with Doug will make you happy and will give you the love you want and deserve I shall certainly not oppose it."

She came to him and touched his shoulder. "I feel" she said softly, "that John—John wouldn't want it to end this way."

Nick smiled. "John wanted you to be happy. That was his only thought."

There was no jealousy in Nick, but he knew that she was blinded by Doug's boyish handsomeness and blinded by the illusion that the old love still existed. It was just that when Doug's reckless marriage failed, he had turned to Ann again as he had turned to her many other times when new fancies failed him. And Ann, caught in the current of her own emotions believed him.

"I told him I had to think about it," she said, standing still, her head lowered.

Nick took her hands and pressed them against his lips in a deep silent caress. "We won't talk any more about it" he said. "You've made your decision. I won't oppose it."

She spent the evening with him, sitting on a cushion at his feet, her head pressed against his knees. They talked of many things, but he knew that foremost in her mind was the thought of Doug, estranged from Gail, and coming back to her.

"Spend the night down here," he said, "and we'll ride in the morning."

It was scarcely light when they were riding along the beach. The wind was making low music through the trees and beside them the waves from the Chesapeake were rolling in. Presently they brought the horses from a gallop to a slow trot.

"Let's give them a rest" said Nick.

They dismounted and tied the horses. Ann sat on the sand.

"Getting away makes things clearer. It always does."

"Don't close your mind to anything," he said. "You've got to prepare yourself for a great deal of criticism and gossip."

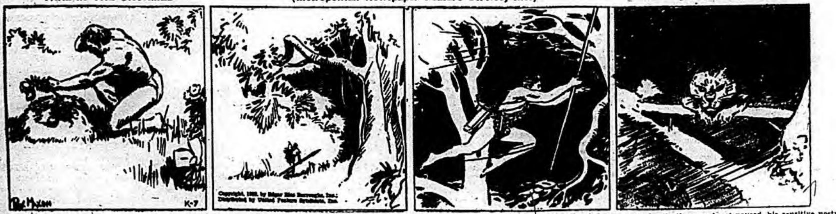
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Rex Maxon
K-7

Returning to the garden ,the ape-man stood among the trampled flowers above the grave of his head—long he stood there with his head bowed—in a last, mute farewell.

As the sun set behind the towering forests to the west, Tarzan of the Apes followed the still distinct trail of Ivan Dmitrich Karsenoff and his blood-stained followers.

Night came. The tree tops waved wildly under a gale that drowned the lesser noises of the jungle. Upward went Tarzan toward a sturdy tree crotch across which long ago he had built a little platform

Presently the man-beast paused, his sensitive nostrils dilating as he sniffed the air about him. Two close-set eyes gleamed wickedly in the darkness as they watched Tarzan.

could submit sufficient evidence today to conclude the hearing. There are the doctors, G. H. Stobie and R. S. Gibson, Chief of Police Alex Kidd and Plainclothesman Fred Isard yet to testify. The adjournment was made until 1.45 p.m.

George A. Urquhart, K.C., of Toronto, special crown prosecutor, conducted the examination assisted by the crown attorney, while Col. R. H. Greer, K.C., and Chas. A. Payne, K.C., were in charge of the defence.

Worried Over Taxes

The accused was again brought to the police station early and stepping inside the cells said, "Gee, this is a murky morning, nothing like this in California." He appeared in court in a brown suit, with grey shirt and dark blue tie and carried his familiar cushion for his chair. He spoke to a few whom he knew intimately before leaving for the west.

Vermilyea remarked he was worried about the taxes due on his property in California but hoped he would soon be home to get the matter straightened out.

Miss Mary Kelso, George Street, of this city, stated she had known deceased for fifteen years and that she was at her house on the night of October 4th, for a friendly visit. Mrs. J. J. Farley and Mrs. Vermilyea were at home at the time, stated the witness and she was received in the library.

"Which way did you come in?" asked Crown officer

"By the front door," she replied.

"How long did you stay?"

"I left at 10.10 pm."

"Was Mrs. Vermilyea all that time?"

"She was not there when I left."

Calls at House

"Were there any calls that evening?"

"Yes."

"Who answered them?"

"Mrs. Vermilyea."

"What was the first call?"

"It was a man that Mrs. Vermilyea said called for food."

"Did you hear voices?"

"Yes, that of Mrs. Vermilyea; she always spoke in a gentle voice."

"What did she say?"

"There is no one here to get you anything."

"When was the next call?"

"About nine o'clock."

"Where was the call?"

"At the front door."

"Who came?"

"A Miss Davison."

Third Call

"When was the next call?"

About 9.30 p.m."

"Where was the call this time?"

"At the office door."

"Who answered?"

"Mrs. Vermilyea."

Taken Upstairs

"In what position did she leave the door?"

"It was ajar slightly."

"Did you hear anything?"

"Yes—she said "Is it you back again."

"What happened next?"

"I heard steps going upstairs and one had a light coat on."

"How long did they remain there?"

"About ten minutes and then they went out again through the office."

Departure of Mrs. Vermilyea

"Was any remark made by anyone?"

"Yes, Mrs. Vermilyea said 'I will be back shortly'."

"Did she come back?"

"No."

"Where did you go?"

"I went home but at that time no news had been heard of the crime."

"Did Mrs. Vermilyea say anything after she returned to the room on the first visit of the man?"

"Yes, she said that a tall man came to the door."

Cross-Examined

Col Greer asked that the answer be stricken from the evidence but later withdrew his request stating "I may be able to use it.' '

Was Mrs. Vermilyea in habit of taking strangers to her room?"

"I don't know.

The cross-examination of this witness was brief, Col. Greer simply reviewing the evidence as given.

Witness Turned Head

"If you had your back to the door, how could you see any person going upstairs?"

"I slightly turned my head and saw through the crack."

"Why did you do it?"

"I had no reason to look because I did not hear any voices only Mrs. Vermilyea who said 'It is you back again'."

"You are not, swearing that two persons went upstairs?"

"No."

Swears Coat Light Colored

"How much did you see of the coat?"

"About 1½ feet of the length."

"How did you determine the color?"

"Only that it was light-colored."

"What did you hear?"

"Just steps."

"What caused you to turn your head?"

"I don't know."

"When you saw the light coat was it stationary?" asked Mr. Urquhart.

"It was still" said the witness.

Inspector on Stand

Inspector Hamar Gardner of the C.I.D., Toronto, stated he knew the accused and that he received a call about midnight on October 4th., arriving in Belleville about 2.45 a.m. On arrival the inspector said he went to the police station, having been instructed at Toronto to investigate an assault on the mother-in-law of the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner.

Condition of Hatchet

He stated he went to the scene with Chief Kidd and Detective Isard and after careful search saw a pool of blood on the lawn about four or five inches in circumference.

"What was its appearance?"

"Quite red and fresh."

The hatchet was produced from the exhibits and witness stated that he saw the hatchet before going to the scene.

"What was its condition?"

"There were blood and debris and some hair."

"What was the condition of the blood?"

"It was coagulated—thick but not dry."

"Did you see Mrs. Vermilyea?"

"Yes, after dark on Oct. 5."

"Who was with you?"

"Dr. George H. Stobie."

Examination of Wounds

"Did you examine the wounds?"

"Yes, there was two cuts on the right wrist, one being clear through while on the head there were several. A severe one being in the centre or the forehead. It was cut about 2½ inches long."

Wound Hatchet Compared

"Did you make any reference between the head of the hatchet and the wounds on the head?"

At this point Col. Greer objected to witness giving an expert opinion and this was upheld by the court. Inspector Gardner was allowed, however, to state that he placed the hatchet head and blade against the wounds and they seemed to correspond.

No Prints on Hatchet

"What did you do with hatchet and the hair?"

"I took the hair to Toronto and gave it to Dr. Frankish."

"What was done with the hatchet?"

"It was taken to a fingerprint expert, Borland, where it was examined and photographed?"

"Were any fingerprints found?"

"None."

"Where you present when telegrams were received by the chief of police here?".

"Yes. They were about finding the soap and cigar bands in Vermilyea's belongings in California."

"Did you go to California?"

"Yes. On Oct. 8th. on Train 17 to Chicago."

"Did you meet anyone?"

"Yes. Plainclothes Officer Isard from Belleville police force."

"Where did you get off?"

"At Chicago Lawn Station or 83rd Street Station near the Municipal Airport to board a plane for Glendale, California, arriving shortly after 10 o'clock on October 9th, the plane being a little late."

"Did you make investigation in Chicago with respect to the case?"

"Yes. I received a passenger list of those on the plane of the date of Oct. 5th.

After arriving at Los Angeles the British Consul's office was visited and the witness went to Ontario, California, where with Chief Constable John Locke, an examination of the contents of the two grips, owned by Vermilyea was made and a list taken, said the witness.

"What was the report from Dr. Frankish?"

"A verbal one, that no blood stains were found on the garment." The witness then identified articles he said were taken from the accused and also the counter stub received from the garage at Los Angeles.

"Did you speak to the manager of the garage?"

"Yes."

Garage Ledger Page

"What did you receive?"

"A page of the ledger from the garage. Col. Greer opposed the placing of this exhibit in unless the manager, Mr. Fontaine, verified the record—but he was informed the record would be corroborated.

"When was the examination of Vermilyea in Toronto?"

"On October 21st all for the purpose of identification". The witness described the methods used in the "show up."

Show-Up At Toronto

"How many were used in the line-up?"

"Eleven and the accused."

"Did all witnesses view the accused together?"

"No, one at a time."

"Did any man not identify the accused?"

"Yes, Danzinger."

"Was Vermilyea asked if he wanted to change his position in the show-up?"

"Yes, and he said he did not."

Returning to the hatchet, the witness said it was a common form of hatchet and that in Ontario, California, at the home of Vermilyea, there was found in the shed a hatchet similar to the one produced, but was not taken.

Court then adjourned till 1.45 p.m.

At the resumption of the Vermilyea hearing this afternoon, Inspector Gardner was still on the stand and stated that a salesman from Simpson's picked out Vermilyea as the "Fourth man from the left in the line-up as the man to whom he sold the hatchet. "This is as far as the evidence was proceeded. The name was given to the court as Charles Nichol. Nichol will not appear at this hearing, it was intimated by B. C. Donnan, K.C., Crown Attorney.

Brief Cross-Examination

The cross-examination of the inspector was quite brief, Col. Greer taking the witness over the trip.

"Did you have to sign any paper before boarding the plane?"

"No."

"No contract?"

"No."

"Did you see Vermilyea on arrival?"

"No, not for several days."

"Did you search the Vermilyea home?"

"Not at that time."

"Did you interview any men, who are not going to be called?"

"I do not know."

"Who is Callaghan, you mentioned?"

"The taxi driver, that identified Vermilyea, as the man driven from Glendale Airport to Bullock's Store and a Mr. Swain, who allegedly, drove Vermilyea from that store to the Los Angeles' garage."

Trip to Test Speed

"Why did you go by train and plane?"

"To demonstrate how fast one could travel from Toronto to Los Angeles."

Constable Fred Isard of the local police force, who instituted the investigation of this crime was next called. About this time Vermilyea was handed a letter by his counsel, Charles Payne, and instead of listening to the witness on the stand, he perused the letter intently.

Constable Isard told of arriving at the scene and finding Mrs. Vermilyea lying in a pool of blood on the lawn. He stated, she was wearing dark clothes and appeared to be critically wounded although she was alive but unconscious.

"What did you do?"

"I searched around the buildings and the passageway between the Faulkner and Reid homes."

Finding of Pans

"I found a bunch of pans," one of which was produced and placed in as an exhibit.

"What was in it?"

"The residue of some ashes and a hatchet."

"How was the hatchet placed in the pan."

"The steel part of the hatchet was in the pan and about four inches of the handle was sticking over the side."

Condition of Hatchet

"Which way was the handle pointing?"

"Southwesterly."

"What was the condition of the hatchet?"

"Very bloody; on the head of the hatchet were bits of hair."

"What was the condition of blood?"

"Not quite dry but quite fresh."

"Did you learn the color of the hair of deceased?"

"Yes. Partly grey."

"Did you show the hatchet to anyone?"

"Yes, to George N. Gorman, to whom I said, 'I believe I have the hatchet.' "

"What did you do with it?"

"I gave the hatchet to Chief Kidd."

"When did you leave for California?"

"On the night of October 13."

In cross-examination, the witness said that from Mr. Hunt he had heard there was a noise at the rear and going there found the pan and the hatchet.

How Hatchet was Picked Up

Constable Isard showed the court how he carried the hatchet from the place found to the police car and from the car to the Chief's office at the police station. It was learned the hatchet was picked up by the extreme end of the handle on all occasions.

Gloves And Papers

Inspector Gardner recalled to the stand identified two pairs of gloves also found in Ontario, California.

"Why did you bring back the financial papers produced?"

"I don't know why they were brought back except that they dealt with financial matters."

B. C. Donnan, K.C., questioned Dr. George H. Stobie relating to injuries received by the late Mrs. Vermilyea.

"How did you receive word?"

"I was at the theatre and told to go to the hospital."

"Did you know Mrs. Vermilyea?"

"Yes, for 25 years."

"Where did you first see her?"

"On the operating table."

Nature of Wounds

"Did you perform the postmortem?"

"Yes."

"When did she die?"

"On Oct. 5th, about ten o'clock. At this point the report on death was put in."

"What were the injuries?"

"Lacerations of right forearm near the wrist, one of which was right across and nearly caused complete severance; the bone was severed; the second mark was not so deep."

There was a great deal of color about the left eye, about the centre of head above hair line, there was a cut but it did not extend into the forehead. On the right side of the head and over the right ear there was a jagged wound with brain tissue oozing therefrom. The bone was driven into the brain tissue and nine pieces of bone were taken out.

Fracture Across Head

There were several distinct wounds in that area, the edge being at right angles. There was another wound near the large one and other small ones. When the scalp was removed a fracture ran across the whole head.

"What was the cause of death?"

"Destruction of the whole brain tissue."

"Would any of the wounds prove fatal?"

"The large wound would have caused death but probably not the smaller ones."

Thinks Hatchet Used

"Do you think the hatchet was used?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because the shape of the wounds corresponded to the serrated head of the hatchet and the wounds on the wrist were about the same length as the blade of the hatchet."

"How do you think she received the blow on the hand?"

"It must have had some support."

"Were the blows heavy enough to knock her down?"

"Yes."

Position When Struck

"Do you think Mrs. Vermilyea was standing up when all the blows were administered?"

"No, Sir."

"Were you present when Inspector Gardner tried the hatchet head with relation to the wounds inflicted?"

"Yes."

"Was there a similarity?"

"Yes."

There was no cross-examination and Chief Kidd followed on the stand at three-forty. The hearing was still in progress at four o'clock.

MOVE TO ABOLISH OFFICE PROMISED

Lieutenant Governorship To be Subject of Action Says Premier

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP)—The Ontario Government will attempt to abolish the office of Lieutenant-Governor at the next session of the Legislature, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced here today. He arrived here to confer with Prime Minister R. B. Bennett on an agreement to share costs 50-50 of the Ontario section of the trans-Canada Highway, estimated at $16,000,000.

A resolution to abolish the office will be introduced at the next session, the Premier said. "There is nothing against Dr. Bruce (Lieutenant-Governor) in this; he is the finest gentleman in the world. It is just a matter of principle.

Opposition To Milk Board

Reiterating his frequently expressed opposition to interference in any way with the policy of supply and demand, Mr. Hepburn mildly criticized the new Ontario Milk Board. "It was not our act," Mr. Hepburn said. "But now that we are in it, we are going to put teeth into the act and give a fair trial. If it doesn't work then, we'll abandon it, but to drop it now would be to leave the industry badly demoralized. One trouble, of course, is over capitalization of many of the milk companies.

No Labor Codes

Asked about the labor legislation being prepared by Hon. Arthur Roebuck, Attorney-General and present Minister of Labor, as approved by the Liberal caucus, Mr. Hepburn indicated that the legislation does not provide for any so-called codes.

"There is nothing radical or compulsory about the proposed labor legislation," the Premier said. "It means that legislation will be passed to ratify any agreements reached between employers and employees as to hours of work and wages for the purpose of stabilizing employment conditions."

Separate Schools

Asked about the question of Separate Schools getting a greater share of corporation and public utility taxes, Mr. Hepburn said he had promised to meet the Ontario Catholic Ratepayers' Association early in January to discuss the question. "We will listen to their case and hear the other side and then we will do what we consider fair to all concerned," Mr. Hepburn said. "If we do anything it will be by Legislative action because to refer the question to court would be merely passing the buck."

"The Ontario Cabinet is a unit against the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway development; I have yet to find one sound economic reason in favor of it," Mr. Hepburn asserted.

FLANDIN GAINS VICTORY

Paris, Dec. 1.—(CP)—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin gained a sweeping victory today in the Chamber of Deputies, being accorded a decisive vote of confidence on his demand for secret funds for the Ministry of the Interior.

BAILIFF IS SHOT SERVING PAPERS

William Tremblay, Badly Injured Near Vaughan Station

Hamilton, Dec. 1 (CP)—William Tremblay, bailiff, was shot and is reported fatally injured when he attempted to serve papers upon a farmer near Vaughan Station. Meagre reports reaching Provincial Police at Smithville were that the bailiff had been badly injured and might die. Doctors and police were rushed to the spot.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, Ont., Nov. 28/34

Dear Sir,—

During my short stay in your city I paid a visit to the Belle Theatre and I noticed that commencing on Saturday "The Count of Monte Cristo" is to be shown there.

I had the extreme pleasure of viewing this masterpiece in Toronto and again in St. Catharines. It has so impressed me that I am taking the liberty of expressing my opinion.

The acting in this photoplay is magnificent! I have never seen a finer portrayal of any character since Fredric March's success in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde!, in fact Robert Donat's acting is irreproachable.

I strongly recommend this picture to men, women and children. Children because they will find adventure comparable to that of "Treasure Island"; women because of its beautiful romance and men because of its gripping dramatic story.

Sincerely yours,
C. Perring Taylor.

BELLEVILLE BAND TO VISIT PICTON

To Play in Association With 155th Battalion Band to Raise Funds

Picton and district music lovers are delighted with the announcement that a massed band concert similar to the one held in this city will be arranged in Picton on Sunday at 8.30 p.m. by the combined bands of Picton and Belleville. The Belleville Municipal Band the 155th Battalion Band of Picton will be under the joint direction of Bandmaster Reg Hinchey of this city and S. G. Lockyer of the Picton Regimental Band. Belleville's Band will leave this city at 6:30 in the evening. Both bands will then parade from the Soldiers' Monument in Picton to the Regent Theatre The public is cordially invited to attend. There will be no admission charge but a silver collection will be taken. His Honor Judge McLean of Picton will act as chairman of the evening. All funds taken in will be donated to the band fund.

Croll is Opposed To Election Deposits In Municipal Contests

Ottawa, Dec. 1—(CP)—For the present at least, Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs is opposed to any deposit being required by candidates for municipal office. 'The unemployed' he stated today, "are taking keener interest in municipal elections and it would hardly be fair, in these times, to require a deposit of any kind for municipal candidates."

Prince Sees "Iron Duke" Movie

3 DIMENSIONAL MOVIES

London, Dec. 1—(CP-Havas)—Work on the vexed problem of creating three-dimensional movies was reported today to be in full swing under the auspices of the Gaumont British Pictures Corporation and the Imperial Chemical Industries.

Picture of Royal Wedding, as Flashed by Radio

With members of the royal families of the world gathered about them, and with practically every nation of the world represented by diplomats and first families, Prince George, Duke of Kent, took Princess Marina of Greece, as his wife, in historic old Westminster Abbey, this radio picture tells the story of the gorgeous spectacle that was presented to the favored witnesses, as the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the marriage ceremony. The world listened in on the event by radio.

Transmitted by radio to the United States, this photograph gives an idea of the picturesque spectacle in Westminster Abbey, London, as Princess Marina of Greece became the bride of Prince George, Duke of Kent, youngest son of King George and Queen Mary, of Great Britain. The wedding party is at the altar where the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounces the nuptial rite.

CHAIN STORES COUNSEL PROTESTS PROBE METHOD

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

New York, Dec. 3 (CP) — To anyone curious as to why sons of major league hockey stars seldom follow the steps of their fathers in blazing a name for themselves in the National Hockey League, the retort perfect of Earl Boucher aged eight, might provide the solution.

Earl, son of Frank Boucher, starry centre of New York Rangers was asked after Saturday's Ranger-Maroon game if he intended to become a hockey player too.

"No Sir," sagely replied the young man, "I am going to be a manager, just sit on the bench and tell the other guys what to do."

Helena, Mont., Dec. 3 (CP) — Gov. Frank H. Cooney thinks the Waterloo, Ia., girl who wrote and asked him to find her a "full blooded cowboy" for a husband will be disappointed.

All "Miss Florence Brown wants is a real cowboy" who has black hair and eyes, and does not drink or smoke.

Governor Cooney says he knows of no one measuring up to those specifications.

Harrington, N.J., Dec. 3 (CP)—A place for the tired Manhattan business dog to relax on weekends an retain that youthful figure has been opened here. Not every dog can drop in, either. The "Canine Country Club" has a membership committee, the management explained.

"Keeping dogs in the city is a serious problem because they never can get any exercise," said Gus White, manager of the 45-acre layout. "That's why most of those you see around hotels and apartment homes are so fat.

"Our purpose, is to provide these animals with a place where they can romp, chase rabbits and play under the very best conditions."

MANAGER 'FIRED' OVER COMPLAINT

George Pace Makes Charge Balancing Cost Him Money

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP) — George Pace, for 12 years a manager in New Toronto for Dominion Stores, Limited, was dismissed last September because he complained of being sent short-weight bread for re-sale, he told the parliamentary mass buying commission today. He made his complaint to a meeting of managers and managers-in-training and in the presence of store executives. The next day he was dismissed "for talking too much."

The $22-a-week manager was forced to transfer money every week from his pocket to the till to balance his stock, he said.

Although he always gave 16 ounces to the pound, he was forced to make exaggerated applications for shortage and wastage allowances to balance his stock. Stock losses, he said, would have meant his dismissal.

After his dismissal Pace said he decided to open a voluntary chain store in New Toronto, but Sam Darragh, his former supervisor told him he had instructions to "cut the feet from under me and hound me out of the town." He did not open the store.

Pace was the first of 10 or 12 former store managers to be called

VERMILYEA SENT UP FOR TRIAL BY E. J. BUTLER, K. C.

Proceedings at Close of Preliminary Hearing Quite Short

MANY WITNESSES

Longest Hearing in History of Court Concluded Late Saturday

Harold W. Vermilyea will stand trial for matricide at the next court of competent jurisdiction, which will likely be held at the next sitting of the Supreme Court in this city, which will be in the spring. He was committed for trial by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. late Saturday afternoon, after one of the longest preliminary hearings in the history of this city. Four Saturdays have been taken up with filing the evidence necessary to establish a Prima Facie case.

At the conclusion of the evidence given by Chief Alexander Kidd, G. A. Urquhart, K.C., of Toronto special Crown prosecutor, moved for committal of trial without objection in any form by Col. R. H. Greer, K.C., counsel for the defence. Vermilyea was called to the prisoner's dock and His Worship read that part of the criminal code to the accused, which stated he had nothing to fear and that he need not say anything, but anything that he did say would be used in evidence against him at his trial.

"Have you anything to say?" asked Magistrate Butler.

"No sir" said the accused in a firm voice.

"I will now commit you for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction" said His Worship and the proceedings were over. With the committal sheet, the accused was hurried off to the County Jail and delivered into custody of the jailer.

The accused did not appear nervous and immediately after the proceedings talked with his guards and those about him. Col. Greer held a brief consultation with him before he was taken to the cells below, while members of the press bid him goodbye until the trial in the spring. "Why don't some of you fellows come up for a half hour to visit" he said as he was led downstairs. The hearing has been a lengthy one and a large number of witnesses have testified for the Crown. It is expected that more will be called than heard at the inquest because there have been some documents placed as exhibits, that will have to be sworn to if they are to be admitted for evidence of the jury. Mr. Fontaine, manager of the Los Angeles garage and Charles Nichol of Toronto will be the added witnesses.

Alexander Kidd, Chief of Belleville Police Force the last witness for the Crown told of his part in the investigation of the telegrams sent to California and received from Chief John Locke. He also showed Col. Greer how the hatchet was handled by him during the time it was in his custody. It was picked up by the chief on each edge of the sides of the blade.

"Who gave you the letter dated Sept. 29th?"

"I think it was received at Dr. Faulkner's home on the night of the crime."

C. GRASS, OSHAWA KILLED BY CAR

Struck Street and Rolled Into Path of Transport

Toronto, Dec. 3.—(CP) —Deaths from street accidents in Toronto reached 60 today when E. Carol Grass, Oshawa, Ont., was killed almost instantly as his automobile, struck by a street car rolled into the path of a heavy transport truck.

Flung through the window of the right door he suffered a fractured skull and other head injuries and was dead when admitted to the hospital a few minutes later.

Local police today investigated the death of James Watt, 53, who succumbed in the hospital last night to injuries received when knocked down by an automobile at an intersection.

Debate is Held At Cannifton

Cannifton, Dec. 3.—(Special) — The Young People's League met at Cannifton on Friday night, a very interesting program having been arranged. Worship service was in charge of Mrs. Merrick and the Scripture lesson read by Miss Myrtle Johns.

The president, Mr. Charles Mills had charge of the program, the feature of which was an amusing debate "Resolved that an unthrifty good-natured husband was preferable to a thrifty crank". The affirmative side was taken by Mrs. Merrick and Mrs. C. Callery and the negative by Mrs. Al Black and Mrs. C. Mills. The negative side won, the judges being Mrs. Putman, Mrs. E. Gilbert and Mrs. W. Cole.

A short address on Missions was given by Rev. Mr. Merrick, Miss Elsie Smallhorn gave a reading and Miss Jean Pope a solo. Rev. Mr. Merrick closed the meeting after which a social evening was enjoyed.

GEO. OAKLEY, PRES. TORONTO B.B. CLUB DIES IN HAMILTON

Mr. Oakley became President of the Toronto Baseball Club in 1931, succeeding the late L. Solmon Mr. Oakley was a former Member of the Ontario Legislature, having been elected for Toronto Riverdale Riding as a Conservative in 1923, 1926 and 1929.

He was defeated in the Ontario elections last June by R. A. Allen, Liberal, who polled 10,908 votes to Oakley's 10,325. E. Farrell, a Socialist-Labor candidate, received 1,010 votes.

Mr. Oakley was President of the George Oakley and Sons, Ltd., stone contractors, of Toronto, and also President of the Consolidated Fire and Casualty Co., of Canada.

WOUNDED BAILIFF WILL 'GET BETTER'

Pneumonia is Only Danger in Way of Recovery of Tremblay

Hamilton, Dec. 3 (CP)—Unless pneumonia develops, William Tremblay, bailiff, shot when he attempted to make a seizure of cattle on the farm of Nicholas Crnodrnja Saturday, will recover from his injuries, it was stated at hospital today.

He passed a fairly good night and was stronger today. A pellet which lodged in his lung is the chief source of danger, however.

REPEAL SECT. 98 IS ADVOCATED

Premier Hepburn Says No Other Country Has Such a Statute

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Desire for the repeal of section 98 of the Criminal Code was expressed today by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario.

The Premier said he voted for the repeal of the measure every time it came up for debate in the House of Commons at Ottawa.

"We would like to see it repealed, it does not appear in the statutes of any other country in the world."

Mr. Hepburn was commenting on the speech last night of Tim Buck, recently released from Kingston Penitentiary to which he was sentenced under the section for membership in an unlawful association.

He thought the large crowd which heard Buck, prominent figure in the Communist party in Canada, "shows that if you persecute a man you make a martyr of him."

Buck, in his speech attacking the Canadian penal system, declared that if the authorities wished to use section 98 they should come to the meeting and they "would get the biggest bag in history."

PARENTS VICTIMS FAILING TO SAVE THREE CHILDREN

PARENTS RUSH IN

Boat Catches Fire as Parents Visit 30 Yards Away

PARKIN, Ark., Dec. 3.—(AP)—A futile effort to rescue three sleeping children from a burning houseboat resulted in the loss of five lives at River Front, a small community of fishermen and farmers located on St. Francis' Bay seven miles from here. Bill Haliburton, 35, his wife and children burned to death and the boat sank after being consumed by the flames.

The Haliburtons had put the children to bed between the hours of eight and nine o'clock and left their river abode to visit at a neighborhood store about thirty yards from where their boat was moored.

A negro passer-by informed them that the boat was in flames and they hastened to the rescue of their children, described as being between the ages of four and ten years.

They disappeared in a billow of smoke as they broke down the door and were not seen again. The children apparently were trapped in their beds. The bodies went down with the boat.

French, German Governments Reach Agreement Over Saar

Financial And All Other Problems Are Included

By ANDRUE BERDING

Rome, Dec. 3.—France and Germany today signed "an agreement of peace" over the Saar Basin territory, providing the Saar votes, as is expected, to return to Germany at the January plebiscite.

By the terms of this agreement, which is expected to end the grave controversy over the future sovereignty of the district, Germany will pay France 900,000,000 francs (approximately $59,400,000) and 11,000,000 tons of coal for France's mines and private credits in the Saar basin and, furthermore, Germany guarantees equal rights to voters and non-voters among all the inhabitants of the Saar regardless of race, religion, or language.

Receiving the froeign press this afternoon the Spanish delegate to the committee of three, Lipez Olivan, told the correspondents that the agreement was divided into two parts, political and economic.

The political accord, he said, is divided into three parts, as follows:

(1) Germany guarantees to extend to non-voters the same standing as that of voters;

(2) All have equal rights to social insurance and state assistance;

(3) The inhabitants of the Saar have equal rights regardless of language, race and religion.

A direct agreement between the two interested parties which has been signed today by the German and French ambassadors.

"This is a success for the League of Nations," said Olivan. "At the same time, the committee expresses the hope that this accord will bring peace to Europe."

The Spanish delegate paid warm tribute to the spirit of co-operation manifested by France and Germany during the committee's meetings and paid personal tribute to the other delegates.

Diplomatic sources, in commenting on the agreement, said they were particularly struck by Germany's guarantee in reference to race, since they mean that the Jews will have equal rights in the Saar.

GORED BY BULL

Hamilton, Dec. 3.— (CP)—Neil McPhail, 17-year-old son of Gordon McPhail, of Eden Mills, was gored by a bull during the weekend as he was bringing the cows home. The bull which had never given any trouble before, suddenly attacked the boy, and dragged him some distance before Mrs. McPhail, who was working in the kitchen heard his screams, and found him lying in the mud. He was rushed to the Guelph General Hospital where little hope is held for his recovery.

NED SPARKS RECALLS REPRIMAND BY LAURIER

Toronto Dec. 3—(CP)— Ned Sparks Hollywood film star and native of St. Thomas Ont. called on his friend Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn at the legislative buildings today to see if Mr. Hepburn really did have a bust of Sir Wilfrid Laurier one-time Liberal Prime Minister of Canada on his desk.

"Sir Wilfrid patted Ned on the head one time" Mr. Hepburn explained.

'Yes, and he made at dent,' Sparks commented.

Anyway, the alabaster bust of the former Liberal chieftain was on view on the Premier's desk.

DENIES SINGER HAS 'M. P.' BADGE

Miss Mary McCormic Speaks of His as Her "New Fellow"

Montreal, Dec. 3 (CP)—A very embarrassed young Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer today denied Mary McCormic, opera star, has his badge. "No," said Constable A. J. Daviau, "Miss McCormic, hasn't my badge. Nobody has my badge."

At Des Moines, Iowa, Miss McCormic was said to be in possession of the badge of Daviau, who was described as her "new fellow."

"I am not going to get married," Daviau declared defensively when the report was drawn to his attention. He cautiously admitted knowing Miss McCormic, but that was all. "I met her before," he said.

It was pointed out Royal Canadian mounted police badges are not handed about like college fraternity pins.

Await Speech of Premier Bennett At Brockville

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP)—The speech at Brockville on Wednesday by Premier R. B. Bennett will be awaited with great interest by the country. He will be addressing the Eastern Ontario Conservative Association. He will also address the professional institute of the Civil Service here tomorrow. Next week he will speak in Halifax.

The farming population of Eastern Ontario is largely in the dairying branch of the industry and some years ago a great deal of the products of the herds in that district went to the United States in the form of cream. Then the heavy duty was imposed by Washington, which ended this trade and the farmers had to change to butter and cheese which has been so remunerative.

In any negotiations between Ottawa and Washington for a reciprocal trade agreement, a lower tariff on Canadian cream will be urged by the Dominion government. Anything the Prime Minister can say in regard to the progress of these negotiations would be of interest but it is doubtful if it has reached the stage where he can make an announcement.

The development on the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence deep waterways would be largely in Eastern Ontario and accordingly the Brockville meeting would be anxious to know how that is progressing. The attitude of the government is believed to be that Washington must make the first move. Any suggestions the Roosevelt administration may have made for modifying the deep waterways treaty so far have not been brought before the cabinet it is earned.

COL. C.A. LINDBERGH'S SISTER - IN - LAW DIES

Mrs. Morgan Had Been Ill For Long Time

Pasadena Calif. Dec 3 (AP)—Mrs. Naubrey N. Morgan, daughter of Dwight W. Morrow and sister-in-law of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, died today in a Pasadena Hospital after a long illness.

Present at her bedside when she died, was her husband and her mother. Mrs. Morrow, widow of the late United States' Ambassador to Mexico, flew to Pasadena a week ago from the Morrow home in Englewood, N.J.

CRUSH CHISELER IS LABOR PLAN OF GOVERNMENT

Hon. A. W. Roebuck Suggests Method to Prevent Disputes

WAGES AND HOURS

After Agreement Minority Must Bow to The Majority

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Ontario had an indication today of the plan of the Labor Legislation to be, submitted to the forthcoming session of the Ontario Legislature by Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, Attorney General and Minister of Labor.

In an address here Saturday night at the ninth annual dinner of the Automobile Transport Association of Ontario the Minister said the legislation would contain provisions enabling the government to help employers and employees reach an agreement regarding wages and hours just as it now aids in the settlement of industrial differences.

It has always been a government function to interfere in time of industrial strife and attempt to conciliate the warring parties, Mr. Roebuck said, and he wondered why the government should stand aside until the outbreak of hostilities.

Head Off Outbreaks?

"Isn't it easier to produce agreement before parties lock horns?" he asked.

While the conference over these problems is taking place a representative of the Department of Labor will preside, he announced. When the agreement is reached the government will insist on the minority pursuing the policy adopted by the majority and the force of the government will be exerted "to crush the chiseler."

"I propose to lay legislation before the Ontario Legislature to give assistance in agreement as well as in disagreement," he told the audience.

Then he enunciated his policy of self-regulation of industry with the government merely standing by to enforce the necessary penalties on those who break the agreements.

Settle Wages

"All you require is that force of government to beat the chiseler. let us raise wages as high as we can. Let us settle it for a period of say 12 months. If you will do that and the Ontario Government gives me the legislation I desire I will put the force of government to crush the chiseler and it won't require much force," the Minister declared.

"That's a promise Roebuck," shouted a voice from the audience.

"It's a promise that if the legislature agrees we will keep," Mr. Roebuck answered.

He referred to the minimum wage law for women and said it was difficult to enforce because it was handed down by the government and not agreed upon by the parties concerned.

Get-Together Plan

"Let us get together around the council table, let us draw up our agreement satisfactory to both sides, not so high the employer can no longer compete, not so low the employee cannot exist," he invited.

ONTARIO ACCEPTS $600,000 MONTH

Cabinet Will Also Accept Deal of Construction of Road Link

Toronto Dec. 3.—(CP)—The Ontario Cabinet accepted the proposition of the Federal Government offering $60000 monthly toward relief expenses in the province Premier Mitchell E. Hepburn announced today.

The Government will also accept the deal regotiated at Ottawa on Saturday for the construction of the Ontario link of the Trans-Canada high from Schreiber to White River the Premier said.

Construction of this stretch will be made on a basis of each government contributing 50 per cent. of the costs.

TWO NEW K.C.'s

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Two new King's Counsel were appointed in Ontario today Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced.

They are Percy Parker of Toronto and J. C. M. German who will conduct the crown case at the trial of David Meisner on a charge of kidnapping John S. Labatt, wealthy London brewer.

Claims Investigation Resembles Prosecution But Inquiry Demurs

Hon. Mr. Stevens Says "Chains" Have Been Represented

"ONE VARIETY" CLAIM

Chairman M. W. Kennedy Thinks Matter is Overstated

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—Claiming chain stores were being placed in the position of an accused person in a court, Arthur Ellis, counsel for Dominion Stores, asked the Mass Buying Commission today to change its method of hearing evidence.

Before the first witness was called today, Ellis asked for a ruling of procedure. "The impression I come to is the investigation has been directed against the corporate chain stores almost entirely. The evidence in all cases is evidence of one sort only—evidence that is detrimental and prejudical to the corporate chain stores."

The Commission, Ellis continued, had heard little or no evidence on mass purchases by the voluntary chains or on the policies of the independent stores.

Of One Variety

"The evidence produced," Ellis said, "has been of one variety only—most damaging to the corporate chain stores."

"That is quite an admission," commented J. L. Ilsley, Lib. Hants-Kings.

"I am forced to that admission."

"I want this commission", Ellis continued, "not to proceed as if this were a criminal prosecution of the corporate chain stores when you should be proceeding as an investigation. You are producing witnesses, as you did on Friday, of a most disreputable type."

The commission demurred but Ellis continued that the corporate chains should not be put in position of an accused without the opportunity of bringing evidence in rebuttal.

"If I am in a position to bring evidence to show that that man Smith is not telling the truth, I should be permitted to do so now, and not a week hence."

Irreparable damage was being done to the chain stores today and it was not, surely, the intention of the commission to ruin some of these firms.

"Did you ask permission to produce any witnesses on Friday?" Ellis was asked. He replied in the negative, adding he was making the request today.

Chains Represented

"Don't forget," said Mr. Stevens, "that the chain stores have been represented here by some of the most brilliant counsel in Canada. All of them, through the courtesy of the chairman, have been give the widest latitude."

"You contend that the evidence already adduced has been largely of one variety — evidence detrimental only to the corporate chain stores. I think on re-consideration you will come to the conclusion you are over-stating the matter. The auditors were put into the stores and the information from the books—confirmed in practically all cases—was not detrimental by any means. It indicated the facts relating to wages, discounts, allowances and so on. This evidence was given both as to the voluntary and corporate chains and was given in an unbiased manner.

"Evidence, where it was favorable, was emphasized," Mr. Kennedy said, "as much as the other. Take the facts, whatever they are. That is the line that has been followed."

Ex-Employes' Statements

The ex-employes who had given evidence on Friday were not speaking from hearsay but in a most direct way as to the alleged practices in the chain stores.

"I realize, if the evidence is not true, what a wrong is done," said Mr. Kennedy.

"We can disprove all of Smith's evidence," interjected Mr. Ellis.

"I can realize the position that firms find themselves in," the chairman said. "But in all cases the fullest opportunity will be given to refute it."

Election Results

For electors interested in the final results of today's municipal election, the Ontario Intelligencer is carrying an extensive service this evening. If enquirers call 98 or 99 on the telephone results will be relayed as soon as they are available at the City Hall. As it usually takes considerable time before the votes are counted and tabulated, citizens are advised not to call much before 7.30 p.m. for the first results. With voting being in progress at the polls until six o'clock this evening the final results will probably not be available much before 9.00 p.m.

Twenty Below!

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—The first real cold snap of the winter season struck Northern Ontario last night, with the mercury dropping to 20 degrees below zero on the Hornepayne division of the Canadian National Railways between Armstrong and Nakina. ACCLAMATION IN FARADAY GIVEN

For the first time in many years the electors of the township of Faraday will not have an opportunity of going to the polls to elect a council, in December as has been the custom. At the nomination meeting in the Council Chamber on Monday last, a council for the ensuing year was elected by acclamation. Although a number of ratepayers were nominated for offices of reeve and councillors, few were anxious to run for office. The council for the ensuing year are as follows:

Reeve—I. McKenzie.

Councillors—C. W. Bierwirth, A. Danford, Elijah Boombour and W. E. Kelusky. Others nominated were U. A. Hubbel and D. McLellan for Reeve and Chas. Marshall, Chas. Peacock, John Plunkett, Harvey Bierwith, Melville Vader and D. Watson.

IS RE-ELECTED TO EXECUTIVE

Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., (former President), was last week re-elected a member of the executive of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade at Toronto.

FIREMAN'S VEST FIRED BY MATCHES

Firemen of the local department nonchalantly chalked up in their official register on Sunday a record of having attended one blaze despite the fact that alarm bells have not rung in the past week or more, and motor apparatus has not left either station. The blaze was attended by no casualties and little damage—except to one vest.

Seated at the table in No. 1 station to which he is attached while repairs are being effected to his own hall, "Star" McDonald, genial member of No. 2 Brigade felt decidedly uncomfortable. The burning feeling in the region of his weskit he laid to a touch of indigestion. But when spirals of blue smoke rose in the sultry air he acted promptly. A blazing vest was quickly unbuttoned and tossed into one corner of the room. He was assisted in the hurried removal of the vest by his fellow members.

Friction of the "vest" pocket against the table had ignited a handful of matches it contained. He was not hurt.

O.P.P. ANNOUNCE CHANGE AT PICTON

Provincial Constable W. Morley Durnford has received notice of his transfer from Picton to Kingston. He will take over his new duties today. Constable Durnford came to Picton in April, 1931, and previous to serving with the Ontario Provincial Police, was a member of the Northwest Mounted Police. For the past two years he has been catcher on the Picton intermediate baseball team, which in 1933 entered the Ontario finals.

Inspector F. Gardner of District No. 8 of O.P.P. announced today that Constable Taylor of Toronto, would fill the vacancy at Picton.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY NAMES JOHN CHAPPELLE

Annual Meeting Addressed by Monsignor J. F. Nicholson

The annual meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. Michael's Church was held yesterday afternoon in the Academy auditorium with a large attendance. Reports of the year were heard and the election of officers took place.

Ormonde Butler, retiring President, and officers, thanked the members for their support during the past year. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. who was present for the meeting gave an interesting address, commending the work of the Society in the past and expressing hope for its continued success.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Spiritual director— Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

President—John Chappelle.

Vice President—Robert Moher.

Secretary—Ernest Cooke.

Treasurer—E. A. Esbaugh.

Councillors and ward prefects will be appointed at a later date. Plans for the year were discussed, before the meeting adjourned.

GULLS EAT DUCKS, SAYS HUNTER

Mr. John Taylor of 28 Barker Avenue, Toronto, relates an experience which brings to light the fact that Bay of Quinte and brother sea gulls of the open lakes are in dire straits for food. Evidently weaned away from the habit of catching fish, even though herring and whitefish run this year has been good, the gulls have been hanging around the shores of the lakes and the bay, subsisting on garbage and offal cast up by the waves. Pickings have been slim.

"My brothers and I were hunting ducks at Brighton some time ago", relates Mr. Taylor. "We shot four Golden Eyes. Owing to the direction of the wind, we decided to let the dead ducks float into shore, a distance of 500 yards or so. About one hour elapsed. When we got to where the ducks had floated in we found that the sea gulls had eaten two of them. One in particular was torn to ribbons; all that was left was the feet and bill. The others were mutilated. The gulls evidently are starving. I have never seen or heard of sea gulls eating fresh killed ducks before."

Obituary

LATE HARRY LEO VAN NORMAN

Sunday afternoon at two o'clock the funeral of Harry Leo Van Norman, a former resident of Belleville who passed away suddenly in Hamilton on Thursday last, took place from the funeral home of the Belleville Burial Company, Campbell street, to St. Michael's Church where Libera was sung by the Rev. C. E. Baker. Many relatives and friends were present at the service.

The bearers were Messrs. T. Sullivan, W. J. Lynch, M. Callaghan, M. Conlin, F. Barrett and S. LaPalm.

Interment was made in St. James' Cemetery.

LATE MISS CARRIE M. DIAMOND

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Miss Carrie Maud Diamond, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Diamond, of Queensboro, took place from 55 Highland Avenue, where with her only sister, Miss Emma Diamond, the last member of the family, she had made her home for some years. Many friends were present at the service in the home which was conducted by the Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, who officiated also at the committal service at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were: Messrs. Fred Wiggins, A. Gunsolus, P. Gunsolus, G. Bonisteel, G. Peterson and W. J. Sharpe.

WILLIAM GOUGH

The death occurred early Sunday morning, Dec. 2nd. at Bloomfield of William (Billy) Gough the only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Gough and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bronson former residents of Belleville and now of Bloomfield. The little fellow whose fourth birthday was on Friday last had been ill only a short time. The sympathy of many friends will be extended to the parents and grandparents in their sorrow.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon and interment was made in the cemetery at Picton.

Police News

Frank Harrington, city, pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today. At the time of the accused man's arrest on Saturday night he was enjoying his liberty after having pleaded guilty to a similar charge in the police court last Tuesday at which time he asked that he be given sufficient time in which to raise the fine imposed. The request was granted. Harrington pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication this morning, having been arrested late Saturday. Upon learning that there could be no fine imposed for a third offence of intoxication the accused changed his plea to that of not guilty, only to again reverse his plea to that of guilty just before the termination of the court. "Are you sure you wish to plead guilty?" inquired His Worship.

"Yes sir," was the reply. "Three months in the common jail, next case," came back the Bench.

No other cases were heard in today's court, Crown Attorney Donnan being unable to be present. All criminal cases to have been heard were enlarged until Friday next.

OLD PEAVIES AND CANT HOOKS FOUND

Memories of River Days Revived as Bed of River Cleaned

Memories of the days when a swollen Moira River carried shouting lumber jacks and thousands of huge logs crashing downriver from the north to the busy saw mills along the city's waterfront, were being revived this week by the finding of old peavies and cant hooks in the river bed by relief workers now on the job, clearing the bottom of the stream of the loose rubble and stone.

Old coin, badly corroded peavies, which sweating timber drivers carried and lost in the swirling current as they hopped nimbly from log to log, and even a part of a stray anchor or two are being resurrected from the muck of the river bed by the busy shovels. One coin unearthed by a worker near the car bridge south of the city has so far defied attempts of those engaged in numismatic research to place it. Sections of cant hooks are common. Outmoded car parts, pieces of baby buggies, and even submerged logs are being unearthed by the workers.

This week a total of some two hundred men, the largest force of workers since relief operations started in the city, were at work on scattered jobs. The majority of them composed the river gang, steadily clearing the bed as they go along.

Along the government dock one of the greatest changes as the result of the relief work is observed. Here busy trucks, hauling material from the river have deposited enough material to make a good start at reclaiming the harbor front at the rear of what will be a new dock, part of which work will be undertaken this winter by the harbor commission. Along the course of the river a considerable change is noted following the removal of the weed overgrown islands formed by the deposit of stone and soil by the annual spring floods.

Obliging Crew Solves Problem For J. Roblin

A little ingenuity plus the assistance of an obliging train crew and a husky locomotive in the yards south of the city today earned Jack Roblin of this city an assured supply of good wood for the coming winter.

Faced with the problem of moving a huge old barge which for thirty years had lain in the water in front of his boat house in the harbor, Jack who desired the wood finally acquired a lengthy section of heavy chain and attached it to the end of the barge. He laid the loose end beside the tracks and waited for the shunting engine to pass. When it did he halted the train with a wave dicament to the crew. "Would they of the hand and explained his prehelp?" "Tie it on," said the obliging engineer.

A grunt and a few puffs from the engine and a ten ton wooden barge was hauled high and dry on the land up the steep bank.

"Thanks," said John as he unfastened the chain and commenced the work of breaking the huge oaken planks into stove wood.

FORECASTER SAYS FINE WEATHER OVER

Winter will start in December.

Euphonious as the phrase may sound, it is not the title of a play or best sellers. It is the statement of the city's unofficial weather forecaster who tested the wind from the north today and found therein perfectly good grounds for his annual prediction.

"We've had a good fall up to now but the fine weather is about over. Be prepared for snow and cold weather. We'll probably be getting some real, old-fashioned winter weather within the next week or so."

The local oracle does not expect any record amount of snow or ice this year, or unseasonable or sustained zero weather. It will probably be just "an average winter."

As if to support his prophecy, for the first time this morning a section of the upper harbor was covered with a sheet of ice as the result of Sunday's drop in the mercury.

JOHN B. ALLSOP IS WHEAT KING

Canada Has Won Crown 20 Times in Past 24 Years

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—(CP)—After winning the premier world wheat award, Canadian agriculturists went out again today in search of new honors at the International Hay and Grain Show and Livestock Exposition here.

A peck of wheat, carefully picked and closely judged, brought to John B. Allsop, Wembley, Alta. the 1934 wheat crown and gave Canada its 20th win in the past 24 years. Allsop wasn't at the show when the award was made. He was still in his home in the Peace River country, where millions of similar kernels of wheat are produced.

Canada's early wins were many, and they were carried off by Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia as well as the Prairie Growers. W. G. Gibson, Ladner, B.C., won the Peas' Championship on a large peas sample and Louis Robin, of Orangeville, Ont., took reserve honors. Seraphine Schmidt, Formosa, Ontario, placed first in the small Peas' Division. H. Graham, Iron Springs, Alta. won the Field Beans' Championship with A. Ciffin, Brooks, Alta., reserve.

Wins More Numerous

Ontario's wins in Peas and Corn were more numerous than ever before. The victories in corn pleased Prof. James Laughland, Crop Extension Specialist of the Field Husbandry Division, Ontario Agricultural College. "The improved results this year," said Prof. Laughland, "I regard as due to the improvement work carried on by the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture and the Ontario Corn Growers' Association."

Judging of other cereals is still underway, with many awards in wheat yet to come. But Ontario stepped into claim one first prize in the wheat classes. Walter Nagel, Fisherville, Ont., exhibited the best sample of white winter wheat. Numerous other Canadian entries will be competing in the other classes.

Livestock judging is just getting underway. The first championship to go to a Canadian breeder was taken by C. J. Brodie, Stouffville, Ont., who exhibited best carload of lambs. Competing with many United States contenders, Brodie was the only Canadian and he took top honors.

Wheat King of World is Only 22 Years Old

Wembley, Alta., Dec. 3 (CP) — Twenty-year-old John B. Allsop is the world's wheat king today—The youngest grower ever to rise to the throne sought by competitors in the thousands.

"And if I hadn't won this year", he said when informed he had carried off the wheat sweepstakes at the Chicago International hay and grain show, "I'd have kept right on trying. It would have been good experience for next year."

Allsop farms with his father, S. B. Allsop, four miles north of here. They are neighbors of Herman Trelle, winner of the crown four years but, by new regulations of the show, barred from further competition. And young Allsop knows a lot about farming in general, as well as growing prize winning wheat.

The youthful wheat king admitted he had been after the championship for the past four years. The closest he ever came to winning the crown was in 1932 when he placed fifth in the hard red spring wheat at Chicago—and reward, the grain with which he won the crown is hard red spring wheat.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Two newcomers were ranked in the numbers of the National Hockey League's Big Seven today, both tied for possession of the bottom rung. Ebbie Goodfellow, the big Ottawan who plays with Detroit got an assist over the week end to match a goal scored by "Swwney" Schriner of the Americans and divide the last place berth. Harvey Jackson of Toronto with one week end goal maintained his first place, ranking though Charlie Conacher with two goals crept up within one point of him.

Does Life Exist Elsewhere? New Telescope May Tell Story

Doubt of Life on Planets or Stars Has Two Foundations

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

Corning, N.Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—Indirectly the 200-inch "eye" for the world's largest telescope, poured yesterday, may furnish information as to whether there is life in other parts of the universe.

The present scientific doubts of life have two foundations, one the lack of oxygen on venus, and the scarcity of it on Mars. These are the two planets where conditions are anywhere near like those on earth. If there is life scientists think it cannot be the kind we know.

The other doubt is the probability that the earth is a very rare accident. Earth apparently arose from a collision or, too close proximity of two stars, one of them the sun. The probabilities of such an accident being repeated, to exactly imitate the earth and its atmosphere are considered very remote.

Stars Within View

That is where the 200-inch telescope to be set up on Palomar Mountain, California, may come in. The present world's largest telescope, the 100-inch at Mount Wilson, California, sees about 75,000,000 nebulae. A nebulae is a collection of stars like the milky way. A low estimate for the number of individual stars on a nebulae is 30,000,000,000. Multiplying this number by 75,000,000 gives the number of stars within view of present telescopes.

The 200-inch mirror is expected to multiply the volume of visible space by 27 fold. If, as is rather expected, this additional space contains nebulae in the same numbers as present known space, the number of individual stars is seventy-five million times thirty billion times 27.

That works out into a number of individual stars so vast that if it proves correct, more than one duplication of the earth may reasonably be expected.

Yesterday's pouring was the second for a 200-inch mirror. Last March the first one was poured, some imperfections developed and the astronomers decided to have the Corning Glass Works cast a duplicate. Now it is announced that the March mirror is good enough to be used, if necessary.

SCHEDULES LIKELY DRAFTED THIS WEEK

Junior Schedule Makers to Meet in This City

Ed Thomas, newly appointed convener for group No. 1 in junior "B" series of O.H.A. competition, announced today that the local junior group meeting, to draft the league schedule, would not be held until following the intermediate schedule had been released by Wm. Lowe, of Port Hope.

Belleville hockey fans are to be afforded a splendid grouping in intermediate "A" competition in the O.H.A., six teams facing the barrier, inculding Lindsay, Peterboro, Cobourg, Port Hope, Campbellford and Belleville. The junior grouping embracing the local kids' team is composed of Campbellford, Tweed, Napanee and Belleville.

Convener Thomas pointed out this morning that it was usually the practice of junior conveners to leave the matter of a junior schedule in abeyance until following the release of the higher grouping, the intermediates. It is expected that both schedules will be drafted before the end of the week.

I'm SORE!
On every side I hear the demand for "better" motion pictures.
I do everything in my power to get the producers to make "better" pictures' That's part of my job.
The producers are making "better" pictures . . . yet when one of them comes along, the public has a perverse way of showing their appreciation by lack of good attendance.
What I want to know is . . . where are all these people who are always demanding that the movies get away from sex and crime and "hokum"?
If you attended the Belle Theatre on Saturday to see "The Count of Monte Cristo," your criticisms were answered, and you enjoyed as fine a piece of screen entertainment as ever ran through a projection machine.
If you have not been here . . . and you do want what you ask for . . . you will go out singing the glad tidings in such loud and joyous tones that the theatre will not be able to handle the crowds. That's the only way we have of knowing your desires. You have just one day more to see this picture which answers your demand for a better screen entertainment. It leaves Tuesday night.

Election Day Highlights

Even though employment is said to be improving in certain circles, it has not affected the city's election situation. It was reported at the city hall today that just as many Deputy Returning Officers and poll clerks to man the various polling booths throughout the city today were listed as in previous years. It did not become necessary to refer to a spare or extra list to secure enough officers.

Gas station attendants felt the benefit of election day in the city. Scores of cars on the street that normally would have been parked in respective garages boosted the total sales of a good many stations as they pulled up for renewed supplies of the fluid that makes locomotion and the calling at homes of voters in the city.

Taxi drivers, as expected, were finding business good, according to two or three who were questioned. Many citizens, keen to join in the matter of choosing their own candidate for office were not depending upon the cars offered by the candidates, but were calling their own taxis and paying the fare themselves. Rides, however, were free in private cars supplied by the candidates and workers to and from the booths, needing only a telephone call to the home or office of the candidate to bring one on the run.

Shortly after nine o'clock this morning business was reported good at several of the polling booths. Voting commenced early in the outlying districts. By ten o'clock the first rush had started. By eleven it was reported to have slackened off slightly. But at noon the day's rush began in earnest.

Both candidates for the Mayoralty were confident of victory at noon today when questioned. Both wore large smiles as they circulated about the city meeting their supporters. "It looks good," said Mayor Tice. "From all indications, it will be a very large vote," said his opponent for Mayoralty honors, Harold Armstrong.

One of the candidates for aldermen was making the rounds of the polling booths on foot today. He approached one booth and observed a group of men standing on the walk outside discussing the weather or the price of coal or some other topic. The aldermanic candidate hesitated as he neared the group, cleared his throat and gave evidence of making a short stay. Then he recovered and walked on. "Gosh," he told the reporter, later, "I've done so much election speechmaking during the past few days that every time I see a gang of three or more men I feel like stopping and making a speech.

While Belleville electors were exercising their franchise in the scattered polling booths in the city today, Picton voters were also up early and abroad on the task of choosing their municipal officials for the coming year. In Picton today the polling booths opened at 9 a.m. and will close at 5 p.m. The number of voters entitled to cast a ballot in Picton is given at 2,135 among 13 polling subdivisions.

As is the custom, workmen engaged by the city will receive their full hour today for the purpose of voting. Some two hundred men engaged on relief work, and a score or more others engaged on other city activities, will cease their operations at four o'clock in order to have plenty of time to go to the polls and mark their ballot.

BENNETT, HEPBURN IRON OUT TROUBLES OVER HIGHWAYS

Dominion Government in Favor of 135 Mile Stretch

BUILT ON 50 - 50 BASIS

Claim of $4,750,000 as Dominion's Share of Relief Refused

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP)—Satisfied with his conference with Prime Minister R. B. Bennett here Saturday, during which agreement was reached on a number of matters in connection with relief work in the Province, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario, is today preparing to leave for an extended holiday.

Accompanied by Minister of Northern Development, Peter Heenan, and Minister of Welfare David Croll, Mr. Hepburn conferred for several hours with Mr. Bennett and other Federal Ministers.

The Federal Government agreed, it was stated afterwards to contribute on a 50-50 basis to the construction of the 135-mile stretch of the trans-Canada highway extending from Schrieber eastward to White River. Before Mr. Heenan's plan to build the remainder of the road from White River to North Bay by way of Sault Ste. Marie is approved the Ontario Government will have to furnish more precise information as to costs and other angles than has already been forthcoming.

It is understood also that Ontario agreed to accept the Federal Government's previous offer of a monthly contribution of $750,000 for direct relief in the Province.

The Dominion's flat refusal to pay a claim of $4,750,000 advanced by the Province for the Dominion's share of relief works undertaken by the former Henry Government was also acceded to by Mr. Hepburn. The Ontario Premier claimed Mr. Henry had stated he had assurance of assistance from the Federal Government but Dominion Ministers were able to satisfy Mr. Hepburn no such undertakings had been given.

VOTING IN MANY MUNICIPALITIES

Practically All of The Larger Cities in Ontario Hold Elections

By The Canadian Press

Citizens of numerous Ontario municipalities today cast their ballots for the men they wish to govern affairs for 1935. Mayors, Reeves, Deputy Reeves, Councillors, Public Utilities Commissioners and Members of the Boards of Education will be chosen today.

Polls in most municipalities are scheduled to open at nine o'clock this morning and closed at seven o'clock tonight. Acclamations in some centres have removed the need of elections but large lists of candidates have made their appearance in some municipalities.

A record number of Candidates have appeared for seats on the council in the Hamilton voting. Sixty-nine candidates have appeared to make the race an interesting one. Mayor Herbert Wilton, seeking a second term, faces four opponents with no previous municipal experience. School trustees in four wards also will be chosen.

Ottawa Election

Four Controllers, 22 Aldermen and a Mayor will be selected in Ottawa. P. J. Nolan will seek another term in the chief magistrate's chair. He is opposed by William P. Clermont, Albert H. Cole and James Connah. Fifteen candidates will contest the Board of Control seats and 53 are seeking Aldermanic honors.

Only in two wards will voting be held in Brockville where acclamations were given Mayor W. T. Mayor, Public Utilities Commission and the Boards of Education members. Aldermen in the east wards also received acclamations. Mayors, Reeves and Deputy Reeves in more than a score of municipalities were tendered like treatment, when qualifications ended a week ago last Saturday. Mayor W. G. Bullbrook of North Bay and 10 Aldermen were returned to their posts without a vote.

Cities holding votes today included Kingston, Kitchener, Brantford, Stratford and Woodstock. Other cities and towns, villages and townships also will vote.

An Orgy of Merry-Making Unlike Anywhere Else in the World

Looking down from the top of a Ferris wheel onto one corner of Mexico City's "Coney Island" Christmas festival.

Principal streets are closed to traffic and long strings of booths sell everything under the sun

By STANFORD B. WITWER
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Mexico City, Mexico, Dec. 1 — Perhaps in all this world there is nothing to rival a Christmas season in Mexico City.

The spirit of devotion, which mantles the day of the Nativity in the orthodox Canadian and European world, is unheard of down here. The Mexican, who lives a mighty hum-drum life during 50 weeks of the year, has chosen Christmas as the ideal time for him to explode and make whoopee.

From a week before to a week after the holiday, Mexico City vents its turbulent soul in a wild orgy of merry-making in the streets. The inhabitants shout, they dance, they toot horns and shoot guns and in every respect cavort like a wild mob of celebrating college students after the team has won that big game.

No Santa Claus

The bright-berried holly and the joyful Christmas tree which usually signify Yuletide are passe in Mexico City. You would search in vain for any such symbols here. And poor Santa Claus, the hero of Dec. 25 in every Canadian home, is a rank outsider in more ways than one.

Were Santa, with his red clothes and ermine whiskers, to appear in Mexico City, he would find a strange reception indeed. And if, as the fables go, Santa were to come at night over the rooftops in a sleigh, which in itself would be most unappropriate in a country which has no snow, he would find himself confronted as well by a country which has no chimneys.

Christmas, to the Mexicans, is too precious to waste giving presents admiring the tinsel and bright trinkets on an evergreen tree. Whatever present-giving they do is reserved for the Feast of the Three Kings, 12 days after Christmas, when the wise men pass through the town leaving presents for the tots who place their shoes, filled with straw for the wise men's camels, outside their bedroom door on that night.

"Feliz Navidad" is their slogan for "Merry Christmas," but what they really mean is "come out and let's have fun."

Invade Capital

A week before Christmas, the usually quiet native population invades the town, their numbers augmented by literally hundreds of others, many of whom have come many miles, travelling by burro and horseback with their families just to be in on this one great phase of life, which to them is two weeks of virtual paradise.

The soul of the native, which still reflects the strains of old Aztec and Totec blood, seethes with a longing for pomp and ceremony and noise and merry-making.

For many years it has been customary for rural Mexicans to make a sort of pilgrimage to Mexico City at Christmas time. The purpose was, and still is, primarily religious. First they attend the Feast of the Guadalupe Virgin at her shrine just outside Mexico City. Then they continue on to the city to offer prayers in the great cathedral here. Always devoutly religious, the natives have come to consider this pilgrimage a sort of annual duty.

The influx of these masses of native visitors led the Mexican government some years ago to declare a "National Feria" at Christmas time, when all stores in Mexico City were urged to feature in their displays only goods manufactured in Mexico.

Streets Cut Off

From this small beginning the present celebration has developed. As the years passed booths were placed along the streets in order to display goods to better advantage. These booths increased in number so rapidly that after a time it became necessary to block off streets for their exclusive use. With a restricted area the "feria" became, in effect, a carnival which today rivals the greatest circus.

From outlying districts the carnival has advanced steadily toward the centre of the city until, in 1932, it reached the hub of the city's wheel of activity and set itself up there.

For several blocks around the famed Plaza of the Constitution, flanked by the century-old cathedral and the drab government buildings, streets were roped off and traffic steered around them. Within this area, buildings were bedecked with the nationalistic colors, red, green and white, and strings of colored lights were stretched across the streets to lend the guise of fabled Babylon after nightfall.

Modern Midway

Row on row of shanty-like booths sprang up, selling everything under the sun from caged cats, dogs and birds, to oranges, picture frames and leather saddles. Side shows with all the accompanying glamor of the American midway presented hula hula girls, magicians, snake charmers, wild animal displays and daredevil cyclists.

The final touch was added by bringing to town a whole railroad train load of amusement devices and in short order had installed ferris wheels, merry-go-rounds, crack-the-whips, and caterpillars along the avenues which once echoed to the rumble of Cortes' soldiers and the grandeur of military parades in the far off days of the Montezumas.

Along the forgotten byways of Manana Land, knots of young men and women and elders, too, talk in fascinating whispers of the approaching Christmas. In many sections, far removed from Mexico City, peasants are making last-minute preparations for a long and tiresome burro ride which will be forgotten a thousand times over during the revelry of the coming Yuletide season.

"AC-CHOIR-ING" A TASTE FOR TRAVEL THROUGH CANADA

Boys from the London Choir School arrive in New York on the Pennland. They will spend two weeks in New York singing in various churches after which they will proceed to Canada to tour through many cities of the Dominion. Ages of the boys range from 11 to 14.

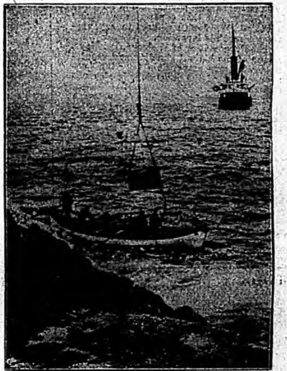
NINE MEN MAROONED ON LIGHTHOUSE



How food and other supplies are fed to the men who tend the lighthouse perched on Tillamook rock, four miles off the coast of Oregon. Only in calm weather can this basket be lowered to the rowboat sent from the tender shown anchored in the background. With the present wintry weather, however, nine men have been marooned on the rock for several weeks, waiting for the abatement of the wind and waves sufficiently to permit the approach of a lifeboat to take the men off. The five lighthouse keepers and four men sent there to do some repairs are imprisoned.

Here is one of the few pictures of Great Britain's historic fortress of Gibraltar commanding the Mediterranean sea, showing for the first time the openings in the rock leading to the gun galleries within. The famous rock withstood a siege of more than three and one-half years at the hands of a Spanish fleet from 1779 to 1783 and was a valuable defence during the great war.

COMPRESSED-AIR AUTO ENGINE

Is a new type of motorcar coming—that is as far as its engine is concerned? Holland has a new invention which will use compressed air—one which is called one of the greatest marvels during the petrol age.

Twenty-two year old Jan Waedenier, of Wolvega, Holland, once a pastry cook, claims to have invented a motor engine which will run on an expenditure of fifteen dollars a year. The burgomaster of his town and the town council backed him and indicated that they had land on which he might build a factory.

These second thoughts proved so serious that the sober and influential Amsterdam Telegraaf remarked: "Tremble, oh Royal Dutch Shell, tremble Texaco, tremble Sir Henri Deterding," when discussing Wardenier's invention.

Wardenier claims that his new compressed air engine will run without petrol, oil, or water, and that it requires lubricating once every three months, and then only if it has been running continuously.

He claims that financiers have interested themselves in his invention and are willing to put up 13,000,000 guilders (more than five million dollars) for the construction of two factories in Holland at which they would produce his engine. Two Dutch barons are his main supporters, he says, but he refuses to divulge their names.

Beyond the statement that his engine was tested several months ago in a factory at Zwolle, and that experts are highly satisfied, Wardenier refuses to say anything about his invention.

The Burgomaster of Wolvega, Dr. Maas, a man of the highest standing and reputation, who was responsible for the announcement of the invention, is also uncommunicative.

It was stated in Dr. Maas's presence that several Government engineers are interested in the engine and this statement has not been denied.

According to Wardenier the first factory at Wolvega will turn out light engines for cars, while the second, in Amsterdam will manufacture engines for use in aeroplanes, ships, trains, lorries and factories. The young inventor smilingly agreed that his engine would enable an aeroplane to fly non-stop indefinitely, as its range would not be limited to the amount of fuel which it could carry.

Wardenier, already becoming known locally as the "Dutch Edison" says his first factory will employ 113,000 workmen and that Wolvega may become another Detroit.

Meanwhile, though nobody knows much about the invention, it is being seriously discussed in the responsible Dutch Press.

POLICE SCHOOL

Police departments have now a subject of discussion presented to them. Is the idea of a school for policemen just a dream or an odd notion or is it what the times demand? Major General McBrien, who is at the head of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on Saturday expressed the hope that the day would not be far distant when there was one police force throughout the length and breadth of Canada. Mayor Stewart of Toronto, in speaking of a proposed school for policemen in Toronto expressed the view that the school should cover the entire province.

Those who remember conditions some years ago in rural sections before the provincial police force became established realize that there has been a great change. It was not so many years ago that once in a while city police were called on to enter the country to make investigations. But that time is past for the Ontario Provincial Police covers Ontario with a network in which at central points constables are stationed. Provincial police handle cases in this large territory as they cover the situation thoroughly.

If it has improved the situation in the country it cannot be denied that the unit provincial force acting throughout the province has been of great value to the municipalities' police forces throughout Ontario with their help and by their example.

Policing in general has changed no doubt with the times, but a certain amount of police work consists of intimate relations with the people, with which a province-wide force would not concern itself. Those who favor individual municipal forces as at present point out the importance of local forces who have a peculiarly local interest in local police problems. Many feel no doubt that with a provincial force, the local forces can safely be left to themselves to do their work well, for provincial police work and city police work differ. Just as under the provincial police, the villages yet retain their constables, so they feel that towns and cities should retain their police.

But this is leaving the question of the school for police. A school for police should develop a very efficient type of officer out of the recruit who by reason of his connection with local policing has not the opportunity of meeting situations. There could not but be an inspiration in a young officer meeting men with wide experience in a school of training. Toronto probably would be able to benefit by such a local school.

There is a feeling in some quarters that the smaller places do not need a school so much.

Opinion will of course differ in the smaller places as to need of local officers and constables having such training, instead of acquiring it as they come in contact with cases as they come up. On the other hand there is the opportunity for rapid advance and development of an exceptional policeman and there is also the question of police being able to find where they can do the most effective work. For the average constable it might have advantage in his learning the rudiments more quickly just as students learn in business colleges or in schools. Policemen like every one else have to learn the technique of their profession be it in the course of the duties as they come up or at a school.

Or would a specialized force have another effect, turning local policemen away from the ordinary routine of their work and stressing many sides of the work which might only rarely come up in the ordinary routine of a policeman?

BRITAIN'S SKILLED LABOR SHORTAGE

An amazing paradox is apparent in Britain today. For years unemployment has been a major problem, and even yet the numbers of those unable to obtain work are formidable. Now, however, an actual scarcity of skilled labor is developing. It seems difficult to reconcile these phenomena. The Morning Post has been conducting a survey with a view to discovering the actual extent of the shortage and its causes.

It is found that several industries, particularly in the Midlands, where the weight of the depression has been relatively lighter, are keenly concerned. With the revival in trade the shortage is being accentuated. Several reasons are given for the condition. Thousands of skilled workmen lost their jobs as a result of the depression, and soon lost contact with their former employers as well. Then, too, the number of apprentices has fallen almost to zero. This is partly due to the unwillingness of firm to take on inexperienced men. The Post also blames the lack of diffferential in earnings between the skilled and the unskilled worker. Unless a substantial premium is offered, youths are less likely to go to the trouble and expense of learning a trade.

How the problem is to be solved is not indicated. It would be a calamity if the class of sturdy workmen, masters of their trades, should disappear. In their own interest firms must try to co-operate in the training of a new generation, which will be able to carry on the high tradition of workmanship, and which can take advantage of improved conditions as soon as these become evident.—London Advertiser.

THE COST OF AMERICAN BEAUTY

The (Amercan) Department of Commerce reported that the wholesale value of cosmetics manufactured in 1929 was more than $200,000,000—an increase of 1 per cent. over 1927. The retail value of these preparations has been estimated at $375,000,000, to which must be added the cost of personal service in beauty parlors and barber shops, amounting to about $400,000,000. The national outlay for beauty preparations in 1934 is probably smaller than in 1929, but the slump is estimated to be much less than in many other lines. Women, and increasing numbers of men, too, have learned the practical value of looking their best, especially in times of depression.—Literary Digest.

TWO LIVELY LANGUAGES

A look around the world today prompts the thought that perhaps modern man needs a good deal less French, German, Czechish, Slavonic, Zulu and English, and a bit more Latin and Greek.

When you read of German students fighting Czech students at Prague, and Yugoslav students demonstrating against Italian students and Japanese students parading in favor of a bigger army in Manchukuo to fight Soviet Russian students, and Hindu students employing the English language to say what they think of the British Government; when you see all the traducing and inciting and challenging and hating that goes on in twenty different modern laguages you begiin to feel that the colleges ought to abolish their courses in French and German and Russian and Turkish and bring back Latin and Greek.

Some one in England years ago set out to translate Shakespeare into ancient Greek in order to preserve him for posterity. No one knew where the English language, he said, would be in another thousand years, but "Hamlet" in a dead language would live forever. The peace of the world today could apparently make good use of a couple of dead languages. It certainly doesn't thrive on the living ones.—New York Times.

If we thirst for life and love eternal, is it unlikely that there are an eternal life and an eternal love to satisfy that craving? —Robertson of Brighton.

Consider how much more your often suffer from your anger and grief than from those very things for which you are angry and grieved.—Marcus Antoninus.

and
GAY

HORSES! HORSES! HORSES!—all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again—two new members were initiated into the gladsome order of the King's Night Horse Guards Thursday night last or early Friday morning.

x x

Two brave lads were wending their way homeward around the midnight hour when graveyards yawn and many wives decide to give many late homing husbands a piece of their mind, etc.—when in the dim misty fog-obscured light they noticed a disturbance on a near-by lawn, like nothing real, tangible, or human.

x x

Weird noises pushed holes in the fog blanket and there was a threshing and movement as of many giant legs and a body resembling in the dim light to the startled eyes of the young men a giant octopus stranded on a sand bar fighting with a hooknose clam which had imprisoned one of the tentacles in its mighty maw.

x x

Do you see what I see said one. Do you hear what I hear? murmured the other. Yes, to both questions and they drew near the scene of the commotion.

x x

It was a horse with one foot tangled in a wire fence threshing about striving to get free.

x x

The young men managed to get the foot free and the horse on its legs.

What to do now?

x x

The lads had a horse on their hands, a vagrant horse out, no doubt, to see the night life of a great city—and didn't give a dang where it ended up at.

x x

Debating what to do with the horse developed a difference of opinion—one had suggested taking him to the rooming house, but the other objected—they might take the hoss to the police station —or wait until daylight and enter him in the Lost and Found department of the Great Family newspaper.

x x

The horse finally decided the question by giving a snort, a bucking jump, and a gallop which speedily dissolved into the fog bank

x x

Time to go to bed now.

x x

Motion defeated.

x x

We can't leave our old pal, the horse, this way, said one. How do we know that he will not get tangled up in another wire fence?

And so, an expedition was immediately formed of two, to search for, locate, and rescue if necessary, the equine pal of the night watches.

Found, two blocks away, the horse was led back to the point of first discovery and another huddle was held as to what to do with the find.

While the debate progressed the horse grew tired of standing and sat down, giving a very clever imitation of a horse laugh.

The brilliant idea of phoning to the police station broke like a great light in a dark and dismal swamp.

Presently the police car hove in sight with one lone cop in charge. Here's a horse, take it away! chorused the lads. How can I take the horse in the car? said the cop. That's up to you said the lads, can't cops do anything? Said the cop—one of you lads will have to lead the horse to the police station.

Nothing doing, said the lads, visioning a long two-step trying to lead an unwilling horse by the nose and avoid getting stepped on or bowled over.

Finally, however, the cop promised to bring the lads back in the police car if they would escort the equine to the police station and they agreed. One block was enough, the leaders went on strike.

The cop compromised and let the lads use the running board, leading the horse by the side while the police car slowly edged along toward the police station, which was finally reached, all ship-shape and Bristol fashion, and a room found nearby in a former livery stable, now a garage, for the nighthorse or nightmare or whatever it was.

Afterwards the owner was located—the horse had just walked out of its stall and stable for a change.

And the two lads reached home and bed shortly before the milkman rang the anvil chorus on the cement pavement—and the fact that they have been getting the horse laugh from their friends ever since is a token of their frankness in telling the tale of the night that was full of horses and the cares which infest the day which were kicked away by a vagrant equine curious to know what went on on Coleman, Murney and Moira streets after the street lights were turned on.

Not much of a tale, just a variation of night life in a great or near great city.

Soldiers—Then and Now

—by—

Theodore Goodridge Roberts

I cannot get away from Major Clark's sniper.

He went out on his belly, with a string attached to one wrist. His observer, at a point of vantage in the trench, paid the string out to him. The observer used a periscope and field glasses of the best. The sniper had his rifle only, a Ross equipped with a telescopic sight. In and under his muddy sandbags, he looked just like more mud—like nothing. The string was paid out very slowly. The platoon-commander set up a dummy at the menaced point. The dummy received a bullet through its dumb head. Then the sniper's observer gave a few twitches to the string in his hand. He received twitches in acknowledgement.

A Sniper's Helmet

The string was paid out very slowly. Another dummy was set up and shot. Good! Friend observer did some more twitching on the string, and twitches came back to him.

The hostile sniper wore a hemlet which left only one eye and a part of one side of his face exposed. As he lay, he was safe. The Canadian sniper could not do his job as it had to be done, with one shot, unless the enemy turned his head or shifted his position. So the observer gave the dope to the officer, and the officer staged a bit of fine work at another point in the trench, upending duckboards and bits of timber, hammering, and at last showing the well known dummy head above the parapet. The head rose and dipped, rose again and dipped again. Then the sniper's observer twitched a warning to his boss; and the dummy head, so busy with trench carpentry, showed again and remained put this time for ten seconds. Crack. Clean through the dummy head; and before that deadly Fritzie could shift back to his former position—Crack! That was the end of that hostile sniper.

Slow hours passed. Nothing moved out there on the pitted ground save a rat in an old coil of rusty wire. The living sniper lay as still as the dead sniper, knowing that hostile eyes were searching and questioning every inch of that ground through powerful glasses. That shot of his, cracking so soon after the other's shot, would suggest the truth. But his shot had been unexpected and no observer on the other side had placed it. Nothing happened. He lay like wood, like mud, in and under his muddy sandbags, one with Mother Earth. The hours dragged by, slow as days; the day crawled on, long as a week. Twilight. Dusk. Dark. The sniper twitched the string on his wrist. Then he moved a numb leg, a numb arm. His very heart and brain felt numb. He wanted to cry out, to scream and shed tears. Damn this for a war! He moved, turned, crawled on his belly for home. He was met outside by his trusty observer. Willing hands helped him over the parapet. He flopped; and while his observer pulled off his sandbags and half his clothing and rubbed him with hard hands, others fed rum and hot soup into him. He had done a day's work.

During the Corps Reunion last summer, Major Clark ran across that same sniper. He was without a job. The days when an assistant was detailed to observe for him and take care of him must have seemed very far away. The major got a job for him and he was most thankful—a job of picking up scraps of paper on a stick with a brad in the end of it—a job of snipping scraps of paper!

LOOKING BACKWARD

DECEMBER 3RD, 1914

At an enthusiastic meeting at which a large number was present, a Junior Hockey Club was formed for the coming season, which promises to be equal to, if not superior to that of last season. The following officers were appointed: Hon. President, Senator Corby; Patrons, E. Guss Porter, M.P.; J. W. Johnson, M.P.P.; W. B. Deacon; Mayor J. F. Wills; Stanley Carman; Dr. H. A. Yeomans; President, Dan Cameron; Vice President, W. Carnew; Secretary, Edward Elliott; Treasurer, S. R. Burrows; Manager W. Finkle.

Detroit Red Wings Stop Winning Streak of Leafs At 8 by Means of Shutout

Score 3-0 Win Sunday After Leafs Had Won 4-3 Saturday

AMERICANS WIN

Maroons Defeat Rangers To Keep Pace With Toronto

By A. E. FULFORD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Detroit Red Wings may not have the Indian sign on Toronto Leafs. It may have been good hockey, that humbled the mighty Leaf machine in the playoffs last spring and crushed a record of eight wins in that many games this season.

But it would take a powerful lot of argument to convince Conny Smythe's team today, that Wing's aren't bad medicine for them, when they want a win most.

Jack Adams' team bobbed up in the villain's role against Leafs again last night and snapped off a winning streak, that started with the first game of the schedule. Whitewashing them 3-0, Red Wings clicked after seven teams, including themselves, had failed to smother the scoring punch in the sticks of Harvey Jackson and Charlie Conacher and break down the defence Smythe had set up before George Hainsworth.

In their early rush, climaxed Saturday night with a 4-3 win from St. Louis at Toronto, Leafs have piled up 15 points, half a dozen more than their nearest rivals in the National Hockey League's Canadian section, Montreal Maroons, who bolstered their self-confidence with a 5-2 win over New York Rangers Saturday.

Amerks Down Hawks

Taking Chicago Black Hawks 2-1 Sunday, New York Americans kept within two points of Maroons.

Detroit's win left them still a couple of points behind Boston Bruins, who went into a tie for American section leadership by beating Montreal Canadiens 2-0 Saturday at Montreal.

Detroit beat Toronto by scoring a first period goal and then playing defensive hockey. Cooney Weiland got the first counter and when Leafs had five men up the ice seeking the tieing goal in the third Doug Young and Johnny Sorrell caught them flatfooted to score the other Wing tallie.

Conacher's bullet-like shot gave Toronto their Saturday night victory over Eddie Gerard's improving St. Louis Eagles, when only 13 seconds of the third period remained. Parked near the blue line, Conacher took a passout from a gang play and drilled a low shot through a maze of players into the St. Louis cage.

Eagles had tide the score twice before that and might easily have won, when Earl Roche caught Leafs up the ice and bore down alone on George Hainsworth late in the third. The Leaf goalie outguessed him, when a smart play might have brought St. Louis a win.

Conacher Scores Winner

Toronto's first period goals by Jackson and Conacher were evened up by a pair Syd Howe scored in the first two periods. Then Red Horner scored in the second from a play made by King Clancy and Roche tied it up again early in the third.

Marty Barry's sniping crushed Canadien hopes of a win to add to the one they now treasure. The tall centre rammed goals past Wilf Cude in the second and third periods and Frank Patrick's team then held off a desperate Canadien attack to leave the Habitants still deep in the Canadian section cellar.

Lester Patrick's move in reforming Cook-Boucher-Cook line had nothing in it that could stop Tommy Gorman's rushing outfit. Dave Trottier and Stew Evans scored in the first period, Russell Blinco matched Charlie Mason's second period goal and third period markers by Herb Cain and Earl Robinson overshadowed Rangers' late effort through Ott Heller.

Two goals in the second period gave Americans their second win over the world champion Hawks. Dave Schriner got their first working with Eddie Burke, while Art Coulter was in the penalty box and Harry Oliver bagged the second. Doc Romnes, a holdout for some time got Chicago's goal in the third on a pass from Howie Morenz.

London Team Wins And Loses Over The Weekend

(By the Canadian Press)

Cleveland Indians scanned the International Hockey League standing today with a little more optimism because the Cleveland banner was out of the cellar and the team seemed to be clicking in a winning manner. Four games during the week-end wound up with London Tecs clinging to a six-point lead over Syracuse, Buffalo and Windsor and Cleveland boasting a change of atmosphere as Detroit took over the bottom rung for a change.

London played twice, beating Buffalo in Fort Erie 4-3 Saturday and then visiting Syracuse Sunday night to accept a 2-1 defeat. It also was Syracuse's second game as they were the team, that Cleveland entertained Saturday night with a 2-1 victory, third this season for Cleveland. Windsor played at home Saturday night, defeating Detroit Olympics 1-0.

TRADES WILCOX

Boston, Dec. 3.—Art Ross, general manager of Boston Bruins, announced the trading of Archie Wilcox for Burr Williams, of St. Louis Eagles. Both are defence men. Wilcox, who came to Boston from Montreal Maroons late last season, has been playing for Boston Cubs, the Bruins' Canadian - American League farm team.

A further deal, also announced by Ross, sent Sheldon Buckles, who was loaned out to the Cleveland International League Club, to Montreal Canadiens in exchange for Bob McCully, a right-winger, who has been performing for Quebec Beavers in the Can.-Am. circuit.

BEARS UNDEFEATED

Chicago, Dec. 3—The Chicago Bears, western division champions of the Professional Football League made a clean sweep of their 1934 season before a capacity crowd at Wrigley Field, Saturday, by defeating the Detroit Lions, 10 to 7.

The victory over Detroit gave the Bears 13 straight victories. Next Sunday they will meet the New York Giants in New York for the league play-off.

SOUGHT FOR MANAGER

Minneapolis, Dec. 3—Buzz Arlett, Minneapolis outfielder and champion home run hitter of the American Association for 1934, is sought as playing manager of the Albany Club of the International League, it was announced tonight by M. J. Kelley, president of the Miller Ball Club.

J. C. Cambria, owner of the Albany Club, telegraphed Kelley asking whether he would be willing to part with Arlett for a cash consideration. Arlett is anxious to take the job.

"If Cambria will pay me what I think Arlett is worth," Kelley said, "I will consent to the deal."

DIZZY MAY QUIT GAME

Bradenton, Fla., Dec. 3 — If Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, ace pitcher of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, fails to get the $25,000 salary he is demanding for his baseball services next season, he may quit the game temporarily to make a moving picture, he disclosed here today.

Dean announced his decision after a conference Saturday with Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Club.

Both Dean and Breadon declared a contract had not been negotiated, but expressed confidence a satisfactory agreement would be reached. The 1935 salary of Paul Dean, Dizzy's younger brother, did not enter into the conversation.

"Dizzy" said a major motion picture producing company had offered him $35,000 to make a feature based on his life.

Every Player Seems Imbued With Same Idea

(By George Maguire, Canadian Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 3 (CP)—To wander into the dressing room of the Montreal Maroons these days—especially if it is just after they have won a National Hockey League battle—is just like running into a dozen Blondy Ryans.

Ryan, it will be remembered, jumped from a sick-bed a little over a year ago and wired to his teammates on the New York Giants baseball club that celebrated battle cry "They Can't Beat Us." Ryan arrived soon afterward and the Giants went out to smash their way through to the National League pennant and the World Series title.

There is no one quite so bold as Ryan on the Maroons, but all the players seem to have adopted Hooley Smith's "they can't keep us out of the playoffs this year," as their personal viewpoint.

"We're going places this year believe you me," said Lionel (Big Train) Conacher, nursing injured knees that had been given a hard test in Saturday's winning game with New York Rangers.

"Connell is playing great in goal, Shields, Evans and Wentworth are playing fine and where I ask you will you find a faster, better shooting and better checking bunch of forwards?

"The boys are pulling well together. No, I don't think we can miss."

All in Same Mood

And so it went from Conny to Connell to Jimmy Ward Stew Evans and even to "Little Mister" Marker. No one was "cocky" about the victory over Rangers or other recent successes. It was just that confidence that blazed Blondy Ryan's name across the baseball horizon.

Conacher, whose name a few years ago was a household word in Canadian sporting circles, be it hockey, football, lacrosse or baseball, declined to take any of the credit for the Maroons' fine early season showing.

"When this knee (pointing to the right one) gets as well as the other, I will feel better. We rest up until we play at home Thursday and by that time they (the knees) should be in shape for me to really step out."

At this point Connell interrupted with a request that everyone take a look at his skates which boasted curves on the blades that would make a Broadway night-club hostess waltz off with shame.

"Say you better keep those," said Shields. "They seem to be lucky."

Luck would scarcely explain the aggressive showing of the team Rangers and Gotham fans have a suspicion Hooley Smith's battle cry has been pasted on every Maroon player's stick.

KINGSTON CAGERS HELD TO CLOSE SCORE

Junior Deacons Throw Scare into Intermediates

The Deacon A. C. junior basketball team journeyed to Kingston last Friday night and dropped a closely contested exhibition cage game to the Kingston intermediates by the score of 17 to 21. Taking into consideration that the Kingston intermediates were semi-finalists in the O.B.A. play-downs last season, the showing made by the Belleville juniors proved most satisfactory to Coach Laughlin. Both teams were minus one of their regular players, Bob Elliott being unable to appear for the homesters with Art Cole, elongated centreman, unable to make the journey with the Deacon kids. At no time during the night's play were the Kingston team more than three baskets in the lead of the local juniors.

First Win in 13 Years for The Middies

By EDWARD J. NEIL

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 3—(AP)— The great stadia of the United States were filled with ghosts and hollow echoes today, and all there was left of importance to another football season, one of the greatest in the history of the game, was the New York's day climax between Stanford and Alabama in the Rose Bowl.

Navy men could lift their heads again, wherever Uncle Sam's battle wagons roamed the seas, for the breeding ground for officers at Annapolis, the naval academy, had broken the 13-year domination of Army's Cadets with a 3-0 victory before 80,000 storm tossed spectators at Philadelphia, thanks to big Slade Cutter's 19-yard field goal in the first period.

Tulane's Green Wave, conqueror of Senator Huey Long's widely ballyhooed Louisiana State eleven Saturday by 13-12, ruled the southeastern conference with undefeated Alabama as that campaign came to a close.

Rice, recovered from Texas Christian's unexpected uprising the previous Saturday, wound up as the southwestern conference champion just the same by blasting Baylor in the final duel 32-0, as the Horned Frogs petered out against Southwestern Methodist 19-0.

All over the land, the husky young men, who had been warring for alma mater and glory since the early days of September packed away their moleskins, broke training, beamed on their trophies, or nursed their hurts.

Minnesota Greatest Team

To Minnesota's great Gophers, unbeaten and untied, went the Lions' share of the honors, general recognition as the outstanding football team of the season, though barred by the big ten conference they champion from adding to their claims against Stanford in the Rose Bowl. As an added measure of satisfaction, there was the Associated Press all-American first team rating for two of Minnesota's greatest stars, Pug Lund and Frank Larsen, and a place on the second team for Bill Bevan.

Pitt Best in East

Pittsburgh beaten only by Minnesota and the only eleven to give Bernie Bierman's Swedes a real battle was generally rated the best the east afforded, particularly after Colgate's tremendous difficulties downing much-trounced Brown Thanksgiving Day 20-13, while Pitt was slaughtering Carnegie-Tech in the Panther season final.

Alabama's thrashing of Vanderbilt Thursday won Rose Bowl recognition for the south again, but the outstanding sensation of the week was Navy's magnificent victory over the Cadets in the rain drenched swamp of Franklin Field.

Canadian Tennis Suffers From Domination Of Toronto Club Officers, Charges Rainville

By MARCEL RAINVILLE

Copyright 1934

As a foreword to this series, I must say that I sincerely believe that Canadian tennis, as represented by Schwengers, Powell, Crocker and Wright, has been of the very highest order; that Canada, with such leaders, ranked amongst the best nations of the world. This I will attempt to prove. Moreover I welcome this opportunity of expressing my views and impressions on Canadian tennis. After battling during twelve years on and off the courts, I have formed very definite opinions on certain points concerning the game in our country; on other points I have merely gathered impressions. I begin this work with the feeling that a little frank talking will hurt nobody.

In this and the following articles I will, therefore, attempt to discuss fairly and freely the problems which the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, the provincial associations and the clubs have to solve, always keeping in mind that the problems of the various sections can be vastly different.

From a tennis point of view, Canada is divided in four sections or districts, namely the maritimes (Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick), the east, (Quebec and Ontario), the west (Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta), the Pacific Coast (British Columbia).

British Columbia Major Problem

The major problem for the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association is British Columbia. This province has given Canada many of its greatest players; due to climatic conditions, to the proximity of California and to the good organization of tennis all the way down the coast, the province should still breed more champions.

Yet, for a good many years past it seems that British Columbia has not received as much attention, or did not play the important part in our tennis life, which one would have expected.

I would say that the major reason for this has been that the control of tennis has been held tightly in the east, in the hands of a small group of Toronto Lawn Tennis Club officials. Sportsmen of the coast province have seldom had their say on tennis matters; they have naturally lost interest in the affairs of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association.

Danger of a Break

Things reached the point where, during my first visit to the coast in 1931, some of the officials and prominent sportsmen stated quite freely that they had not much use for the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association anyhow and that they found more and greater advantages in their affiliation with their American neighbors.

A similar problem was faced in the United States when the East (Boston, New York and Philadelphia) ruled other sections with an iron hand. But the situation there has changed and now the highest positions are rotated among various sections of the country. The U.S.L.T.A. have their general offices in New York, but the general policy is directed by the high officials from the different sections.

Undoubtedly the control of Canadian tennis has been in the hands of this small group too long. However well-meaning these gentlemen might be, they cannot always see things the same way as other people and the situation has given rise to much bad feeling. Last spring, Mr. Garnett H. Meldrum resigned the presidency of the association in favor of Mr. P. D. Lyons of Ottawa, a vice-presidency was given to the maritimes and more councillors from the various sections were elected.

A Suggestion Is Offered

But the change was not complete. Mr. Meldrum has taken the chairmanship of the board, the secretary and the treasurer were still the same and the meetings were still held at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, under the chairmanship of Mr. Meldrum. This again resulted in many unnecessary battles.

Now why not go still further and let British Columbia run the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association for a while with the whole-hearted co-operation of the east?

Another suggestion has been made that the Canadian championships be awarded to Vancouver next year. I can say, as a player, that this would be a great idea. It would give many players an opportunity of playing under conditions nearly perfect in a city which is second to none in the country for the enthusiasm and the support of tennis followers.

The argument that the tournament must be held in a central spot like Toronto is a very weak one; it does not cost any more to send the eastern players to the Pacific coast than to bring the coast players east; gate receipts will be much larger in Vancouver than anywhere in the east with the possible exception of Montreal, which has not been given a national tournament since 1912; they can get just as large an entry in Vancouver as in any other city, althought this is immaterial. It is high time that the entry in our national tournament be limited to the best players of the country.

If the suggesting of awarding the Canadian championships to Vancouver finds favor with the delegates at the annual meeting of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association in February, the schedule would have to be arranged to give each section a fair break; one tournament would be held at one of the western clubs, and one at Victoria, B.C., and our candidates for our Davis cup team would be requested to play in these tournaments.

Naturally the question of time is an important one for the players, but we must not hesitate too much over the problems of individuals if we want to build a first class team. The day when a player could represent the country in Davis Cup play, even though he had played only one or two tournaments in the whole year, should be a thing of the past.

Maritimes and Quebec

This plan would help British Columbia especially and the west. But I am not forgetting the maritimes; the provinces of the Atlantic coast and the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association have already taken matters in their own hands by exchanging players for their tournaments, by helping solve their respective problems; elaborate plans have been made for next season.

Officials of the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association have been often rather acrimonious in their criticism of the policies of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association; officials of the latter association have replied just as heatedly that Quebec has been attempting to force its players on the Davis Cup team without any consideration of the desires of the rest of the country, that Quebec wanted to take control of Canadian tennis.

I will not insist unnecessarily on this subject and I will simply say that the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association has been fighting to get a fair break for every section of the country, that the Quebec association refused a vice-presidency in the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association and voted that this vice-presidency be given to the maritimes, that naturally Quebec would like to have the presidency now and then as this province has played a leading part in our tennis life, but that the P.Q.L.T.A. has especially fought to bring a change in the continued control of Canadian tennis by the same group of officials. The fact that Montreal has had as many as three players at one time on the Davis cup team has nothing to do with the problem; these players fully earned their places and it does not matter, anyhow, where our leading players come from, provided that no favoritism is shown in their selection.

Ontario and Quebec

Under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Thomas Arnold, the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association has at last attained prosperity; the finances of the association are in good shape, well patronized tournaments are held almost every week from June till October, Quebec players in numbers have been sent to the other provinces.

But one of the greatest features of the year has been the getting together of the Province of Quebec Lawn Tennis Association and of the Province of Ontario Lawn Tennis Association. The latter association, under the guidance of President W. D. Burns, Secretary Jack Little and Treasurer Jim McDougall, has also been busy solving many internal problems. The great success which the Ontario Lawn Tennis Association and the Toronto Cricket Club achieved with the running of the Ontario championships, must have been a compensation for their hard work. Much good, frank talking was done during the week of the Ontario tournament and one can look forward hopefully knowing that two of our bigger associations are willing to co-operate to bring Canadian tennis to a still higher level.

Miss Rita Palmer, of Palmer's Jewel Shop, spent the week-end at her home in Whitby.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver E. Ellison, of Ottawa, have returned to their home there after a few days visit here with friends.

Miss Blanche Coulter, nurse-in-training at Hamilton General Hospital, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. A. Coulter, 280 Ann Street.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Carmichael who have been visiting in Lindsay guests of Rev. J. J. and Mrs. Black have returned home.

Attendants at the recent Temperance Rally in the city comprised also the following from Shannonville: W. S. Dies, R. Pringle, Stella Dies and Rhoda Pringle.

On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. J. V. Jenkins was hostess at a delightfully-arranged coming-out tea in honour of the grand-daughter, Miss Kathleen Jenkins. The spacious tea room of the Hotel Quinte was charming with colorful chrysanthemums in mauve and yellow and fragrant roses. Mrs. Jenkins received her guests in a graceful gown of poudre blue triple sheer with touches of applique. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids. Miss Kathleen Jenkins, who assisted in receiving, wore a lovely frock of white triple sheer, with shoulder effect of appliqued net and shoulder bouquet of orchids. The tea table, with its handsome silver appointments was centred with a silver basket of mauve and yellow chrysanthemums, the tapers in the candelabra carrying out the same dainty colour scheme. Mrs. A. I. Bird and Mrs. James Grant presided at the tea table. Tea was served by Mrs. Gerald Jenkins, Mrs. Jack Robertson, Miss Alice Belair, Miss Eileen Belair, Miss Phillippa Burrows and Miss Helen Doyle. Little Misses Barbara Jenkins and Bobs Reeves also assisted during the afternoon. Over one hundred guests were present at the very enjoyable tea.

An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mrs. Royle, Bleecker Avenue, when a shower was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Latchford; about eighty guests being present. The bride and groom were presented with two beautiful occasional chairs, the gift of the employees and the Excise Department of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company. An address was read by Miss Frain and the presentation made by Mr. L. Barriage. Many other gifts were received by Mr. and Mrs. Latchford. A dainty lunch was served after which euchre and dancing were enjoyed.

Weddings

ANDERSON—WHEELER

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at Emmanuel Church Rectory on Saturday, December 1st, at 1.30 p.m., when Violet Mildred Wheeler of Oshawa, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wheeler, of this city, was united in marriage to J. Henry Anderson, of Kitchener, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Anderson, of Stirling.

The bride looked charming in an Alice blue chiffon velvet gown, cut on long lines, with matching turban and shoes, and wore a shoulder bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The bride was attended by Miss Irene Hallam, of this city, who was attired in a brown dress and turban of chiffon velvet and wore Talisman roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Robert P. Bernhardt, of Kitchener.

After the ceremony, a dainty buffet lunch was served at the home of the bride's parents, Ritchie Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson later left on a short motor trip to Quebec. For travelling, the bride wore a black crepe dress, trimmed with Alice blue, while a black coat and hat completed the ensemole

Out of town guests were present from Oshawa, Bowmanville, Toronto and Kitchener. The happy young couple will take up residence in Kitchener.

Dean Matheson, Queens, Special Speaker When Madoc School is Opened

Education of Child is Subject of Fine Address

MANY IN ATTENDANCE

Union Jack is Presented to School by Women's Institute

On Friday afternoon the new Madoc High School was formally and officially opened with about five hundred visitors filling the auditorium. Mr. W. E. Connor, chairman of the local High School Board acted as the chairman for the afternoon.

Reverend Hope Swayne of Tweed, and in charge of St. John's Anglican church here, rendered the invocation and led the assembly in repeating the Lord's Prayer. A period of one minute's silence was observed in honour of the memory of the late Malcolm Bristol, pioneer resident of Madoc village, who passed away at his home on Wednesday morning.

Many on Platform

Mr. Connor then asked the following prominent men to come to the platform. Dean Matheson, Dean of Arts, Queen's University; Mr. Jas. F. Hill, M.L.A., East Hastings; Mr. A. C. Anderson, B.A., principal of Madoc High School; Messrs. Dr. S. Eagleson, C. N. Whytock, T. E. Burnside, F. Nayler and G. C. Moon of the High School Board; Reeve Campbell M. Wallbridge of Madoc; Reeve F. Reynolds, Madoc Township; Reeve Herb Sayers of Tweed; Ex-Warden Walter Whytock, Madoc; Reverend G. W. Rivers, Reverend W. A. Hunter of Madoc; Reverend Hope Swayne of Tweed; Reverend Doggett of Queensboro; Mr. A. W. McGuire, Public School Inspector of Centre Hastings, Mr. F. W. Warren, architect of the school of Hamilton; Mr. Hoskins, contractor in charge; Mr. E. C. Medcalfe of the Madoc slate mine and Mr. J. Quinn and Mr. D. H. Morrison of Tweed School Board.

Flag Presented

The programme was auspiciously opened by a chorus by the young ladies af the school "Land of Glad To-morrows", directed by Miss M. Uhrich and accompanied by Miss Lamoine West. Mr. Connor called upon Reeve Wallbridge, who extended a welcome to the guests.

A beautiful Union Jack was presented to the school by Mrs. C. N. Whytock, past president of the Madoc Branch of the Women's Institute and on behalf of that organization. The flag was carried to the flag pole by Master Earl Wellman and Master Keith McMurray and raised by the principal. Mrs. Whytock expressed a desire to see, that everyone would treat the flag with that respect to which it is entitled as a binding link of the Great British Empire.

Miss E. MacDermid, B.A., teacher of Mathematics, accepted the gift on behalf of the school and with a few well chosen words thanked the Madoc Branch of the Institute for their thoughtfulness. She stated that the great work of these ladies was not fully appreciated and stressed the importance of their efforts in helping the needy. Miss MacDermid concluded by saying that no other organization was more fitted to present our flag to the school than that, who used as a motto, "For Home and Country." All then joined in singing "O Canada".

The Madoc Ladies' Quartette comprising Mrs. (Dr.) Eagleson, Miss Edna Salisbury, Mrs. Wesley Hulin and Miss Norma Fair rendered the beautiful song, "Long, Long Ago" to the delight of the audience. Mrs. Leslie Ashley played the accompaniment.

Mr. Matheson Speaker

Upon Dr. S. Eagleson, a graduate of Queen's fell the privilege of introducing the guest speaker of the afternoon, Mr. Matheson, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and head of the Mathematics Department of Queen's. Regret was expressed, that Mr. MacArthur, Deputy Minister of Education would not be able to attend. Dr. Eagleson stressed the important part that Dean Matheson played in the University, both as a teacher and as the Dean and on behalf of the School Board, welcomed Mr. Matheson to Madoc.

As a subject, Mr. Matheson used the theme "Education". He directed his remarks to the young people of the school. The question often asked by children and parents alike "Why should Latin be studied" or "Why should mathematics be studied" was answered by an illustration, that in order to have a strong healthy body all muscles must be fully developed even though some may not be used in later life so in order to be able to meet successfully, the trials of the world in later life all sides of our education must be thoroughly rounded out. The Dean stated, that the absolute facts such as how many wives had Henry VIII might easily be forgotten but the general knowledge acquired was the important thing. Business in general was tending towards a demand for education as a prerequisite to advancement. The great error committed by parents was the apparently good advice given to children to do this or that because it was more useful was wrong. Every child has a tendency to want to do something, probably become a lawyer, a musician or a teacher. No restrictions should be placed by parents to circumvent these desires. Anything so done as to deviate the child from their desired course to an unfamiliar and unwanted path tended to develop an inferiority complex and general lack of domination of person over matter, and consequent failure. The great percentage of failures of university students was not merely mental incapacity but rather misdirected application and that social encumbrance of inferiority complex.

Instil Friendliness

The teaching profession comprised well educated people. Schools of more advanced education such as high schools should have the atmosphere of assistance. Teachers should instil into the students a feeling of friendliness. It was up to the student to study, the teachers to guide. Students readily divided themselves into three classes, namely, those, who wanted to go to school; those, who went to school because they were told to; those, who did not want to go to school but were sent. Every man is self made. Some have more advantages than others. Schools are an instrument to be used to get ahead. In closing Dean Matheson encouraged all the children to work and to study and that this should be easy to do in such a fine school as Madoc now had.

Congratulations Extended

Mr. Herb Sayers extended congratulations to Madoc on erecting such a fine school. Mr. A. W. McGuire, the Inspector, spoke a few words on education. Mr. Frank Reynolds conveyed the congratulations of Madoc Township to the School Board.

Mr. William Scrutton, well-known violinist was accorded a hearty reception for the beautiful way in which he rendered "Romanza" by Colby and the well-known selection "By the Waters of Minnetonka", by Thurlow Lieurance.

Mrs. Leslie Ashley played the accompaniment.

Miss Marion Henderson, contralto soloist, rendered two songs from the plays of Shakespeare. The first "Blow! Blow! Thou Winter Wind!" from "As You Like It" and the second was "Mistress Mine", the love song from the "Merry Wives of Windsor."

Mr. Jas. F. Hill was called upon and spoke briefly upon the great work of the School Board and Council in financing the erection of such a fine building without embarrassing the village treasury. He also mentioned the great importance of the royal wedding of Prince George and Princess Marina and expressed how proud we should be to be members of such a wonderful country as Canada and such a great empire as the British Empire.

Rev. G. W. Rivers, Rev. W. A. Hunter and Rev. Doggett extended their congratulations and those of their congregations for the wonderful school which now serves the community.

Mr. Walter Whytock added to his best wishes the hope that the new school would be able to turn out men and women as prominent in Canada as those turned out by the old school including such well-known figures as the Hon. C. Cross, of Alberta, the Hon. Howard McConnell of Saskatchewan and Dr. William MacIntosh, head of the Commerce Department of Queen's University.

Architect Present

Mr. Warren, the architect, thanked the Board for the co-operation given to him, stating that in all details he and the members had been able to come to a harmonious settlement. He asked the students to take care of the wonderful school they would now be able to attend and not to destroy any part of it.

Mr. A. C. Anderson thanked the Dean for his excellent message. He also mentioned the interest of Mr. Frank Baalim for his efforts to secure a mineral collection, Mrs. Lester O'Hara for an offer to donate some valuable pioneer souvenirs and to Messrs. Don Whytock and Charles Phillips in the work of preparing for the opening.

The Glee Club under the direction of Miss Uhrich and accompanied by Miss L. West sang the familiar old song, "Do You Ken John Peel." The programme was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Dean is Guest

At 6.30 on Friday evening, about forty members of the Madoc Community Club gathered at Blue's Hotel to attend a dinner being tendered Dean Matheson of Queen's University. Following a sumptuous repast Mr. J. Rutherford, the chairman called upon Mr. A. C. Anderson to introduce the speaker.

Mr. Matheson decided to speak on "Education". He stated, that the education of a child was greatly influenced by three forces. Primarily there was the "Home". Emulation was the basis of home influence. Each and every member of a family exhibited certain common characteristics. Even though the emulation was unconscious a small child naturally tried to do what his mother or father did. Never try to cure a bad temper by a stronger temper. If friends come to visit a home do not deprive the child of the opportunity of associating with them because a child learns a great deal by this habit of unconscious emulation of older people.

The second great influence was the school. At school the young one associates with others and broadens his education. The proper school atmosphere of friendliness and assistance hastens this broadening tendency. The student looks to his or her teacher as a guide and as these instructors are university trained much good alone comes from this association. But greater still is the knowledge gained from the study conducted in the school. The development of a school spirit so greatly shown by that known as the Queen's spirit is essential in every school.

The third great influence is the Church. It is here that the psychology of mob rule enters. Just when a bad mob organizes the work done by it is far worse than would be done by any member in it. So the reverse is true. The teaching of the church is ever upward and since the congregation as a whole tends toward better things than any individual in it would attempt alone therefore there is a tendency for the influence of a church to uplift each and all of its members.

Vote of Thanks

A vote of thanks was tendered the Dean and a request to have him come again on a motion by George Wright and Geo. West.

On Friday evening, the students and their friends gathered in the new gymnasium and danced to the music of Harold Mulholland's orchestra. The gym was wonderfully decorated with black and orange crepe paper. It was finished in Arab fashion with the centre representing a huge tent. On the wall were the three letters M.H.S. The decorations were prepared by Don Whytock assisted by Charles Phillips and several school students.

The hostess were Mrs. (Dr.) Eagleson, Mrs. C. N. Whytock, Mrs. Gordon Munro, Mrs. John Robertson, Mrs. Fred Nayler, Mrs. W. E. Connor, Mrs. T. E. Burnside, Mrs. G. C. Moon Mrs. A. C. Anderson, Miss M. Uhrich, Miss E. MacDermid and Mrs. Lamoine West.

The reception committee were Mrs. W. E. Connor, Mrs. A. C. Anderson and Miss M. Uhrich.

A very dainty buffet luncheon was served in the school library in cafeteria style. Mrs. C. N. Whytock and Mrs. (Dr.) Eagleson served the coffee and Miss MacDermid and Miss West assisted.

A very enjoyable evening of round and square dancing was brought to a close at one o'clock with the playing of God Save the King.

Personals

Mrs. Springam of Newcastle spent a few days with Mrs. Walter Ross.

Mr. Wesley Wellington of Port Arthur, Ont., spent a few days in town guest of his sister Mrs. Geo. West.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Reid and children of Ompah were visitors at Mr. Gordon Munro's this wek.

Captain Malcolm of Toronto is visiting at the home of Mr. Dan Golan.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Broad of Weslemkoon spent the week end in town taking in the opening of the new High School.

Mr. Clinton Nickle of Peterboro Normal School spent the week end at his home here.

Mrs. Riddell of Detroit visited at the home of Mrs. Dan Golan and also visited her brother Mr. Dan Golan who is a patient in Kingston General Hospital. Mr. Golan is very much improved in health.

Mr. Carl Cassan and his father of Toronto were visitors in town this weekend.

Mr. Cecil Taylor of Albert College, Belleville, spent the week end at his home. He was accompanied by his friend Mr. Redmond.

Miss Ethel McKillican of Peterboro Normal spent the week end at her home, Madoc Township.

Mr. Don Kinlock of Oshawa spent Sunday with his father and sister, Mr. Jas. Kinlock and Mrs. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fox and Miss Dorothy Fox of Belleville were visitors in town on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Salisbury and family, Belleville, visited at his father's home Sunday.

Mr. Pearl, Superintendent of the Craig Mines, with his family, has moved into the residence of Mrs. Alice Allen.

On Thursday evening the members and some friends of Trinity Church choir were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kincaid. After the practise hour was over a social time was spent. A buffet luncheon was served in their spacious dining room. Mrs. W. Cross and Mrs. Walter Kincaid pouring coffee and tea. Mr. W. Fletcher president of the choir thanked the host and hostess for their kind hospitality, the choir ably supporting Mr. Fletcher. After singing "For they are jolly good fellows" the members returned to Madoc.

Celebrate Silver Anniversary

On Tuesday evening the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Miller visited them at their home near O'Hara's School. After spending some time in social intercourse Mrs. John McCaffrey read an address and Mr. John McCoy and Mr. Hugh MacIntosh presented them with one dozen silver teaspoons. Mr. Miller responded and thanked their friends for their kind remembrance, after which a dainty lunch was served by the ladies.

On Saturday evening at five p.m. Mr. Gray Rivers, a freshman at Toronto Unversity and son of Rev. G. W. and Mrs. Rivers of Trinity United Church parsonage was heard over the radio from C.F.R.B. at Toronto. Gray is running for Premier of Ontario Boys' Parliament which meets in the Legislative Chambers in Toronto during Christmas week. His many friends in Madoc and community wish him every success. Mr. John Bristol of Madoc was elected member of this district.

Rev. W. A. and Mrs. Hunter have returned home from Toronto where they attended the funeral of the Rev. Mr. Beattie of Nanaimo, B.C. The late Rev. Mr. Beattie conducted the anniversary services at St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, two weeks ago.

"DECENT" FILM FREE

Disgusted, more or less, with Hollywood motion pictures, Lillian Harvey, English star, says: "My dearest wish is to make one half-way decent picture in Hollywood. I would work for nothing. If, after that, I find American audiences don't like me, well...." Miss Harvey has an offer to return to England.

BODIES AND SOULS NEED SAFEGUARDS

Rev. Dr. C. H. Huestis Speaks in Behalf of Sabbath Observance

At the Sunday morning service of West Belleville United Church, Rev. C. H. Huestis, D.D., General Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada was present and assisted the pastor of the church, Rev. R. E. Newman.

The choir under the leadership of Mr. Clifford Templer, A.T.C.M. at the organ rendered a choice anthem, solo and duet, parts being taken admirably by Mrs. S. P. Hagerman, soprano and Mrs. J. Cordes, alto, in well blended rendition.

Rev. Dr. Huestis, a veteran and stalwart pulpiteer and writer, well known across the Dominion, used as a background for his discourse the 58th chapter of Isaiah. "The children of Israel" he said "experienced as we do severe times of materialistic depressions. They expected God to deliver them from such and felt all required was rendered unto Him at the same time wondering just what sort of a religion was possessed. The prophetic utterance of truths is likewise needed today along the lines of Sabbath observance in order to merit Divine consideration. These are times too of falling standards and there is nothing more important than keeping the Lord's Day if we expect to have the favor of God. Our bodies and our souls need to be safeguarded. The Sabbath as an old institution divinely established can not be lest unto itself for maintenance. It is up to us individually to do our part in setting a good example and for others to follow. Other things in life demand our attention correspondingly. If we refuse to accept Christian principles the consequence can not be blamed upon God. There is great danger in compromising upon essential matters. If we expect progress to be made in important things, determination to our limit is necessary in order that such will be. We have to put our shoulder to the wheel of progress for the best achievement and satisfaction. Jesus was asked how the Kingdom of Heaven would come about and He answered to the effect that each human effort should be endowed with power from on high."

Forty-Six Years Ago

Rev. Dr. Huestis explained how the Lord's Day Alliance was formed 46 years ago at Ottawa out of the evangelical denominations and it was not an outside organization, but a combined effort of the Protestant Churches. The conspicuous accomplishment of the years was our Lord's Day Act, the finest piece of legislation in all the world. Public sentiment behind it was essential to good enforcement and the Alliance had seen to it. The policy of correspondence and interviews had produced results in that 90 per cent of cases reported as infractions of law had been settled without recourse to legal pressure. "Mankind ever welcomes the opportunity for rest. Commercialized pleasure robs many of the Sabbath. We ask why observe the day?" stated Dr. Huestis. He answered in "that nothing can take the place of Sunday rest and observance. It was essential to the life and work of the Christian Church. The chief duty of religious agencies is to bring people to God, and for fellowship with one another. Our Sunday began not simply as a rest day or even as a holiday in Roman times, but as a means of Christian communion. Out of meeting together in conversation and praise as early Christians the New Testament came into being. Down through the centuries the value of quiet and repose has become more apparent. The privilege for stopping in our complex life to hear and to listen is well illustrated by one poet in his lines "the silence of eternity interpreted by love."

Dr. Huestis stressed the importance of developing youth as torch bearers for the generations to come. If Sunday were taken out of our world civilization, what would happen? he inquired. An earnest appeal for prayerful interest and financial support was made by him on behalf of the mission of the church in this respect.

KELLOGG'S ACHIEVE SCOOP WITH HISTORIC PICTURE

London, Ontario (Special From London, England) November 30th, 1934.

The Kellogg Company of Great Britain, Ltd., in conjunction with the London, England, Daily Mail, has secured special permission to feature an exclusive photograph of the actual wedding ceremony of Prince George and Princess Marina, taken inside Westminster Abbey.

For the first time in the history of the Daily Mail the front page will be devoted to news purposes. The photograph will occupy almost the entire front page, and an offer will be made of a beautiful photogravure reproduction of the wedding scene in size 15" x 12". This will be sent free to anyone in Great Britain who sends in two package tops from any of the Kellogg cereals.

The Daily Mail will rush pictures direct from the wedding scene back to their offices for Kellogg's approval, and will then rush prints by aeroplane to Manchester, England, for their northern edition.

The Kellogg Company's unique offer will reach the breakfast tables of over two million British families—the daily circulation of the Daily Mail. Kellogg plants are located in London, Ontario, Sydney, Australia, and Battle Creek, Michigan.

BAZAAR AND TEA WELL ATTENDED

Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Sponsors Successful Event

Stirling, Dec. 3.—The Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held a bazaar and afternoon tea in the church basement on Thursday afternoon from the hours of three to six o'clock. The fancy work table and the home cooking booth were in charge of Mrs. W. L. Anderson and Mrs. J. M. McGee. Mrs. C. N. Baker and Miss Evelyn Drewry served the purchasers. All the members of the Women's Association under whose auspices the bazaar was being staged served the afternoon tea. The bazaar was well attended in spite of the inclement weather.

The adjourned meeting of the Court of Revision was held on Thursday evening, Nov. 29, with Reeve William C. West and Councillors Tom Cranston, Harper Rollins and Joseph Whitehead. Councillor Harper Rollins on a Cranston-Whitehead motion was appointed chairman for the session.

PICTON BAND CONCERT IS MUCH ENJOYED

Theatre Filled and Many are Turned Away

With every seat in the Regent Theatre filled, and scores turned away for lack of room, Picton and Belleville bands who arranged a mass band concert similar to the successful event held in this city some time ago, scored the success of the season on Sunday evening at Picton. Over one thousand people it was reported found room in the theatre to enjoy the splendid concert. Massed on the stage of the theatre both bands performed two numbers in unison. One was a pleasing and well rendered march, the second an especial adaption of an old time musical score. Both bands then divided the evening's entertainment, the Picton military band during the fore part and the Belleville band the latter part. During the evening His Honor Judge McLean, Picton, acted as chairman. Many individual Belleville and Picton artists loaned their talents for the evening's performance. The collection to be used as the Picton band benefit fund was a generous one. It was announced by Manager Greenleaf of the Belleville band that the same concert would be given here within the next week or so.

ROSE-PINK FINGER NAILS INDICATE GOOD HEALTH

Just below the hard surface of your nails, the blood flows through tiny capillaries in the soft flesh. This is what gives colour to the transparent nails.

Now, the redness of the blood is due to the presence of millions of microscopic cells called red corpuscles. So when the finger nails are tinted a nice rosy pink it just means that the blood has plenty of red corpuscles. And when the blood has plenty of red corpuscles the person is generally in excellent health.

Quite often the nails are pale. This is a warning that all is not well, for the blood then lacks redness and this will bring on undesirable complaints which can become serious.

Not very long ago, there was formed a clinic or study class of forty persons whose blood was pale. They were, of course, more or less run down in health. So for thirty days all were given treatment with a blood-building remedy. Results were splendid! The patients looked better and felt better. They had more vigour . . . were brighter and stronger. Blood tests made by a competent authority before and after taking the remedy showed that the redness of the blood had been well increased by the thirty days' treatment.

Fortunately this remedy can be obtained at any drug store. It is quite well known for it was originated by a Canadian authority and called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. All who suspect that their blood is pale . . . all who feel run-down or lacking in vitality, should follow the example set by the clinic. Get on to the high road of health by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Full size box 50c.

Woman Wants To Join Legion

Kitchener Ont., Dec. 3—(CP)—Kitchener's ex-service men are worried.

A woman has applied for full membership in the local Canadian Legion Branch and there's nothing in the rules to keep her out. The regulations say that anyone who served in His Majesty's forces during the war is eligible and as the female applicant served in the woman's army auxiliary corps, a recognized arm of the service, she can't be kept out.

The executive has passed her membership and now is worrying about the type of initiation ceremony to employ.

TWO TRAINS BUMP

Melville, Sask., Dec. 3 (CP)—Two persons were in hospital today and at least six others were nursing bruises and minor hurts suffered when a Canadian National Railways passenger train bumped into the rear of a freight train at Hubbard, Sask., 28 miles west of here.

The accident occurred last night when the freight was pulling into a siding to permit the passenger to pass. The passenger train's engine struck the business car of E. Crawford, Saskatoon, Divisional Superintendent, attached to the freight and turned over.

ONE-LEGGED DRIVER FINED

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 3 —(CP)—James Hawkins, one-legged local taxi driver was fined $100 and costs by County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw today on a charge of criminal negligence to which he pleaded guilty on Friday.

Hawkins paid the fine, the charge having arisen out of a motor accident in which Mrs. Lillian French of this city was hurt on the highway north of London.

DRESSED POULTRY SEASON AT PEAK

Quality of Birds Better Than Last Year, Says Ottawa Report

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—With the dressed poultry marketing season at its peak throughout the Dominion, carlot shipments were being assembled at country points in the three Prairie Provinces, says the weekly report of the Department of Agriculture. While reports indicated the quantity of birds marketed will be somewhat less than last year, there was a decided improvement in quality, especially in turkeys which have been loaded up to this time.

Practically the entire dressed poultry crop of the western provinces this season was handled on the basis of standard grades and the majority of the poultry was packed to comply with the British Marketing Act, and the Dominion regulations on export poultry.

A number of cars of turkeys have already left the western provinces for Maritime ports for export to the British market for Christmas trading and further large shipments will take place over the weekend.

Price levels generally for poultry in the west were fairly firm, with Winnipeg quoting to the country on a basis of 13 cents per pound for selected A turkeys. These same prices prevail in a few instances at some country points, although prices at country points are, for the most part, slightly below Winnipeg levels.

Prices at poultry fairs in Western Ontario during the current week were about a basis of those of the previous week. At Napanee, generally regarded as the most important poultry fair in Eastern Canada, chickens brought a top price of around 16 cents and turkeys about 14-15 cents.

Mercy-Slayer Will Get Life

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(AP)— The Home Secretary's office informed George Lansbury, Labor Leader, today that Mrs. May Brownhill, the 62-year-old mother condemned to die for the "mercy slaying" of her imbecile son, will be reprieved.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Calves, sheep and lambs opened steady on the Toronto Livestock Market today while cattle and hogs were higher. Salesmen on the cattle division were asking higher levels than those offered by buyers. About 100 head of holdovers were on the market.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: cattle 3,140; calves, 390; hogs, 760; sheep and lambs, 410.

Early cattle trading was slow with higher prices asked on all grades. The supply included 800 head of Westerns.

The calf division was firm at $6.50 to $7.50 for good and choice vealers and at $2.50 to $2.75 for grassers.

Lambs opened steady at $7.00 for good ewes and wethers off cars. Other grades brought $5.00 to $6.00. Sheep were steady at $1.00 to $3.00 cwt.

Hogs were at a standstill. Packers were bidding $7.00 f.o.b. for bacons, $7.35 off truck and $7.75 off car.

Calves, good and choice, $6.50 to $7.50; common to medium, $4.00 to 6.00; grassers, $2.25 to $3.50.

Exports from the port of Montreal last week totalled 792 boxes of cheese, 644 cases of eggs, and no butter.

Prices last week on the Montreal market were generally steady to slightly easier. Grade A-large eggs were a little firmer, being greatest in demand on the egg market; lower grades were unchanged to a little easier. Current make cheese was again cheaper, due to quality being poorer with the advance of the season. Butter, potatoes and poultry were unchanged. Turkeys were sold during the week for export to the United Kingdom.

On the egg market graded shipments arriving in carlots or l.c.l. lots ended the week at 38c to 39c for A-large, 30c to 32c for A-medium, 28c to 30c for A-pullets, 19c to 21c for B, and 18c to 19c for C. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by wholesale jobbing houses as follows:

Grade:	Cartons	Loose
A-1 large	48c	..
A-1 medium	40c	..
A-1 pullets	38c	..
A-large	43c	42c
A-medium	34c	33c
A-pullets	32c	31c
B-large	26c	25c
B-medium	24c	23c
C	22c	21c

The butter market ended the week at 20¾c to 21¼c per lb. for No. 1 in carlots or l.c.l. lots, unchanged to slightly below a week ago. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 22c for solids and 23c for prints. The cheese market became 9¼c to 9½c for No. 1 Ontarios, current make. Earlier cheese makes were higher than prices for current production.

The potato market held steady, with New Brunswicks at 40-45c, Quebecs at 35-40c and Prince Edward Island stock at 45-50c per 80-lb. bags.

Quotations on dressed poultry to the retail trade, as given by wholesale jobbing houses, were as follows on A grade, with B grade ruling 2c per lb. less.

	Per lb.
Turkeys	21-22c
Milkfed chickens	22-24c

PROGRAM PREPARED

Calgary, Dec. 3.—(CP)—Liberals of Alberta today were laying the foundation for a bid to capture the Alberta Government when the next Provincial election campaign rolls around.

An 18-point platform formed the basis. Drawn up a conference of the Alberta Liberal Party Saturday, it pledged the party to investigate merits of social credit policies and make monetary reforms. The party also declared in favor of publicly-owned National Bank.

We Recommend and Offer—

New Issue. McLaren Quebec Power 5½% Bonds at $100.

Clients who purchased Dominion, Eastern Provincial and Western Provincial Bonds during the past few years now have very substantial profits. We recommend accepting current prices for a proportion of these and reinvesting the proceeds in other high grade securities.

TORONTO WOMAN STABBED

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Mrs. Nellie Lapchak, 60, today was rushed to hospital suffering from stab wounds in the right breast and left shoulder. The woman collapsed on the front verandah of her home after she had staggered screaming from the house.

A short time later her husband, John, walked into a police station and surrendered. Police quoted him as saying: "I killed my wife". The woman's condition was said to be critical.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 3 (AP) — The stock market sidestepped today with such timidity that it could not be definitely ascertained whether most leading issues were coming or going.

While moderately bullish sentiment still prevailed, there was some profit taking in evidence and a number of usually active operators appeared to have climbed on the fence to await further indications as to just which way stocks were going to jump. There was a heavy turnover of U.S. Government securities in the bond division following the Treasury's announcement of its December financing programme, but most fluctuations were slight.

Stocks of Canadian companies were irregular. McIntyre improved a small fraction, while International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were slightly lower. On the curb Hiram Walker dipped a point, but Lake Shore ruled steady. Dominion Government Bonds were narrow. Canadian funds eased 11-16 of a cent at 102.03 1-8 cents.

A few share specialties got up to new 1934 highs on relatively small turnovers. Among these were Worthington Pump Preferred B., United Aircraft and Columbia Pictures, up fractionally. McKesson and Robbins Preferred advanced more than 1. The rails were unchanged to a bit higher.

TORONTO MARKET

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Distillery shares dipped more than a point on heavy selling in the first two hours today after which the offerings appeared to dry up and prices made slow headway on the recovery.

Walker's Common dropped to 25 1-2 and Distillers Seagrams to 14 7-8 before buying support appeared. About half the loss had been erased by early afternoon. Oils were slow with prices down small fractions while fractional recessions up to half point were registered for such leaders as Brazilian, Nickel, Ford A. and Consolidated Smelters.

MINING MARKET

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Buying power was rather limp today on the mining section with bids well under Saturday's closing price level. Senior gold shares resisted the pressure, Bralorne, Dome, Hollinger, Lake Shore, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves, all closing out sparingly as unchanged.

But the cheaper group had a good sprinkling of soft spots.

Eldorado was subjected to another selling attack which forced the price to 86. Partial recovery was made in the early afternoon. Other Great Bear Lake issues lost fractions in sympathy, Bear Exploration going to 17½ and White Eagle to 9¼. Castle also sold down a little.

BOARD ROOM GOSSIP

Stadacona Rouyn

Timber men are engaged in putting a collar on the shaft at 300 foot level in preparation for sinking the shaft to at least 600 feet. The purpose of this is for the opening up of 2 more levels and although this is the immediate objective the probability is the shaft will go to greater depth at this time.

At present practically all of Stadacona Rouyn's development work has been done on 300 ft. level from the shaft which is located close to the east shore of Pelletier Lake.

Hydro Power to Porcupine

Present plans of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission call for erection of a sub station at Timmins to serve the Porcupine gold area. Authorization for necessary expenditure has already passed the Commission.

This is the second mining area in the north which the Commission plans to serve, announcement having been made some time ago of installation of hydro facilities in new Ramore district.

Dome Mines

Full year returns of Dome Mines, Ltd., should equal $4.40 a share on the capital stock of the company as against $3.83 actually reported for last year. Increased profits should permit the continuance of Dome's liberal dividend policies and point to additional disbursements from time to time.

FATHER COUGHLIN LAYS DOWN CODE

Seven Principles Named in His Share-the-Work Program

Detroit, Dec. 3—(AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, organizer of the National Union for Social Justice, in his Sunday afternoon address outlined seven principles of the Union ranging from limitation of the profits of industry to a declaration that "strikes and lockouts are absolutely unnecessary."

Father Coughlin listed his seven principles in discussing a share-the-work movement, which he attributed to the United States Chamber of Commerce and described as "the Siamese Twin to 'share poverty-ism.'"

"I forewarn you" he said, "be not misled by any half-truth and half-baked policy, which will advocate a 30-hour week or even a 20 hour week, which does not envision a yearly salary sufficient to meet the requirements of your standard of living".

He listed his social justice principles as follows:

"1. We maintain it is not only the prerogative but also the duty of government to limit the amount of profits acquired by any industry.

"2. It is the function of government to see, that industry is so operated that every laborer engaged therein will acquire those goods, which will be sufficient to supply all needs for an honest livelihood.

Licence Factories

"3. It is the duty of government to secure the production of all those industrial goods—food, wearing apparel, shelter, drugs, books and conveniences—which the wealth of the nation, the natural resources and the technical ability of our scientists are able to produce.

"4. There can be no lasting prosperity if free competition exists in any industry. Therefore it is the business of government not only to legislature for a minimum annual wage and a maximum working schedule to be observed by industry but also to so curtail individualism that, if necessary factories shall be licensed and their output limited.

"5. It is the aim of the National Union of Social Justice to assist in the re-establishing of vocational groups. The laboring class who practice the same trade or profession should combine in units independent, if they choose, of the factory where they work or the industry to which they are employed.

"6. The Department of Labor shall not only protect labor but shall counsel and guide it in its negotiations with capital.

"7. Strikes and lockouts are absolutely unnecessary. It is the business of the public authority to intervene and settle such disputes which can be settled amicably by the parties involved."

ALIENATION SUIT LIKELY TO FOLLOW

Mrs. G. Vanderbilt May Bring Suit Against Sister-in-law

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Daily News says Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt plans to institute suit against her wealthy sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, for alienation of the affections of her daughter, Gloria.

She will value her child's affections, the paper in a copyrighted article declares, at several millions of dollars

The aunt, one of the wealthiest women in the United States, will be charged with employing her fortune of between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 to wean away Gloria's love, the account continues.

During the trial for Gloria's custody, it was contended by Mrs. Vanderbilt that the luxurious facilities of Mrs. Whitney's home, plus a prize pony and other attractive gifts helped to make the child contented away from her mother.

ASKS SANTA FOR ONE OF QUINTUPLETS

From the tone of the radio broadcast announcer's voice heard over local radio receiving sets this week, the United States has adopted prior claim to the Corbeil quintuplets.

It was the regular 6.30 p.m. news bulletin broadcast of the United States' Radio Press Bureau and George Hicks announcing, that local people heard on Thursday of this week. It was November 29 and the United States Thanksgiving Day. Local listeners heard Mr. Hicks tell about the Western child who wrote to Santa Claus wanting him to bring her one of the famous quintuplets for Christmas. Then he added: "By the way, the Dionne quintuplets are doing fine, thank you, on their first Thanksgiving Day."

Mr. and Mrs. Hall of Belleville spent the dinner hour on Wednesday with Mrs. J. Chisholm and Miss E. Ramsay.

Vance-Jordan

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Paul's Anglican Rectory, Roslin, on Saturday morning, Nov. 24 at 8 a.m. when Merla Anna Jordan, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Jordan of Roslin became the bride of Donald Robertson Vance, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Vance also of Roslin.

The wedding ceremony which was performed by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer, took place under an arch of wedding bells and orange blossoms in the drawing room which was prettily decorated with potted plants.

The bride who was attired in a gown of periwinkle blue crepe was attended by Miss Marie Thompson while Mr. Norman Colden acted as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following which the happy couple left on a motor trip to Prince Edward county and other points.

The Roslin Women's Institute held their December meeting and a very successful bazaar and euchre party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sills on Thursday, Nov. 29. About two-thirty p.m. the meeting was called to order by the president and after the opening exercises the minutes of the previous meeting and some correspondence were read by the secretary. The roll call which was answered by "suggestions for Christmas gifts" showed twenty-two ladies and a number of children present. After the conclusion of business Mrs. W. White took charge of the program. All joined in singing "O Canada". Mrs. (Rev.) Hill read a very interesting and helpful paper which had been written by Miss Mary R. Way.

Miss Phyllis Sills gave a delightful talk on the life of Pauline Johnson, interspersed with verses from many of her famous poems. Miss Sills expects to take part in the county competition for the Warden's medal which will be held in Belleville early in December. Mrs. W. White gave a demonstration on candy-making. The National Anthem was sung and later a dainty lunch was served. In the dining room a long table had been arranged and on this was displayed a large assortment of aprons, towels, knitted articles and fancy work. The committee in charge were Mrs. G. Ish, Mrs. W. Clapsadle and Mrs. W. Gillespie. A candy table was in charge of Miss V. Coleland and Miss M. Grey. In the evening a bingo table furnished much amusement and about ten tables of progressive euchre were in play. The prize-winners for the euchre were, ladies' first, Mrs. William Goodfellow; gent's first, Mr. William Goodfellow. The receipts of the afternoon and evening amounted to over twenty dollars.

WELLMAN Y. P. S. HOSTS TO BETHEL

Rawdon, Dec. 3.—On Wednesday evening, Nov. 28th the Young People's Society of Wellman's were "at home" to their friends when they entertained the young people of Bethel. A large crowd was in attendance and all enjoyed the well-balanced programme.

Miss Grace Dayman, president of Wellman's League opened with "Will You Be Enlisted As a Volunteer?" Mr. T. V. Hoover offered prayer and the president welcomed the Bethel friends.

Mr. Walter Warren, president of Bethel League then took charge and Miss Laura Tucker presided at the piano and opened with "What a Friend We Have in Jesus". Mr. Willie Sutherland read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Roy Welbourne gave a splendid topic on the subject of "Consecration". Rev. P. G. Joblin, pastor, gave a brief address at this juncture.

Master Bobby Elliott sang a cute solo "I went Hunting" and Miss Elda McMullen read a selection entitled "The Country Doctor". Mrs. Harold Elliott and Miss Mildred Elliott contributed an instrumental selection on the piano.

Miss Irene Tucker and Mr. Eric Capelle delighted with two numbers "When Jimmy Rodgers Said Good-bye" and "The Little Green Valley".

Mrs. Mabel Hayton rendered a beautiful selection "The Great Guest Comes". The Misses Mildred Elliott and Lauretta McMullen gave a pretty duet "The Voice in the Old Village Choir".

The program closed with all singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and Mr. Wesley Farrell staged a bicycle contest.

Partners were chosen and the Wellman's folk then served a delicious lunch, at the close of which votes of thanks were tendered by each league.

Ann Steps Out

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

She looked out over the water, digging her riding crop in the sand. She looked terribly young, he thought. And she thinks she is so right but she is only trying to patch together again an ideal that has crumbled. She is picking up the pieces of her little idol of Doug but they won't stay together. They'll crumble all about her again.

"I can stand anything if you do not mind too much," she said.

Mind! Could he ever tell her how much he loathed seeing her do this mad thing! And yet with that fierce loyalty she had for people she loved, she would wait for Doug, ignoring the gossip and criticism about her.

"I won't oppose you," was all he said.

Her mind was firmly made up when she reached the city. Faithful though she was, there was fear in her, too. Nick would not oppose her but she knew that he did not approve. Was it, after all, only a blind illusion that made her believe Doug?

Yesterday she had had to get away—away to Nick and the peace of the island. Things had become clearer. She had lain last night listening to the rustling of the leaves blended with the rushing water and thought "I love him. We love each other, Doug and I. We always have and that is all that matters."

She rushed in the house remembering that she had promised to meet Gary at the Hintons' swimming pool that afternoon. She was late now.

Some instinct made her turn when she had one foot on the steps. Her brown hand gripped the bannister and she stopped very still.

Yesterday, sitting in the same chair, had been Doug. Today, Gail smoking furiously, waited.

Ann came toward her. There was no preface; there was no need. And there was little embarrassment about either of them. The thing was too obvious. Ann walked in the room, closed the French doors and stood there, slim and straight, her eyes clear.

"You know why I came," said Gail, looking darkly lovely.

"Yes," said Ann, "There's no use to pretend. Honesty is so much better. Doug was here yesterday. He told me that you had separated."

"That he wants to marry you?"

"Yes".

Gail's crimson lips curved in a cynical smile.

"I don't blame you, Ann. It couldn't have worked anyway. I wasn't ready to settle down to bridge and security. There's a wild streak in me that rebels at security. But I tried. I tried. Doug was the same. Even if he hadn't had you on his mind, it couldn't have lasted."

"He had me on his mind?"

"After you married John Hamill. He kept talking about you and the money you came into. Couldn't get it off his mind. He kept saying, 'I'll bet Ann looks swell now. She's worth several million'. I'm not trying to hurt; I'm only trying to warn."

"Against him?"

"Yes. I don't hate him. I don't feel any anger toward him. I just don't feel anything at all. I didn't love him enough to put up with his faults. It all happened so quickly—I woke up to find myself married to a boy who didn't want to grow up and who made love to every pretty face he saw. We're spoiled children, you see, and each was a new toy for the other. We got tired; there was nothing to hold us together."

Ann looked down at her hands.

"It's nothing to me," said Gail, "what you do."

"He's loved me a long time."

"No. He's only loved you since you've been Ann Hamill. He's in love only with what you represent—luxury and money. I never needed him but that he failed me."

"I've known him long time," Ann defended stubbornly. "I know his faults and weaknesses." She looked up at the dark girl. "Some women love men in spite of them, you know."

"You love him, don't you?"

"It's the one thing I've never been able to run away from. I tried——but I couldn't. I can't get over things. They last with me."

Gail smiled. "I'm going to Reno in a few days. Six weeks there, you know, and I'm off to Europe again, a free woman. I'm going to join my father there. Perhaps I'll never see Doug again. That's why I want to apologize for taking him away from you in the beginning. It was just a lark."

Gail extended a slim hand. Ann took it.

"No hard feelings," said Gail. "I like you. I like to see people who are nothing get to be somebody. Good luck to you Ann. I hope it turns out better with you than it did with me."

Gail pulled on her gloves. "I admire your courage," she said, "but people are going to say that you took something I threw over.."

"You mean that you left Doug?"

Gail laughed. "Of course I did. Oh, he probably told you that he left me. It wasn't that. I made up my mind in Paris that we could never get along. I let him go."

She went out and drove away.

Ann went to her room, called Gary's home and told the butler she wouldn't be at the pool today. And she knew when the phone rang several minutes later that it was Gary calling her. "I won't talk to him," she said to Susan.

She was standing by the window looking out over the green lawns of Guilford when Jean came in.

"What happened to you last night?" she asked. "Down at Nick's? I saw him at the office today and he looked rather low."

Ann turned around and faced her younger sister. "I've something to tell you. Doug and Gail are going to be divorced. Doug and I——"

Jean took a step forward. "Ann, you can't. You can't. It isn't sincere with him. There isn't a sincere thing about him. Oh, he's handsome but......"

Ann turned away.

"Nick said I had to prepare myself for criticism. You," she lifted her eyes, "you did a mad thing, but Dick Nelson didn't love you less for it. Perhaps I can straighten Doug out." She lifted her hand. "I don't care what anyone says. It isn't over with me. I don't think it will ever be over."

"I never thought that you, of all people, could be deceived like that. You're wrong about him, Ann. He likes your money—the perfect thing you've made of yourself with John's money. It isn't you."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Several days passed. Doug called several times.

"I can't see you," Ann told him. "People will talk. We'll have to wait."

"But I want to see you," he said. "I'm bored...."

"We'll have to wait," she said with finality.

Nick had gone to New York on business. Mr. and Mrs. Dryden were due home from their Panama Canal trip in ten days.

Gossip centered about Gail; the slightest rumor was built up into an elaborate story. Gail had left for Reno and her father had sailed for Cannes.

Ann was sitting on the side of the Hinton swimming pool one day, swinging a tanned leg in the water.

"Ann," said Gary "there's a lot of talk about you and Doug. I do not like it. Mother has heard things."

Ann swung around and met his eyes. "Gail told me she had decided already in Paris to divorce him. It had nothing to do with me."

"I've thought" he said earnestly, "that you and I...." He paused ...." You see, Mother's very proud. She wouldn't want the girl I married to be involved in a scandal."

"Am I involved in a scandal?"

He drew away from her searching her face. "Haven't you heard? Gail is suing Doug for divorce and naming you as correspondent."

She stared at him a moment in blank bewilderment. Was that Gail's final thrust, her final humiliating gesture? Ann saw her name and photograph splurged across the front pages of the newspapers....

"I can't believe it," she said. "She told me...."

"Where are you going?"

"I'm going—I'm going to get in touch with Doug and find out if it's true."

When she got home, Jean was there. She had come home from the office early with a headache. Before Ann could say anything, she looked up from the chaise lounge and said, "Nick came back today. He brought a woman back with him—a beautiful woman. You should see her, Ann."

Ann felt that her little world was crumbling. "Who is the woman?" she asked.

"Angela West" Jean said. "He brought her to the office before going down to Gibson Island and introduced her to me. You should see her—tall and dark, and the most beautiful hair and eyes I've ever seen."

Ann lowered her head. Why was it that Nick's bringing a strange, beautiful woman to the island gave her a curious little hurt? Somehow, though their relationship had been only platonic they had seemed to belong so entirely together—she and Nick. Was he turning away from her? Everybody else could turn away but not Nick—not Nick!

"It's funny, isn't it?" she asked, forgetting momentarily the thing that had brought her rushing home. "I'm jealous of her." She laughed. "I'm jealous of Nick I've no right to feel this way but I've never known him to be even mildly interested in any woman. He's known a great many of them, but he always seems so indifferent, so casual...."

"And so much above them," defended Jean stoutly.

"He's head and shoulders above every man I know," said Ann. "I am jealous. He'd laugh if he'd hear me say it. I'm jealous because some other woman is down on the island with him, sitting with him, watching him smoke, feeling his brown eyes on her. It's silly of me, but that's how I feel. It's absurd of me to think that Nick, good looking as he is can't fall in love."

She turned about and ran her fingers in a desperate little gesture through her short hair.

"I heard something today that nearly took me off my feet." She faced her sister. "I heard that Gail is naming me as correspondent."

"Correspondent? She has no grounds...."

"I know. And she told me she had decided before they left Paris to divorce him. All that ugly publicity—Mother and Father will never get over it.' She went to the telephone. "I'm going to call Doug. Maybe he can tell me."

Doug brightened at the sound of Ann's voice.

"Oh, darling, I've been thinking......"

"Doug, I'm frantic. Something I heard today—Is Gail naming me as correspondent?"

"No" he almost shouted. "Who told you that?"

"I heard it at the pool."

"It isn't true. Her grounds are incompatibility. Did you think, Ann...."

"I don't know what to think."

There was new despair in her voice. Gossip met her everywhere she turned. Now Nick. Was she losing him to some other woman?

"Don't worry," said Doug. "It will come out all right. I'm tired of staying at the apartment, Ann. I want to see you."

"I can't see you," she said. "I—I don't want to see anyone."

She replaced the 'phone and Jean saw that there were tears in her eyes.

"You're mixed up aren't you?" asked Jean.

"I'm mixed up," said Ann, "and I don't know what to believe. All my life I've tried to do the right and decent thing. But people misunderstood. Doug is lonely and deserted. Gail is in Reno. He needs me" she said. "I've always been there when he needed me. That's the way I am, Jean."

Jean looked at her soberly. Faithful though Ann was to that old ideal, would she realize before it was too late that it was a lost ideal?

Ann was having breakfast the following morning when Nick telephoned.

"There is some one here I want you to meet," he said. "Angela West. She was fed up with the heat of New York and I persuaded her to come down here for a while and help a bachelor forget his loneliness. I want you to come down, Ann. She's a marvelous person."

It had to be done of course. "I'll be down this morning," she said.

Two hours later she parked her car in the driveway. Nick opened the door.

"This is Ann," he said to the woman in the room.

Angela West was tall and dark and graceful. There was about every movement of her the easy, flowing grace of an actress. She had smooth black hair, waved closely to her head, brown eyes set wide apart, a finely chiseled nose, and rather large mouth. She was the sort of woman who did everything with unconscious, unstudied perfection. Her voice was a low drawl. She was just having her coffee when Ann arrived.

"Hello, dear," she greeted Ann. "Nick has told me so much about you. He calls you his protege." Angela smiled at Nick, a cool though intimate smile. "You have excellent taste in selecting proteges. I think she's charming."

"I'm afraid Nick has prejudiced you in my favor," Ann said.

Angela drank her black coffee with obvious enjoyment. "I love Nick's island. New York was frightfully warm and my decreasing bank account wouldn't stand the strain of a trip. Nick told me to come down here, meet you, be ornament and greet him every morning. When a man wants to be greeted every evening, it's one of two things."

"What?" asked Ann, feeling very young, very inexperienced, beside this woman.

"Loneliness or he is in love with another woman."

Nick laughed. "I've been trying to get Angela to take me seriously for years but she always laughs at me."

Nick wanted Angela to be serious! Ann understood now. Angela was the reason Nick went to New York so often. And she could not blame him!

Angela got up. She wore a flowing coral negligee. "I really must dress. Nick and I got so absorbed in our conversation at breakfast it had to be finished and my dressing was neglected."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the firehouse tawking to Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver, and I said, Did you ever help to put out a fire in a millionair's house, Mr. Riley?

It wasn't a house, it was a mansion, Mr. Riley said. And he wasn't ony a millionair, he was a dook, a real royal dook with his coat of arms on everything from his 600 neckties. When we got to the place smoke was poring out of all the stained glass windows and the butler was standing just inside the oor with a wet hankerchiff up to his face waiting for us to ring the bell. It appeared he had to announce us to the family before we could begin working on the fire, but unfortunately we had no card with us, Mr. Riley said.

What kind of a card? I said, and Mr. Riley said Why a visiting arod of course. A dook's butler couldn't porsibly announce a visitor without having their card on the silver tray. He'd lose his job and his pride all at one stroke, and a butler without his pride is even a sadder site than a butler without a job, so a butler without either would really be too pitiful an object to be imagined. Well, fortunately there was a printer a mile or 2 away who was willing to oblige by striking off a card with Engine Co. No. 6 with it and the butler announced us in ferm but strangled tones and the dook instructed him to admit us and we rushed in just in time to save the family from being permanently suffocated, Mr. Riley said.

Did you save the house, I mean the mansion? I said, and Mr. Riley said, We saved the outside but the inside was a mess owing to the delay, and the dook was so hartbroken at not being able to invite us to tea that we took him back to the firehouse and fixed up a little tea for him there, but I'm afraid the ta'at was spoiled for him on account of all the soot on his mustash, and now I got to polish up my hooken ladder.

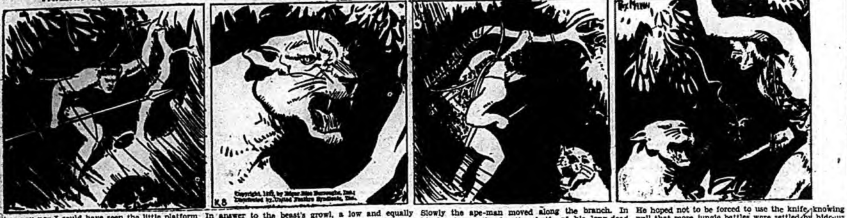
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Neither you nor I could have seen the little platform that an instant before had been just above Tarzan, and which now was below—but as he swung above as we should have heard an ominous growl.

In answer to the beast's growl, a low and equally ferocious growl rumbled from the ape-man's deep chest—a warning sound that told the panther he was trespassing upon the other's lair.

Slowly the ape-man moved along the branch. In his hand was the hunting knife of his long-dead father—the weapon that had first given him his real ascendency over all jungle beasts.

He hoped not to be forced to use the knife, knowing well that more jungle battles were settled by hideous growling than by actual combat. The law of bluff held quite as good in the jungle as elsewhere!

SYSTEM USED TO DETERMINE INTELLIGENCE

Test Should be Given by Qualified Examiner

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

No test has ever created quite so much stir and comment as the Binet-Simon Measuring Scale for Intelligence, otherwise known as the Binet Test.

Binet and Simon were two French physicians who made a study of the intellectual capacity of Paris school children, and, as a result of this extensive research, devised a scale by which children may be examined to determine their normality or sub-normality.

The scale consists of a series of questions, five usually being grouped under each year, and they cover the years from three to twelve inclusive.

An average, normal child, for instance, should be able to answer correctly all questions listed under its own age and all questions under all younger years.

A four-year-old should be able to know whether he is a boy or a girl. He should be able to recognize a key, a knife and a penny. He should be able to repeat a number of three figures such as 728. He should also be able to tell which of two lines of almost equal length is the longer.

Again an eight-year-old child should know the difference between a fly and a butterfly, between wood and glass, and between paper and cloth. He should be able to count backwards from 20 to 1. He should be able to give the days of the week. He must count three one-cent and three two-cent stamps together. He should be able to repeat a number of five figures, such as 47,295.

Similar questions are listed for the other years. If a child's "mental age," according to the test, is three or more years below the child's actual, chronological age, the child is suspected of being mentally defective.

If the child measures one year below, or possibly two, mental retardation is the diagnosis.

A perfectly normal child often does not correctly answer all the questions listed under his appropriate year. He may, however, answer some questions in the year ahead or the next two years ahead, and so make up for his errors, and still attain an average measure which coincides with his age.

Suppose a six-year-old child answers only three of the questions listed under six, but answers one under seven and one under eight. That child will be considered normal. The psychologist would say that he measures "at age."

The Binet Test looks easy enough to give to a child, but such is not the case. A person who is experienced both in the giving of the test and in interpreting the test is required.

There is a strong tendency in testing a child to make undue allowances, thinking the child has misunderstood what is required of him. Binet, himself, has set forth certain rules to which every tester must strictly adhere. If these rules are not followed to the letter, the test is valueless.

Untrained persons should not be relied upon as testers. Many parents have been worried half sick because some unqualified examiner, without the proper psychological and scientific background, asserted that their child was mentally enfeebled.

It would be well if every child were examined by the Binet test, or by some other standard and recognized testing procedure.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

The appetite of the person who is ill, or who has been ill, usually is poor. It must, therefore, be coaxed and teased along. Or to put it another way, the problem to make the sick eat and relish their food is a "mental problem." Variety, simplicity, attractiveness of service, table linen or an attractive tray, hot dishes—all these factors are important.

AT THE BELLE
"Monte Cristo"
Answers Cry for Great Film to Please All Tastes

Read and enjoyed by millions for over a century "The Count of Monte Cristo" was brought to the screen of the Belle Theatre on Saturday and the capacity audiences found it as fresh and thrilling as the crowds which milled around the Paris newspaper offices when it was being written, hungrily awaiting the next installment from the magic pen of Alexandre Dumas.

The producers have given the ageless romance a million dollar production, and the sensational young English "find," Robert Donat, brought to America to play the title role, more than justifies the faith shown in him by United Artists, who selected him after practically every male star in Hollywood had been considered. Young, extremely handsome, charming, and a splendid actor, Donat had everything necessary to make him and keep him the new favorite among male film stars.

Donat and Landi Score

The thrilling story of Edmond Dantes, the young Frenchman, torn from his sweetheart's arms by his enemies and unjustly imprisoned and left to rot in the grim Chateaud'Lf, is made to order for Donat, and Elissa Landi is ideally cast as the girl, Mercedes. How, when Dantes has lost hope of ever seeing daylight again, the sage, Abbe Faria who occupies the next cell, tells him of a secret treasure buried on the island of Monte Cristo, and educates him so that when he finally escapes he may face the world a superman; how Dantes escapes, following the good Abbe's death, locates the treasure, and returns a fabulously wealthy man, to visit a slow and sweet revenge on each of the three enemies responsible for his misery, is perhaps too well known for re-telling here.

Will Please All Tastes

Louis Calhern, Sidney Blackmer and Raymond Walburn, are superbly villainous as the black-hearted de Villefort, Mondego and Danglers, respectively; Irene Hervey is charming as the sweetheart of Mercedes' young son, and William Farnum makes a promising comeback in the role of Captain Leclere.

Rowland V. Lee earns a double distinction in connection with this superb production, for not only is he responsible for the film's brilliant direction, but he also collaborated with Philip Dunne and Danforth Toteroh in preparing the Dumas story for the screen.

The magnificent photography is credited to that ace cameraman, Pecerell Marley, while Gwen Wakeling, Hollywood fashion expert rates cheers for the hundreds of gorgeous costumes of the period designed by her.

"The Count of Monte Cristo" is one of the finest films ever exhibited at the Belle, its fervent romance, adventure and gripping mystery will appeal to every member of the family. It is a picture that many filmgoers will want to see twice.

A very funny Popeye the Sailor Cartoon, and the Belle News of the World, preceded the feature attraction.

"The Gay Divorcee" Next

Possessing a plot which runs riotously into a seemingly hopeless entanglement of thwarted love and exploded hopes, R.K.O. Radio's musical comedy, "The Gay Divorcee", coming to the Belle Wednesday, is said to be one of the funniest pictures of the current season. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers have the star roles. Their hilarious misunderstandings are promoted by the counterplots of Alice Brady and Edward Everett Horton.

AT THE CAPITOL
"A Lost Lady"
Barbara Stanwyck Sweeps to the Heights in Stellar Role

"A Lost Lady," the First National production with Barbara Stanwyck in the stellar role, opens at the Capitol Theatre today for a three day run.

Based on the popular novel by the internationally famous, Willa Cather, the plot of which combines dynamic drama with a most unusual romance, the picture is said to give Miss Stanwyck the strongest and most colorful role of her picture career.

The picture is filled with thrills and excitement in addition to its tense dramatic moments in which Miss Stanwyck portrays the emotions of a beautiful young girl torn between her love for a man with whom she is madly infatuated and her loyalty to her husband.

Miss Stanwyck, as a wealthy society girl, is gorgeously arrayed in the very latest of fashionable costumes. The settings are unusually lavish, with the backgrounds of the costly estates of Chicago's Gold Coast and the picturesque Canadian Rockies.

There is an unusually talented supporting cast which includes four leading men, Frank Morgan, Ricardo Cortez, Lyle Talbot and Phillip Reed.

"A Lost Lady" is a picture every woman will wish to see. The genius of a truly great and popular star awakens in this excellent novel by the word's most outstanding writer's, Willa Cather.

"KING KELLY"

Guy Robertson, hailed as the "musical comedy Cagney", has both the appearance and acting technique of this favourite star. Robertson brings to the screen the baritone voice which won him stage fame and he sings three hit numbers throughout the course of the picture "King Kelly" is a mirth provoking tale of a musical comedy impresario en route to Europe with a troupe of show girls, who trades his contract to produce the show for an equally worthless contract to straighten out the involved finances of a small European principality. How he performs this last task by applying American showmanship methods provides the meat of the picture. It is a fast moving riot of comedy and has a cast of well known comedians, including, Edgar Kennedy, Franklin Pangborn, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Otis Harlan, William Von Bruicken, Irene Ware, former "Miss America' beauty winner supplies the feminine pulchritude.

"Du Barry" Dinnerware tonight and Tuesday. Oatmeal dishes will be given away at each performance.

Both features will be shown twice at night and complete performances commence at 2.30 7.15 and 9.15.

We urge you to come early for a good seat!

EAST SEYMOUR

East Seymour, Dec. 3—Mr. John Thompson is suffering from heart trouble and unable even to do his chores, his son Jim of Menie is assisting him at present.

The many friends of Mrs. Victor Tufford of Beamsville (nee Mae Oddie) formerly of Burnbrae, deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Tufford in the burning of their commodious barn, ten cows, 4 hogs, their poultry, all the season's crop and machinery and very little insurance it is understood.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hume, Jean, Alex and Isabel were entertained on November 30th by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Anderson of Stirling, it being the sixth birthday of their granddaughter Jean Hume.

Mr. George Bennett of Menie, is seriously ill with pneumonia but is holding his own so far.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rannie, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnston, Alex and Betty of Campbellford and Miss Alice Hume spent Nov. 29th with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Walker.

The farmers are getting a good deal of plowing done owing to the mild weather, pansies, marigolds, dandelions, were blooming in this vicinity as late as Nov. 24th, and a butterfly was seen on Nov. 22nd and a pansy picked on Nov. 29th.

Menie cheese factory has closed down for the winter after a successful season's make.

Travelling Secretary

Miss Evelyn Mitchell, Dominion Travelling Secretary of the United Church Women's Missionary Society spoke in Hoard's United Church on Monday evening on the work being done among the outposts, of Canada and also of the foreign fields, she was listened to with intense interest throughout the hour's address. Rev. F. G. McTavish, pastor of Hoard's Church presided, Mr. Frank Heagle led in prayer. Mrs. Ray Williams gave the Topic "The Industrial Conditions in China." Miss Elsie Rannie contributed a pleasing piano solo. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Mitchell by Mesdames J. Rannie and W. S. Milne.

Mrs. W. A. Milne of Menie, is not so well these days although she has been confined to bed for more than six years.

Mr. Ed. Rannie of Hoard's, and Mrs. W. S. Milne went to Guelph Dec. 1st to see their brother Mr. Chas. Rannie who is seriously ill.

Rev. F. G. McTavish of Campbellford, received word that his brother James of Ripley had to undergo another operation and was in a serious condition.

Mrs. Staples of Baltimore, while visiting her daughter Mrs. Frank Little of Menie, had the misfortune to fall in the yard and break an arm, she had progressed so favorably that she has returned home.

The Menie hockey club staged a very enjoyable dance in Menie hall on Friday.

W.M.S. and M. Band Concert

St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society and the Mission Band of Burnbrae put on an excellent concert on Friday, Nov. 30th. Rev. A. J. McMillan, pastor of St. Andrew's Church presided over the entertainment, which took the form of a pageant entitled "Church Builders" which included thirty or more of the Mission Band members; Miss Fern Weatherell was the pianist and great credit is due Mrs. (Rev.) McMillan, Mrs. G. V. Taylor and Miss Feartherell who trained the performers to a successful finish. Among numbers music was interspersed, Messrs. Howard Hutcheon and Gerald Taylor rendered pleasing solos.

Despite the unfavorable weather the Sunday School rooms were well filled and the proceeds very satisfactory.

MRS. JANE WILLIS

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jane Willis was held at the home of her son James with whom she had been living for some time.

The deceased had attained the ripe old age of ninety-four years and had retained faculties to a remarkable degree.

Rev. F. G. McTavish, her pastor conducted the service taking as his theme the twenty-third Psalm, a general favorite of the deceased, hymns "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer My God to Thee." Interment took place in Burnbrae cemetery. She leaves in the home, Mr. and Mrs. Willis, grandsons Cecil, Oliver, Bert and Edward and granddaughter Mrs. Hetherington. The family has the sympathy of the community.

PEOPLE ISOLATED BY FLOODWATERS

Water Rises 40 Feet And Over 8,000 Persons Become Homeless

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 3 —(CP)—Thousands of terror-stricken people were isolated today in the State of Victoria by rising river floodwaters, with 40 feet and some 8,000 homeless.

The State was faced with the worst disaster in its history as waters from the Yearra and other rivers continued to rise. Damage already was estimated at £1,000,000 (about $5,000,000).

Following a phenomenal rain the waters rose with unprecedented suddenness and overflowed two thickly populated and low-lying farming areas north and east of Melbourne.

Residents took refuge in trees, on rooftops and on hills. Many were forced to beat off snakes swimming in the floodwaters during the night and were without food.

A wind and rainstorm which pounded the coast for two days also caused heavy property damage. The coastal steamer Coramba apparently foundered in the storm with a loss of 17 lives probable. The steamer was washed ashore yesterday, as were two bodies bearing lifebelts from it.

AUSTRALIA MAY MAKE REPRISALS

Protest Against Present Tariff Policy of Britain

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 3 (CP Cable via Reuters)—Dr. Earle Page, Deputy Prime Minister of Australia, today issued a warning to Britain, that continuation of her present tariff policy might lead to reprisals by this Dominion.

Addressing an agricultural conference, Dr. Page indicated that if Britain insisted on the restriction of Australian produce when she was free of existing international trade agreements in two years' time then Australia would be unable to meet her overseas obligations or to buy British machinery and equipment to continue developments on which so much British money already has been spent.

If Britain today had freedom of action in an economic sense and insisted on restrictions against Australian goods Australia would have to consider seriously abandonment of her natural policy of progressive development. The Deputy Prime Minister said, and adoption of an unnatural and uneconomic policy of providing for her own requirements internally.

QUINTE BRANCH W. I.

The November meeting of the Quinte Branch W. I. was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Mitchell, Front of Thurlow. There was a goodly number present. Mrs. A. Keene, First Vice-President, presided, opening with the Ode, and repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. Several letters of appreciation were read for kindnesses received during illness; also one of farewell from Mr. Putnam, the retiring superintendent, wishing the Branch every success in its future endeavours. Regrets were expressed by the members of the untiring efforts of Mr. Putnam in Institute work. After much business discussions had been disposed of the report of the Area Convention held in Belleville, was given by the delegates, Mrs. Jas. Bunnett and Mrs. H. Houston. The report was intently heard and much enjoyed by all. The ladies were given a hearty vote of thanks. The roll call, "Hints for the Sick Room," passed on several helpful hints to comfort the suffering patient.

The remainder of he meeting was handed over to Mrs. Arnold Mitchell, leader for November. Community singing was a change of subject, and several patriotic songs were sung in keeping with Remembrance Day A paper on "Armistice Day" by Mrs. T. Brown, told some of the results of warfare and our part in trying to maintain world peace. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and grace. After a social half hour a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Mitchell and conveners.

SUCCUMBS TO BURNS

Edmonton, Dec. 3 (CP)—Succumbing to burns received when his farm home near Kingman, Alta., burned to the ground Nov. 25, W. E Hartschen, World War Veteran is dead here. His wife and two children, all of whom were slightly burned in the same fire, have recovered.

BRAVE TERRIBLE PERILS IN ESCAPING FROM DREAD DEVIL'S ISLAND

Braving shark-infested waters, storms and starvation, these four men, identification unknown, made their escape from Cayenne, port of Devil's Island, notorious French penal colony and landed at Trinidad, in British West Indies, after a harrowing journey of hardship and privation. Layout also shows the boat in which men made their escape. Reports recently from West Indies relate how ten men survived terrible perils in escaping from the colony.

BUILDINGS TO BE CONSTRUCTED UNDER FEDERAL PUBLIC WORKS ACT

SMOULDERING FEUD MAY CAUSE NEW OUTBREAK IN GERMANY

A new domestic crisis in Germany gives rise to reports that clash is expected between the German Reichswehr (regular army) and Hitler's black shirt storm troops (S.S. or Schutz Staffel). It is reported that a feud, long smouldering is ready to break out in an armed clash. These reports add that Hitler may step in with another "purge" similar to that of June 30. Meanwhile further rumors from usually reliable sources reveal widespread discontent among the brown shirts or storm troops. The layout shows various types of uniformed men in Germany, all of whom are said to be fully armed. UPPER LEFT, Reichswehr troops. LOWER LEFT, brown shirts or storm troops. UPPER RIGHT, special black shirt "guard". LOWER RIGHT, Hitler, wearing brown shirt and Lutzke, reputed the Nazi leader's right hand man, wearing the black Hitler's special bodyguard.

MAYOR TICE IS ELECTED FOR FOURTH TERM

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

St. Louis, Dec. 4 (CP)—Dr. Edgar De Witt Jones, addressing the Metropolitan Church Federation, outlined the ideal modern clergyman thus:

The preacher of today needs the courage of a lion, the skin of a hippopotamus, the endurance of a camel, the sagacity of an elephant, the patience of a donkey and as many lives as a cat."

. . . .

Pittsburgh, Dec. 4 (CP)—David [illegible], the city's newest police magistrate, is going to run his business in the mayor's own back [illegible] room.

So announced Mayor William N. McNair, explaining: "When transient motorists are given tags they can come right up here and pay their dollar without having to wait around all day."

. . . .

Denver, Dec. 4 (CP)— Some Denver policeman "are so slovenly they look like movie comedy officers," said Chief George Marland after an inspection tour.

He issued an order to his men: "get over the idea you can wear uniforms that look like you've slept in them."

. . . .

Rainier, Ore., Dec. 4 (CP) — Even the rays of an X-ray machine couldn't locate the wire paper clip which lodged in the throat of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Boyd.

After the X-ray failed to reveal the clip, it was found in the baby's blanket. Apparently she had coughed it up on the way to the doctor's office.

West Albany, N.Y., Dec. 4 —(CP)—The New York Central experiment in streamlining, an ordinary locomotive streamlined inside and out, will be put into service in a few days. Instead of building a light alloy train, motor drive, such as the Union Pacific's streamliner or the Burlington's Zephyr, the New York Central decided to experiment with its present equipment. Officials chose a crack express engine. Her potential speed was rated as "100 miles an hour and up." What it will be when she gets out on the main line with her streamlines, her designers have not forecast.

Chiefly the railroad hopes to see a reduction in operation costs. There has been no indication that the Central's 70-mile-an-hour speed limit will be changed.

New York, Dec. 4 (CP)— Ely Culbertson, bridge authority, fyled suit for $300,000 today against the New York theatre programme corporation and the Buckingham corporation, a whiskey agent, complaining that a whiskey advertisement used his name without his permission and "caused him a great loss."

He alleged the advertisement gave the impression that "he preferred to indulge in the consumption of whiskey" in preference to properly and carefully attending to the "correct play of the game."

. . . .

Sydney Mines, N.S., Dec. 4 — Sidney Boutilier, 19, was instantly killed and his father, Bert Boutilier, was seriously injured yesterday when a spark from a mine lamp set off a can of loose powder in a small coal pit here. The explosion brought a shower of stone and coal down on the two men.

KETCHESON NAMED FRANKFORD REEVE

Annual Elections Were Held in Village on Monday

Frankford, Dec. 4 (Special)—At the elections held Monday at Frankford village Mr. D. Ketcheson was elected Reeve of the village by a vote of 262 over his opponent, B. Patrick. Mr. Patrick's total vote was 88.

The following four were elected as councillors for the year 1935.

A. Loney	234
H. Dickson	231
G. Spencer	220
C. Turley	199

Mr. D. Sweedman was the defeated candidate.

PRINCIPAL APPOINTED

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)—H. J. Vallentyne of Toronto has been appointed principal of the Ontario School For The Blind at Brantford, Hon. H. C. Nixon, Acting Ontario Premier announced today. The position has been vacant for about two years.

Mr. Vallentyne has had a long experience in teaching.

Close Race in Mayoralty Defeat of 2 Aldermen Mark Municipal Polling

Over Four Thousand Votes Cast in Annual Elections

ARNOTT LEADS POLL

New Aldermen-elect Are Arnott, G. Thompson, Barlow and Guthridge

Mayor George O. Tice in one of the keenest election battles in the records of the city, swept to his greatest municipal triumph last evening.

Carried into office for his fourth term as the city's chief executive, with a majority of only 77 votes over his opponent, ex-Alderman Harold Armstrong, the present Mayor duplicates a record that has been held only once before in local municipal history.

Not since the stirring election year of 1912 when the late Alfred G. Vermilyea was elected Mayor of the city with a majority of only four votes over his opponent, the late Geo. I. Thomas, and the year 1914, when the late Judge J. P. Wills, K.C., obtained a total of 39 votes to gain the Mayoralty chair over his opponent, the late Albert Robinson, has this city seen such an intense and spirited race for mayoralty honors.

The total vote given Mayor Tice on Monday was 2067. Total for ex-Alderman Armstrong was 1990. This year a total of 4057 votes were cast by electors, in contrast to a total of 3861 cast one year ago at the polls.

Brooklyn, N.Y., Dec. 4 (AP) — Brooklyn today presented a child prodigy who shares the six-year-old genius reported yesterday by Manhattan.

Manhattan's prodigy referred to as "K", was said to have received an intelligence rating almost equal that of Albert Einstein. Brooklyn declares its smartest child has a rating considerably above Einstein.

Brooklyn's child is 25 points ahead of the famous mathematician and has been called "the most intelligent human being in the world."

The names of the children, for their own good, have not been made public.

The Brooklyn child, the Child Guidance Bureau said, at 7 1-2 years of age has invented a numerical system of musical notation which competent musicians have pronounced practicable. He learned to read at two and some time ago, when interviewed on the subject of fighting, remarked:

"I dislike violence and argument very much. As a rule they are needless and quite pointless, since nothing is ever settled by them."

INDICTMENTS ISSUED IN MORRO CASTLE FIRE

Trial of Those Indicted to be Held in Near Future

New York, Dec. 4—(AP)—Indictments in connection with the burning of the Morro Castle with the loss of 124 lives have been returned by a federal grand jury against acting captain William F. Warms, chief engineer Eben S. Abbott, Henry E. Cabaud, executive vice president of the New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Company, and the company itself.

The indictments charge misconduct, negligence and inattention to duties, and fraud, neglect, connivance, or violation of the law.

The government announced it would place the defendants on trial as soon as a federal judge is available to hear the case.

ASKING REFUND BRINGS ARREST

London, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—Margaret Dicy over-reached herself yesterday when she lifted a customer's parcel in a local departmental store. Disappointed with the contents she turned the parcel into the exchange desk and asked for a refund. Meanwhile the original owner had reported the loss and the arrest of Dicy followed. Today she paid a fine and costs totalling $17,½

PICTON'S MAYOR IS W. A. JONES

Defeats Clifford Colliver in Spirited Contest For Honors

W. A. Jones was elected Mayor of Picton over Clifford Colliver in one of the most spirited elections held in the Prince Edward County seat in some years. As the returns came in, it was just a question, who would be elected but Jones gradually forged to the front. Tom Crandall defeated Thomas Campney for the Reeveship, while Sine Blakely was elected as Deputy Reeve by acclamation. Those elected to the council were Jack Vestervelt, George Ovens, Roland Rorke, Nesbitt McKibbon, Barton Reid and Harry Card. Arthur Clarke was the defeated candidate.

Marmora And Lake Township

Lindsay Neal, Reeve of Marmora and Lake Township was returned by acclamation but there was an election for council with the following four receiving the majority votes necessary, John A. Bell 381, Carl Jarvis 324, Arthur Tompkins 257, William Long 213. Those defeated were Irvine McCoy, Thomas Mobes and Charles Kelly.

NED SPARKS TAKES LOOK AT CENSORS

Orders Shot Gun and Buck-Shot "to Kill Some"

Toronto, Dec. 4.—Premier Hepburn in showing his friend "Ned" Sparks, the non-smile comedian from Hollywood, about the Parliament Buildings yesterday afternoon told newspapermen he was taking his guest upstairs to the Motion Picture Censor Bureau and Sparks immediately ordered a shot gun and 20 shells of buckshot, "to kill some of the censors," he said.

Asked about relations between Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Sparks remarked, "There is no dispute. It's a draw."

Sparks, who was accompanied here by Chester Smith, of St. Thomas, is leaving tonight for an American City he would not name.

His next show is George White's Scandals which he described "as a notorious effusion made annually by Fox, glorifying the American girls and sundry maidens from Canada and the Argentine."

For some reason he wanted to unload his secretary who, he said, "is on the market for 52 cents fee simple."

Mr. Hepburn did not want the secretary so Sparks decided he would start negotiations with E. G. Odette, Liquor Commissioner of Ontario.

APPOINTED JUDGE

Vancouver, Dec. 4—(CP)—Frederick G. T. Lucas, whose appointment to the British Columbia Supreme Court bench succeeding Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald was announced in Ottawa last night, received his entire legal training in British Columbia.

ULM OUT OF GAS CALLS FOR HELP; LANDING ON OCEAN

"Will Land in The Sea" Was Brief Message This Afternoon

HELP IS ON WAY

Fliers Miss Liner in Rain Squalls Near Hawaii

Honolulu—Ulm's plane radioed were just going into the water.

Honolulu Dec. 4—(AP)—"Will land in the sea," said a brief message at 8.30 a.m., today, Hawaii time (2 p.m. E.S.T.) from the Hawii-bound plane of Captain Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions.

Honolulu, Dec. 4—(AP)—Off his course and virtually out of gasoline on a flight from Oakland to Honolulu Captain Charles T. P. Ulm today sent out a general emergency call as a coast guard cutter and three United States navy planes dashed to his aid.

Honolulu. Dec. 4—(AP)—Announcing his belief that Charles T. P. Ulm's plane "Star of Australia" is off its course on a flight here from Oakland, Calif., Commander John S. Bayliss of the coast guard cutter Itasca ordered his ship to "shove off" at 7:30 a.m. today to go in search of the plane.

Commander Bayliss was in such a hurry to depart that he hung up the telephone while an interviewer was trying to ascertain why the officer was convinced the plane was lost.

Gas Supply Low?

Meanwhile army flyers at Wheeler Field declared they were at the opinion Ulm's gasoline supply was very low. They said they were seriously concerned.

The United States naval radio station at Wallure said it had been attempting to learn the plane's position from Ulm or get some word on how he expected to arrive.

The navy operators said, however that Ulm had not answered their questions and that he had given no position reports in the last hour and a half.

San Francisco, Dec. 4—(AP) — Flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm's trans-Pacific monoplane was reported only 400 miles from Honolulu at 5:30 a.m., Pacific Standard Time, today, about 14 hours after he and two companions hopped off from Oakland, Calif., on their way to Australia.

Position Given

Advices to the Globe wireless here from its Honolulu station said the two motor plane passed over the SS Maliko at that time. The Honolulu station said Ulm gave the Maliko's position as lattitude 24.30 north and longitude 152.40 west.

This would put the fliers ahead of schedule which called for them to complete the first leg of their precarious flight about 9:30 a.m. P.S.T.

The report indicated that the fliers missed the brightly lighted liner President Coolidge somewhere in the rain squalls which surrounded the Hawaiian Islands.

Wireless reports from Ulm were received only faintly, but on the few occasions he could be heard it was a cheery "everything ok."

The Maliko was the second sign of life known to have been sighted by the flyers since they lost sight of the California coast after their takeoff from Oakland airport at 3:41 p.m. P.S.T. yesterday on the 2,408 mile flight to Honolulu. Their plane flew over the liner Lurline, which takes days to make the same voyage Ulm is making in hours, 500 miles out of Oakland at 8 p.m.

In messages picked up there Lieut. Charles T. P. Ulm, was begging for "the beacon", presumably the radio beacon, that he might be guided safely to his Honolulu destination.

"We do not want to have to give the SOS", said one message."

Ulm's Record

(All times Pacific Standard).

Monday, Dec. 3:

3.41 p.m.—Hopped from Oakland, Calif., municipal airport for Honolulu, 2,408 miles away on first leg of flight to Australia.

4.05 p.m.—Passed Farallone Islands, 25 miles out.

6.00 p.m.—Broadcast "hello" to Oakland airport; position inaudible.

8.00 p.m.—Passed liner Lurline, 500 miles from Oakland.

10.31 p.m.—"Everything O.K." Listeners estimate position 1.000 miles from Golden Gate.

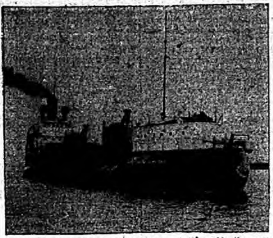
CREW RESCUED AS FREIGHTER CRASHES



Working their way hand over hand along a thin cable, the crew of 26 of the whaleback freighter Henry Cort (ABOVE) were saved when the ship was wrecked off Muskegon, Mich. In a 60-mile gale, the freighter struck the breakwater in the harbor. One man was injured and one coastguardsman was drowned attempting to go to the aid of the stricken vessel. Captain Charles V. Cox was last to leave ship.

Four Border Municipalities To be Amalgamated Into One

New City Will be Called Windsor and Have Population of 100,000

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—The four border municipalities in this district will be amalgamated into a single city of 100,000 population next July 1, according to a statement made to The Border Cities Star by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario. The municipalities affected will be Windsor, East Windsor, Sandwich, and Walkerville. The new city will be named Windsor.

The statement was made in a communication from Mr. Hepburn who is in New York, enroute to the West Indies for a holiday. It said that a royal commission of five members would make a thorough study of the situation before the union is consummated.

An elaboration of the scheme was contained in a communication from Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, who was in Toronto today. Mr. Croll was formerly Mayor of Windsor and was succeeded as a result of last night's municipal elections by George Bennett.

Announcement Follows Vote

Announcement of the scheme followed within a few hours holding of a poll on amalgamation by two of the affected municipalities. They were Windsor, which voted 10,557 to 1,905 in favor of amalgamation, and East Windsor which gave 2,221 votes for amalgamation and 1,112 against.

At the same time T. J. Fontaine was re-elected Mayor of East Windsor.

Mr. Croll's statement said the new city's name would be Windsor and:

"We will start it out in life as the Province's fourth largest city and we will watch and help it progress towards a great social and economic future. It has all the natural advantages; we will remove the unnatural handicaps and save the municipalities from debt bondage."

At the same time the Minister said the scheme would effect considerable saving in administration costs, besides raising the efficiency of public services.

Commission Named

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, today announced personnel of a five-man royal commission to examine financial and other factors in the proposed amalgamation of four Border Cities' municipalities into a new City of Windsor with a population of 100,000.

Mr. Croll announced that Judge John J. Coughlin of Windsor, will be chairman of the commission and that the other members will be:

Dr. Horace L. Brittain, Secretary to the Ontario Municipal Association, vice-chairman; J. Clark Keith, General Manager of Municipal Association, vice-chairman; J. Clark Keith, General Manager of the Essex Border Utilities Commission; S. E. McGorman of Walkerville and Herbert S. Cummings, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs.

FREIGHTER AGROUND

Sorel, Que., Dec. 4—(CP)— The lake Freighter Navadoc was aground today in Lake St. Peter outside the channel.

Stevens Inventor Of Electric Light!

Amherstburg, Ont., Dec. 4. — A questionnaire submitted to Amherstburg high school students contained the following replies.

Hon. H. H. Stevens invented electric lights.

Ex-Premier George S. Henry is Governor-General of of Canada.

Eccles J. Gott, M.P., for South Essex is a man who recites a poem but does not say it the way it is written in the book.

Aimee Semple McPherson wrote "Alice in Wonderland".

Mr. Stevens is "a lawyer in Amherstburg and his name is Stevie."

Mitchell F. Hepburn is Premier of Ontario and is doing very well so far."

LADY HAIG SHOWS HER APPRECIATION

London. Dec. 4.—(CP Cable) — Lady Haig, widow of Field Marshal Earl Haig, has acknowledged with thanks a resolution passed by the Londonderry Branch of the British Legion in support of the Field Marshal against the attacks of former Prime Minister David Lloyd George, who has severely criticized Lord Haig's conduct of the Passenchdaele offensive.

"I don't know sufficiently how to thank you," Lady Haig wrote to the Legion Branch. "Nobody could have tried to avoid losses more than he, who so carefully prepared beforehand every detail."

NOVEMBER CLOUDIEST WITH TWO EXCEPTIONS

Mean Temperature 3.9 Degrees Over 44 Year Average

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)—With only two exceptions, November 1934, was the cloudiest November recorded at the Dominion Experimental Farm, it was reported today.

There were only 48.1 hours of bright sunshine during the month, 30.8 hours, or 39 per cent. less than the normal. November 1927 with only 41-7 hours of bright sunshine, was the most cloudy November on record.

During the month 17 days were totally overcast. The month's mean temperature was 36.2 degrees, or 3.9 degrees above a 44 year average. Total precipitation was 2.85 inches, in contrast with November 1933, when 18.25 inches of snow fell and real winter conditions prevailed during most of the month.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, December 4—(CP)—The weather in Western Provinces has been fair but rather cold in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Pressure is high off the Nova Scotia coast and over the western portion of the continent.

Lake Superior —Strong winds or moderate gales, shifting to northwest; snow or sleet in eastern districts and becoming somewhat colder.

Kenora and Rainy River— Fresh northwest winds; mostly fair; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — Moderate winds, mostly northwest; fair and a little colder.

Alberta—Moderate winds; fair; much the same temperature.

Encouraging Trade Signs Appear in Buying Inquiry Local Retailers are Told

Price Spread Revelations Referred to by George S. Hougham

CHALLENGE TO SERVICE

Tribute is Paid to Press by Retailers' Executive Secretary

"Regardless of the future of any political party and quite independent of the private ambitions of any politician, a great moral challenge to the people of Canada is involved in the shocking disclosures revealed by the Mass Buying and Price Spreads Committee Investigation being conducted at Ottawa," was one of the striking statements made by George S. Hougham, executive secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada in an address before the members of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association and guests Monday evening in the New Queen's Hotel.

Not Political Ballyhoo

Mr. Hougham held his audience in rapt attention while he presented high lights of the investigation into modern business methods now proceeding at Ottawa, leaving his hearers with a new and enlarged perspective of what it is all about.

Stating at the outset that his organization which is national in scope, having obtained its charter from the Dominion Parliament in 1905, existed to serve the interests of the independently owned and efficiently conducted retail store. Mr Hougham declared that the association was not antagonistic in spirit to other forms of retail distribution since no system whether economic, political or religious held a monoply of all the virtues, but rather its policy was one of uncompromising opposition to all forms of unethical practice or unsound merchandising methods.

Brotherhood of Man

Proceeding with this theme, the speaker lifted the entire subject high above the atmosphere of competitive merchandising or political partizanship climaxing his illustrations and arguments with the statement that "The Brotherhood of Man is not just a religious conception, a philosopher's ideal or a poet's fancy but a cold economic fact from the social implications of which there is no escape, and that unless society recognized and acted upon that conviction quickly, our boasted civilization would disintegrate from economic cancer the inevitable result of moral and spiritual blindness."

Typical Examples

Mr. Hougham, who was the principal witness for the independent retail trade of Canada before the Parliamentary committee at Ottawa and has been in almost continuous attendance there selected three typical items of evidence

ORDERED TO FINE ALL HIS CLERKS

Leslie Virtue, Former Manager, Testifies at Inquiry

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—(CP)—Leslie Virtue, a former Toronto manager for Stop and Shop Limited, told the Parliamentary Mass Buying Commission today he was instructed by headoffice to fine all his clerks to see what effect that would have on his stock shortages. Although he fined the clerks, including a married man receiving $8 a week, Virtue said he had no suspicions of their dishonesty. The stock shortages continued and finally Virtue was dismissed.

Virtue worked as a store managed at Greenwood Avenue and Gerard Street for six months in 1932. During that time, although he gave short weights and gypped his customers, he rolled up a stock shortage of over $700. When he left the Company appropriated a cash bond of $250 in addition to $110, he had put up in three payments. This meant he received about $240 net for his six months' work, an average of $10 a week.

Bids Goodbye to Cash

"What happened to the $360 you put up in cash," asked Norman Sommerville, Commission Counsel.

"I said goodbye to that. They (the Company), said I owed them

ONTARIO VOTING FOR MAYORS SHOW MARKED UPSETS

Only a Few of Those in Office Returned by the Electors

MACBRIDE BEATEN

George Bennett Succeeds Hon. D. Croll as Windsor's Mayor

(By the Canadian Press)

Municipal Governments in more than half a hundred Ontario cities, towns, townships and villages made ready today to embark on their 1935 careers with the electors' stamp of approval. In a shower of ballots yesterday mayors, reeves, deputy reeves, councillors Board of Education members and Public Utility Commissioners were selected for the coming year.

Upsets marked voting in several places, when practically new set of faces were placed in control of affairs. Hamilton electors dealt unkindly with Labor and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidates but they placed Mayor Herbert Wilton in the Chief Magistrate's chair for a second term. Not one seat on the Board of Control went to Labor or C.C.F. adherents.

Mayor Wilton had a majority of more than 20,000 over the nearest of his four opponents. A woman headed the Board of Control race, when Hamilton gave strong support to Aldermen Nora Henderson for a controller's seat and a young lawyer and noted footballer, Frank Turville halfback of Tigers will be one of the eight new aldermen.

London Re-Elects Wenige

London displayed its confidence in Mayor George Wenige by returning him to office with nearly double the number of votes cast for his two opponents, Alderman E. C. Killingsworth and Frank Curran.

Defeat of Brantford's Labor-supporting Mayor M. M. MacBride by a veteran of the War, Col. M. A. Colquhoun, was one of the remarkable upsets. The veteran who rose from a captaincy of "A" company, Dufferin Rifles, to command of the "Mad Fourth" during the war defeated Mr. MacBride, Brantford's Independent representative in the Ontario Legislature, by a majority of 234.

A number of cities chose their Mayors by acclamations at the nominations last week, including, Kitchener, North Bay, Cornwall and Brockville and yesterday Ottawa, Stratford, Belleville, Chatham, Galt St. Thomas and Woodstock returned their Mayors to office. Patrick J. Nolan the Capital's City's Chief Magistrate, rolled up a majority over his four opponents that was one of the largest in the city's history, standing at more than 17,000.

PANSIES PICKED IN CITY GARDEN

A lovely bouquet of pansies picked from the garden at her home on Albert Street were brought into the Ontario Intelligencer office this morning by Mrs. B. Reid.

SERGEANTS TO HOLD A TURKEY SHOOT

A regular monthly meeting of the sergeants of the Argyll Light Infantry was held last evening in their mess room. Business transacted was chiefly of a routine nature. It was decided to have a turkey shoot for the members on Monday evening, Dec. 24.

Col. A. E. Geen, commanding officer, visited the sergeants with a challenge for a rifle shoot between the officers and sergeants. The challenge was accepted and Wednesday evening, Dec. 12, was selected as the date for the event. A prize will be competed for.

COUNTY COUNCIL OPENS SESSION

Thirty members of Hastings County Council convened in the city today, opening their last session of the year at Shire Hall late this afternoon.

It is expected that business will be light at this session as is customary at the last meeting of the year. No especial legislation is being sought by any member of council at this session, it is reported.

The session is being presided over by Warden George Jordan of Hungerford Township.

KEEN INTEREST IN ELECTIONS

More Than 1,500 Calls Answered by Ont. Intell Staff

Wet, heavy snow whirled about the city last evening in gusty gales, coating the walks and roads with an inch thickness of slippiness and slippiness and slush, and inviting the majority of residents to sit by the fireside instead of engaging in election night rambles through the downtown section of the city.

But the telephone did yeoman service. It not only kept track of the ebb and flow of the mayoralty and aldermanic battle in the city hall and polling booths, but it gave fast and accurate election returns to all who enquired. The telephone or telephones, were in the editorial office of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer. A busy sta worked over time far into night on the business of m them. Somewhere in the nei hood of 1,500 or 1,800 calls w answered by the staff.

It was an incessant jangle of shrilling bells and buzzing buzzers from early in the evening even before seven o'clock, until long after midnight. Not all the calls, for instance, were directly connected with the candidates for office.

There was, for example, the apparently anxious and elderly feminine resident, who enquired "I wonder how Daylight Saving is going. Do you think it will be defeated this year?"

Suburbanites and residents of the rural areas about the city seemed directly concerned over the municipal elections. It was no trick for the ones on the telephones to catch the betraying tinkle of rural party lines as the receiver was replaced.

Many of the questioners whose voices became increasingly familiar as the evening wore on had apparently glued themselves to their home telephones calling at intervals of five minutes or so when the election was at its keenest, keeping track of the rise and fall of the ballots and the fortunes of their candidates. Others merely asked a single question regarding the standing and then were satisfied for the night.

Curiously, those who thanked their informants for the results of the evening were few and far between.

THE HUMAN MIND SUBJECT OF TALK

J. O. Herity, Guest Speaker When Peterboro Club Entertained

A large delegation of Peterboro Y's Men were guests of the local club at Monday's meeting, when an outstanding evening was enjoyed. After a musical program presented, at the piano, by Mr. Clifford Templer, with vocal numbers by Stan. Wilbur, which was enthusiastically received, the speaker of the evening, Mr. J. O. Herity, was introduced by Dr. Jack Marshall.

Mr. Herity, whose visits to the club are always looked forward to, delivered a very thoughtful address on The Human Mind. After gracefully welcoming the Peterboro members, the speaker stated that the 'text' of his 'sermon' was the famous quotation, "Mind is the Measure of Man."

"Man is endowed with two priceless assets," said Mr. Herity, "in his brief journey through life—Time and Mind,—and it is unfortunate that so many waste both." Using electricity as an illustration, the speaker showed that it is impossible to define the human mind, although it may be compared to the power which provides the necessary heat to light the tungsten filament in a lamp, with the nerves acting as the conducting wires.

While the mind is part of the human body, it is potentially, millions of times greater, since the mention of a distant object or place, will instantly cause visualization, whereas it might take the body many days to cover the same journey. Every article in daily use, was first the product of some man's mind. Like the body, the mind has its period of growth, followed by decay, but while full development of the body is complete in man's first 25 years, that of the mind occurs earlier, and whether the period of decay sets in from that date, is in the control of the individual. That such early decadence is not necessary, Mr. Herity illustrates by reference to such men as Mr. Gladstone, who was Prime Minister of Great Britain at 84, General Van Hindenburg, who died at 86, after directing the German Republic right up to his death, and others.

"The Mind," said Mr. Herity, "can go on and expand indefinitely," and quoted some amusing examples of questions asked by school inspectors to support his contention that our present educational system unfortunately does not start the plastic mind of a child in the right direction to encourage this lifelong expansion, but rather attempts to cast all in te same mould. Then in later life, the tendency is to mistake political and ther prejudices as in later life, the to adopt them without looking for supporting facts, and thus to fossilize what should be man's greatest asset.

Cardinal Newman was the author of one of the most trenchant sayings illustrating the speaker's theme 'Fear not that life shall have an end—but rather that it shall not have a beginning!'

The thanks of the audience was expressed to Mr. Herity by Joe Shortt, supplemented by Chairman Alex. Weir, and some brief remarks of appreciation to the host club were made by President Jack Boyd of the Peterboro club.

At the close of the regular meeting a social hour of dancing was much enjoyed, with the meeting as a whole being rated a tremendous success. The semi-annual inter-club meeting sponosered by the Peterboro and Belleville Y's Men's Club are rapidly becoming one of the outstanding features of the clubs' yearly programs. These meetings prove educational as well as interesting and also assist materially to blend the clubs together internationally.

Obituary

LATE HARRY W. CAIRNS

Monday afternoon the funeral of Harry Wilbur Cairns took place from his late residence at Point Anne to the United Church there. Many friends were present at the service which was conducted by the Rev. Wm. T. Keough, the pastor of the Point Anne circuit.

The bearers were Messrs Thos. Whalen, Geo. Cornell, Alfred Haines Stephen Shephard, John Harb and Manson MacDonald.

Interment was made in Belleville cemetery.

LATE MRS. OSTRANDER

Picton, Ont., Dec. 4.—The funeral took place this afternoon at Cherry Valley of Mary Ostrander, wife of James Fennell and mother of Norman J. Fennell, clerk of Athol township. She was born in South Marysburg township 74 years ago and spent all her life in Prince Edward County.

WILLIAM H. FINKLE

Trenton, Dec. 4 (Special)—Another prominent Trenton citizen has been removed in the sudden passing of William Herbert Finkle. His death came as a great shock to the people of this community where he was so well known. Last week he attended a creamery convention in Toronto and returned on Thursday. He was at work on Friday as usual but was seized with a bad spell late that day, that ended in his death early yesterday morning. The late Herbert Finkle was born in Thurlow Township fifty-four years ago, son of the late Jacob Finkle and Jane Thresher. For many years he was engaged in farming in Sidney beyears ago. For a short time he was years ao. For a short time he was employed with H. Kaye and Co., but after he worked at the Trenton Creamery, which he purchased a few years later. Under his capable ownership the creamery has grown to be one of the most thriving in this part of the Province.

He was a most active member of the King St. United Church, where he was a former superintendent of the Sunday School. At the time of his death he was secretary of the official board. He was also a member of the Library Board and had served on the Trenton High School Board.

LAST OF VESSELS HEADING FOR PORT

Wintry Season Sets in as Wind Whips Snow Across Lakes

By The Canadian Press

Vessels still plying on the Great Lakes were heading for port on virtually their last trips of the season today as wintry conditions set in, with a high wind whipping snow before it in many sections and the weather turned cold elsewhere.

Only one vessel passed the Sault in the past 24 hours, four were due at Hamilton to tie up for the winter and there were no movements at Owen Sound. Oil tankers were still operating but were ready to tie up at various ports in the next few days.

Several freighters arrived in Toronto and departed again either on their last trips or else heading for the winter tie-up.

Police News

Despite the fact that the citizens of Belleville were all agog over the annual municipal election held yesterday, not a single arrest was made by the police department as the authorities enjoyed one of the most tranquil twenty-four hours of the season.

Late last night Allan Hitchon reported to the police that four electric light bulbs had been stolen from the gasoline pump in front of his gasoline station on Coleman street. This is the first theft of electric light bulbs to be reported locally in quite some months.

Despite the adverse weather conditions and the wet slippery snow that fell last night, not a single motor accident was reported locally during that time. As a matter of fact there has not been a motor accident happen on city streets this week.

MAYOR EQUALS 4-TERM RECORD

Four Consecutive Years in Office Reached Only Once Before

In being elected to office for the third term as mayor of the city at the last municipal election, Mayor George O. Tice equalled a record of twenty-seven years' standing. His return to office last evening for the fourth consecutive term, duplicated a record held only once before in this city. Only once before when the late J. W. Johnson was elected for the fourth consecutive term between the years 1897 and 1900 was this city ever represented in office by the same mayor for the fourth term. P. Macanlay represented Belleville as mayor in a broken four years, 1857-1859, and with a gap of one year in 1860, he again was mayor in 1861.

The following is the list of third term mayors:

P. Macannan, 1857-59 and 1861.
W. A. Foster, 1875-77.
J. E. Walmsley, 1894-96.
R. J. Graham 1901-03.

VOTE TO AMALGAMATE

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 4.—(CP)—The vote on the question of amalgamation of the Border municipalities received a favorable majority ranging from two to one to five to one in yesterday's municipal balloting.

Showing they were still of the same mind when they voted on the question in 1926, Windsor residents to the number of 10,557 said "yes" to the question while 1,905 opposed the scheme.

In East Windsor, 2,221 gave their assent to the proposal while 1,112 rejected the plan. Riverside showed figures of 715 for; 303 against.

WAR FOR PROFIT?

Washington, Dec. 4—(AP)— A document indicating the munitions industry looked forward to the Great War with an eye on expected profits was on top of a huge pile of evidence at the resumption today of hearings by the United States Senate Munitions Committee.

COMMUNISTS LOSE ALL THREE SEATS

Churches and Social Organizations in E. Windsor Defeat Element

East Windsor, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP)—Losing the three seats they hold in the present council, the Communists in East Windsor suffered a smashing defeat at the polls yesterday, when an entire anti-communist slate was elected.

Following a vigorous campaign reported to have been financed direct from Moscow, the best the "Reds" could do in the council race was to place a poor 10th with but nine to be elected. All other Communist candidates seeking other offices were also defeated, with the exception of one, who was elected to the Public School Board.

A combined attack by the churches and social organizations in the city against the communistic slate during the campaign is believed responsible for their defeat together with their own action during election meetings in refusing to allow any but their candidates to speak. Meeting after meeting was broken upu by the "Red" sympathizers' boisterous booing and heckling.

The slimness of the majority given Mayor Tice was but a dull reflection of the seething interest that enveloped the whole city during the latter part of Monday. By evening, when the first returns straggled in to the awaiting officers at the city hall enthusiasm and interest had reached a fever peak. As the results of each polling booth were announced to the waiting crowd surging in and out of the building, hopes of each candidate rose and fell. During the earlier part of the evening, ex-Alderman Armstrong had gained a lead of from five at first to seventy votes later in the night. As each ballot box was brought in and the results counted, the tide of battle surged back and forth. When only three ballot boxes remained, Mayor Tice had then a lead over his opponent of just three votes. Then three boxes which were brought in, one of which was from Baldwin Ward, turned the tide and raised his majority to 77. Not until then did ex-Alderman Armstrong concede the victory to his opponent. He reached over the table in the council room at which the candidates sat, and shook his hand.

"It was a great fight, George."

On his first entry into the field for municipal honors, Richard D. Arnott, youthful and popular barrister, headed the aldermanic poll with a total of 2150, a vote larger than that given the Mayoralty candidates. He was followed by: William Harvey, 1607; Frank Domenico, 1435; Glencoe Thompson, 1408; Jesse W. Barlow, 1387; Harry Hill, 1375; Frank B. Foley, 1312; Thomas H. Marshall, 1256; Thomas Henry Cushing, 1225; Tom Y. Wills, 1120; Benjamin Sale, 1099; Dr. John G. Guthridge, 1098; William R. McCreary, 1058. Those defeated were: Frank Ward, 1061; William A. Woodley, 1006; G. Clinton Brickman, 982; Isaac Stephenson, 787; Kenneth Edgecombe, 740; Addison Thompson, 645, and Ernest J. Baldree 596.

Elected Members Heard

It was long after the time elected and defeated candidates for municipal office usually appeared before their audience on the stage of the city hall auditorium on election night and make their bow.

Since seven o'clock and before that even, a crowd of eight hundred or more had preempted all available seats in the large hall and had awaited expectantly. From then until nine their numbers had increasing by the billowing tide of humanity which surged into the hall and found standing room along the walls. By ten even standing room was at a premium. Corridors of the building were filled. The crowd overflowed into the side rooms, penetrated even behind the curtains at the side of the stage. They stood packed in a restless, steamy mass, waiting for the appearance of those for whom they had voted.

Downstairs in the lower section of the city hall the candidates assisted by the city officials were hard at work checking the numbers taken from the ballot slips. Upstairs the hand clapping which rolled from the aisles in steady thunder had increased in tempo. To the din was added the shrill whistlings of the more impatient. Feet stamped on the newly polished floor.

Some time previous Mr. H. B. Stock, city treasurer, with slip in hand, had given the crowd the unverified figures of elected candidates as taken down. As each name was called a fresh outbreak of cheering and whistling rent the hall.

"Bring on the candidates! Bring on the candidates!" A deep-toned chant commanded.

Finally ex-Mayor Morley P. Duff, chairman of the evening appeared. He was closely followed by Mayor Geo. O. Tice, and by the defeated candidate, ex-Alderman Harold Armstrong.

Previously both the Mayor and ex-Alderman Armstrong had shaken hands. "It has been a clean fight. No personalities. No regrets," they had told each other.

Real Fight

"You don't know what an election battle is," Mayor Tice had also told ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid, who had bounced into the council room after having attended a previous business meeting. "Wait until you get tied up in one like this," reminded Mayor Tice.

Ex-Mayor Reid smiled broadly and gave a congratulatory hand shake.

From the platform, ex-Mayor Morley Duff called off the names of the successful candidates. Each name called was a signal for rolling applause from various sections of the hall.

"And the defeated candidates..."

"We want Woodley!" came an answering roar.

As the tumult finally died Mayor Tice was introduced. His appearance was greeted by the friendliest ovation he has yet received. Contrary to his usual smiling and friendly expression, Mayor Tice did not smile. He motioned with a wave of his hand for silence. The burble of voices and cheers died down.

"If you were in my position what would you say?" he asked his audience. "I can only say two words in the English language. But they are sincere ones."

Mayor Tice in the briefest of messages, congratulated his opponent for the clean and even friendly manner in which the campaign for office had been carried on. "It was a fair fight," he said, simply.

Elected on Record

"During this election I have made many friends. I stood on my past record of three years as your mayor of this city. On that record you have given me the fourth term. I am very happy tonight."

After a pause: "I didn't want to inject this into any pre-election talk, but seven months ago tonight I passed through the darkest hour any man can experience. For the help that was so freely given me during that period I want to offer my public thanks. I wish especially to include the various labor groups in this. It is a dark hour, when a loved one is taken away."

"During the coming term I can only tell you that I will endeavor to carry on as I have done during the past three terms. But in this I need your help. I need the unity of the city. A city in which I hope no flag will ever be unfurled except that of the red, white and blue."

"I hope you will come to the city council during this coming year when you have any problems or troubles, as you have come to me during the past year. I shall try to do my best, and I know that council will help. Thank you."

Opponent Loudly Acclaimed

There was little difference between the reception accorded Mayor Tice and the one which greeted ex-Alderman Armstrong as he was introduced. The candidate for mayoralty honors walked to the front of the platform and then hesitated. He returned to the seat Mayor Tice had taken and offered his hand in a gesture of public congratulation. Both men shook hands and smiled.

"I congratulate you upon the Mayor you have elected, and also the council you have chosen to assist him in carrying on your coming year's work," said the defeated candidate, to his audience. "We fought, or tried to fight, a good clean fight. There are no regrets on either side. You people have chosen and perhaps your choice is best."

"However, I will reiterate, that I do not agree with acclamations to office. I believe that people should be encouraged to give an expression of opinion on the ones whom they trust to guard their affairs. I believe that annual elections should be encouraged."

"I want to thank every one who assisted me today and for the magnificent vote that was cast. I want to wish you all the very best compliments of the season, a merry Christmas to all and a happy new year during 1935."

Arnott Heads Poll

Richard D. Arnott, leading the aldermanic field, was greeted with a wave of cheering.

"I just want to thank you all for your wonderful vote and for the confidence you have given me. All I can say now is, that I can only repeat, that I will do my best to look after your interests during the coming year. I want to congratulate the rest of the council you have selected."

Wm. Harvey: "I sure do appreciate the wonderful support, you gave me today. Last year I headed the poll. This year I am in second place. But I am just as happy." Alderman Harvey extended the compliments of the season to all.

Alderman Frank Domenico: "One year ago I was elected by you to third place as alderman, and this year I am in the same place again. I was not on any committee last year, but if I am appointed to one this year I will work to the best of my ability to make it a success."

Glencoe Thompson: "All I can say is, that I thank you from the bottom of my heart. I've a bad cold tonight and can't talk very much, but will be able to do better next time. It was a wonderful fight all the way through."

J. W. Barlow: "This was my first appearance before you as a candidate for alderman, but I hope to be able to serve you so well this coming year, that I will be able to come back and make you want me next year. I want to congratulate your choice on picking out the kind of men to serve you that you did. I can only pledge my loyal support to you during the coming year."

Alderman Harry Hill: "This is my sixth term in council. I stand here with the same statements and the same promises that I have already given you and that is that I will try at all times to do my best and to continue doing this."

Alderman Thomas Marshall: "I just want to thank you for your magnificent vote. This is the fifth time I have come up before you for election, and you have chosen to keep me on. I have always tried to work the best of my ability and I will continue to do this."

Never Missed Meeting

Alderman Thomas Cushing: "I want to thank one and all for the excellent support that was given me today. This is my second time before you. Last year I served all through council and did not miss one council meeting or one committee meeting all year. I will try to keep that record up to the best of your interests. I wish you all a very merry Christmas and I hope all have goose for your Christmas dinner."

Alderman Benjamin Sale: "I want to thank every elector from the bottom of my heart for the splendid support you have given me and I will promise now to do my best during the coming year. Whether I am chairman of industries again this year or not, I will continue in my efforts to bring to Belleville every industry I can to help Belleville people."

Kenneth Edgecombe, defeated candidate: "I just want to express my thanks for the votes that were given me and the help that was also given so freely. This is my first time before you, but now that we're all acquainted, perhaps I will have better luck next time."

Isaac Stephenson (defeated): "Fellow citizens, I wish to thank you for all the assistance, that was given me today, and also my nominator and seconder. Last year I was an alderman for a period of five minutes or so, but this year I didn't do so good. Next year I will come before you and try again."

Addison Thompson (defeated): "I want to congratulate everynoe for electing the kind of a council they did. You made a good choice. As for myself there must have been some confusion in the names. It's no wonder the other Thompson got elected—he's got lots of 'dough'."

Ernest Baldree (defeated): "I'm not a bit disappointed over the outcome of this election. I feel, that the people have spoken and made their choice. I dont think you could have elected a better council than you have. I'm certainly pleased with the number of votes that have been cast today. I want to thank those who nominated and seconded me and also everyone who helped me along."

Several other successful and defeated candidates were called by the chairman, but they did not appear. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

NAPANEE BAILIFF QUITS HIS POST

30 Years Occupancy of Office Terminated, This Week

Napanee, Dec. 4—(CP)— George Greer resigned his position as Bailiff of the First and Second Division Courts for the County of Lennox and Addington.

Mr. Greer has held the position for 30 years succeeding Wesley Huff who at the age of over 90 years is still active and serves as court constable.

Mr. Greer was appointed by the Whitney Government and has since served continuously under the Hearst-Drury, Ferguson and Henry regimes.

PROPOSE DAFOE FOR NOBEL PRIZE

Believe Physician to Dionne Babes Should Be Recognized

New York, Dec. 4—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, country practitioner who gained world-wide renown through bringing the Dionne quintuplets into the world and successfully through the first six months of life, will be proposed for the Nobel prize by Dr. Elmer Lee, child specialist of New York.

Announcing yesterday that he would propose the name of the 51-year-old Ontario physician to the Nobel commission, Dr. Lee said recognition should go to Dr. Dafoe not only for his painstaking care of the quintuplets, but as a symbol to the thousands of general practitioners who are constantly meeting emergencies.

The New York specialist said he found strong sentiment for his proposal on the part of the public and among leaders of public opinion.

During his visit to New York this week, Dr. Dafoe will be the guest of Dr. Lee.

Aims Are To Bring United States Closer

London, Dec. 4.—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, was asked by a member of the House of Commons yesterday if he would continue his efforts to bring "our natural friends, the United States", closer within the comity of nations.

Sir John replied: "That has been the constant object of the British policy."

He did not answer, however, when Sir Alfred Knox asked him: "Also our Japanese friends?"

Division Court Clerk Dismissed at Napanee

Napanee, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP) — Notice was received by Fred B. Carscallen of his dismissal from the position of Clerk of the First Division Court for Lennox and Addington. He has held the position for three years receiving his appointment from the Henry government.

Patrick Gleeson has been appointed by the Hepburn government to succeed Mr. Carscallen.

BRITISH EXAMPLE BANKER'S THEME

Sir Charles B. Gordon Tells of Success of Efforts in Britain

Montreal, Dec. 4 (CP)—The inspiring example of Great Britain in trade revival was held before Canadians as a model in the presidential address of Sir Charles B. Gordon, delivered before the annual meeting of Bank of Montreal shareholders.

Sir Charles contrasted the unified efforts at business improvement in Great Britain with the economic experiments of the United States and said:

"It is a reasonable deduction that the wisest course for us to follow is to give single-minded devotion to reviving business by the methods which experience has shown to be fundamentally sound and not to interfere with the improvement now under way by applying new and untried theories and enacting hampering legislation."

In the fields of government and finance, the bank president ordered the following recommendations:

Legislation dealing with the whole subject of unemployment will have to be undertaken in Canada and the United States, as it is the greatest problem since the war.

Losses of the Canadian National Railways are the greatest deterrent to Canada's financial recovery and the first step in a proper co-ordination of all forms of co-ordination is the co-ordination of the railways. All forms of transportation should be regulated by a Dominion board.

In the present strong market for government bonds, governments should effect long-term rather than short-term borrowing.

Depositors may be considered as preferred shareholders of banks and no action should be taken that would further curtail the earning power of the commercial banks.

In the outlook for the future, Sir Charles said, there are many reasons that justify the hope for continuation of the betterment during the past year.

"There is comforting statistical evidence that our resources are so large and so varied that when one door of opportunity closes another always opens.

Unemployment and direct relief loom as a larger problem today in Canada and the United States than ever before, the bank president warned. There has always been unemployment but no legislation of an important character had been passed to deal with it.

DEATHS YESTERDAY

Rockglen, Sask.—Dr. Sylvester Moyer, 75, once prominent in Ontario political circles, Liberal nominee for South Waterloo in the 1911 general elections.

Toronto—Albert Kerr, 75, president of the Albert Kerr Hide Co., Ltd.

Winnipeg—Rev. A. C. Garrioch, 86, noted historian, author and churchman.

317 POLISH JEWS END PITEOUS SAGA

For Three Months Ship With Passengers Denied Entrance

Zaleszczki, Poland, Dec. 4 (CP-Havas)—Three hundred and seventeen Polish Jews ended a pathetic saga today when they crossed the frontier from Romania after wandering for three months in the Mediterranean and Black Sea, disowned by the world.

Placed aboard a Greek ship by a compatriot, also a Jew at Gynnia three months ago, the 317 departed with faith and hope for Palestine and a new life. But their papers were declared out of order by Palestine authorities and they were not permitted to land.

Then followed week after week of discouragements as the ship went from one Mediterranean port to another. Everywhere the Jews were denied entrance. Finally, in the Black Sea port of Constanta, Rumanian authorities permitted them to land after Poland had finally agreed to take them back, and they crossed the Polish border by train.

A sympathetic welcome was given them here today. Government officials and local Jewish groups greeted them.

Baroness Turnau, friend of War Minister Joseph Pilsudski, placed a large house at their disposal, while others gave them food.

The Polish police have opened an inquiry into the circumstances of their departure.

GUELPH STORE ROBBED

Guelph, Ont., Dec. 4—Burglars who entered Kenyon's booth on Gordon Street cleaned the establishment out entirely of its stock of about $200 worth of goods, police said.

LAYING OF MINES IS ROTARY THEME

Principal W. G. Spencer of Trenton Gives Illustrated Address

The making and laying of marine mines during the Great War was the subject of a very interesting address, illustrated by lantern slides given by W. G. Spencer, Principal of the Trenton Collegiate Institute. Pictures of destroyers convoying transports through the submarine zone were shown and the system described preliminary to the talk on mines in the making and in the laying. The process of manufacture was traced in word and picture in a very entertaining way, and the huge mines, some containing 300 pounds of "T.N.T." and other more powerful ones 1000 pounds illustrated a gruesome side of war seldom referred to. The ingenious mechanism of the marine mines was explained by the speaker, and the information given that it was not necessary for a ship to actually touch the mine to cause an explosion, proximity and the swirl of water caused by the ship were sufficient to detonate most marine mines.

Destroyers were converted into mine layers and the Germans even used submarines to sow their deadly T.N.T. eggs in the path of shipping.

Pictures of the German High Seas fleet anchored in Scapa Flow after the surrender were shown at the conclusion of the talk.

Mr. Spencer was introduced by Fred Deacon and Rotary appreciation was expressed by Past President Chas. Dolan and President Jamieson Bone.

Rev. Robert Hall, pastor of John Street Church, gave a brief but earnest talk on opportunities for social service which exist at the present time in Belleville and asked for the co-operation of the Rotary Club.

Rotarian Cliff Baker gave a three-minute talk on current topics stressing the fact that Canada led all nations in industrial and financial recovery in many lines. He also spoke particularly of the cheese industry in this district, its value to the community at large and the necessity of some means being devised to protect and encourage this industry which is today beset with handicaps which should be removed.

HEADS, SHE WINS!

Katherine Stuberg, 23-year-old descendant of three generations of wax figure artists, is shown putting the finishing touches on one of he: heads while a likeness of Mae West looks on. On the shelf are Will Rogers, Lon Chaney, Lewis Stone, the Prince of Wales and Gandhi. Recognize any others?

FATALLY INJURED WHILE THRESHING

H. Robson Whirled Several Times in Air by Machinery

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 4—Herbert Robson, 32, son of Richard Robson, a farmer, No. 3 Highway near Wallacetown, died in the Memorial Hospital from terrible head injuries received on Saturday.

Assisting at threshing in his father's barn his clothing was caught in a fly wheel of the threshing macine as he was climbing into the mow and was whirled around in the air several times before being released.

Robson was unmarried and lived at home.

DR. HAMBLIN AT DIONNE'S

Callander, Ont., Dec. 4.—Dr. G. P. Hamblin, senior interne of the Toronto Sick Children's Hospital, is relieving Dr. A. R. Dafoe, as physician to the Dionne quintuplets. Dr. Dafoe has left on a brief holiday, which will take him to several cities in the United States, where he will give lectures.

NO NEW ONTARIO LOANS

Toronto, Dec. 4—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn denied the province would go on the market for any further loans this calendar year. A report Saturday stated a loan of $25,000,000 was contemplated.

"Everything is in the clear until I return in January," he stated.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX BILL

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP) — Income tax collections for the first eight months of this fiscal year, ended Nov. 30, amounted to $52,233,246, according to a statement issued by Minister of National Revenue, R. C. Matthews. This shows a net increase of $446,900 compared with the same period last year when collections totalled $51,786,345.

MOTHER OF NINE SWEARS TO FACTS

Troubled with Indigestion and Constipation for Years Relates under Oath how Fruit-a-tives Helped Bring Her New Health and Energy.

Once, Mrs. Normandin, Montreal, Quebec, suffered so from indigestion that life must have been a burden. Now she is so full of life and energy that she can go to dances two or three times a week. Because Mrs. Normandin generously wants others to benefit as she did, she graciously consented to give a statement of her experience and swear to it before a notary so that you would be sure of its truth. In her statement, Mrs. Normandin says,—

"I was sleepy and dizzy after meals. I suffered badly from indigestion. Everything I ate formed a lump in the stomach and gas which caused heartburn. I found that by taking Fruit-a-tives, my condition greatly improved. My indigestion and constipation disappeared and I felt much better. I do not hesitate in recommending Fruit-a-tives to any one. I am 36 years of age and the mother of nine children. I can go out to a dance two or three times a week and still be lively and energetic all day."

Remember, Fruit-a-tives is different. It has for over a quarter of a century brought lasting relief to thousands of men and women from indigestion, constipation, sick-headaches, etc. That is why, today, Fruit-a-tives is the largest selling remedy of its kind in Canada.

Try Fruit-a-tives right now. See how their tonic effects will give you new health, new youth, new happiness.

Copy of Mrs. Normandin's sworn statement will be sent on request. Write Fruitatives Limited, Ottawa, Canada.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Municipal elections in Belleville, brought several results: the return of Mayor George O. Tice for a fourth term, and the closest mayoralty contest in over twenty years. In the aldermanic contest Alderman Woodley, a veteran of twenty years in the council, missed a seat in the council by a small number of votes.

It is many years since the only other fourth term was granted to a mayor of this city, to the late John Wesley Johnson. In this regard Mayor Tice has equalled the city record.

Until the third last poll was reported there seemed some doubt as to the result but the last poll returns made the mayor's seat secure.

The defeated candidate ex-Alderman Armstrong made a very fine bid for office in one of the largest votes ever polled in the city.

In the aldermanic field, the old council lost two members, Alderman Woodley, chairman of the executive, and Alderman Brickman. Two members of the council did not enter the contest, Alderman Donahue and Alderman Harker. New members entering the council are Richard D. Arnott, barrister; Glencoe C. Thompson, baker; former school trustee J. W. Barlow and Dr. John Guthridge, who made his first bid for election yesterday.

Two important offices will await new chairmen in consequence of the defeat of Alderman Woodley and the retirement of Alderman Donahue. The chairmanship of the executive is the post in the public mind second only to that of the chief magistracy. This is an office which Mr. Woodley has held for many years and will likely be keenly sought. Public Works will also demand another chairman, the post is vacated by Alderman Donahue who has been in office for a number of years. The chairmanship of light is left open by Alderman Harker, and of printing by Alderman Brickman. Considerable shifting of chairmanships may be expected as a consequence.

In this year's event the entire interest centred on the city council, as the school trusteeships went by acclamation.

In the polling of over four thousand votes, electors did themselves honor. The vote might still be ~~larger but~~ yesterday's achievement is a tribute to the two candidates for mayor as well as to the interest of the citizens in the constitution of their council.

LONG MUNICIPAL SERVICE

In city councils records are brief as compared with what they are in some townships where a man may hold a seat for very many years, but Alderman W. A. Woodley has established a city record with about twenty years of service.

Alderman Woodley served from the year 1909 to 1921 except for one year's absence. In 1928 he returned to council and has been continuously a member since that time.

For more than a decade he has been known as the veteran of the city council and for the greater part of his long time of service he has occupied the chairmanship of executive and finance.

He has been acting mayor on a number of occasions and has always been an interested student of municipal polictics. He is given credit as knowing the rules of order better than any other citizen.

In the passage of the years Alderman Woodley is the only member of the council dating from long before the war, to be exact, just twenty-five yeats ago in the year he started, 1909. He was a member of the city body five years before the first permanent road pavement was laid down. About the time he was first elected Belleville began to grow and since the population has gone up greatly. Twenty odd years ago the number of aldermen was nine, one for every thousand of population but today it is thirteen, since the population has increased.

Alderman Woodley has seen every face in the council change, he has witnessed vast changes in the city, he has seen a new civic spirit born, he has seen the institution of a progressive industrial and publicity policy for the city. Indeed Alderman Woodley's municipal record coincides with the revival in the city which began about the year 1910.

Alderman Woodley has been so long a member that the voters probably just thought he was sure of election and his supporters took his election for granted. It will not surprise his friends to see him again a candidate for office in the years ahead.

ECHOES OF WEDDING

Echoes of the royal wedding of Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Kent are still heard.

The importance of a wedding in which the solemn obligations of marriage were stressed in the midst of pomp and heraldry has not been forgotten by such churchmen as the Rev. Dr. Dyson Hague of Toronto, who has written to point out that about this wedding there was none of "the wanton frivolity so common in many Canadian weddings." The earnestness of the wedding was impressive.

That the money expended on this royal event was justified is held by the great bulk of the people on the ground that it gave needed employment at a time when employment is not yet satisfactory and because it created expressions of joy and enthusiasm and a spirit of optimism worth much more to the people than the money the function entailed. The people enjoyed the heraldry and pageantry of the wedding as they would not have enjoyed anything else. It gave them a mental and spiritual tonic such as the world not often gets today. Vast sums of money are expended on entertainment, sports, theatres, and so forth even in times of business stagnation and there is every reason for believing that this wedding expenditure is not only not wasted but that it is worth much more than it cost. The same thing may be said of the outside trappings of this event—the English speaking people of the world got more out of it than it cost them. Even if heraldry on ordinary occasions seems a little out of place in this work-a-day world, that does not mean that the love of the people for pageantry is a mark of insincerity. Most nations do like show and most people like a little pomp, in proof of which one has only to think of the expenditure and the show that most families go to when putting on a wedding. And they are right.

If the modern world were stripped to what some call essentials, this would be a bleak bare unclad world which few would care to inhabit.

It is well for the world that there are many persons who do believe that expenditure in this regard is justified in its results on the mind and spirit of the people.

And again the world has not ceased to think of the young bridesmaids, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose who have drawn a world of attention to these very little girl-like dames who were children as any others in the land and in the empire though they were in the midst of pomp and gilt and glitter. It was their first big day and they no doubt have not ended their comments upon it even yet.

CANADIAN IS GRAIN CHAMPION

Another Canadian has been crowned wheat king—John B. Allsop of Wembley, Alberta. His victory at the North American contest at the Chicago Grain Show is the 20th. championship to come to Canada since 1911.

Allsop comes from the famed Peace River Valley where most championship wheat is grown. "Reward" variety won the award. The reserve championship goes to L. E. Peterson of Victor, Montana, who comes from the part of the United States which alone has been able to wrest the grain crown from Canada since 1919.

Canadian climate, Canadian soil and Canadian farming have done remarkably well.

NINE CENTS A DAY

The approximately three billion dollars spent for public education in the United States for 1932 figures out at about nine cents a day for every person of voting age. That is, the total cost of one generation's effort to pass on through its schools to the next what it thinks is essential for the common good is for every one of the nearly 75,000,000 less than the price of a daily round-trip ride in a New York subway or street car. Education, as the wartime Minister of Education said, is "the eternal debt of maturity to childhood and youth." It is a debt on which no moratorium can be declared without a loss to the creditor child.

If one assume that the cost of public education in 1932 was the full value of the product, it is to be noted that at least three times as many persons were employed in the schools there were in that same year in the motor vehicle industry, the value of whose product was stated to be but a little more than that "produced" by the schools—$3,468,797,980. No one will content that a people who can absorb these values in motor cars cannot afford to spend as large an amount in the education of its children.

The nine cents a day is the price of a continuing and advancing democracy for it is hardly conceivable that it could endure without such "schooling". This does not include the school plants, which amount in valuation to only 3 or 4 per cent. of the tangible wealth, nor does it take account of the great contribution of private institutions, which would add two cents a day to the nine. Certainly no investment could yield more for the public good if health is included—and education in hygiene and health habits is now an accepted part of the school program. The teachers have an ever more difficult and important task as the experiences of the race lengthen and grow more complex and its problems more perplexing. Whatever is needed effectively to equip them to carry from generation to generation the best wherever it comes to be, it is democracy's first duty to her children to provide.—New York Times.

THE ROYAL WEDDING

If anyone doubted the attachment of English people to the Royal Family, or their love for domesticity, they have only to look at the photographs of the crowds that stood to welcome Prince George's fiancee, Princess Marina, on her arrival in England. The delight with which the news of the Royal marriage was received gives some measure of the respectful regret felt by the King's subjects that the Prince of Wales has not married. His Royal Highness is forty. If the news of Prince George's marriage is received with enthusiasm, that of the Prince of Wales would be acclaimed with an even deeper joy.—National Review, New York.

SIDELIGHTS

GRAVE and GAY supervised by The Lamplighter

NOW LET ME WANDER

Now let me wander,
I have staid too long
Tending the bright flame
In the house of song!

I would put dreaming
Out of mind for a time,
Leaving sweet measures
And leaving rhyme.

Regions scarce guessed at
Offer me new lore,
Now let me wander
Through this strange world's core.

Here are no fancies
On the breezes tossed;
Life's bitter battles
Are won here, or lost.

Beauty of woman,
Ancient right and wrong . . .
Then, when I weary,
Glad return to song.

—Aline Michaelis.

WHEN THE NAVY CAME ASHORE and licked the Army in a pitched battle at Philadelphia, Saturday, history was made. The Army is supposed to be invincible on land while the Navy rules the sea, but the salty tars of the U.S.A. Navy, battling for the possession of a muddy pigskin, held the Army stalwarts at all points, winning by three to nothing in this great annual football classic. However, it was a great gridiron battle between two worthy teams of young men in training for the two great branches of national defense.

SHOOTING BANDITS ON SIGHT like mad dogs, the policy adopted by United States police authorities is working out well—saving a lot of tedious trials, much money, and a dodging of justice through manipulation of the law's devious twists. Since the new order of shoot on sight and shot to kill went into effect twenty desperadoes of the Southwest and Midwest have been wiped out by the guns of Federal agents or police co-operating with Federal men in the intensive drive against murderers, bank robbers and kidnappers which started eighteen months ago. In the gun battles which ensued several police officers have been slain and a number wounded, but this only makes the manhunt keener and lessens the chances of the public enemies still at large to be taken alive in the final roundup. This is a throwback to the days when the Vigilantes restored law and order in far-flung pioneer communities where desperadoes had taken charge and instituted an era of murder and robbery. The sight of known criminals hanging by the neck in public places was found very effective by the Vigilantes who went on the principle of hanging first, trial after.

Little Pamela was not very well, so mummie asked the doctor to call in to see her.

"She certainly looks rather pale," he said. "Let me see your tongue, dear."

Pamela showed just the tiniest tip of a small pink tongue.

"Oh," laughed the doctor, "I must see more than that, little girl; put it right out"

"I—c-cant's," faltered the child.

"You can't?" echoed the doctor. "And why not?"

"'Cause it's joined on to me at the back, and it won't come out!"

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH. 1914.

The new pipe organ for Bridge Street Methodist Church has arrived and is being put in place. It a high grade instrument in every respect.

The handsome new public library at Stirling is being pushed towards completion by the contractor, Mr. L. E. Allen of Belleville. The work of interior decoration, which is being done by Messrs. Atkins and Cochrane of Belleville, is well under way.

The annual meeting of Oxford Lodge No. 17 S.O.E. was held recently and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Past President, R. Parmenter; President, E. J. Folwell; Vice-President, W. J. Savage; Fin. Sec., John Fenn; Treasurer, F. D. Ford; Chaplain, R. G. H. Barlow; Committee, T. Weymark, J. L. Simpson, H. T. York and J. S. Reeder; Surgeon, Dr. E. O. Platt; Inside Guard, W. J. Bennett; Outside Guard, Jas. Riggs; Rec. Sec., George Edwards; Auditors, H. Lennox, J. L. Simpson and W. J. Ridley; Lodge Trustees, R. Oliphant, George Edwards and James Riggs; Juvenile Advisory Board, the executive officers for 1915 and J. L. Simpson, P. K. Fisher and W. Armitage.

Ald. Sulman, they say, is surely to have opposition in the Mayoralty contest, and fairly strong opposition too, but Lor' bless you, it will be as easy as taking candy from a baby for popular "Charlie" to win.

Mr. W. P. S. Johnson, son of ex-Mayor J. W. Johnson, is home on a brief visit.

Mr. J. W. Bengough, the well-known cartoonist is the guest of Mr. R. Mathison at the D & D. Institution while in the city.

Operations at the Melrose oil well have closed down for the winter. The directors state that operations will be resumed in the spring. The depth of the well is now 1857 feet.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH. 1894.

Ice is forming slowly in the river.

Temperature this morning was 16 degrees above zero.

Lumbering operations are quite brisk this season.

Wolves are reported to be unusually numerous in the back country this year.

The city milkmen began on Saturday the new system of delivering milk late on Saturday for use on Sunday.

The choir of St. Thomas' Church has improved very much recently under the direction of Mrs. (Col.) Campbell.

Mr. James Deegan, carpenter, left today for South Africa. The young man is a nephew of Mr. Thos. Hanley and Mr. Daniel Deacon of this city.

Mr. Fred Abraham who established the Canadian Horseman in Toronto about a year ago, has sold out and has returned to Belleville.

Mr. R. R. Gregg, who has been in the Northwest during the summer and early fall and is now on route to his home in England, is in the city the guest of Mr. Tannahill.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH, 1884.

At an enthusiastic meeting held in the law office of Mr. J. Parker Thomas, it was decided to organize a toboggan club in West Belleville and to build a slide on that side of the river—near the residence of Mr. J. P. Thompson on the Trenton Road near the bend in the road. The following officers were elected: President, Mr. N. B. Falkiner; Vice-President Mr. R. Mathison; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. Parker Thomas; Executive Committee, Messrs. J. P. Thompson, J. H. Simpson, H. Yeomans, Sills, Brunneau, G. H. Pope, Prof. Coleman and Prof. Green. The name selected was the Quinte Tobogganing Club. Blue will be the distinguishing color.

Mr. Charles G. Kelso of Toronto is spending a short time in the city.

The ice on the river and bay has been made quite strong by the recent freezing. Groups of skaters can be seen at almost any point indulging in that exhilarating pastime.

The slide for the Tuque Cardinale Tobogganing Club near the cricket ground, Dundas Street East, is nearing completion. It is expected that it will be ready for use by the end of the week.

REASONS WHY MIND BECOMES INEFFICIENT

Confusion is a Danger Signal And Needs Attention

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Pschology

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The mind is an orderly and systematic piece of machinery which has the same operative laws as any other organ of the body. And like any other organ, it can function badly! so badly that, for the time being, it ceases to be an efficient controlling and directing mechanism.

One may say that our thought processes are purposeful in their activity that they have goals toward which they work—in short, that our thinking progresses and gets somewhere.

How is this accomplished? What causes us to think in a rambling, disjointed and confused way?

Scientists claim that the so-called "pleasure-pain principle" is the balance wheel that does all this for us. It is this principle in operation which continually influences the individual and determines what he shall or shall not do.

That is, we want to do, and actually do, the things that give pleasure, while we do not do the things that we think will yield discomfort or pain.

In childhood we get spanked or punished in some way if we do wrong. As adults we learn that rigid standards also prevail in the world outside the nursery, and that we will be rewarded if we do right and punished if we do wrong.

After a time, of course we react to outside influences automatically. We do not have to think out every step we take or ponder over everything we do. We judge, unconsciously, what courses promise to yield pleasurable satisfaction and what painful discomfort.

As a rule, when we fulfill our instincts, we experience a very distinct feeling of pleasure. Eating is the satisfying of the nutrition instinct. Romance is the satisfying of the sentimental or reproduction urge.

On the other hand, we experience unmistakeable pain when an instinct is thwarted. Disappointment in a love affair is an example.

When the individual can no longer discriminate whether a given experience is rousing within him sensations of pleasure or sensations of pain, he becomes consciously confused and is in danger of what we call a nervous breakdown.

He is like a ship that has lost its rudder. He begins to drift aimlessly, losing interest and ambition. He feels that there is nothing to live for. He doesn't know what he wants. He has lost the standards which yield reward for behavior of a certain sort with a pleasurable emotion and which inflict discomfort or pain when he acts otherwise.

Confusion is always a danger signal. Under such conditions thinking may become more and more muddled, and emotional depression is bound to follow. Should the element of fear enter the individual is in a really critical state.

It is well to get back to fundamentals every now and then, to study tried and attested scientific principles, especially when they concern so vitally our own happiness and well-being. The pleasure-pain principle is one of these. Whether or not it is "on the job" has a lot to do with the efficiency of the mind as well as its contentment.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Develop the habit of eating fish more than once a week, because fish is good for you. Fish is readily digested because it is soft and the digestive juices of the stomach and intestines mix with it readily. Besides, fish can be prepared in many different appetizing ways. Always be careful, however, that the fish you eat is absolutely fresh.

ARMED MAN GETS $12

Guelph, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)— An armed man entered the store of Charles Lambert of Crewson's Corners and pointing a revolver at the proprietor, demanded money, Provincial police said today. The bandit took all that was in the till, $12 in cash and fled in a waiting automobile.

Dreadfully Painful RHEUMATISM IN NECK AND HEAD

T-R-C's brought great relief in one day

A neighbor's timely gift of T-R-C's (Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules) proved a great blessing to Mrs. Jos. Castonguay, Otter Lake, P.Q. Read her experience. "About 3 years ago I had been in bed for a week suffering from a dreadful pain up the back of my neck and on top of my head. The doctor and the priest told me I had rheumatism. It was a very sharp pain, but not like an ordinary headache. I was very sick and suffering greatly."

"A friend, Mrs. Lalonde, brought me eight T-R-C's. I took them two after each meal and two more at bedtime. Next day I was able to get up and do a big day's work. Always a few doses of T-R-C's have got rid of pain for me, whenever I have had an attack since."

Deep-rooted, stubborn cases of Rheumatism require patient and correct use of T-R-C's for a reasonable length of time. But you are sure of relief if you persist with T-R-C's. Repeatedly they have given safe, speedy relief from Acute Rheumatic suffering: also from Sciatica, (stabbing pain in hip and thigh), Painful Neuritis, Neuralgia (including Tic Douloureux) and Lumbago (Lame Back). No harmful or habit-forming drugs.

T-R-C's do this—enter the blood stream and help your body throw off the misery-causing poisons which have accumulated in your blood. When these go, health and happiness return. T-R-C's are 50c and $1 everywhere.

CAROL CAREFULLY GUARDED

Bucharest fairly bristled with guns and glistening bayonets during the rites attendant on the recent opening of parliament, and as King Carol and Crown Prince Michael rode in state through the streets of the city, to officiate at the beginning of the legislative session every precaution was taken to guard them from the fate of the late King Alexander and French Foreign Minister Barthou. Despite the precautions a retired army officer succeeded in making his way to the King's auto as it was in motion, to present a petition to him. He was knocked to the ground by a cavalry officer who feareda repitition of the Marseilles assassinations. Investigation proved the officers' intentions peaceful, and when the facts were presented to His Majesty he arranged for hospital treatment and a competence for the ex-soldier. King Carol was photographed here as he entered the parliament building.

ODETTE PRAISED BY MR. HEPBURN

"We Are Very Satisfied With Him" is Word of Premier

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Tribute to E. C. Odette, Ontario Liquor Commissioner, came today from Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn as he denied reports of a change in the Liquor Control Board.

"Mr. Odette is doing wonderfully well and we are very satisfied," the Premier said.

The Commissioner's job is more difficult now than formerly because he has the added task of handling the issuing of beer sale authorities. Appointment of Arnold Smith, director of hotels and personnel for the Board, has been a great help to Mr. Odette because he is able to look after a mass of detail with which the Commissoner had to deal, Mr. Hepburn stated.

Colds Leave Impurities in the Blood

That is one reason why you are often tired, listless and weak after a cold.

To disperse these impurities, take a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup Compound of Hypophosphites.

Fellows' Syrup contains the "Vital 3" (calcium, phosphorus, iron) and other blood purifiers that science has proved to be effective in helping to reduce blood impurities. It aids in enriching the blood corpuscles with new energy and vitality.

The restorative effect of the "Vital 3" on blood, nerves, muscles and bones is so vigorous that you'll surprise yourself with your quick "pick-up" after taking a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup. 29G

"TAKE ON SOMEBODY YOUR OWN SIZE"

Sandwich, Ont., Dec. 4. — When Leonard Tilley, Colchester North farm youth, promised to keep the peace, he was placed upon a two-year suspended sentence in police court. He was charged with assaulting and harming his father, Herbert Tilley. In the evidence it was alleged he had also "taken a crack at his sister". The husky youth had been in court before charged with striking his mother.

"You had better reserve that fighting spirit until you are a little older and take on somebody your own size," counselled Magistrate W. A. Smith.

STALIN MOURNS AT KIRKOFF'S BIER

First Assassination in More Than Fifteen Years

The possibility that an external plot was back of Kiroff's slaying appeared dissipated by an official announcement that the assassin is a Russian and a former Communist.

A government communique said the assassin was Leonid Nicolieff, 30, formerly employed by the Workers and Peasant Inspection Bureau.

Nicolieff, the announcement said, has confessed the crime and is still being questioned. No intimation was given as to his motive or present political affiliations.

Flags were placed at half staff throughout the Soviet Union in honor of Kiroff, the Third Communist leader to be assassinated here since the establishment of Bolshevism and the first in more than fifteen years.

PRINCESS MARINA TEA AT TWEED

Novel Entertainment Arranged by Women's Bible Class

Tweed, Dec. 4—An interesting programme was given at the Y.P.S. of Tweed United Church on Monday evening under the direction of the Cultural and Recreational group of which Miss Bessie Gordon is the leader. Miss Margaret Moffat told in a very interesting way the story of a piece of glass: A short play, "Betty Beats Them to It," was given by the members of the C. G. I.T. Miss E. Stuart B.A., of the high school staff gave an interesting account of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home." Two fine selections "In the Garden" and "Down by the Old Mill Stream" were sung by a male quartette composed of Messrs. H. W. Clark, J. B. Rollins, Frank Tummon and Evan Tummon. The second edition of the "Monthly Parrot" was read by the editor, Miss Jeanne Richardson.

The A.Y.P.A. held their regular meeting on Wednesday evening during which the rector, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne gave an interesting illustrated talk on Westminster Abbey. As the wedding of Prince George and Princess Marina took place in this historic spot on the following day, the members were deeply interested in the excellent talk.

The second of a series of "Talkies" was given in Tweed on Thursday evening under the auspices of Tweed veterans who are using this method of raising funds. In spite of the wet night a large crowd was present. Interesting vaudeville acted were interjected between the reels.

A novel "Princess Marina" tea was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. H. E. Wagar under the auspices of the Women's Adult Bible Class of Tweed United Church. As the guests entered they were met at the door by Miss Annie Frost who formally introduced them to the royal bridal couple Prince and Princess Marina and Princess Elizabeth. The figures representing these royal personages were prepared by Mrs. W. E. J. Prust and were very realistic. An excellent supper was served to a very large number.

Reduction in the various branches of the forestry department, which was forecast some time ago has been put into effect. The local branch has been one to suffer and Mr. E. Beach for two years stenographer was notified of his dismissal to take effect on December 1st. Mr. Beach has given excellent service and the necessity for this move is regretted.

A splendid crowd turned out to the hockey dance held on Wednesday night in the opera house by the junior hockey club. Jack Grant and the Aces orchestra of Deseronto dispensed excellent music and everyone had a good time. Hockey sticks adorned the walls with streamers of white and blue crepe paper. Miss Jean Richardson, who is an artist possessing great natural ability, drew clever sketches on the blackboard. Visitors were present from the neighbouring towns and surrounding district

Word was received that Rev. W. T. Beattie of Nanaimo, B.C., had passed away in Toronto on Wednesday. Rev. Beattie had been chosen to be the guest speaker at the anniversary services of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held here two weeks ago, but was prevented by illness which resulted in his untimely death.

TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT STARTED

Charles T. P. Ulm And Companions on Way to Honolulu

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 4 (CP) — Flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm, and two companions flew toward Honolulu today on the first leg of a trans-Pacific flight to Australia.

The air adventurers roared away from Oakland in their silver and orange monoplane "Star of Australia" at 3.41 p.m. (Pacific standard time) yesterday, expecting to cover the 2,408 miles to Honolulu in about 18 hours.

The liner President Coolidge advised the Globe wireless station at San Francisco, that it made a contact with the plane at 1.30 a.m. (P.S.T.) the liner said it believed the plane was about 400 miles to the east of its position, or about 1,000 miles from Honolulu.

Lieutenant Ulm, co-pilot George Littlejohn, and navigator J. L. Skilling, took off in the face of warnings by the weather bureau, that they may encounter frequent showers near Hawaii and unsettled cross-winds.

From Honolulu Lieutenant Ulm plans to hop to Fanning Island; then to Fiji and on to Australia.

AMERICA IS ALL TO BE REBUILT

W. J. Cameron, of The Ford Company Sees Much Reconstruction

Detroit, Dec. 4—(AP)—A close associate of Henry Ford and official of the Ford Motor Company, William J. Cameron, said in an address that the six hour day will come to industry and suggested that "a rational conception of money" might be the key to the industrial rejuvenation.

Cameron declared the six hour day for industry must come "because work is plentiful and production is ample" and not, he said, "out of a despairing belief that scarcity and poverty will be the general rule."

"This country is overflowing with work awaiting to be done." said Cameron, "Its entire equipmen, has become obsolete in the last five years and will have to be replaced. Everything is out of date. "America is also to be rebuilt.

Declaring that Henry Ford considered instituting the six hour day seven years ago, Cameron said: "We believed then and believe now that shorter work-day is coming."

"Runt of a Pig" Starts Action

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP) — James Parr, farmer of Camden, and his neighbor, Mrs. Coulter have gone to court over a dispute over half shares of the value of a sow. The farmer, charged Mrs. Coulter with the stealing the sow, was committed for trial following preliminary hearing yesterday and immediately appeared before Judge McFadden to renew his plea of not guilty, confirm his request for a jury trial and get his release on bail of $200.

He claims the pig was sold in a business deal. "A runt of a pig, weighing about 70 pounds," was the way it was described by the witness who said he bought it for $6.

MRS. DON WILSON BABY DROWNED VERDICT GIVEN

Strange Sequence of Deaths in Port Hope Closed by Inquest

NOTE IS READ

Foster Parents Say Their Daughter Killed By Gossip

PORT HOPE, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP)—The strange sequence of deaths, that wiped out a family of three in less than a month remained cloaked in mystery today.

A coroner's jury, investigating the death of Mrs. Donald Wilson returned an open verdict last night after hearing how the woman's body had been found near that of her baby on the edge of Lake Ontario on November 24th.

Mrs. Wilson disappeared Nov. 22 after she had been questioned for more than two hours in connection with the arsenic poison death of her young husband, publisher and editor of the Port Hope Guide.

The car Mrs. Wilson had been driving was found near the place where the bodies were washed up by breakers on the shores of Port Granby, 11 miles from here. In the car was a note which read:

"Dear Mother and Dad: "I know, that Don got hold of some rat poison. Gossip in this town has killed me. There is nothing for Carol Emily (the 21-months-old daughter)to live for. Please bury me in the family plot."

Death By Drowning

The jury found Mrs. Wilson and her baby both come to their death by drowning in Lake Ontario, at Port Granby, between six p.m. on Nov. 23 and nine a.m., Nov. 24.

The jury returned the verdict after deliberating half an hour.

Three days ago another jury heard evidence in connection with the death of Mrs. Wilson's publisher husband and found he had died from arsenic administered by some person or persons unknown. It recommended investigation be continued.

Mrs. Blake Symons, foster-mother of Mrs. Wilson, was called to the witness stand to testify last night that the young widow had complained of "some gossip". She added that "some had said Carol Emily was not Donald's child."

"Did she tell you, whose child it was?" asked W. B. Common, representing the Attorney-General's Department.

"Why Donald's of course—it could not be anyone else's," she replied.

Blake Symons, visibly shaken, recalled that Mrs. Wilson had "not seemed upset, when she left the house" the day of her disappearance. He had become alarmed, however, when inquiries later had failed to disclose her whereabouts.

Mrs. Wilson wept frequently, Jean Boswel., maid at the Wilson home, testified. She had not confided in the servant beyond mentioning "a lot of gossip". "I believe that was what made her nervous that day," the maid said.

STILL THEY COME those fur-trimmed suits. A smart model is in dark green woolen, the jacket tight fitting and fastened all the way in front with tiny fabric-covered buttons. There is a wide, rippling square collar of dark, lustrous mink.

INITIAL STEPS to smartness are to be found in those huge mirror glass initials that look so well on velvet or satin bags. A square envelope bag of shirred black velvet is just the background for three huge mirror glass letters in black designs.

DON'T DROP navy blue in the Winter, if it is your favorite color. Many furriers are featuring coats of lapin, mole or kidskin dyed in navy blue. Shoe shops are showing blue kid and suede shoes, too.

STICK A FEATHER through your felt hat. A hat of oxford grey felt with a high, folded crown has a large quill of bright, red lacquered feathers stuck through the crown, the feather part is towards the back.

A NEW FACE has been chosen for many furs, as new methods of using dyes makes grand new colored furs. Mole in blue, green or violet is being used for many of the smart new short jackets made to go with cloth or wool dresses.

IT ISN'T FLATTERY alone that makes those soft, pretty feather capes so popular, it is because they are light and warm, too. A new ensemble is of pink lace and tulle for the frock, while the wrap is a very long, wide cape of marabou dyed pink and done on a pink net foundation.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers introduce "The Continental" in the merry musical comedy "The Gay Divorcee" coming to the Belle, Wednesday.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IT'S BUSINESS—ALWAYS BUSINESS—WITH HIM

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The boy friend, who is 19, broke our Wednesday date because of "business". Later one of his friends told me that he went to his ex-girl friend's house, but he told me he attended to the business and then took in a show. I got sore, not because he lied to me, but because whenever I'm with him he only buys a bag of popcorn, and never mentions shows to me.

This boy plays in an orchestra, and after a performance he promised to take me home, but he failed to do this. One of his friends told me that he had to go somewhere and inquire about business. It's always business, business, with him. However, I forgave him that time. Did I do right? Shall I keep up my friendship or drop him? I heard he intended to drop me, but he denies this. I'm 16 years of age.

Ginger.

It has been my experience that when girls of 16 take a friendship of this kind too seriously and drop the boy, they're likely to regret it. All said and done, 16 is not very far removed from childhood, and 19 is not even voting age. Why take this affair any more to heart than those earlier quarrels, when you probably made faces over the back fence at someone who made you good and "mad".

As far as the popcorn treats are concerned, it's probable a boy of 19 cannot do any better. And when he goes to the movies alone, he can sit high and take a less expensive seat than he would like to offer you.

WANTS TO CHEER UP GIRL FRIEND'S BEAU

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Without being real sneaky and disloyal, would it be all right for me to try to cheer him up?

J. L. C.

By all means, cheer up the young man whose girl went to a dance with another. You do not tell me that these young people are engaged, and that leaves them free to accept invitations from whomever they please. There is no more reliable method of reconciling estranged sweethearts than to have a third party do a little "cheering up."

This will also answer "Worried" and "May S."

WANTS TO CHANGE GIRLS WITHOUT HARD FEELINGS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 21 years old and have been going with a girl whom I shall call Violet for over a year. When we first met, she appealed to me very much, and I thought I was going to love her. But another girl whom I shall call Marietta, and whom I have known for three years, has come back, and we discovered we have really never loved anyone but each other.

I want to tell Violet about this in the nicest way possible and not hurt her feelings, and I don't want to put Marietta in an uncomfortable position, either.

David.

It's a pretty difficult thing to tell a girl that you've shifted your affections to another, but it's the only sensible thing to do under the circumstances. Your grandfather would probably have gone on with the affair, even if he didn't love Violet, but people haven't those foolish ideas about "honor" in the present day. In fact, they'd think it was highly dishonorable to marry without love.

If you find it embarrassing to tell Violet that you no longer love her, why not write her a letter and say that you think it would be a mistake for you both to continue as sweethearts, but that you hope you can always count on her friendship.

Another young man has written me along these lines. This answer is for him, too.

PICTON

CONCERT IS GIVEN BY MASSED BANDS

Belleville Band Contributes to Splendid Program

Picton.—Mr. Jim Kelly of Point Petre and Mr. Tom Kelly of Black Creek, both of whom have been taking treatment at Kingston, continue seriously ill at their homes.

Mr. Harry Raynor of Toronto was a Picton visitor on Thursday.

On Tuesday, December 4th, at 9.30 a.m., the seventh annual convention of Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association opened in the Oddfellows' Hall. Problems of the cheese-making industry and their remedy will be discussed by prominent dairymen, business men and bankers who are in attendance from many points from Toronto to Kingston. There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions held during the two days of the convention, which closes with a banquet in the Parish Hall, followed by a splendid programme by special entertainers, on Wednesday evening.

On Friday afternoon, Santa Claus with a band-waggon and band, two bears, a lively monkey and Mickey and Minnie Mouse, visited Wellington, Bloomfield and Picton. In each town throngs of children gathered to welcome Santa. The bears rode bicycles, Mickey and Minnie performed antics, the band played rollicking music and Santa beamed on everyone. At six o'clock Santa and the animals appeared at the upper windows of the C.D.S. and provided a jolly "candy scramble" for the children. On Saturday morning from 9 till 11, Santa welcomed his small friends in toyland, received their letters, and presented each with a picture book.

About thirty members of the Sodality of St. Gregory's Church, gathered at the home of Mrs. Arthur Pettingill, a recent bride, on Friday evening. Cards formed the evening's amusement after which a dainty lunch was served. The guests presented Mrs. Pettingill with a damask table-cloth and napkins, with best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

Mr. Gordon Dulmage of South Marysburgh, is seriously ill in P. E. C. Hospital, suffering from pneumonia, following an operation for appendicitis.

The Regent Theatre had even standing capacity taxed to the utmost on Sunday evening, when a massed band concert was given by Picton Band and Belleville Municipal Band. The stage of the theatre was lighted with two tall standard lights and decorated with baskets of russet baby 'mums and ferns. His Honour Judge E. H. McLean made a very humorous chairman, and brought many a laugh from the audience by his wit, which was often matched against that of Bandmaster Sid Lockyer. Picton Band in their scarlet and blue uniforms, occupied the stage for the first half of the programme after which they changed places with Belleville Band, who delighted the Picton audience with their delightfully varied and well-rendered programme. Mayor Cox tendered a civic welcome to the visiting band who made a splendid appearance in smart blue and grey uniforms.

The programme consisted, "The Washington Post March" and an overture, "The Mill in the Forest" by the massed bands; "Over the Waves", an accordeon solo by Bandsman Case was well received. "Vienna Flower", a march by Picton Band followed; "Old Favorites" was next played by Picton Band with Mr. Harry Rose singing each selection. Miss Olive McDonald gave a splendid rendering of Pauline Johnson's "Qu 'Appelle" after which Mr. Barrett McMullen sang "Homing". "Abide With Me" was the closing selection by Picton Band. During the interval while the Belleville Band came on the stage, the audience joined in community singing under the direction of Bandmaster Lockyer, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart", "Bring Back My Bonnie To Me", "Jingle Bells" and "Good Old Summer Time" echoed through the theatre.

The Belleville Band opened their programme with a march composed by Bandmaster Hinchey and conducted by Assistant Bandmaster Walter Asseltine. A violin trio was much enjoyed. Repeated applause of this number brought as an encore "Turkey In the Straw", "Poet and Peasant" overture by Belleville Band was also warmly encored and "Rag Doll" given as an encore.

A well rendered cornet solo by Albert Branscombe, a former Picton boy, was well received, followed by a vocal solo, "The Trumpeter" by Claire Paterson who also spent his youth in Picton. The splendid programme closed with "Throw Out the Life Line and the National Anthem, A silver collection was taken. Greater appreciation of the talent and labour of our local band and enthusiasm for the Belleville Band was heard voiced on every hand by those hearing the splendid programmes.

DEMORESTVILLE MAN INJURED IN COLLISION

Police State Charges to Be Laid Against Car Driver

Allan Calnan, Demorestville, narrowly escaped serious injuries, when thrown from the wagon, in which he was riding, about 4.30 pm. yesterday afternoon. Mr. Calnan was proceeding along highway No. 14, some three miles south of Mountain View, when an automobile driven northward by D. R. Carman, Belleville, collided with the wagon. Mr. Calnan's team of horses bolted, throwing the driver into the ditch.

The wagon was completely demolished during the collision; while the Carman, driven automobile also was badly damaged about the radiator and fenders. Traffic Officer Sam Ervine investigated the accident and charges of reckless driving and breaches of the H.T.A. will be heard in the Picton police court later this week.

ON PROGRAM

Mrs. Hinchcliffe and Mr. Robert Browning were among those who contributed to the program of the Sons of Scotland on Friday evening.

DIONNE BABES WILL BE COMFY DURING WINTER

All Preparations Made at Hospital For Their Needs

HOSPITAL DESCRIBED

Staff Works Long Hours But Enjoy Labor Immensely

Callander, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP) — When wintry winds blow down on the Dafoe hospital and blizzards isolate the home of the Dionne quintuplets the five little sisters are sure to be as cozy and warm as children in homes further south. All preparations have been completed to make certain the famous youngsters born last May 28 will have all the comforts they need during the long winter.

When a Canadian Press representative spent a day watching the routine involved in caring for the babies, Dr. A. R. Dafoe, their physician, proudly showed the furnishings, that have been installed since the official hospital opening Sept. 14.

In the office there is a small desk, used by Dr. Dafoe and Madame Louise De Kiriline, in charge of the hospital. There is a Chesterfield, two wicker chairs, a radio and a bureau and on the wall graphs showing the weight fluctuations of the babies from the day of their first official weighing. Beside them is the private telephone connecting with Dr. Dafoe's home in Callander.

Five little white cots with a green table beside each are lined up down the centre of the nursery, which is decorated in green and white. There are three larger tables, a thermometer, a scale and sun-lamp in the hospital-like room.

Roomy Bathroom

Beside it is a roomy bathroom with modern fixture and hot and cold running water, tested by the Ontario laboratory in North Bay and brought into the building with a force pump from a well at the rear of the hospital.

There are two bedrooms downstairs and a kitchenette for the staff furnished in cream and orange. In the pantry is a large electric refrigerator and on the floor two crates of oranges sent the babies by a Florida Service Club.

In the basement there is a laundry, presided over by Madame L. Clouseau who washes 200 articles of clothing every day, 80 of them diapers for the five sisters. At the rear of the house there are three separate clothes lines, measuring 400 feet in all.

Besides the three nurses the staff includes Madame Clouseau and Elios Legros, an uncle of the babies, who acts as night watchman at the hospital. He sleeps in the cellar and the nurses use the main floor bedrooms and another in the attic.

Three nurses, Madame De Kiriline, Miss Pat Mullins and Miss Yvonne Leroux have no easy life but enjoy their work immensely. They rise at six o'clock each morning and the day nurse is never through before 10 in the evening. They get one day off in the week.

BALDWINWARDLIBERALS ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

At an enthusiastic meeting of Baldwin Ward Liberals held last night at Charles Street, the organization for that ward was completed. A resolution was passed as being in sympathy with the mass meeting called for Wednesday night and all were requested to attend. W. V. Fairbairn was the unanimous choice of more than one hundred present for Ward Chairman and he will be assisted by Bert Berry, and John Carr as vice chairman and R. Carruthers as secretary treasurer. Poll Chairman for number 9 Baldwin is Joe Diamond, for Number 10, I. L. Moore, and number 11 George Naylor. The lady chairman will be elected by the incoming executive. At the conclusion of the election of officers, the members laid plans for the coming general election for the Dominion with respects to their own particular ward.

Weddings

TAFT—DAWSON

On Saturday afternoon, December 1st, at 74 Catherine Street, this city, Rev. J. D. P. Knox solemnized the marriage of Mr. Orval A. Taft, son of Mr. Leonard Taft and the late Mrs. Taft, of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, and Miss Florence Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dawson, of the same place. The young couple were attended by Mr. Elmer Smith and Miss Rosetta Neal, of Hillier, Prince Edward County.

SCOTT—BURGESS

A quiet wedding was solemnized at 24 Woodycrest Avenue, Toronto, by the Rev. W. Hodgson, when he united in marriage Jean M. Burgess, daughter of Mrs. M. Burgess and the late Mr. J. H. Burgess, to Mr. Harold J. Scott, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott. The bride looked lovely in a brown swagger suit, with hat to match and she wore a corsage bouquet of Talisman roses. Miss Reta Burgess, was bridesmaid, and she wore a brown dress with gold trimming, hat to match and a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Albert Humphries, the groom's nephew, was best man. After the reception, the couple left for Belleville where they will live.

McKINNEY—BLAKESTON

Stratford, Dec. 3.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Blakeston was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday afternoon when their daughter, Lella Evangeline, was united in marriage to Mr. Quirt S. McKinney, of Wellington, Ont. Rev. J. D. Parks of Carlton Street United Church, Toronto, officiated and the wedding music was played by Mr. Raymond S. Player, organist of the North Street United Church, Goderich. The bride was given in marriage by her father and the couple were unattended. Guests were present at the wedding from North Bay, Toronto, Goderich, London, Priceville, Swinton Park, Comber and Stratford. Mr. and Mrs. McKinney will live in Wellington, Ontario.

PAYNE—SENDALL

Toronto, Dec. 4.—The marriage took place at eleven o'clock Monday morning at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Mount Dennis, when Rita Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sendall, was married to Capt. Frederick Payne, of the Church Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Payne, of Burton, Latimer, England. Rt. Rev. J. R. Lucas, warden of the Church Army in Canada, officiated, assisted by Rev. R. P. Walker, rector of the church. Mr. Arthur Abraham, of Trinity College, played the wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a graceful gown of white satin and a tulle veil that had been worn by her mother at her wedding. She carried Premier roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Margaret Sendall, sister of the bride, and Miss Elsie Payne, of London, Ontario, cousin of the groom, were bridesmaids. They were both gowned in wine velvet with matching hats and carried white 'mums.

Capt. Arthur G. Casey, C.A., was best man and the ushers were Capt. Stanley Mason, C.A., and Capt. William Hague, C.A. They all wore the Church Army uniforms.

A reception and wedding luncheon were held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Sendall, mother of the bride, received, gowned in brown satin with silver beaded hat and wearing a corsage. She was assisted by Mrs. E. Payne, aunt of the groom, in black, and wearing a similar corsage. The couple left for Belleville; the bride going away in a rust-colored frock and hat and black fur coat. Later in the week they will go on to Winnipeg, where they will live.

Capt. Payne, for the past four years, has been the officer in charge of the Unemployed Youths' Hostel in Toronto, and in Winnipeg he will be in charge of the Sir Hugh John Macdonald Hostel for Boys.

$700."

"Did they apply it to stock shortages."

"Yes, they did. Later I went to a lawyer but I never got back the money and they never got any more from me."

Another Toronto witness, S. R. Kirk, a married man, with two children, told of being forced to go on city relief while still employed as a clerk by Stop and Shop Limited. Kirk said he started for the Company at $10 a week which was insufficient for him and his family. He requested and received another dollar a week but still remained on relief. For the extra dollar, Kirk said he was forced to work from 8 o'clock in the morning until midnight.

Kirk finally told his supervisor he could get off the relief list with the addition of still another dollar a week.

Supervisor's Comment

Kirk quoted the supervisor as asking what he was "kicking about," that his salary plus relief would equal $15 or $16 a week. Kirk remained on relief until made a manager, some weeks later.

Kirk also was dismissed for a stock shortage although he said he believed his stock was balanced. Kirk admitted giving short weight and cheating his customers by over-charging and adulterating his stock, but in four months, his stock was $77 short. Kirk said it was impossible fo. a manager to check a stock taking which prompted Chairman W. W. Kennedy to state "if that is true, the manager hasn't a Chinaman's chance."

CLERK CASTS THE DECIDING VOTE

Paris, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—The tie between Isaac Stewart and Dr. Frederick Barron for the mayoralty of Paris was broken shortly after 12 o'clock today when the town clerk, Ken Robinson, cast his vote in favor of Isaac Stewart, who will thus become mayor of Paris for 1935. The step was taken after the clerk had consulted with Judge S. D. Hardy, County Judge of Brant.

It is possible that there will be a recount, in which case the result will depend upon the new count of the ballots. A recount would throw to one side the casting vote of the clerk.

$250,000 PAID P.E.C. FARMERS

Saturday was pay day for farmers of Prince Edward county district, when a total of $250,000 was paid out by the canning factories of the county for produce received during the year. This amount is a substantial increase over that paid out one year ago.

Prince Edward county has the distinction of putting up over half the vegetables packed in cans in the Dominion, this in spite of the size of the county. This season about 5,000 acres of tomatoes were contracted for, and the yield was one of the best on record. The price was also better than they had received for several years. The average price in 1934 was thirty cents per bushel, an increase of five cents per bushel over last year.

This year the canning factories paid out a total of $200,000 to workers engaged in canning operations.

BOARD ROOM GOSSIP

McMILLAN GOLD

Week-end report from McMillan quite good. It is evident that November production will run not far from $30,000. Millheads are still as little below normal due to continued loss of free gold in the mill circuit. This has just been remedied. Recovery is now around 96 p. c. and mill heads at the close of the month ran 44 ozs. for 128 tons while the month's average ran about .29 ozs.

GRANADA GOLD

Granada Mines Hadsell as 100 tons daily much better gold recovery being made with indications combined mills have capacity minimum 150 tons daily. Understand reorganization plans reduction of capital to one-half million shares with one new for three old followed by increase to one and a half million shares leaving one million in treasury.—Mutch.

B. C. NICKEL MINES LTD.

Vancouver.—Work to date has indicated a very big tonnage of ore, Major C. B. North, engineer in charge, informed the annual meeting of the C.I.M.M., western division, in an address Wednesday. The present program, he said, is directed toward developing by diamond drill and tunnel the numerous showings revealed by surface work and magnetometer survey. The engineer said he expected eight to ten months' additional work would be necessary to prove up enough ore to warrant proceeding with metallurgical work. He added he was hopeful the operation would result in making a nickel industry for B. C. With regard to nickel recovery and other minerals, Major North said the company had the assurance of one of the world's most prominent nickel metallurgists that B. C. Nickel ore presented no difficulties. In connection with marketing, the speaker advised that he anticipated no trouble as the production would represent only a small fraction of the output of International Nickel. Officials of Falconbridge assured him marketing would not be a problem. Nickel content is indicated at 1.3 per cent. and chromium 1.2 per cent. Other metals present are gold, silver, cobalt, sulphur, platinum and nickel-cast iron. The latter product was similar to cast iron-nickel produced in Norway and Sweden.

PREMIER GOLD MINING CO.

Statement on Relief Arlington by B. T. O'Grady, resident engineer, since Premier took over development has been prosecuted vigorously under management of S. M. Manning. To the end of October 1551 feet of underground development was done on No. 3 and No. 5 levels. In addition to the ore developed by W. G. Norrie-Loewenthal while directing operations for the former owners Premier has disclosed 200 feet of ore three feet wide assaying .99 ounces of gold per ton and with 700 feet of backs.

ST. ANTHONY

The eighth bold bullion shipment by St. Anthony has just left the mine for the mint at Ottawa. It covers the production period from Nov. 1 to Nov. 27 and contained 1202 ounces. At $34.00 an ounce this is worth $40,868.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

The 1934 budget sheet compared with 1933 shows deficit increased by $3,700,000 which is more than accounted for by addition of McNish debentures amounting to $4,136,500 not formerly included in the liabilities. Other important items are bank loan reduction of $1,000,000 but inventory increased by $750,000. This increase includes carrying charges.

Pioneer Gold Mines of B.C.

A. M. Richmond, resident government engineer, advised C.I.M.M. convention as follows: Shaft is being continued down to 26 level which will be 3100 feet deep. Vein is looking very good on 14th. It is on this level that a section of the vein 78 feet long and 3 feet wide assays 7 ozs. per ton. Over a distance of 300 to 400 feet on this level ore assays are very high although the grade does not compare with the 78 feet referred to.

Rogers Majestic

Is presently employing 50 per cent more people than last year reports that it established a new all-time Canadian production record in week of Nov. 13. During that period 3,057 radios were produced, a daily average of 509 sets. At present company reports unfilled orders of 5000 sets and over 20,000 radios have been delivered to dealers. Present indications point to Rogers experiencing one of the best years in its history.—Financial Service.

Livestock

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Prices were steady on cattle, calves, sheep and lambs at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market today. Trading on the cattle division was quiet with very few good or choice offerings. About 1,100 head of holdovers were for sale. Hogs, as usual, opened unsettled.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Branch were: Cattle 700, calves 180; hogs 360; sheep and lambs 730.

Butcher cows sold steady at $2.25 to $2.50 for best while canners brought $1.00. A few fed calves went at $5.00 to $6.50. Good light stockers were also steady at $3.00 to $3.50 cwt.

Calves opened unchanged at $6.50 to $7.00 for good and choice vealers. A few heavies sold at $3.00 to $4.00. Lambs and sheep were holding yesterday's strong closing levels, the former at $7.00 for the majority of good ewes and wethers and up to $7.25 for extra choice, the latter at $1.00 to $3.00 cwt. according to quality.

Opening bids on the hog division were steady at yesterday's 10-cent lower level of $7.00 F.O.B. for bacons $7.35 off truck and $7.75 off car.

ONTARIO VOTING

Entering the campaign with the intentions of ousting all members of the Council, the Workers' Unity League in Hanover elected Alvin Metzger as Mayor, defeating Mayor Maxwell S. Armstrong and only three of the 1934 council were left among the new members.

Successor to Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare as Mayor of Windsor will be Commissioner George Bennett who will hold office for 1935 and 1936. Commissioner Bennett had a 1,714 majority over the closest of his three rivals, who contested the mayoralty in one of the hottest campaigns in Windsor for several years.

Among municipalities which voted in favor of altering the system of electing Alderman were Woodstock and Fort Erie. These places will now choose their aldermen by general vote instead of the Ward System.

From most districts came reports of a light vote, due mostly to the snow storms, that swept various parts of the province during election day. Electors for the most part approved bylaws fixing assessment for certain industries but Barrie turned down a proposal for Daylight Saving during July and August.

NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, December 4. — (CP) — Soft throughout the morning session, the Industrial list developed a better tone in the early afternoon and net gains were boarded for the Interlisted leaders and a good representation of the food, oil, brewery and construction stocks.

Distillery shares were dragged down in the first hour by selling of Industrial Alcohol A, apparently because of disappointment over the company's earnings statement. The stock dropped to 6 3-4 before showing resistance and it had recovered to 7 1-8 by early afternoon down 5-8 net. Distillers Seagrams fell back 1-4 but recovered.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 4.— (CP)—Several of the Mining stocks were subjected to active selling in the early session today and losses up to 13 cents were registered in spots. Good buying in the afternoon however turned the trend up again and gains predominated at the end of the third hour.

Pickle Crow and God's Lake were offered down to 1.50 each, the former showing a loss of 12 cents and the latter 13 cents. Pickle Crow recovered a few cents and God's Lake 7 to 1.57. Little Long Lac, McKenzie and Siscoe sagged slightly.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Stocks improved substantially today. Advancing tendencies began in aircraft shares during the morning but active demand developed in rails during the noon period. The late tone of the general market was firm. Advances of around 1 to 2 points were recorded by American Telephone, Santa Fe, U.S. Steel, J. C. Penney, Union Pacific, Western Union and Douglas Aircraft. Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Dec. 4 (AP)—Although exhibiting few buoyant tendencies, most financial markets maintained a steady to firm tone in today's proceedings.

Prices generally were higher throughout the stock list. Some of the rail and aviation issues, together with scattered specialties, developed moderate activity on the up side.

U. S. Government Securities moved into higher territory in response to the favorable implications of the Goernment's December borrowing programme.

Narrow price changes prevailed in the Canadian list. Dome and Canadian Pacific were a shade lower. International Nickel and McIntyre advanced small fractions. On the curb, Hiram Walker ruled steady. Dominion Government Bonds were narrow. Montreal funds eased 1-8 of a cent at 101 7-8 cents.

Shares of International Printing Ink and General Printing Ink got up 2 points each when the latter declared a special 30-cent dividend in addition to the regular. Worthington Pump Preferred A advanced nearly 3 and J. P. Penney moved up 2. The Penny issue was up to a new 1934 peak. United Aircraft also reached a new high with a fractional gain. Wright Aeronautical firmed 3, while Douglas Aircraft Aviation Corp. and Curtiss-Wright improved fractionally to a point or more.

GIVES SELF UP

Ottawa, Dec. 4—(CP)— Three days of liberty following a spectacular escape from the Carleton County jail on Nicholas Street ended abruptly last night when Albert Aubin, 18, gave himself up to city detectives.

Governor Alonzo G. Dawson, of the county jail, received a telephone call from a person said to be a member of Aubin's family, that the wanted man was at his home. Governor Dawson was instructed to "send down for him" and detectives arrested him there.

No trace has yet been found of Constant Thivierge, 20, alleged companion of Aubin in their daring brea kfrom jail.

NEW DEAL FOR TENNIS

Unfair To Rank More Than First Five Tennis Stars, Says Rainville

ROBERT MURRAY CAROLYN DEACON ELEANOR YOUNG

Three outstanding stars of the Canadian tennis season were Robert Murray, of Montreal; Caroline Deacon and Eleanor Young, both of Vancouver. In the opinion of Marcel Rainville, Bob Murray will likely be a member of Canada's 1935 Davis cup team. As for Vancouver's feminine stars, Miss Deacon and Miss Young swept all before them in the Canadian championships, both junior and senior.

By MARCEL RAINVILLE
Copyright 1934

For an active player to discuss other players is a very delicate proposition. I am aware that my reactions to a certain player's game and temperament are entirely personal and therefore I ask the reader to consider the following remarks merely as my impressions of the various players whom I will mention.

First Five Players

There appears to be little doubt as to who are leading five players in the country judging by the results of the Davis cup trials, of the Ontario and the Canadian championships, wherein these five players competed: Walter Martin, Bob Murray, Gilbert Nunns, Marcel Rainville and Laird Watt (I have purposely given their names in an alphabetical order), will surely divide amongst themselves the first five berths in the national ranking. Yet who can tell that Ossie Ryall or Bud Hocking or Eddie McKush would not have made the first five had they been given the opportunity of playing in more tournaments or had the national tournament been held in their respective sections?

The Second Five

But the ranking committee will face a most difficult task when they attempt to rank the second five; there is absolutely no fair basis of comparison between the players of the east and those of the Pacific coast or of the west.

In the past places have often been given to the latter players on the general principle that they could not be ignored even though the committee had very little data. Such a principle is most unsound as the players in question might have rated higher or lower.

As a solution to this difficulty I would suggest for this year at least that the first five be ranked, for I am convinced that no glaring injustice will be done by ranking the players mentioned above, but that the ranking be then divided into four sections, maritimes, east, west and Pacific coast, leaving to each section the privilege of ranking their own players and giving their findings the same prominence as a national ranking.

This, of course, would be only temporary as it is to be hoped that the leading players of the country will be brought together during the season, from now on.

Gilbert Nunns Ranked No. 2

Despite a setback in the Davis cup trials, Gilbert Nunns has regained the leadership of his province which he had lost to Walter Martin in 1933, and I would not be surprised to see him ranked at No. 2 position; the committee will probably have to attach most importance to the results of the Ontario and Canadian tournaments and Nunns' straight sets victory over Murray, his reaching the final in the Ontario tournament and the semi-final in the Canadian, losing only to me in both tournaments would appear to have earned him precedence over his rivals.

I would now like to make a few remarks which would be of interest to readers. During the many years of our campaigns, Gilbert and myself have been most bitter rivals and the causes or centres of many bitter political fights. But, until the publication of the famous Nunns' interview which was afterward absolutely denied by Gilbert, never had there happened between us personally the slightest lack of courtesy. I have found Gilbert a perfect sportsman on the courts in every way possible despite all the animosity which might have existed.

As to the quality of Gilbert's game, this is another question; he is not the only player in the world who has achieved success with a very limited stroke equipment. A great forehand, a fair backhand and a very ordinary service were the only trumps which Gilbert brought to the court, but he surely made full use of his devastating forehand and never knew what it was to give up. On the other hand, if an opponent could get away from that forehand, Gilbert was terribly handicapped and this handicap has kept him from winning the national championship so far and from getting a regular berth on our Davis cup team more often.

Walter Martin Slipping

A real gentleman, a great companion and the kindest person in the world for his friends, also a good tennis player, a most temperamental and noisy one, I dare say; these words describe Walter Martin fairly well. During the past two years I have come in very close contact with Walter Martin and I have learned to know him well. The greatest trouble with Walter's game is precisely what might still be his greatest asset; he is tall, big and heavy, puts on weight easily and is one of the biggest eaters I have ever known; the consequence is that hot weather gets him easily. Moreover, he has never learned to take full advantage of his physique. Nevertheless, Walter, even though he will drop in the ranking this year, might easily regain his top ranking position; a little serious physical training would easily do that for him. Just now I wonder what will be Walter's ranking for 1934; there are many who think that he will be ranked at No. 4, behind Bob Murray, who defeated him in the national tournament.

Bob Murray as No. 3

The only player to defeat me in the Davis cup trials, and called the find of the year, even though he did not make the team, Bob Murray, lived up to expectations when he won the province of Quebec championship decisively; he suffered a setback when he lost to Gilbert Nunns in straight sets in the semi-finals of the Ontario tournament, but jumped ahead again when he defeated Walter Martin in the Canadian; since then Bob has practically done nothing but his wins might be enough to get him No. 3 position in the national ranking.

Bob has been remarkably well gifted by nature. Tall, without being heavy, healthy and clever, he has all the attributes of a champion. Barring a tendency to overhit his second ball, the cause of many costly double faults, Bob has a perfect stroke equipment; he is a good fighter, but lacks the pep that might carry him to the top. Years will probably take care of that and Bob needs only patience now to see great honors come his way.

Laird Watt Coming East

Laird Watt might have been No. 2 in the country if rain had not halted his match against Walter Martin in the Ontario tournament when Laird had full command of the play and Walter appeared to be headed for a straight sets defeat at the hands of a young player who had made the Davis Cup team for the first time in the spring. Laird, unfortunately, had no chance of meeting either Martin or Nunns, whom he had defeated in the Davis cup trials, in the Canadian tournament and consequently he might have to trail Gil, Bob and Walter in the ranking. In all fairness, I must say that Walter had also defeated Laird in a trial match held at Wilmington, but, on the other hand, Laird made the team which Bob Murray failed to do. This is a peculiar problem which the ranking committee will find impossible to settle in a satisfactory way.

Again the Second Five

If the ranking committee decide to rank the second five of the country, I do not see how they can fail to give a high ranking to Gordon Shields, a former Vancouver boy now living in Toronto. Eddie McKush, western and Manitoba singles champion, played one tournament in the east, the national. He lost only to Surface, who reached the final. I did not have the chance of seeing much of McKush in this one tournament, but those who had a chance to follow him described him as a most capable player. Georges Leclerc, Joe O'Hara, Ross Wilson, add did well in the Canadian. Ossie Ryall and Bud Hocking of Vancouver, are two other players who rate the first ten, but Hocking has not come east at all during the season and Ryall played only in the Davis cup trials. Roland Longtin, of Montreal, lost to Nunns in the Ontario quarter-finals, but failed badly in the Canadian; if the committee should decide to look into his record in the province of Quebec, Roland will get some good points; on the other hand other players throughout the country could very well point to the fact that they have had no opportunity of playing in these tournaments.

Two Feminine Stars

The wonderful showing of Miss Carolyn Deacon and Miss Eleanor Young in the dominion championships was one of the most interesting features of the season; these two attractive young ladies from Vancouver dominated the field.

The leading junior player of the year is undoubtedly George Robinson of Montreal; already holder of the Quebec crown for 1933, George won successively the eastern Canadian, Ontario, Canadian and western titles; his triumphal march was halted in Montreal by Roger Durivage, the Canadian boy titleholder, but George has, nevertheless, established quite a record.

I have mentioned previously our weakness in the doubles game. Murray and Watt, playing well together at last, were impressive in their four sets victory over Dayes and Leahong in the final of the Quebec tournament; but they had to accept a four sets defeat at the hands of the same players in the finals of the Ontario and a straight sets defeat in the semi-finals of the Canadian. Walter Martin and myself, although we had played very well at Pinehurst and White Sulphur earlier in the year and had been chosen to represent the country in Davis Cup play, failed entirely to click as a pair during the Canadian season. Ross Wilson and myself, who might really do well to play more together, had our second win in Ottawa, where we successfully defended our Eastern Canadian title against Dayes and Leahong.

Flannels and Shorts

To wear shorts or not to wear them. I hesitated for some time before I made up my mind. When Wimbledon finally accepted the shorts, that was good enough for me.

In my opinion, it is entirely a matter of good taste; some people, for their own sake, should not wear shorts.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Eddie Thomas is mor ethan jubilant these days especially after the announcing of the clubs to compose group No. 1 in the "A" series of intermediate hockey. It has been a long day since Belleville hockey fans have been afforded a six teamed loop in the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs. The relative strength of the group can be compared slightly higher than the past two seasons when Cobourg, Campbellford, Trenton and Belleville were linked up. Good hockey was afforded the fans in the past, but with the addition of Lindsay, Port Hope and the fast Peterboro intermediates a thrilling season of intermediate hockey can be looked for.

Last year with a four teamed loop a play-off at the end of the group schedule proved beneficial from all angles, but with six teams in the group for the current season maybe three teams or even four could be included in a post-season play-off. By playing home and home games, each club would be afforded five games at home and five on the road. With four teams in the subsequent play-off series, two more games would be afforded a club that happened to be eliminated in the extra series, while the victorious teams would have at least seven home games, that is providing home and home games were played in all play-off series with the first and fourth place clubs meeting while the second and third battled it out. The ultimate winners of such a play-down would attract capacity houses in the league or group finals. William Lowe of Port Hope is the group convener and most likely the matter of group play-offs and other interesting questions will be presented when the group representatives convene at Port Hope.

Eddie Thomas, convener of group No. 1 in the Junior "B" series does not intend calling the teams of this group together until following the intermediate meeting as the Campbellford and Belleville junior teams will be forced to take second choice insofar as playing dates are concerned, both Belleville and Campbellford being represented in the intermediate ranks. Naturally Napanee and Tweed will have more open dates than the other two junior clubs to compose group No. 1 with the result that the Campbellford and Belleville factions may have to request slight favors inasmuch as the allotting of dates is concerned.

Promoter Clem Allen of the Stewart Warner-Alemite A. C. is bringing three or four classy boxers to appear in Belleville on his next boxing card Dec. 10. Another feature of the night will be the return to a local amateur ring of Jack "Beans" Langman who recently received his reinstatement from the A.A.U. of C. Langman fought as a pro. in Toronto two winters ago and made a decided hit in the queen city. His return to the squared circle should materially assist the fight game in Belleville, Langman being one of those aggressive fighters of the Dempsey stance. In the main bout next Monday Matchmaker Allen gave Len Minicola of Peterboro the "spot" and signed Bobby Vieau of Trenton as his opponent. Minicola has appeared locally on previous cards and always proved a fighting favorite.

Professional baseball suffered a setback in Ontario yesterday in the sudden death of George Oakley, president and owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International Baseball League. Mr. Oakley was visiting in Hamilton when he suddenly became stricken and dropped dead. • • • Unlike the professional baseball teams, the owners of the N.H.L. clubs that are floundering in the debts of slumps these days, have affixed the blame on their players rather than the managers and the coaches, as is the usual case in ball. • • • A number of trades have already been engineered in the N.H.L. with more to follow, 'tis rumored.

Following Friday night's local wrestling show a Toronto evening paper took the local promoters over the well known jumps by stating that the local show had been falsely advertised. Following right on the heels of the wrestling probe that is now in progress in Toronto the local situation naturally added fuel to the fire. Promoted Meagher admits he made a slight mistake in advertising last Friday's show, but corrected his error in the local press when it was discovered. The entire misunderstanding came about when Promoter Meagher misinterpreted a telegram received relating to the card. The wire read: Bert Ruby, who wrestled a close bout with Savoldi, conqueror of Londos, to meet Dunlop. Savoldi did beat Londos but Ruby never met the Golden Greek. The local promoter in no way meant to advertise falsely but merely misinterpreted the wire to read Ruby had conquered Londos at some time. The entire affair was most embarrassing to Promoter Meagher, he assures us.

GEHRIG LEADS FOR 5TH TIME

Chicago, Dec. 4.—In addition to winning the American League batting championship, Lou Gehrig led the circuit in runs batted in for the fifth season.

The Yankee's big first baseman drove in 165 runs, ten short of his league record, and in winning the honor, tied his illustrious team-mate, Babe Ruth, who also has led the circuit five times since 1920, the year they started tabulating such figures.

Gehrig also finished runner up to Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics, in working the pitchers or perhaps scaring them into issuing walks. Foxx was passed 111 times while Gehrig walked 109 times. Ruth, still dangerous, drew 103 passes.

First basemen won major honors in batting in runs, guardians of the first stop landing the first four places. Hal Trosky of Cleveland belted in 142 runs. Hank Greenberg of the champion Detroit Tigers drove home 139, and Foxx was credited with 130.

Al Simmons of Chicago set a record by chasing home 100 or more runs for the 11th season, and the Detroit Tigers, in numbering four players, Greenberg, Gehringer, Rogell and Goslin, among those batting in 100 or more tallies, presented something unusual.

PRIMEAU BACK INTO LINE-UP

For the first time this season Toronto Leafs' high-scoring line of Harvey Jackson, Charlie Conacher and Joe Primeau will play as a unit tonight in Boston.

The trio that was selected by the sports editors last spring as the best in the National Hockey League was broken up during the training season when Primeau suffered a broken thumb and Bill Thoms worked between Jackson and Conacher while Leafs ran up an unbroken string of eight wins.

Now Primeau has recovered and will get into his first league game tonight. He has been anxious to get on the ice for a week but manager Conny Smythe would make no changes while the team was winning. The 3-0 defeat Detroit Red Wings handed the Leafs Sunday paved the way for the smart centre's return.

Fatalities in Football Not So Numerous

By FOSTER HAILEY

New York, Dec. 4.—Football fatalities continued to show a decline this year from the high mark of 1931, when the tragic death of Cadet Dick Sheridan, West Point end, shocked the United States and led to rule changes and closed supervision by colleges and high schools over the fall sport.

The fourth annual survey of the Associated Press, made in collaboration with Prof. Floyd R. Easterwood, of New York University, and the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, shows 26 deaths this fall attributable to football as compared to 50 in 1931, 38 in 1932 and 36 last year.

They are segregated as follows: College 1, high school 16, sandlot 6, and club 3.

The college death toll is a decrease from eight in 1931, two in 1932 and two in 1933. High school fatalities increased from 14 three years ago, 8 in 1932, and 11 last year, sandlot deaths from 10 in 1931, 8 in 1932, and 5 in 1933, and club from 2 in 1931, 5 in 1932 and 2 in 1933.

Classified as to the type of play eight received fatal injuries in making tackles, one in blocking and four in being tackled. Information is lacking on the others.

For the first time since Warden Lewis F. Lawes of Sing Sing introduced the game as a part of prison routine, a prisoner in a state institution is listed among the fatalities. John Daviduke, of the Connecticut State Prison at Hartford. He died Oct. 14 of a skull fracture received in a game at the prison with a club team from outside.

BASKETBALL

On Saturday afternoon last the opening games of the Trail Rangers Basketball League were played. This schedule has been drawn up and sponsored by the Belleville Boys' Work Board. The games are being held on Saturday afternoons from 1:00 to 2:00 p.m. at the Y.M.C.A.

In the first game on Saturday St. Andrew's Trail Rangers took the Bridge Street quintette along the trail to the count of 12-4. This game was fast throughout and well played. These younger boys show plenty of promise.

In the second game on Saturday the Baptist boys applied the whitewash to John Street to the score of 11-0. This game was considerably slower but the boys had not the same experience. However if these opening games are any evidence of the interest and keenness for the whole schedule the Trail Rangers will be helping to blaze the trail in the realm of basketball for Belleville. There is a rumor of a fine cup being donated to the winning team in this loop.

Canadiens Will Not Sell English Speaking Players

Supporters Want Winning Team Says Leo Dandurand

Montreal, Dec. 4. — Pressure of public opinion, following a number of losses, will not stampede Leo Dandurand, co-owner and managing director of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League into disposing of his English-speaking players.

Dandurand, addressing a complimentary banquet tendered the team here last night gave his opinion that the French-speaking supporters of the team wanted a winning combination, not necessarily one that was 100 per cent. French. He added that Wilf Cude, Nels Crutchfield, Jack McGill, Gerry Carson, Roger Jenkins and Joe Lamb were cogs that could go into a winning team.

If it did not win, he said, he knew that an added financial loss was in prospect; that the club lost $28,000 last season and in such a case might well lose $40,000 this year. That, he said, was something he was prepared to face.

Judge Amedee Monet, a director of the club, speaking in French said Canadiens had always played progressive hockey and he believed the team would be among the leaders at the end of the season.

Dandurand reviewed the sale of Jack Portland, defenceman, to Boston Buins for $7,500 and Gordon Savage, announced yesterday. The deal was made, he said, because the club could not afford to develop Portland although he regarded him as potentially a great player.

MICKEY WALKER IS COUNTED OUT

First Time in History of Middleweight He Heard Count

Philadelphia, Dec. 4.—After winning two world's championships, fighting all weights from welters to heavies, Mickey Walker has suffered his first knockout.

The Shrewsbury Manor, N.J., veteran lost to the younger and more agile Paul Pirrone of Cleveland at Convention Hall last night when two short chops on the chin sent him down at the end of two minutes and nineteen seconds of the eleventh round of what was to have been a 12-round fight.

With bleeding cuts over two half-closed eyes, Walker was defenseless as the eleventh chukker began. Then 11,000 spectators saw him take the count for the first time, after being down for the count of nine in the second.

Walker tried to stem Pirrone's onslaught for ten rounds. His left eye was cut in an early round and his right eye in the sixth but fought gamely on, winning the eighth, ninth and tenth rounds. He smacked Pirrone solidly on the ribs in the eleventh just before the winner made the heavy charge.

Pirrone, who was credited with getting most of the rounds, weighed in at 159, while Walker tipped the scales at 162.

FRANK NIGHBOR OFFERED POST

May Take Over Managership of St. Louis Eagles

London, Ont., Dec. 4. — Frank Nighbor, acting manager of the Tecumsehs of the International Hockey League, revealed today he had not seriously considered an offer made to him by telephone yesterday, to assume control of the St. Louis Eagles of the National League. The Pembroke insurance man revealed the offer had come from a person in Ottawa speaking for interests there in the St. Louis team.

Nighbor said he intended first to finish his job here before making further plans. He is subbing for Albert "Toots" Holway, now ill at his Belleville home, after being appointed manager of the Tecumsehs at the beginning of the season. Meanwhile Holway, reported suffering from an ulcerated stomach, sent word that he was feeling greatly improved and that he hoped to be back here early this week.

Nighbor said today he had received a telephone call during the day from Manager Harry Holmes of the Cleveland Falcons asking the London club to place a purchase price on Speedy Groh, veteran right winger. He added he had told Holmes Groh was not for sale and that he was moving his family here from St. Catharines.

Bernie Brophy, left winger, who was expected to arrive here during the week-end, had not appeared today and Nighbor and President Jack Anderson said if he did not hurry they would take other steps to bolster Tecumsehs' front line.

WORLD RECORDS LOWERED

New York, Dec. 4. — Two world record performances on the United States turf during the 1934 season give promise that the entire list of domestic racing records may be revised during the next few years as thoroughbreds take advantage of the opportunities afforded by the fast tracks being constructed throughout the nation.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Discovery cracked the world record for a mile and three-sixteenths in New England, running the distance in 1.55. The former world mark, 1.55 3-5, was set by the Canadian thoroughbred, Sir Barton, at Saratoga in 1920.

Col. E. R. Bradley's Blessed Event equalled the world mark for a mile and an eighth in Florida, racing it in 1.48 2-5, to share the record jointly with Hot Toddy, which set it at Belmont in 1929.

ONTARIO HORSE SECOND

Chicago, Dec. 4.—Margot, owned by W. B. Cleland of Troy, Ont., won second place in a jumping competition for hunters at the horse show here last night in connection with the International Hay and Grain Show and Livestock Exposition.

VANCOUVER TEAM SECOND

Vancouver, Dec. 4. — Vancouver Lions today held second place in the Northwestern Professional Hockey League standings as a result of their 4-3 victory over Portland Buckaroos last night. Clint Smith, with two, Palmand O'Nell counted the Lions' goals while Townsend, Evans and Fraser scored for Portland.

ann steps out

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

Angela went upstairs. Ann turned to Nick and smiled. "You never told me about her. I think she's marvelous."

"She is. And she's a most remarkable woman. Family lost all their money but she never complains. Several very much worth while men want to marry her but she can't make up her mind." He turned to Ann and changed the subject. "I've been wanting to know how things were with you."

"Gail is in Reno. People are talking. Doug's at home. I want to see him, Nick. He's lonely and deserted and I want to see him.'

Her faith in him, he kept thinking, looking at her! Her unshakable faith in the boy she had loved for so long, who had deserted her and married another, and who was back asking for her again. "He doesn't deserve her", he thought. "He isn't worthy. I'm not either, like Doug, irresponsible spoiled....

"You're going to marry him when it's over?" he asked.

"Yes. Perhaps he has been wrong" she said in all sincerity. "He's been spoiled all his life. He's has turned to me when he needed someone and I've never failed him. I can't fail him now."

But what, thought . Nick, if Ann ever needed Doug?

"I admire you," he said.

"I'm terribly mixed up. I don't know which way to turn."

His brown eyes softened toward her. "Always do what you believe is right Ann. People can't condemn you if you do that.'

"But I could be wrong. I don't want to make a great mistake."

"Great mistakes have to be paid for," said Nick, "and sometimes the price is terrific."

Angela came downstairs, looking cool and lovely in a white dress. "I want you to come down and see me often" she told Ann. "What with Nick now the serious business man and at the agency every day, I'll be here alone."

Ann left, with a promise to return the next day, thinking, "I've lost Nick. He can never be the same to me again. But I can't blame him—with Angela!"

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Ann saw a great deal of Angela West the following week.

Angela motored to town one morning with Nick and stayed with Ann for the day. And it had been a day of conversation—Ann, in a soft sports dress curled up on the divan, the electric fan playing havoc with her short hair—Angela, raven-haired, cool-eyed, sitting relaxed in a big chair flipping the ashes from her eternal cigaret.

"We are opposites you and I," said Angela, smiling at Ann. "I was born with a silver spoon in my mouth and you acquired one. Everything was suddenly swept away from me and suddenly everything was thrown in your lap."

"But how did you feel about losing everything?" asked Ann.

"Probably—as you felt when everything came your way. A shock leaves one bewildered. I knew that everything was gone— the house, the cars, the servants. Some friends of mine kindly took me in. Now I'm leaning on Nick's generous hospitality. After that, I don't know. Perhaps I'll get a job teaching French to impudent children."

Ann studied her gravely in pure admiration. Then she said, "I dare say you're happier now because you haven't any complications. Life is simpler without money. I thought that it would be nice to wear Paris gowns—drive a roadster that people would turn to look at. It is nice, but those things don't make life. People make life—people and love. And my love affairs are very complicated now. I've never been so bewildered in my life."

Angela leaned forward with that wise, cool smile of hers.

"You'll have to forgive Nick for telling me about you and Doug. If you love him enough to stand up for him against every one, I admire you profoundly. But, I warn you, no woman has ever reformed a man after marriage. You had better cure Doug of his weakness for pretty faces before you marry him."

"You mean—you think he'd be untrue to me—now?"

"I don't know. It's strange isn't it, how women love the wrong men." She looked at Ann's graceful little figure. "Forgive me, but I feel that your loving Doug is just a habit. It's like anything else, you know, that becomes a habit. It's hard to break."

Ann lowered her eyes. "I tried to get over the habit of loving him. But as soon as I saw him again, as soon as I was in his arms, I knew I felt the same."

Angela smothered her eternal cigaret in the tray. She got up and walked to the window.

"It's nothing to me" she said, "except that I'm fond of you. You're much too sweet and sincere to make a mistake—and forgive me for being so brutally frank—you are the sort of girl who was made to give a great deal of love to some man and it should be to a man who is worthy of it."

"I don't want to make a mistake," said Ann, a perplexed wrinkle between her dark brows.

"It's going to take a shock to make you get over the habit of loving Doug" continued Angela, her poised aristocratic head high, her eyes cool and sure. "I'm sorry if I disillusion you. I repeat, if you love him enough to put up with his weakness, I admire you."

They talked of many things that day. Ann did not bring the conversation around to the subject of Nick and Angela also avoided mentioning him.

Nick called for Angela about five. He looked tall and distinguished in his white suit.

"We've got to hurry," he said. "The Bensons are giving Angela a dinner party tonight. And she has to go back to the house and make herself more beautiful than she is—if that is possible."

Angela chuckled. "Do you think the newly rich Bensons, Nick, will take me in when you turn me out?"

"I'll never turn you out", said Nick, meeting her eyes.

Ann, standing near had a feeling that they didn't know she was near. There was a look in their eyes when they were together as though they were the only two people in the room.

"I've had a delightful day with you" said Angela. "We never finish talking." She turned to Nick. "I've been brutally frank with Ann today and I hope she does not hold it against me. Good-bye my dear." She gave Ann an affectionate kiss on the cheek and took Nick's arm.

"Ann," said Nick, "don't stay stay from the island. Angela likes to have you there. And if you need me you will always find me there."

Ann nodded and watched them go out and get into Nick's car. She watched them drive away—Angela's red mouth laughing, Nick bending toward her. Their heads were close together.

All that Angela said stirred through her mind.

Doug was purposely staying away to keep people from talking. Gary was still persistent in his attentions.

She came downstairs that evening dressed for a party. Gary's sister had returned from Europe and the Hintons were giving a party for her at the club. Gary called for her at nine. He tried to kiss her but Ann politely demurred.

"You are one lovely lady who is sparing with her kisses," he said holding her wrap for her. "I never get any closer to you than this." I wonder what man is going to be able to bring out all those hidden fires in you, Ann."

It was one o'clock when she said good night to Gary and put her key in the door. It had been, she was thinking, rather a tiresome party. Gary's mother was already treating her as though she were one of the family and Gary himself took a possessive air when he was near her.

She put the key in the door and switched on the lights of the hall.

"Ann...."

It was Doug stepping out of the darkness, looking wretched and lonely and unhappy. Ann, in her shimmering dress stood still and waited for him to come to her. "It is as I thought" she was thinking, "he needs me. There is no one else to whom he can go. He is coming to me again and I can't let him down. I can't! Is it love or pity or, as Angela, says a habit? I don't know but I love him now in spite of everything."

He came to her and put his arms around her tilted her chin , and kissed her. Ann's tonned arms circled his neck.

"I couldn't wait," he said. "I had to see you. Wang let me in and I've been waiting.'

Ann smiled. "Poor Doug. I've been thinking about you."

"It's been terrible waiting for Gail to get the divorce. And what have you been doing and thinking?"

"I've been seeing Angela West."

"The girl Nick had visiting him?'

"Yes. And I want you to meet her. She's the most beautiful thing in the world."

"Let's not talk about Angela now," said Doug. "I want to hear about you."

Mr. and Mrs. Dryden came home looking happy and ten years younger from their Panama Canal trip. The first night they were home looking happy and ten years younger from their Panama Canal trip. The first night they were home Ann went to her mother's sitting room. They would have to know and she preferred telling them herself rather than having them hear through ugly gossip. Mr. Dryden was there, too.

Ann stood by the little table and talked slowly. She omitted nothing. Her mother's kind eyes looked a little frightened. Her father frowned.

"It's all happened so suddenny," she said "I've seen him only once since that day. I don't want to see him again until the divorce is final."

"Ann, my dear," said her mother. "I was away and I didn't know what you were going through." She exchanged a solemn glance with her husband. "There is nothing we can say. We thought a great deal of Douglas at one time but we lost faith in him. It's hard to regain lost faith. Perhaps we can."

Ann looked at her father. "What do you think Father?"

"I have nothing to say."

"You have nothing to say?"

"No—nothing. I don't want to stand in your way. I want you to find your own happiness."

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

During the following weeks Ann visited Nick and Angela at the island regularly. Autumn was approaching and many of the homes had been closed. It became too cool for swimming and at evening Nick made a fire in the great fireplace.

Ann did not see Doug. But she saw Gary Hinton and other men. She went to the theatre with them, dined and danced with them, and knew that more than one anxious parent looked upon her as a prospective daughter-in-law.

"They don't see me at all" she told Jean. "They are thinking only of my money."

"You don't think Doug's after your money, do you?" Jean asked dubiously.

"My only proof is that he loved me before I had it."

"All right, have it your own way," said Jean flippantly. "But I tell you you're crazy. You won't be married to Doug a month before you'll find him kissing some other woman."

"Everywhere I turn" said Ann, powdering her nose a little sadly before the mirror," people warn me. If I'm wrong, I'll have to pay the price as Nick says. I only hope I'm right and I believe I am."

"There was a smiling picture of Gail in the local papers when the divorce was granted. Ann held the paper thinking. "It's over now. It's just as though they never married. We can go around together now."

Doug came that evening, but it was no longer the lonely, melancholy Doug. He came in, waving the paper in his hand.

"I'm a free man," he cried to Ann coming down the steps. "It's all over. Come here and kiss me, Ann and let's forget that Gail ever existed"!

Mr. and Mrs. Dryden were in the living room. Ann took Doug's hand and led him into where her parents were.

"Doug has his divorce," she said.

"Reno makes a quick job of a bad mistake," laughed Doug. "And Gail probably had the time of her life with the other people out there getting the 'cure'."

Mr. Dryden looked up over his glasses. "Doug, I don't like to hear marriage spoken of so lightly. Marriage is a serious thing to Ann."

"It's not a lark," said Mrs. Dryden.

"Of course, it isn't" he said, flushing faintly. "I'm sorry. I'm just overjoyed that it's over. I felt like a criminal having to stay away from Ann."

Ann put on a new tweed coat. They went out and got into her car. She had told Angela she would bring Doug to the island as soon as the divorce was granted.

"It isn't the news" said Ann, putting her foot on the starter," that makes you so gay. You've had a few drinks to celebrate.'

"Whats a few drinks?" he asked. "I gave up the apartment today and moved back with the family. Dad and I drank a toast to my freedom and to my engagement to you."

"I don't want to announce it yet" said Ann, visualizing Doug and his father drinking a toast over the grave of Gail's dead love.

"Any time you say," he said.

It was a cool night and the sky was dotted with stars. Ann drove, her eyes set ahead on the road.

"When are you going to marry me?" he asked. "I'm impatient, Ann. I'm afraid I'll lose you to one of my many rivals."

"I'm certainly not going to marry you,' she said, trying to make her tone light "until you get a job."

"Oh a job. Of course. I'm going in with Father. I won't earn much, you know, but...."

"That won't matter."

An ugly thought passed through her mind of Doug's living on John's money.

Little Benny's Note Book

My Cuzzen Artie was around this afternoon and me and him started to play The Grate Artie and Benny Detecktive Bewro, looking for finger prints with my magnifying glass and diffrent things, and ma came in the living room with a worried expression, saying Benny, did you see anything of my diamond ring?

Do you meen today, Ma? I said, and ma said, Now dont ask questions that are neither here nor there. I know I put it somewhere, but just where is a perfeck blank. I simply must find it before your father comes home, you know how he is about that ring, she said.

Meening she thinks she's careless with it, and I said, Well hay ma, how would you like The Grate Artie and Benny Decktive Bewro to get on the trale?

I dont want any nonsense of any kind, I want my diamond ring, O deer, ma said. And she started to look in things and under things and I said to Artie, On the trale, pardner, I deduct it went down the kitchin sink because for the simple reason Mrs. Potts has a habit of sinking down to the kitchin every once in a while.

Hush that kind of talk even in fun, ma said, and Artie said to me, On the trale, pardner, I deduct it flew out the window, because for the simple reason you cant open the window all summer without having a fly in, and you cant open it all winter, without having a fly out.

Are you boys going to stop that for land sakes? ma said, and I said to Artie, On the trale, pardner, I deduct you're almost rite, I deduct it was on the window ledge and a berd flew away with it for the simple reason because it was a berd of a ring and the berd wanted company.

Now I remember speeking of berds, I put it in my little opera bag with the imbroidered berds on it, ma said.

And she hurry up went and got it and The Grate Artie and Benny Decktive Bewro ony got a reward of a cent apiece.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1932, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc.; Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Tarzan braced himself. Again he growled hideously and struck at the panther's face with his knife. "I am Tarzan of the Apes," he roared. "This is Tarzan's lair. Go, or I kill!"

Like lightning the cat reared and struck a vicious blow at his tormentor with great, bared talons that might well have torn away the ape-man's face had the blow landed.

But the blow did not land—Tarzan was even quicker than Sheeta. The panther came to all fours again upon the little platform. Tarzan unslung his heavy spear and prodded at the snarling face.

Goaded to frenzy, Sheeta presently determined to come up after the disturber of his peace, but when he tried to leap to the branch that held Tarzan he found the sharp spear-point always in his face

"A Lost Lady"

Barbara Stanwyck Rises to New Heights in This Fine Dramatic Role

Here is a story of love, of disillusion, of hopes buried and ideals crushed; a story, too, of sacrifice, of devotion of unselfishness. It is a story of three men and a woman who loved them all, each in a different way, each in his turn; but only one of whom loved her.

Taken from the best seller by the world famous novelist, Willa Cather "A Lost Lady" presents Barbara Stanwyck in her finest dramatic opportunity and, with a magnificent cast of noted film players, provides wonderful entertainment.

Less than 48 hours before her marriage, Marion Ormsby (played by Miss Stanwyck) is informed that her fiance, Ned Montgomery (Phillip Reed) has been killed by the husband of a woman with whom he has been having an affair.

Shattered in body, mind and spirit by the tragedy, Marian is sent to the mountains by her uncle but remains apathetic. Falling down a canyon she is rescued by Daniel Forrester (Frank Morgan), a leading corporation lawyer, who falls in love with her.

Marian offers to marry him but tells him she does not love him. The couple are happy enough until Ellinger (played by Ricardo Cortez) comes into Marian's life, and she falls in love with him.

The day that she intends running away with him her husband is brought home suffering from a heart attack. Marian sends Ellinger away, nurses her husband back to health, and while doing this realizes he is one she really loves, and that her only wish now is to stay with him and make him happy.

AT THE BELLE

"The Gay Divorcee"

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Merry Musical Comedy

Elaborate new spectacles of beauty, rhythm and romance features the screen's big musical comedy, "The Gay Divorcee", which costars Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire of "Carioca" fame, features music by five noted melody makers, and develops a joyous plot that tickled New York for 288 performances and London for six months.

The plot itself is one of super-entertaining farce comedy situations a hilarious sort of romance boasting a ceaseless flow of complications as Astaire madly pursues the lovely Miss Rogers across many dancing floors and through the mazes of a swank futuristic hotel.

A second and even more laughable romance is provided by Alice Brady and Edward Everett Horton, in which the inimitable Miss Brady pursues Horton with martial designs.

The settings are the most lavish ever constructed in Hollywood. One of them in particular, representing a resort hotel as such hostelries are expected to be in fifty years hence, was so huge than an addition to the stage had to be built to provide room for the cameras. Five hundred light bulbs, each one as large as a watermelon, were used to illuminate the set, and a crew of fifty electricians were employed.

Against this remarkable setting for "The Gay Divorcee" fifty beautiful girls and fifty dancing men perform mass Terpsichorean novelties said to be entirely different from anything hitherto attempted on the screen.

One of the ensembles is a daring adagio dance in which the entire chorus takes part. A unique and thrilling part of this presentation is the fact that the girls appear in full length gowns, marking the first time this risky dance ever has been attempted in other than the scanty attire which makes for safety as the men hurl their fair partners through the air.

Interiors constructed on another huge sound stage included a hotel suite all fur lined.

Of the no less than four smart specialty dances, one at least, "The Continental" will challenge the remarkable popularity of the "Carioca", last season's Astaire and Rogers demonstration. Dave Gould staged both the "Carioca" and "The Continental".

That it is the most romantic ballroom dance ever conceived was indicated when, according to stores published in the Los Angeles newspapers, seven of the chorus boys became engaged to their partners during the first three weeks of rehearsal, and an inquiry revealed that of this group, only one pair were acquainted prior to signing up for this production!

Music for "The Continental" was specially written by Con Conrad and Herb Magidson. Other numbers were composed by Cole Porter, who wrote the music and lyrics for the stage production, and by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Excellent Short Gems

Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly the screen's scream comediennes are appearing on the same program in a highly amusing comedy "Done in Oil", "Curiostities of Sandwich", a clever screen oddity will be exhibited on the same program.

"Monte Cristo" Departs

"The Count of Monte Cristo" costarring Robert Donat, 1934's greatest screen find and lovely Elissa Landi, concludes a highly successful engagement at the Belle tonight. The Belle latest news events of the world and a very funny Popeye the Sailor cartoon. "Axe Me Another" precede the feature attracton.

from the mass of material presented to the committee as indicative of the demoralizing influence of unscientific, unregulated, anti-social merchandising methods.

Conditions in Quebec

The first example was taken from the evidence of Mr. Gustav Franq, chairman of the Minimum Wage Commisson for the Province of Quebec and dealt largely with sweatshop conditions in the needle trades brought about largely by tremendous pressure from large buyers dictating prices for sensational sales which in turn reflected restricted purchasing power thus completing the ever widening vicious circle of price deflation.

Ontario No Better

Ontario factories, in order to meet such competition, were following the same suicidal path, asserted the speaker, quoting in support of his statement from evidence presented to the committee by Professor H. Cassidy, of the Department of Social Science, University of Toronto. This particular item was culled from the report covering a survey into the Needle Trade Industry of Canada conducted under the joint auspices of the Garment Manufacturer's Association of Canada and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, and dealt with conditions in a certain clothing factory in Toronto where actual pay envelopes filed with the committee covering a number of female employees showed payments of from four to eight dollars a week for fifty hours.

Taxpayer Pays

"What is the net result of that sort of thing," asked the speaker. "Does it not mean," he continued, "that the taxpayers are involuntarily subsidizing sweat-shops, because obviously no family could live on such wages and is not the further implication inescapable that we are our brothers keeper, whether we recognize the fact or not."

"To cry out that this or that proposal is Bolshevistic, as a final argument against it is as senseless and unscientific as the fulminations of the most neurotic soap boxer, who is opposed to everything but the sound of his own voice and advances as the reason for his opposition that the cursed things are all bourgeois."

Selfishness Inconsistent

Continuing his line of argument designed to emphasize the essential unity of life which we must recognize and apply, Mr. Hougham read a letter from the Ontario Agricultural Council filed by himself with the Committee which had been sent to the executives of all firms distributing dairy products from which the following is a typical quotation, "That in view of the serious condition of the agricultural industry today and whereas it is generally conceded that better prices for farm products would improve conditions throughout the province generally by increasing the purchasing power of the farmer, thereby benefitting indirectly labor conditions in the towns and cities, that this council seek the co-operation of large retail organizations in an effort to have them keep such prices as stable as possible and to consider the advisability of using such commodities as "Leaders" that will not have a detrimental effect on the prices of the products of Ontario farms."

False Economic Doctrine

Pausing impressively after reading the foregoing paragraph and stating that he had not the slightest intention of holding up any individual or group of individuals as a horrid example, Mr. Hougham asked his audience whether that approach to the question was not the real issue at stake, for was not the obvious meaning of such a sentence that the writer wanted the top price for the products of the people for whom he spoke but wanted to purchase products of other people's labor at bargain prices regardless of the results to their standard of living.

Challenge to Service

"How inconsistent with the most elementary principles of community welfare and prosperity was such a mental attitude," declared Mr. Hougham. He then went on to challenge members of the association to a realization of their particular responsibility.

Social Conscience

Indicating present trends of economic thought which are being reflected in current legislation and are likely to play an increasingly important part in business, both in Federal and Provincial spheres, Mr. Hougham declared that the most encouraging sign of the times, and which was a direct result of the investigation at Ottawa was the emergence of a social conscience which was already expressing itself in the principle of the social control of business.

Ontario Milk Board

In case his hearers might be under the impression that such ideas were fantastic and could not find expression in a country noted for rugged individualism, the speaker cited two illustrations of legislation actually in effect at the present time in Ontario and Alberta in both of which provinces the principle of social control of business was clearly involved. The Milk Board in Ontario had within its power to say to the distributor of dairy products, "You will sell this milk at this price or you won't sell it at all because we are not going to permit you to break down the price to the primary producer in order to satisfy your own private greed for volume."

Alberta Industry Act

Out in Alberta the same principle was even more drastically expressed in the Trade and Industry Act promoted by a Farmers' Government and assented to by the legislators without a dissenting voice. Dealing briefly with this legislation the speaker stated that it provided that if 60 per cent. of the operators in any trade of industry agreed upon certain regulations designed to stabilize their business or industry, even to the fixing of the wholesale or retail price below which the commodity produced or dealt in could not be sold, they could place their recommendations before the Director of Trade and Industry and his associates, and if, after a public hearing in which arguments pro and con were presented, the Director decided that the proposals were not against the public interests an order would be made which would be binding upon 100 per cent. of the operators in the business or industry affected.

No Politics

The most important event in the merchandising world in several decades was this investigation, said Mr. Hougham, who after twenty years of work in the interest of retail merchants was beginning to see the promise of his hopes fulfilled reflected in the earnestness of this investigation at Ottawa and the determination of Hon. H. H. Stevens. Something has started on Parliament Hill which cannot be stopped, said the speaker, and it is entirely independent of any political party.

Conspicuous moral courage was attributed to Mr. Stevens by the speaker, who said that Mr. Stevens had put principle above party and personal fortune in resigning from the cabinet and the chairmanship of the commission.

This investigation started in a resolution moved by Prime Minister Bennett in the House for a committee of enquiry had developed into a far-reaching Commission of investigation." Its social implication of responsibility was of great importance, and while emphasis is placed on evils of present day merchandising that is done only to show the symptoms underlying conditions.

Views and Virtues

There have been excesses, said the speaker, and unethical practises, but let us not forget, said he, that the big merchandising organizations do not hold a monopoly of all the vices and the independents all the virtues. All should be aiming at a higher standard of ethics in business which would be to the benefit of all. He was not here to show horrible samples, but to point out what is being revealed at Ottawa and try and find the remedy.

Tribute to The Press

Some people are wont to say sneeringly that the press will not print all the facts of the investigation—this Mr. Hougham emphatically denied—the press was reporting everything of news value and if people could see the mass of reports mostly technical, hurled on the press table every day of the investigation, some of them over one hundred pages long, with as many as seventy exhibits to a subject they would understand why it is impossible to print everything, and appreciate the splendid job the twenty or thirty newspapermen covering the investigation are doing.

Present Labor

Conditions in Quebec as revealed in evidence were outlined by the speaker such as whole families doing work at home for manufacturers, making men's pants for fifty cents to one dollar for a dozen pairs—girls working for three dollars a week in rural places. Manufacturers taking orders, turning the same over to contractors, and the contractors to sub-contractors, all making a profit but the wage-earner who is ground down. An instance of a father working in a factory in Quebec, while his wife and two children worked on the same goods at home was related the combined earnings not being sufficient to live on. This was an outcome of mass buying methods and the dictation of prices to manufacturers.

Jungle Economics

The jungle system of economics must be scrapped. If the workers have no money to buy the merchant must suffer. These conditions have existed for a long time but have been brought sharply to attention by the crisis of depression. The Retail Merchants Association of Canada has been working for years to eradicate the evils being exposed in the investigation at Ottawa, said the speaker, who said he was not entertained by the day by day revelations at Ottawa but sickened that such things could be. Pressure of public opinion now will force the issue, and a permanent department with competent officials will have to be formed to deal with the situation.

A Strong Team

Instances were given of men and married women working in a factory in Toronto fifty hours a week for eighteen weeks, their pay envelopes showing from four dollars to five dollars per week. In this connection the speaker said that on one of these envelopes was printed the name of a Toronto bank and an invitation to the effect that this envelope and our savings bank make a strong team which will help you to financial independence.

Toronto Relief

Twenty seven thousand families in Toronto on relief is a sad commentary on present conditions. They have to be supported by the taxpayers. Something must and something is going to be done about it—the destructive forces will take the power out of your hands if you fail to remedy these conditions. That meeting of fifteen thousand people in Toronto the other night to listen to the story of a returned convict is significant and cannot be explained away as just curiosity. Conditions such as these could not exist were there not evils which should be corrected.

Amend B. N. A.

Government lawyers were kept busy trying to find ways and means why not to do things instead of trying to find ways to do them. It was said the British North America Act stood in the way of reform in merchandising methods and Mr. Stevens said that for years this act had been used as an excuse by governments not to do things. The act can be amended for conditions which exist today were not anticipated when the British North American Act was framed.

Promising Signs

One great asset has been secured out of this tremendous costly investigation the development of a social conscience which will not permit such conditions to continue. There is a new motivating spirit in business as shown by the fact that three high executives in large merchandising organizations had declared in favor of putting an end to these conditions, expressing themselves willing to co-operate and subscribe to any regulations to that end. This is a definite social achievement and should be regarded as such, not treated with skepticism and bitterness, but taken as the preliminary to a peace conference to establish better business ethics for all concerned.

Public Referee

Summing up the speaker said there must be permanent legislation and a permanent practical board of practical men in charge, not political appointees for party service. The Retail Merchants' Association has a real and present duty to perform. While this investigation is going on at Ottawa, the big corporations have three skilled lawyers at one hundred dollars a day watching their interests besides a large staff of economists and specialists. The retail merchants are represented only by the speaker. They should at least have a trained economist there to sift out evidence and study conditions to the end that recommendations can be made which will benefit the general public and protect the interests of the retail merchants as well as all others concerned. There could be a licensing system adopted and any business man breaking the rules could be suspended and a sign placed across his place of business stating that it was closed for so many days for violation of government regulations. The main thing to insist upon was that the rules of business be formulated by business men, not by politicians. There should be a public referee to see that the rules are obeyed.

A Live Organization

Belleville Retail Merchants' Association was a real live organization and fully aware of its duty in this crisis, said Mr. Hougham, who urged that Belleville assist in organizing near-by centres which have so far remained aloof, weak links in what should be a continent-wide organization fully equipped to fight and remedy the evils of merchandising.

Following the address the meeting was thrown open for questions which was availed of by a number.

The speaker was introduced by George Woodley and the appreciation of the gathering was expressed by Chas. T. Dolan.

With Mr. Hougham were P. B. Scott, travelling representative of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, and James Kellas, of the insurance department of that organization.

The attendance was much larger than anticipated, nearly one hundred being present including a delegation from Trenton with William McClung, president of Trenton R. M. A. and R. Lamorre, secretary; O. S. Newton, president of Trenton Chamber of Commerce; S. Graham; B. Alyea; Ken Couch.

Officers For 1935

Officers of Belleville Retail Merchants' Association for 1935 were reelected as follows:

President, John McIntosh; vice-president, R. J. Wray; secretary, W. J. Doyle; treasurer, Ed. Logan.

The following executive committee was elected: Laurie Lewis, F. R. Wotten, Russell Woodley, James Galloway, I. E. Shapiro, Wm. Leslie, Douglas Rowe, Frank Domenico, Chas. T. Dolan, Gay Wilson.

TWENTY-SEVEN PLANES SEARCH OCEAN FOR ULM

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Methuen, Mass., Dec. 5 (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dubois do not claim to have the largest family in this region, but they do claim to have the healthiest family of its size. The Dubois have 18 children, ranging in age from two months to 18 years, all born singly, and death has never visited their brood. They have been married 19 years. Dubois, a truck driver, is 42 years old, just 11 days older than his wife.

Ocean About Hawaii is Combed by Frantic Searchers

By WILLIAM H. EWING

Honolulu, Dec 5.—Into a dark and drizzling dawn 27 planes took off from Wheeler Field today to resume the search for Flight Lieut. C. T. P. Ulm and his two companions, with only a "bare chance" they could find the Australian flyers who were forced down at sea yesterday in their flight from Oakland, Calif.

Twenty-four naval planes and three army ships roared into the overcast skies. Aviators, experienced in flying the stretches of water between the islands, said it would be "a miracle" if the searching planes were able to sight the lost flyers, considering weather conditions.

One aviator doubted that, except by accident, the searchers would find the men, even if they were certain to be within a known area of fifty miles square, adding "that's 2,500 square miles to search over. There's just a bare chance, no more."

By WM. H. EWING

Honolulu, Dec. 5 (AP)—Through the air and over the water, army, navy and private searchers widened the hunt today for Flight Lieut. Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions whose transpacific plane was forced to an ocean landing.

Every hour brought new fear that the trim "Star of Australia", a land plane, had sunk beneath the surging Pacific with its three passengers yesterday, when gasoline gave out yesterday.

An all-night cruise by 23 naval craft failed to locate trace of the plane in which Ulm, co-pilot Geo. Littlejohn and navigator-radio operator J. L. Skilling took off from Oakland, Monday, for Honolulu on a contemplated Australia flight. The trio was attempting to chart a commercial transpacific flying route.

Location Not Known

The exact location of the luckless adventurers was not known. The S.O.S. messages flashed from the plane yesterday indicated it came down within 200 miles of Oahu, but Ulm said he was off his course and frantically sought bearings.

NEW THREAT NOTE SENT TO LABATT

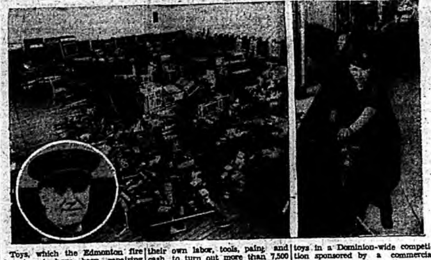
Police Not Disturbed Says Attorney General Roebuck

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Ontario Attorney General, today revealed another threat note had been sent John S. Labatt, wealthy London brewer, who was kidnapped last August. The note which was posted in London, was signed "Three-Fingered Abe," and the signature was followed by four or five crosses, Mr. Roebuck said. Demand was made for money from Labatt.

"The police are not disturbed about it because it is simply in line with efforts made by the gang or those posing as such to obtain money," the Attorney General declared, adding the note was not more blood-curdling in its terms than those previously sent Labatt.

Mr. Roebuck had received a copy of the note but would not reveal its contents to newspapermen.

EDMONTON FIREMEN LEAD IN TOY-MAKING CONTEST



Toys, which the Edmonton fire department have been repairing and building for the past four months, to gladden the hearts of underprivileged children on Christmas day, are shown in the layout ABOVE. The department, 100 men strong, collected old toys, supplied their own labor, tools, paint and cash, to turn out more than 7,500 new playthings. With Christmas several weeks away, the department hopes to touch the 10,000 mark, the highest for such a project, in Canada. Last year the department won a prize of 500 new toys in a Dominion-wide competition sponsored by a commercial concern. Layout shows firemen at work, a collection of toys they have made, and Fire Chief Albert Dutton, who instituted the charity work in 1930.

Cheesemakers' Convention Is Opened at Picton Tuesday

Problems Relating to the Industry Discussed by Experts

ADVERTISING URGED

Reform of Dairy Industry Need to Make it Profitable

Picton, Dec. 5.—The Tuesday afternoon session of the Cheesemakers' Convention, saw the arrival of a host of delegates from points far and near. The Invocation was offered by Rural Dean C. C. Winter, followed by addresses of welcome to the delegates from Mayor E. P. Cox and the Warden of Prince Edward County, Mr. Amos McDonald. Mr. McDonald hoped the delegates would like the town and county so much, that they would want to come back to it. Although isolated Prince Edward County has three hundred miles of coastline; it has produced 120,000 barrels of apples in good years, and was one of the foremost counties of Ontario in the purchase of Victory Bonds during the war. Mr. McDonald said the cheesemakers faced difficult problems that only co-operation could overcome. They have to compete with the creameries; they have to produce cheese as cheaply as tropical countries that do not have to "winter feed" stock; and they must compete with Denmark—a country with a much longer dairying experience—in the British market. Mr. McDonald urged the delegates to get together.

W. E. Brennan responded to the addresses of welcome. He spoke of the leadership of Prince Edward County in Agriculture—noting that this county had been one of the first to become a "tubercular free" area.

Smaller Cheese Yield

County Agricultural Representative, Fred Webster, regretted the depressed condition of the dairy industry in Canada, and, indeed, in the whole world. This was causing the dairymen of Denmark, to kill their low producing cows. Cheese manufacture has dropped in Canada from 47,000,000 lbs. in 1925, to 23,000,000 lbs. in 1933. This was brought about by smaller herds of cattle increase of production in creameries, and because more powdered and skimmed milk was used as the poultry industry expanded.

Advertising Urged

Mr. Webster urged a better development of the home market; and greater advertising to help our foreign market. New Zealand taxes each pound of exported cheese and butter 1-16c to maintain a fund of £2,000 for advertising in Great Britain. The fact that as many as 500 trucks are collecting milk for different firms on some roads greatly increases the overhead.

Mr. James Mitchell, dairy instructor of Vars, Ontario, recalled various experiences when he made cheese in this county twenty-six years ago. He remembered the sudden death of the late John E. Sprague, President of the Cheese Board, following a board meeting. He spoke of the steady improvement in the quality of cheese in Eastern Ontario.

A telegram from G. T. Publow, of Kingston, expressed regret at not being able to attend the convention.

Deplores Farmers' Condition

County Dairy Instructor W. I. Hicks, deplored the condition of the farmers, which is just as unsatisfactory as that of the cheesemakers. Old cans were often used by farmers, that should not be used, because there was no money for new ones.

Mr. Gelineau representing the Eastern Convention advocated cold storage centres for home consumption cheese, and urged the grading of cheese for home consumption.

Grade Cheese For Home Use)

G. W. Hamilton brought best wishes for the success of the convention from Western Ontarflo and advocated the grading of cheese to be used at home.

The object and aims of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association were outlined by the President, Sam Nicholson. This organization aims (1) to educate patrons to supply the best possible grade of milk to produce better cheese; (2) to reduce overhead cost of manufacturing; (3) to guarantee accounts of cheesemakers for their supplies; (4) to improve domestic markets; (5) to co-operate with

Woman May Contest Limerick Reeveship

For the first time on record a woman may contest the Reeveship of a township in Hastings County.

Mrs. Gertrude McMullen present councillor of the Township of Limerick may offer herself as candidate for that office on January 1st, following nomination on the last Monday of the present month. The office of Reeve has been occupied by Reeve R. C. Brett for the past many years.

Hastings County Councillors through diligent search have failed to unearth any record of a woman having served in that capacity before.

TWO MEN BURNED IN TORONTO FIRE

Celebration of Receipt of Pension Cheque Ends Fatally

Toronto, Dec. 5—Two men, celebrating the receipt of a pensions cheque by the elder, last night lost their lives when fire swept the two-room flat which they shared at 76 Oak Street. They were: Edward Workinson, 70, a civic pensioner, and Norman McGann, 35.

The fire, which police and firemen suspect to have been the result of carelessness arising from a day of drinking was confined to the two rooms of the frame building and was of comparatively insignificant proportions, damage to both contents and structure being estimated at $500.

But it almost cost the life of Albert Worthington, grocer, who occupies premises in the same building, when he rushed into the flaming interior and made a futile attempt to reach the elder man whom he could see struggling feebly on the bed in the smoke-filled room.

VERMILYEA CASE COSTS DEBATED AT SHIRE HALL

Warden Jordan Assures Members Hastings Will be Protected

QUESTION OF GUARDS

Rport of Inspector of Prisons is Presented to County Council

A committee to be named by members of Hastings County Council will probe the approximate cost of the upkeep of Harold W. Vermilyea, at present in the County Gaol and will attempt to find out also the probable cost to the county of the recent hearing, the coming trial and the costs incidental to the arraignment of the county's chief prisoner, it was decided at the Wednesday morning session following the reading of the report of the Provincial Inspector of prisons.

The report is reproduced elsewhere in this issue.

The question of special guards for the care of Vermilyea was injected into the discussion of the report.

"How much does the county pay these guards?" asked Reeve L. E. Neal, Marmora. "Or does the county pay them at all?"

"The government pays them, I believe," replied Warden Geo. Jordan.

"The County pays a portion," pointed out Erle Denyes, clerk.

Reeve Burke, Sidney: "Fifty-fifty?"

Mr. Denyes: "The percentage is changed according to the number of prisoners confined over a certain period."

Question of Guards

"Are these guards compulsory?" persisted Reeve Neal.

Wm. West, Reeve of Stirling Village: "I believe they are. I think they are or have been, ordered by the government."

"How much is this case going to cost the county?" questioned J. B. Ford, Reeve of Frankford Village.

"And if it happened in Belleville, why shouldn't Belleville be made to pay the whole cost?" pursued Reeve Burke.

Warden Jordan: "The city is helping on this matter, and the county is also paying a share as I understand it. I believe the logical thing to do on this, however, is to refer it to a committee and let us find out where we stand."

"Wasn't there something in the papers about the Province paying the whole thing on this?" questioned Reeve Sayers, Tweed.

A search was instituted for Mr. Haggerty, county treasurer to find out if any costs had been paid by the county as yet. Mr. Haggerty, too busy to appear in person, sent up word by Reeve Henry Larkin that all the county had paid so far was the wages of the special guard.

"The city is paying the Crown witnesses," I understood Mr. Haggerty to say," said Mr. Larkin, "The county will pay for the jury." The agreement, Mr. Haggerty believes, is that when a case of this kind happens the city will pay the Crown witnesses. That is when it happens in the city."

"But the government pays part

NIAGARA ROCKS FALL INTO GORGE IN THIRD SLIDE

Slide at Table Rock Does Not Change Contour

TUNNEL NOT DAMAGED

Rain and Wind Erosion Credited with Today's Slide

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 5. — A mass of stone estimated to weigh 200,000 or 300,000 tons plunged with a dull road into the Niagara gorge early today far beneath Table Rock, the spot where tourists get closest to the Canadian tip of the horseshoe falls.

Unlike two other rock slides since 1931 from the American and Horseshoe cataracts, the gigantic slides did not change the contour of the falls.

The break occurred at Table Rock, a vantage point from which thousands of persons view the falls each year. It had the affect of changing the face of the cliff from convex to concave.

No water was falling over Table Rock when the huge block broke and plunged into the gorge on the Canadian side.

The rock which fell was part of a sector on which spectators often stood to view the wonder of nature when they came here.

Ellison Kaumeyer, general manager of the Niagara Parks Commission, estimated the fall of rock at 200,000 tons. He said the bread that changed the contour of the falls occurred about half-way down the cliff. He believed a piece of rock about 300 feet long and 100 feet high had fallen into the river.

He said the break did not extend to the curtain of the falls and that it occurred a considerable distance from the portal of the scenic tunnel running from Table Rock and that the tunnel was not damaged.

Third Slide

It was the third slide at Niagara Falls in recent years.

A large curve developed in the American Falls, the smallest of the two cataracts, in 1931. At that time a slice of rock 150 feet deep and 300 feet wide fell into the Niagara River. It was estimated to weigh 30,000 tons.

The second big fall five months ago, brought down rock 100 feet wide and 50 feet or more deep from the Canadian cataract. Table rock was close to this point.

Today's crash of rock was believed to have been heard by only one man, Burt L. Pew, caretaker of Table Rock house.

"I Heard Rumbling"

He said he first mistook the roar for shale falling from the American side of the falls.

FOUND ON FARM AFTER 19 YEARS

Captain Hatfield is Held in United States For Canada

Manchester, N.H., Dec. 4 (CP)—Captain Freeman Hatfield, retired seafaring man who has been raising chickens and living quietly on a small farm in nearby Candia, was held in jail here today on charges of defrauding the Canadian Government of $71,276.72 in the famous Gypsum Queen case.

The 73 year old skipper was arrested on his farm yesterday by a Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman who had spent two years trailing him. He was remanded to jail and refused bail after the "Mounty" explained to a United States Commissioner that Capt. Hatfield was a fugitive from charges that he conspired to defraud the Canadian Government by falsely obtaining reparations for his sailing vessel, which he said was torpedoed by a German submarine during the Great War.

The three-masted Gypsum Queen went down off the Irish coast in July, 1915, and in 1930 the skipper applied to the Canadian Government for reparations. It was then possible to claim compensation from a German government fund for damages arising from illegal warfare.

LANCASTER WANTS BEER VOTE

Toronto, Dec. 5. — Lancaster in Glengarry county, one of three Ontario centres deprived of beverage rooms by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, has asked E. G. Odette, liquor commissioner, to set a date on which a vote may be held regarding their establishment, Mr. Odette said today.

Executives and Managers To be Called to Refute Evidence on Weighing Superintendent Denies Any Need for Short Weighing

DOMINION STORE SLOGAN

Unethical Practice Discountenanced Says C. Scurrah

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—There is no reason why Dominion Store meat managers should give short weight or turn to unethical practices to maintain the desired mark-up or profit, the Mass Buying Commission was told today by Clarence Scurrah, Meat Superintendent in Montreal.

"Sixteen ounces to the pound and one price," has been the Dominion Store slogan, Scurrah said when the chains began their evidence in rebuttal to former employees who told of short-weighting, overcharging and practising other means in vain efforts to produce the desired profit.

Any competent butcher, Scurrah said, could cut a carcass of beef and secure without difficulty the prices set by Dominion Store headquarters without cheating customers.

Waste on Beef

Scurrah could give no reason why some chain managers would give short weight. He was pressed by Chairman W. W. Kennedy and other commissioners for a reason but could offer none. Instructions were sent to managers regularly to give full weights but occasionally some men disregarded them.

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Fifteen or 20 executives and store managers will be called by Dominion Stores in an effort to refute the evidence of four former employees who told the Parliamentary Mass Buying Commission they gave short weights and followed other illegal and unethical practices.

Asked as to the ex-manager's statements they were not allowed for wastage and that, in order to achieve the required percentage, they had to resort to short-weighting, Mr. Scurrah produced a list of beef tests made by R. Counsel. F. C. Rice, one of the butchers had said that his watse on a quarter of beef was eight pounds, yet the Dominion Stores on the basis of the test allowed 18½ pounds for a side, said witness. The allowance on a carcass was 35 pounds. That was all thrown away.

The supervisor is instructed to destroy any meat not saleable Scurrah declared. The shrinkage of meat hung in the abbatoirs for four days would be about 1-8th of an ounce to one pound. The company allowed to the stores more than the value of the actual shrinkage that takes place.

Great care was taken in the selection and instruction of managers. If they were men with personality and showed promise the company would accept a lower percentage.

Inexperienced men should take the supervisors into their confidence, admit their lack of experience and ask for allowance to be made for that. This would be given said Scurrah.

EXONERATE GUARD IN ERTEL'S DEATH

Jury Find Bullett Fired in Course of Duty

Mimico, Ont., Dec. 5 (CP)—Guard J. A. Moran was exonerated from any blame in connection with the death of Alfred H. Ertel, 28, shot and killed during an alleged attempt to escape from Reformatory here, by a coroner's jury early today.

Ertel died on November 29 after being struck by a bullet fired "in the course of duty," the verdict said. Ertel was killed, evidence indicated, when he made a break for freedom with three other inmates—Frank Parker, 20, Ed Chard, 26, and George Kind, 32.

The fatal shot was fired after two guards had been badly beaten by the inmates, according to the evidence. Although the three other participants denied handling weapons, guards identified a metal bar, a 16-inch leg of a chair and a jar of cold cream as having been seen in the hands of the men.

CELLS OF CANCER KILLED BY SERUM

Discovery in London Tells of Killing Cells when Removed from Body

By OSCAR LEIDING

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—Discovery of a serum which kills cancer cells after they have been removed from the human body, and does no injury to healthy human tissue so removed, was announced here today by Dr. Thomas Lumsden, director of the London Cancer Research Laboratories.

Lumsden, one of the best known among Conservative cancer scientists, said the serum cannot at present be used on human beings. He reported his discovery to the Court of Governors of the London Hospital.

The scientist, emphasizing strongly that the serum "is only in the experimental stage and has not reached the point where it can be tried on human beings, nevertheless said a stage had been reached in which the serum will kill cancer cells removed from the human body without damage to normal cells similarly treated.

The serum, Dr. Lumsden reported, was obtained from the blood of an animal after cancerous cells from an animal of a different species had been implanted.

(Human cancer cells live and grow indefinitely in laboratory test tubes and healthy tissues do the same. These furnish the material for experiments outside the body).

As a further step in his investigation, the scientist said it was found that the serum will kill cancer cells implanted from one animal to another animal of the same species, and so raises the resistance that once animals are cured it is impossible to infect them with cancer again.

The report, stating that Lumsden and his co-workers are engaged in refining the serum, concludes:

"The most that can be said, is that this line of research offers distinct encouragement. It might be mentioned that there is no evidence that cancer is due to a germ or is infectious in the general sense."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Some light snowfalls have also occurred in Southern Saskatchewan. Pressure is high south of the Great Lakes and in Western Canada. The weather is becoming somewhat colder in Quebec and continues cold in Manitoba and near Lake Superior but comparatively mild in Alberta.

Lake Superior— Moderate westerly winds; fair and rather cold.

Kenora and Rainy River—Moderate westerly winds; fair; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — Moderate winds; partly cloudy; stationary or a little higher temperature.

Alberta—Westerly winds; fair, with much the same temperature.

COUNCIL PAUSES TO PAY EULOGY

H. J. Clarke, B.A., Appointed 27 Years Ago Today is Inspector

Hastings County Councillors at the Wednesday morning session of December Council paused in the midst of their official business to offer through a resolution their congratulations and confidence to a well known official of the county who today is observing his twenty-seventh anniversary of appointment to office.

Just twenty-seven years ago today Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., was appointed by the council of that year to the office of Public School Inspector for South Hastings, an office he still holds.

In the resolution moved by Reeve Judson Gunter, the only present sitting member of council of that year, and seconded by James Sprackett, many more happy years of active service were wished the veteran inspector. "We made a good choice the day we appointed Mr. Clarke inspector," Mr. Gunter pointed out in voicing his compliments on the occasion.

"A good many changes have taken place in the period since my appointment," stated Inspector Clarke in referring briefly to the public expression of appreciation of his services. "Most of them have been for the better," he added.

QUINTE CITY REVUE AT CITADEL ENJOYED

Songster Brigade Under Direction of Mrs. Adjutant Martin

A unique programme was rendered last night in the Salvation Army Citadel, announced as the Quinte City Revue. It was rendered by the Young People of the local Corps under the auspices of the Songster Brigade and directed by Mrs. Adjutant Martin. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. Shortt, General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and a delighted audience gave unstinted applause.

The programme was varied in character and comprised the following numbers:

"In Want of a Servant," and "School Days," both being repeated from previous occasions by popular request. Instrumental numbers included Hawaiian selections by a group of guitars. Readings by Miss Catherine Smith, pianoforte selection by Miss Grace Martin, and a cornet solo, "Twas a Very Happy Day," by Deputy Bandmaster J. Green, and saxophone quintette by young men.

The closing number was a temperance tableaux, entitled "Saved," which clearly represented the Army's attitude to the present day "bar room" in so-called evening dress. The scenes were as follows:

1. A modern beverage room, spending the last cent, and a drunkard's arrest.

2. A little ragged girl's pleas for "daddy's" release.

3. Angels of mercy who won the drunkard for Christ, and a re- home.

The closing remarks of Adjutant Martin declared that the Army's principles and membership were positively stainless concerning intoxicating drink. "It touches not, tastes not, nor handles not," and the Salvation Army would challenge the Church of Jesus Christ to rise up and serve notice on the authorities of the day that we pray God that this "curse" of drink may be speedily wiped out.

EX-SERVICE WOMEN
14 Geddes Street,
Belleville, Ont.

The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.
The Editor,
Dear Sir,—

The news of an ex-service woman asking permission to join the Legion at Kitchener, interested me.

I am sure that here in Belleville we must have a number of ex-service women, "Nurses", "Wrap", "Wrens", "Waacs" who would like to get together and talk of old times; in all celebrations; services, etc., no request is ever made for ex-service women to get together and join with our military and naval comrades.

How about it, Comrades, having an open night for us?

"THE CANADIAN" BECOMES MONTHLY

Specialization in Printing Brings Changes

Owing to the recent reorganization of the School for the Deaf program and the consequent introduction of a full time vocational training course in the print shop, it has been found necessary to make more extensive use of the linotype and press machines for teaching purposes. In order to provide all the boys, specializing in the department, with a graded course of instruction and sufficient hours of practice, part of the time heretofore devoted to the production of The Canadian will be utilized for training purposes. As a result The Canadian is being changed from semi-monthly to a monthly journal of nine issues per annum published the first day of each month from October to June.

The new journal will be more largely concerned with matters pertaining to the School and its graduates and less with matters of general newspaper interest.

SHORT SESSION OF CITY COUNCIL

Accounts And Routine Business Only Transacted

The Session of the City Council held last evening was one of the shortest on record, the members spending but a short time in the Committee room and less in the council chamber as only routine business was up for transaction. In little groups the results of the election were discussed but no statements were forthcoming.

After the accounts had been passed it was recommended that the offer of $250 each for two lots on William Street be accepted from Dan Doyle, the contractor to erect on these lots houses not below the value of $3,500 each and subject to construction bylaw in this area. The City Council retained the right to move the sewer on this property to their discretion and they requested the purchaser to build one of the houses so that it would not interfere with the sewer in any respect.

The tender of the Ontario Shore Gas Company for 30 tons of coke at $9.75 a ton was accepted by the committee. Hockey cushions will be erected at the old curling rink for use of the Ki-Y hockey loop who will use this building for games during the winter. An option on a lot on Cannifton Road for $250 was given until April 1st. and the clerk and mayor instructed to sign such an agreement. Cheques for the municipal elections were ordered passed by the council. Two pictures taken of the Centennial will be purchased by members of the Council, one being sent to Mayor Stewart of Toronto, and the other will be hung in the Council Chamber.

A bill of $54 for the breaking of glass of the Brickman window when the new sidewalk was being laid in front of the premises was ordered paid, the Public Works department being responsible for the damage, when a piece of chipped cement struck the window.

This concluded the business of the evening. Those present were Mayor Tice, Aldermen Woodley, Hill, McCreary, Donahue, Brickman, Wills, Domenico, Cushing, Harvey, Safe, Marshall. Alderman Cushing was in the chair in the committee of the whole.

WATCH FOBS ARE GIVEN MEMBERS BY THE WARDEN

Warden George Jordan States Business Better at Council Opening

AUDITORS APPLY

Question of Pension For R. E. Colling Sent to Ways And Means

At the last meeting of the year members of Hastings County Council, who gathered from throughout the county opened their December session at Shire Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

Warden George Jordan in welcoming the representatives of the various townships spoke briefly.

"The past has been a strenuous year, but we appear to be emerging from it with little loss. Conditions seem to be much better than those of one year ago, and from indications it would appear that at last we are on the uptrend, rather than downward as we have been during the past few years. We are at last able to see light ahead."

From a box on the rostrum the Warden then lifted a number of smaller ones and visited the desk of each sitting member carrying a memento or souvenir of his term of office for the year. A beautifully engraved silver watch fob with the words: "Compliments of 1934, Warden Jordan", was then given each member.

"I hope gentlemen you will accept these as a little reminder of the very pleasant year we have spent together," he said following the distribution.

Applications for Auditors

Three applications were received by the Council for the position as auditor of the County books for the year 1934. The applications, sent in by Garret D. C. Morton, of Tweed; Donald Whytock, of Madoc and by Walter Brett, of Madoc, were referred to the Committee of the Whole on Bylaws.

Whether R. E. Colling former turnkey of the Hastings County Gaol will be retired with part pension rests with the decision of the council in the committee of Ways and Means. It was pointed out in a communication received from the office of the Deputy Minister at Toronto, that the officer, who was appointed in 1906 was eligible for pension. Under Section 256 of the Municipal Act annual retiring allowance may be granted during the remaining years, not exceeding three fifths of his average annual salary for the next preceding three years of his service on ceasing to hold office. Such an allowance is regarded as part of the jail expense and the county is reimbursed by the Province for a portion of this expense.

Starlings were officially branded "a pest, a public nuisance, and the government was powerless to combat them without the help of individuals of the province". Councillors were informed in a communication received from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. The letter was in answer to a resolution passed at the June session of the council asking that a bounty be placed on the birds by the government. "This is impossible," stated the letter.

"We do, however, urge that all residents of your county work in conjunction with the Agricultural College in cutting down the numbers of the birds by trapping them." Full directions for building these traps will be sent upon request they were informed. The letter was fyled.

The first meeting was brief with adjournment being called early.

KIWANIANS PLAN FOR INSTALLATION

Ladies Night in Connection and Rev. "Bill" Johnston as Speaker

Installation of officers at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club near the first of January will be one of the biggest meetings of the entire year if the plans laid by the members at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday is carried out. It is anticipated that Rev. "Bill" Johnston of Toronto, who has spoken to this club on several occasions will be present to deliver the principal address. The Kiwanian has no peer as an after dinner speaker and he always has a message, that is of interest to the members.

It has been decided that a ladies' night will be held in conjunction with the installation of officers and a strong committee has been named to carry out the program. Jack McIntosh and Eddie Logan will be in charge of one section, the stunts will be in charge of Joe Imlah and Herbert Fox and the entertainment in charge of Ernie Finkle, Eddie Shapiro, Leo B. Riggs and George Griffin. The idea of having a dance at the conclusion of the program was vetoed by the members as they believed that not all would stay for the dance and the expense would be too heavy for the club. The dance for the club will be held in February and the Chairman Frank Domenico is now busy laying plans for this annual event. The dance last year was an unqualified success and the chairman promises a better one this year.

There was no speaker for the luncheon on Tuesday and the meeting was thrown open for discussion of any matter vital to the club interest. The President, Eddie Shapiro, expressed the opinion that all should get behind any enterprise, that is sponsored by the club, whether they believed in the principle or not. The directors always give every enterprise thorough probing before giving it the OK and it is up to the members to support the same. The question of selling the Christmas seals was brought up and it was learned that some 500 packages had been sold and the response has been quite generous to the scheme. It is anticipated that through this sale, sufficient money will be raised to sponsor all Christmas activities of the club.

NIAGARA ROCKS FALL INTO GORGE

"I heard an unusual rumble beneath the constant roar of the falls," Pew said, "and a moment later the grinding roar of cracking, falling rock."

"There was a distinct tremor and I hurried to the window when I heard what seemed to be falling rocks. It was dark and I could not see much but it sounded like a huge fall."

Mr. Kaumeyer and others found the pile of rock in the water when they investigated Pew's report.

They went through the tunnel which runs from Table Rock house out under the ledge to view the stone where it fell.

Reports the tunnel had been blocked were denied by Mr. Kaumeyer. He said the new break was probably caused by erosion by wind and rain.

The dislodged stone was irregular in shape, but similar to that which fell on August 13.

August Break

The August break was at a dry spot that later was covered by water as a result of the rock fall.

Today's break occurred where the cataract joins the shore of the Niagara River. It was a projecting ledge slightly below the mainland surface, but the fall did not break the surface line. It left a huge cave in the gorge bank. It is not visible from the Canadian shore of the river.

J. W. Archer, accountant for the Queen Victoria Park Commission, estimated the fall at from 150,000 to 200,000 tons "more or less".

Tunnel Undamaged

He said the roar of the fall could be heard for a considerable distance.

"It fell in front of one of the Table Rock tunnel exits," Archer said. "However, this did not prevent use of the undamaged main tunnel for there are several other exits. The line exit blocked will be closed until the rock can be cleared away."

VERMILYEA CASE COSTS DEBATED

of this," pointed out Warden Jordan.

Hint of Special Assize

"It is said that they were trying to get a special session arranged for the trial of Vermilyea to speed things up," commented Reeve West.

Reeve Neal: "I heard that at the present rate the county is being taxed somewhere in the neighborhood of fifty dollars a week for guards for Vermilyea. If this is kept up until spring there will be quite a charge against the county."

Reeve Sayers: "Is there anything in that report regarding the pay of the guards?"

Reeve West after a perusal could find no mention of pay.

Warden Jordan was sure that the County Council would not be overtaxed on the matter. "You can rest assured that every precaution is being taken to see that this council does not pay anything that is not necessary and to safeguard the interests of the ratepayers of the county," he told them.

"Why is it that no special guards are needed in jails such as at Toronto and elsewhere?" asked Reeve Neal.

"The jails are different in Toronto," pointed out Deputy Reeve of Hungerford, D'Alton Clarke.

Council is Assured

"As a member of the Department the Administration of Justice for this county I can say that this county is not paying for things that they do not have to pay for," stated Reeve Jas. J. Pennock, of Carlow. "Today a question has been asked on this floor—who pays and how much? No one can answer that offhand. The Crown Attorney himself has to refer to the books at his hand to find out. Even the judge must resort to the Act. No County Councillor can come out and say that they pay so much, or that they pay at all. Anything that we should not pay for, this committee certainly will not approve, you can rest assured."

"I feel that this county will be protected to the last letter of the law by the committee," said Warden Jordan.

The committee to be named will enquire into the matter of fees, rates and payments and report back.

ONION WEIGHS ALMOST 2 POUNDS

Following previous announcement relating to oversized onions being grown in Hastings county John Livesey, local purveyor of meats, informed the Ontario Intelligencer recently that he had grown onions in his garden, R. R. No. 2, Belleville, far in access weight to any others he had previously read about. This week Mr. Livesey produced a large onion, dug from his own garden, weighing one pound 15½ ounces. The vegetable was grown from Canadian seed.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

The first five players in the National Hockey League's Big Seven were unchanged today after last night's three games. Down near the bottom of the rank however, it was something of a jumble with six players counting a total of seven points, thus stretching the Big Seven into a big twelve for the time being.

The standings:

	G	A	Pts
Harvey Jackson, Toronto	10	4	14
C. Conacher, Toronto	6	7	13
Johnny Sorrell, Detroit .	4	7	11
Cooney Weiland, Detroit .	3	6	9
Aurie, Detroit	2	7	9
Goodfellow, Detroit	4	4	8

T. Cook, Chicago; Lewis, Detroit; Howe, St. Louis; Robinson, Montreal; Schriner, Americans and Mondou, Canadiens were all tied for seventh position with 7 points.

Mrs. Annie Hadley and daughter Ruby are in Toronto for a few days.

Miss Vivien Mitchell spent Saturday in Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery and son Douglas were tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery of Mount Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson spent Saturday in Madoc.

Mr. Ralph Wrightman spent Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Arnott.

Mr. Leonard Keen and Mr. and Mrs. James Keen of Madoc spent a day last week with Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson.

"Triple Group"

The meeting of the Triple Group opened by singing the hymn "Work For the Night Is Coming". The Lord's prayer followed in unison. A reading was then given by Mrs. B. Patrick and a vocal solo by Miss Ethel Maybee. A contest was then enjoyed followed by a piano solo by Mrs. P. Brown. Mrs. C. Smith gave a reading and another solo was then given by Miss Maybee. The rest of the program provided a contest, and closing with the Mizpah Benediction. Grace was sung and a lovely lunch was served and a social half hour was spent. The collection was $4.75.

Mr. George Arnott who has been quite ill is recovering.

Mrs. Harold Noble and son spent Thanksgiving visiting in Rochester.

Mrs. George Rogers spent the week-end with her brother, Mr. Jack Simmons at Elmira.

Mrs. W. Rose who has been quite ill is improved.

Mrs. Joe Barry has returned home after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. M. O'Malley.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Arnott spent the tea hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Johnson on Sunday.

Mrs. S. Orr is spending a few days in Peterboro.

Trinity Church Guild

The regular meeting of the Trinity Church Guild was held on Thursday afternoon in the parish hall with the president, Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson, in the chair. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by Scripture reading and prayer by the president. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved also an excellent treasurer's report given showing the fall objective to have been passed. Roll call showed an unusually large attendance. Several letters were read by the secretary, Mrs. May Frost, in answer to letters of condolence sent to members recently bereaved, also thanking the Guild for flowers received on Remembrance Day. A business period followed and a date set for the party to be given the winning team in the copper contest. The meeting was closed by Rev. A. S. McConnell and delicious refreshments served by Mrs. May Frost and Mrs. Tom Burkett.

Young People's League

The Young People's League opened on Monday evening with hymn 146 followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Damon Conley had charge of the program, the first item being 254. Miss Helen Gay offered prayer and the Scripture Reading followed being read by Kathleen Hibbert. Miss L. Broatch gave the topic and a reading was given by Miss Gladys Zufelt, also a reading by Miss Eva Morrow. The meeting then closed by singing hymn 278 followed by prayer.

Live Wire Group

The Live Wire Group met at the home of Mrs. W. Pollard on Wednesday evening with Mrs. H. Slingerland in charge of the meeting. This was the last group meeting until the Ladies' Aid meets to decide if they will again form the different groups. The program which was a huge success was as follows: A vocal solo by Miss Ethel Maybee, accompanied with her guitar; a reading by Mrs. Osterhout; a reading by Mrs. E. Lawrence; a contest, Mrs. J. Dafoe being the prize winner; there was a lucky number prize given and Mrs. Hinds had the lucky number. Miss Ethel Maybee then gave several other musical items of vocal and guitar. A new convener was then installed, Mrs. P. Mikel being chosen. A new treasurer was also installed, being Mrs. D. Leavitt. A lunch was then served by the hostess and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

Late Mrs. Margaret Breakal

Frankford has lost one of its oldest and most beloved citizens, Mrs. Margaret Breakal, who passed peacefully to rest Nov. 22, 1934. Mrs. Breakal was born at Broadside in the county of Fermanagh, Ireland, March 23, 1843. She came to Canada when fifteen years old and resided in Elzevir township, Hastings county, until twenty-eight years ago when she came to Frankford where she has resided with her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Windover. She was a faithful and valued member of the United Church and an earnest worker having taught classes of boys in the Sunday school for many years. Many of those boys remember with gratitude the helpfulness of this sainted, Christian teacher. The funeral was held Sunday, Nov. 25, interment in Frankford cemetery. The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. P. Lane, assisted by Rev. A. S. McConnell of the Anglican Church. Mr. McConnell, in quite recent years, came from the same community in Ireland from which Mrs. Breakal formerly came. Left to mourn her passing are one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Windover of Frankford, Ont., and two sons, Dr. J. E. Countrymen of Grafton, N.D., and G. H. Countrymen, Fergus Falls, Minn.

FEDERAL BOARDS URGED BY STEVENS TO RULE INDUSTRY

Commission of Wide Powers to Correct Evils of Business

BAN "LOSS LEADERS"

Board Should Have Power Such as Railway Commission Has

Montreal, Dec. 5.—The people of Canada today stood challenged by Hon. H. H. Stevens to "come with me in a drive for practical action" to clear up abuses and maladjustments in the country's economic life.

Not as one seeking leadership of a party but as one determined to arouse thoroughly Canadian public opinion so that every leader of every government in the country would be forced to act to stamp out sweat shops, to clear up the housing problem, to improve farming conditions and to work for prosperity, the former Minister of Trade and Commerce last night laid down a program of concrete proposals.

The former minister of trade and commerce and former chairman of the commission investigating mass buying and price spreads addressed an enthusiastic overflow audience of more than eight thousand sponsored by the Retail Merchants' Association in Atwater Market.

Federal Trade Board

Chief of his proposals was the establishment of a permanent federal trade and industries commission, charged with:

Administration of an amended combines investigation act.

Enforcement of criminal code provisions against false advertising which he characterized as "one of the most pernicious influences in modern business."

Enforcement of the Weights and Measures Act—"if anyone, independent merchant or member of a chain gives the public short weight, I'd padlock his store and placard it: 'this store closed for three days for short-weighting the public'."

Elimination of "loss leader" advertising, and definition of what are and what are not "fair trade practices".

Full analysis of the annual reports of every incorporated company in Canada, and issuance of adequate publicity on the financial condition of each. "I'd amend the Companies' Act to force every dollar of stock issued to represent a dollar of assets or of money in the company. That is not new, Germany has had such a law since 1884, but in Canada we allow companies to write up assets $10,000,000, and float security issues which are entirely unwarranted by assets."

Finally, this commission would act as referee in trade matters in much the same manner as the Board of Railway Commissioners does in railway matter—"that is, to stand between business and industrial associations and the public."

Mr. Stevens ridiculed statements made recently that powers of parliament did not permit measures for evils exposed by the Price Spreads' Inquiry. He proclaimed his intention of using every scrap of power and authority which the Dominion Government enjoyed.

"I want to stamp out the spirit of defeatism which, even before the Royal Commission has completed its findings . . . wails that 'unhappily, nothing can be done'".

Waiting Scorned

Mr. Stevens scorned a waiting game.

"Why wait? Why all this piffling talk about waiting for an election, waiting for the express mandate of the people? Does anyone need a mandate from the people to work for prosperity? Does anyone need a mandate to clear up the housing problem in our cities? To improve farm conditions, so that the farmer can get a few cents more for his products. To stamp out sweatshops and give the working man a decent living?

"On the contrary, I say that every day in which those conditions exist, marks a dereliction of duty on the part or our governments."

Unfair business practices and restriction of credit were the causes of depression, he said.

"My complaint is that those who are the chief custodians of the country's accumulated wealth are not taking that position of active leadership which their position of trust demands. We have a right to expect these men to make active credit that is now dormant. Our accumulated surplus capital is in the hands of those who are unable to direct its use for the benefit of the country as a whole."

Mr Stevens urged unceasing action. "Merchants get behind the Association under whose auspices this meeting is held (the Retail Merchants Association). Citizens, get after your local member, tell him to forget politics and devote at least a substantial portion of the next session to the welfare of Canada. Demand action. Give this movement nation-wide support and we'll soon conquer the depression.

"I seek the leadership of no party. My aim is if possible to get Canadian Democracy, what we call public opinion, so thoroughly aroused that leader of every government will be forced along that path that leads to . . ." The rest of the sentence was lost in tumultuous applause.

HEN POWER

JUST as it takes a big strong well-fed horse to pull a heavy load—it requires a big strong properly nourished hen to stand the strain of heavy egg production.

Quaker Ful-O-Pep Egg Mash provides the nutrition essential to maintain the weight, strength and health of laying hens so that they will be capable of producing a maximum number of large, firm-shelled uniform eggs.

This is due to the fact that the base of Quaker Ful-O-Pep is fresh oatmeal, blended with choice grains and containing exactly the right scientific proportion of molasses, cod liver meal, proteins and minerals.

ROUTINE BUSINESS AT PRESBYTERY

Allocations Accepted and Many Reports Are Given

The regular meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston Presbyterian Church of Canada, met in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Dr. A. G. Cameron presided and Rev. R. J. Craig, M.A., clerk of Presbytery officiated in that capacity.

The first half hour of the morning session was occupied with devotional exercises.

Remits from Synod to Presbyteries re enlargement of Synodical powers relative to responsibility of ministry within its bounds and Home Mission Work, also within its bounds were briefly considered. The recommendation is that the assembly's committee inquire diligently into the whole situation. The following recommendation was made.

A delegation from Burnbrae requested that steps be taken through Presbytery to have Rev. Mr. McMillan who has been serving as stated supply and that charge installed as a regular minister of the congregation, and a Home Mission grant will be applied for anet thereto. Mr. McMillan's services were highly commended by representatives present.

Reports Presented

Rev. S. M. Scott presented the S. S. and Y.P.S. report as convener of this department. Mr. Scott suggested that ministers should supervise the S. S. statistical reports so that he might be enabled to present an accurate report to Synod's convener. He stressed the importance of positive instruction through charts, lantern slides at definite intervals.. The shorter catechism with clear interpretation of its question and answers should be emphasized, for which purpose lantern slides have been proposed. Home Department and cradle department work is most important. Teacher training classes under the supervision of the minister should be conducted in many congregations and our youth should be trained to systematic giving for missionary purposes monthly and on the occasion of Rally Day and Mother's Day. The importance of building character through the reading and understanding of the Bible as a religious text book.

The convener recommended that the chief purpose of the Y.P.S. organization should be to enable our youth to realize their lives in useful service. Several of the Presbyteries spoke to the report presented. The Provincial Y.P.S. rally held recently in Toronto was reported as being most inspiring.

Inasmuch as we believe the Synods of the church have adequate powers for the establishment and supervision of mission work within bounds we do not deem it advisable that the powers of Synod be further enlarged.

Allocations Accepted

Rev. C. E. Kidd reported on the budget of Presbytery. He stated that the Presbytery averaged well with the several Presbyteries of Synod. His report was encouraging. He called attention to the splendid digest on the church's work as presented in the November copy of the Presbyterian Record. Plans for making allocations for next ecclesiastical year are being made. It was recommended that Presbytery accept the allocation for 1935.

The Budget Committee was appointed for 1934 with the addition of Rev. Mr. Walker of Belleville.

It was agreed that the next regular meeting of Presbytery will be held in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston on 5th day of March next at ten o'clock in morning.

W. C. LOCKYER IS BAND PRESIDENT

At Most Interesting Meeting Band Enjoys Turkey Dinner

With all members at hand the annual meeting and election of officers of the Belleville Municipal Band was held in the Greenleaf Building last evening, when W. C. Lockyer, well-known bandsman, was elected to the office of President of the organization for the ensuing year. The meeting was the largest attended of the year, with a 100 per cent attendance at hand, following which a turkey supper was enjoyed, the tasty meal having been prepared by the wives of the bandsmen. The entire evening's programme was rather impromptu, but thoroughly enjoyed.

Retiring President Garn E. Dobbs occupied the chairman's place of honor during the programme and spoke of the progress made by the Belleville Municipal Band during the past year. "Our organization enjoys its largest membership since its foundation, while the enthusiasm shown by the individual members assures its success for the future," added Past President Dobbs as he notably pointed out the nmber of young musicians to have linked up with the organization during the past two years. Speeches from other officers and members of the band were in order, while the final item of business was a general discussion towards further enlargement of the Belleville Municipal Band. A programme of instrumental and vocal solos along with community singing composed the evening's programme that was followed by the delicious supper.

President—W. C. Lockyer.
Vice-President—Bert Bell.
Managers—J. H. Deshane and G. E. Dobbs.
Secretary—J. H. Deshane.
Treasurer—Reg. Wardle.
Executive Committee—The six officers and B. Brown, W. Harte and H. Greenleaf.
Property Committee—J. Mouck, L. Kelly, S. McElrath.
Librarian—J. Smith.
Auditors—W. P. Youdale and S. Garrand.
Pep Committee—E. Smith and K. Wardle.

ULM'S FATE DARK, OCEAN IS SILENT

Twenty-four naval seaplanes were serviced during the night and made ready for a takeoff at dawn to search an area within 300 miles of the Archipelago.

They were aided by three army amphibian planes which were ordered to base on each at Kauai, the northernmost Hawaiian Island; Hawaii, the southernmost island and Oahu in the centre of the area being covered.

Search is Pressed

Meanwhile, the search went forward by surprise craft of the navy, private boats and scores of Japanese fishing sampans en route to and from the fishing grounds.

The theory grew among naval officers that Ulm's plane had landed short of Oahu and to the northeast.

Agreeing with this theory Commander E. W. Tod directed naval searchers to scour this territory thoroughly.

Commander Tod said he doubted if the plane still was afloat.

"When a plane comes down on the water, it comes down hard," he said. "When a land plane hits the water it probably turns turtle Although radio reports seemed to indicate the plane was upright when it landed yesterday, after it landed there still is danger of its becoming water-logged and sinking.

One by one, the planes which started the search yesterday, returned to their bases last night, but 18 submarines, three light mine layers and two coast guard vessels continued the hunt throughout the night. Searchlights played across the darkness in hopes of locating the missing airmen.

The fliers' first warning that they were in danger came at 7.30 a.m. yesterday (1 p.m. E.S.T.)

Out of Gasoline

"We have very little gasoline left," Skilling messaged.

Soon followed another message that the plane was off its course. Then:

"Going down into sea now. Plane will float.

"We are turning into wind. Come pick us up."

But a few moments later,

"On water now. S.O.S!"

This sinister flash, shortly after 2.30 p.m. (E.S.T.) signalized the start of the search for the trio whose radio spluttered into silence.

ADD FEAR 6

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 5 (AP)—Speculation on whether the missing plane "Star of Australia" was afloat in Hawaiian waters grew today as airmen recalled a joking phrase of Flight Lieutenant Chas. T. P. Ulm, "I don't intend to get my feet wet."

The remark was made here Monday just before Ulm and two companions took off for Honolulu.

There was no life raft aboard the plane but Ulm said it could float for several days in a calm sea if it were forced down as it was yesterday when the fuel supply ran out. The ship's fuselage and wings are fabric-covered.

Mechanics Doubtful

Mechanics at the Oakland airport disclosed they had privately considered the plane unsafe. They declared the fabric was patchy, and that loose ends hung from wings and fuselage.

Some airmen here pointed to the empty gasoline tanks as possibly being saviours of Ulm and his companions, co-pilot George Littlejohn and navigator J. L. Skilling.

The tanks held 605 gallons of gasoline at the takeoff and it was pointed out their buoyancy when empty might keep the plane afloat until rescuers arrived.

Flares Carried

A small supply of flares was obtained just before the flight started. The fliers had six boxes of chicken sandwiches and other "picnic food" and two gallons of fresh water. Emergency equipment also included a small condenser to distill drinking water from the sea if necessary.

Power for the plane's two-way short wave radio was furnished by a small, wind-driven generator but there was doubt whether the apparature would work with the plane on the water with little wind to drive the generator propellor.

Obituary

FRED LUFFMAN

Word was received in the city late Tuesday afternoon of the death of Fred Luffman in Mossbank, Sask., after a sudden illness and it has been decided to bring the body to this city for burial. The late Mr. Luffman was born in Belleville 43 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Luffman, 213 Dundas Street east of this city. He was educated in this city and at the opening of the Great War enlisted but was turned down at Valcartier on account of ill health. He was retained, however, and during hostilities acted as drill sergeant, later doing police work at Fort Henry. The deceased was a telegraph operator and at the time of his death was Station Agent at Mossbank, Sask., he having lived in the west for the past eighteen years. The late Mr. Luffman was a member of the United Church and fraternally was identified with the Masonic order being a member of the A. F. and A.M. and R.A.M at Weyburn, Sask. Left to mourn his loss are his parents in this city, a widow and one daughter at Mossbank, Sask., two brothers, Morley and Ward at home, also three sisters, Mrs. McDonald of this city; Mrs. (Dr.) Brown of Cornwall and Miss Merle at home.

GEORGE MILLIGAN—Tamworth

Napanee, Dec. 5.—Lennox and Addington county Tuesday lost one of its most prominent farmers in the sudden death of George Milligan at his residence, Sheffield township, near Tamworth. He was in his 70th year, and was a son of the late James Milligan. He had farmed his whole lifetime in the same district and was a well-known cattleman. Formerly a Presbyterian, he later became identified with the United Church at Tamworth. He was a Conservative and a member of the Orange order. Surviving besides his widow who was formerly Miss Hyland, are three sons, James, Harold and Clifford; two daughters, Mrs. Warren Hawley and Miss Edna, and two brothers, Thomas and Adam, all residing in the immediate neighborhood.

PROF. GIBSON IS APPOINTED

Prof. A. L. Gibson of the faculty of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph for the past twenty years has been appointed superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kingston. He will succeed Mr. L. A. Zufelt who is now retiring on superannuation. Prof. Gibson was associate professor of dairy chemistry at the Guelph College. Mr. Zufelt has controlled the destinies of the Eastern Ontario School for many years and is known in dairying circles throughout the province.

CHRISTMAS TRADING

With municipal elections over in Belleville, the citizens will settle down to the preparations for the coming Christmas season.

Christmas is only a few weeks away and has the quality of approaching with surprising rapidity unless plans are made long in advance for the coming of Santa Claus.

Belleville merchants have not been delaying the preparations for the coming of the happiest season in the year until the elections were passed. A glance at the excellent displays in the city stores is proof sufficient of this.

Merchants are justified in expecting an unusually big Christmas trade for conditions indicate that there is a better feeling abroad, a feeling of greater security and independence. Not long ago the Belleville Better Days buying campaign was an outstanding success, proof of the greater buoyancy of feeling among the people.

It is a known fact that an immense amount of restoration and rehabilitation work awaits. It is necessary, just as a financial expert said on Monday speaking of the United States, "America needs to be rebuilt." The lean years just passed have prevented a great deal of work, repair and restoration are in consequence big issues to be attacked in the days which are ahead.

If this rebuilding will be necessary in say, the building trades, it is just as true in every line as for instance in the dress and clothing industry because wardrobes have been pretty well depleted. With every industry the same holds true.

It is this which gives the promise of unusually active business which has been steadily expanding for the past eighteen months.

On such a foundation business men build high hopes of a great expansion of the buying during the pre-Christmas season.

The same expansiveness is to be seen in the buyer with the increased feeling that betterment is already at work.

The Santa Claus spirit is the best spirit which can be manifested at this time.

DR DAFOE

How great an impression Dr. A. R. Dafoe of Corbeil has made on the minds of the medical profession and the public is indicated by the fame which has come his way as a consequence of his association with the bringing into the world of the Dionne quintuplets. It is now proposed that he be recommended for the Nobel prize in medical science.

Dr. Dafoe leaves for Toronto and New York and everywhere he goes he is more famous than a Hollywood star.

He was content to live out his medical career up north where in the ordinary course of duties he would probably not have become famous unless it had been for the unusual quintuple births in which he was called professionally. But when the call came he was prepared and his devotion to the five babies' welfare and his skill in practice have been so marked that the entire medical world hails him as the proof of the importance of the family doctor.

Dr. Dafoe's recent rise to fame points a moral. He was ready, had he never been called in a case which brought him fame. And that readiness is the main thing for doctor, and for the man or woman of any profession or office, the statesman and the man and woman who goes about their daily duties. Had this call not come to him he would still have had the possibilities which he has so clearly demonstrated himself to have, though they might not have had a chance to show themselves spectacularly.

The attention which the world has given to Dr. Dafoe shows how ready it is to give credit to one who really is a leader.

And whether Dr. Dafoe should be awarded the Nobel prize, or not, he has proven his professional gifts.

It is understood that the Nobel prize is awarded only for outstanding medical attainments. Now the Dionne case is one which may test what that phrase "outstanding attainments" really means. The bringing along of the five children to an age where their future is reasonably assured is a real attainment and attainments of this kind are probably just as important as discovery. Of course discovery is a great event in science, but the application of scientific discoveries is just as necessary. More persons can apply than can pioneer in science, it is clear and there is no doubt that Dr. Dafoe has proven himsacrifice in application of medical knowledge.

EXPORT TREND CHANGES

This year has seen a very definite change in the trend of Canada's export trade, a change that speaks well for intra-Empire commerce. This year, for the first time, over fifty per cent. of the entire exports of Canada have found a market within the Empire.

For instance, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' figures for October show that 56.9 per cent. of the entire exports of Canada went to Empire countries. In the same month of 1933, 48.9 per cent. of the country's exports were to Empire countries. Further, the figures show that while there was an increase of 30.3 per cent. in the value of exports to Empire countries, there was a decrease of 5.5 per cent. in the exports to other countries.

The value of this Empire trade to Canada is real. It is helping this country back to better times, and is making it possible for Canada to pile up an excellent favorable balance of trade. No matter what politicians may say regarding the Empire treaties and the government which made them them, the results are there to speak for themselves, and it cannot be denied that they have been highly satisfactory to this country.—Oshawa Times.

NED SPARKS IN THE LEGISLATURE

Ned Sparks has been in the Legislature this week, but no one need think there is going to be a free comedy for the province, for Ned did not stay. He is just a visitor, not a member.

Ned must be just as funny in real life as he is on the celluloid ribbon for all stories from Toronto tell of Mr. Hepburn's face being wreathed in smiles. The Government of Ontario is most fortunate that Ned likes it. What he might say about a government if he liked to do so would make ministers blush when one knows how he spoke of "shooting censors." Bright as legislators are—Ned is still bright and his drollery is good even for premiers, ministers and particularly censors.

THE CAKE IS SCOTTISH

Most people probably expected that the wedding cake of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina would have been made by one of the swell catering or bakery firms in London. But no. It was made in Edinburgh.

This was no gesture to Scotland. The fact is that Scottish bakers and confectioners are the finest in the world. After them come the Germans. A large percentage of the bakers in London before the war were Germans. But for some reason or other there is a quality about Scottish bakeries that gives them a supreme place in the Old Land. Next time you are in Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, or Princess St., Edinburgh, or Union Street, Aberdeen, drop into one of the tea-shops, many of which are run by bakery establishments, and ask for tea and cakes. The waitress will bring you several plates heaped with the most marvellous assortment of fancy cakes you ever saw in your life. And they taste even more wonderful than they look. Once you start biting in to these luscious dainties you have a job calling a halt to your consumption.

And what's more the waitress doesn't count how many she brought on the plates. She doesn't start counting the remainder when she gives you your check. She just asks, "How many?" and leaves it to you to remember. Possibly you've lost count.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

LEAVE THE CHILD ALONE

The educational clinic of the college of the City of New York has just made a strange discovery; a child of four, who, it is said, possesses the highest intelligence quotient ever recorded by the clinic. Charles Darwin's was 186; Einstein's is 205; this child's is 196. At two years of age the baby knew the names, addresses and telephone numbers of a dozen relatives; could talk fluently, using any number of multisyllabic words; could recite the alphabet backwards at eighteen months; could read unaided at four; has since read an average of one book a day; and uses long words with awareness of exact shades of meaning, such an encyclopaedia, evolution, luminosity.

The identity of the child, it is added, is being withheld for his own good. While they are about it, why not withhold also anything likely to bring about any further demonstrations of freakishness? Otherwise this child is going to lose the most precious inheritance of humanity—a happy boyhood. Somebody is sure to tell him he is the world's greatest baby genius; and then the fat will be in the fire; the precocity will probably take on a dangerous form; and another child's glorious days will be ruined.

If there is anything in the world that ought to be put down by universal agreement, it is the exploitation of precocity in children. All records go to show that it is only one case in about a million that ever turns out anything beyond normal in the end—and all too often, sub-normal. —Montreal Star.

"MODERN AND REGRETTABLE"

The modern and very regrettable practice of some writers of political memoirs in enlivening their pages with reports of private conversations and incidents, perfectly innocent in themselves but belonging properly to personal concerns of individuals cannot be too strongly condemned. Men and women of sense and probity know very well that what is often said with propriety in the confidence and security of friendly intercourse between man and man may easily be misunderstood and perhaps do serious injustice is said or repeated under other circumstances. They therefore instinctively refrain from repeating in public what was communicated to them in the confidence of personal intercourse.—Victoria Colonist.

CARES

The little cares that fretted me,
  I lost them yesterday
Among the fields above the sea
  Among the winds at play;
Among the lowing of the herds,
  The rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds
  The humming of the bees.

The foolish fears of what may happen
  I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
  Among the new-mown hay;
Among the husking of the corn
  Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born
  Out in the fields with God.

AN EDUCATED TOE won the football game for Navy Saturday against Army with a placement kick netting three points when the score was nil, in the closing moments of one of those strenuous annual struggles which generally ended in favor of Army. Army means the military cadets at West Point on the Hudson, training to become officers in the United States Army. Navy means the naval cadets in training at Annapolis Naval Academy near Washington. The rivalry between these teams makes an interesting story. Navy won in 1921—twice since then in 1923 and in 1926, neither won, the first being no score and the latter a fantastic 21 to 21 score at Chicago before 110,000 people—the other games since 1921 have been Army's including the last five in a row, hence the tremendous enthusiasm of the 80,000 spectators who whooped their lungs ragged on Saturday at Franklin Field, Philadelphia. Army, of course, blame their defeat upon the wet field which was more to the liking of the Navy lads, being what they are.

Soldiers—Then and Now

—by—

Theodore Goodridge Roberts

Our padres the officers of the Canadian Chaplain Services were good fellows and good soldiers. Are they as good fellows now, I wonder? Some of them, I know, are just the same fearless friendly, charitable padres though perhaps a trifle slower of step, rounder of shoulders and tummy and longer of tooth. But the chances are that some of them have changed for the worse since their return to civil life, just as other military men have changed for the worse.

"War is Hell", said the late General Sherman of American Civil War fame.

No general ever said a truer thing, ever stated a starker and more obvious truth. War among civilized peoples is all and worse than the worst things that are said of it, than the worst names that have ever been given it by sane people inspired by grief, horror and disgust. It has been said that war is legalized mass and individual murder. So it is. It has been called wicked. It is wicked.

"But the world is full of wickedness," you may argue—and very justly, too.

The wicked intention of war among civilized nations astounds me less than does the wicked stupidity of it.

When an individual decides to commit a murder, he does not go into the street and ask publicly for assistance in his prospective crime. Certainly not! If he did, the least that would happen to him would be a term of years in a lunatic asylum. But those who start legalized mass murder—those who are guilty of the wicked intention of war—go into the streets and homes and churches of the nations and ask decent men to do the murdering for them. And the hell of it is they do not ask in vain. Good men—the very best of all walks in life—march away to murder and be murdered, to maim and be maimed, to suffer in body, mind and spirit in the service of the intentional murderers. They are not guilty of intentional murder. Their crime, their sin, is murderous stupidity.

Yes, war is Hell; and let us hope that there is yet another Hell, and a worse for the war-guilty. And they are not the men and boys who do the fighting. The fighters are not guilty. The guilt of the murderous stupidity which makes war possible rests with nations and great institutions not with individuals. As for the guilt of the murderous intentions of war—why attempt to name the guilty? We do not know their names. The blood of their brothers is not on their greedy hands, for us to see, but on their damned souls. They know their own names and can see their own red souls. So be it!

To get back to the padres; I was wondering if all the padres of 1914-1918 who are still with us are as good men now as they were then. That some are I know, but I doubt that all are. The chances are against it; for the fact is (and no "old soldier" will deny it) that good men, and men not so good, were at their best in those bad days and those monstrous activities. It was so with infantrymen, gunners, engineers, machine-gunners trench mortarmen cavalrymen and whatever else you can think of in that old B.E.F., and it was so with the padres. And that it was so is not hard to understand. It was due to pity. Men were sorry for one another.

FACTORY NEEDS ARE SUFFICIENT SAY THE MAKERS

Pass Resolution Against New Ones Until Expansion Greater

LOW WAGE DISCUSSED

Makes in Favor of Patrons Being Paid Weekly For Product

Picton, Dec. 5 (Special)—The seventh annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association opened in the Oddfellows' Hall at Picton at 9.30 on Tuesday morning with an attendance of about 50 members present representing largely the cheesemakers, as other delegates had not yet arrived.

Mr. E. I. Babcock of Napanee, president of the association, acted as chairman with the secretary-treasurer, J. H. Dudgeon of Thomasburg, also on the platform.

Resolutions Passed

The first resolution brought before the association was: Resolved that in Central Ontario there are now in operation more than sufficient cheese factories and creameries and it is resolved that the Hon. Provincial Minister of Agriculture be petitioned, that the province may prevent the erection of any more cheese factories or creameries until such time as the dairy industry by reason of dairy expansion actually needs same. This resolution was unanimously carried.

Use Better Methods

The second resolution stated that if the cheese-making industry is to improve, more up-to-date business methods must be employed. The creameries pay their patrons weekly, and in times of stress such as we are now experiencing, many farmers are patronizing the creameries rather than the cheese factories, which pay monthly. In the spring after a long winter it was pointed out that the patrons of the cheese factories must often wait until after the 20th of June for their first cheque. This resolution was discussed but further discussion was left until Wednesday afternoon when many farmers would be present.

Salaries Too Low

Mr. Brennan brought up for discussion the problem of low salaries paid many cheesemakers. He thought that if a survey of such salaries was made and a report sent to the Attorney General, sympathy for the cheesemakers would at least be aroused. He said that cheesemakers were technically trained men who often received as little as $480.00 for this past season—a sum that would not keep a family. Much discussion followed. Some felt that if the price of cheese could be raised wages of cheesemakers would be raised. Cheesemakers out of work who went about the concessions offering to work for as little as a cent a pound and pay for help and supplies were severely criticised. They tried to undermine men who had jobs and were offering to work for less than a living wage.

Mr. E. Van Dusen stated that the present high standard for cheese called for the very best of milk. Condenseries sometimes didn't use this same high quality of milk for their products. The result was that farmers patronizing the condenseries had less milk returned and also had their cans washed.

One member thought that getting away from the present contract system would help salaries of cheesemakersmakers and suggested that the management of factories be indicated to take over the buying of supplies. Farmers were often blinded by the fact that the cheesemaker now recieves $2,000 or more a year. They do not realize what a large part of this is eaten up by cost and help and supplies. The auditor's report was given and found satisfactory and adopted, bringing the morning session to a close.

Cheesemakers Told of Progress in the Industry

The annual address to the cheesemakers convention now convened at Picton was given by E. I. Babcock, president at the opening session Tuesday afternoon. The address in full follows:

Gentlemen,—

It is indeed an honor as well as a pleasure to deliver before you today my annual address as your president, for the year that is drawing to a close.

In reviewing the work of the season that has just ended, which has been an exceedingly difficult one owing to the prevalent low prices paid our patrons for our finished product, I am pleased to note that you, the members of this association, have not slackened in the least in your efforts to manufacture cheese of high scoring quality. This statement will be verified by the grading statistics which you will hear read at this convention.

Now, as regards the internal affairs of this Association, I regret to inform you that owing, I presume partly to indifference on the part of some of our makers and partly by reason of the low salaries, we all have been in receipt of, only about fifty per cent. of the cheese makers of Central Ontario are paid up members in this Association, this in itself is a most serious and regrettable state of affairs as owing to this, our activities on our own behalf, are handicapped and circumscribed by lack of funds. I trust this condition will be speedily remedied as it is in the direct interest of every cheese maker in Central Ontario to support this Association, which is admittedly one of the finest and most up-to-date dairy organizations in Ontario.

I cannot close this part of my address without referring to the very serious financial situation many of our makers find themselves in at the end of this season after payment of their supply accounts, they are left with practically no money with which to face the winter. The state of affairs is due to the fact that the average yearly income of our makers after their factory furnishing accounts are paid would certainly not exceed $50 per month, a most inadequate remuneration for the type of skilled man this particular industry demands.

Sympathy for low Prices

To our cheese factory patrons, I would extend our deep sympathy for the extremely low prices they have received for their finished product during 1934 and earnestly hope that 1935 will show a marked improvement in prices. Bespeaking at the same time on behalf of our members, their hearty co-operation in the production of high class raw materials in order, not only that our percentage of first grade cheese and average score may be increased over that of this year, but also that the number of pounds of milk taken to make one pound of cheese may be decreased. In this connection I would bring to the attention of our members and patrons that unsanitary conditions and practices on the farms constitute a serious menace at the present time and are in my opinion the cause of many of our manufacturing troubles.

At present our milk producers are very indifferent towards our cheese factories owing to the low prices realized during the last season by our patrons for their finished product.

Sympathy is not what is needed by this industry at all but it is doomed within the next two or three years unless its product can command a price more on a par with the prices obtainable in some other branches of the Dairy Industry than its does at present.

To this end, this Association invites and will cordially welcome cooperation from any organization with a view of bettering the financial returns to the primary producer. This movement, if successful, would, of course, result in higher wages for us as cheesemakers.

Quantity Not Stressed

I might point out that up to the present perhaps too much stress has been laid on the quality of our cheese and not enough attention has been paid to quantity. I believe it is now generally recognized that in order to secure continuity of supply, we must have quantity in fair measure and all efforts to encourage greater cheese production in Canada should and will have the hearty support of all those persons (and their name is legion) who are interested in Canadian dairying.

At this time I greatly regret to mention that year by year slowly but steadily our make of cheese is decreasing and if this state of affairs continues much longer, I feel our product will cease to be a factor on the British market, a culmination which I fear will be fraught with dire consequences to the milk producers of this country and I would forcibly urge upon our patrons to do all in their power to change this state of affairs and at the same time reduce their overhead expenses by eliminating their low producing cows which can only be kept at a direct loss at the present cheese prices.

I deeply regret the discontinuance of our annual Farm and Herd Butter Fat Competition, this year, owing to the lack of interest displayed towards same by our own cheese factory patrons. I may state that during the four years we conducted this contest, cash and other prizes in excess of $2,000 were awarded by us to our cheese factory patrons.

I am glad to be able to inform this Association that a definite improvement has been made on the Steamer Glen Allan this year. Fans have been installed by means of which the hot air can be pumped out and the temperature on this boat to a certain degree controlled. I am sure the members of this Association will appreciate the action of the owners to improve conditions on their boat.

This year we have been fortunate enough to again secure Miss Pepper, Lecturer and Demonstrator, Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Ottawa. This lady's specialty achieved most favorable results in Napanee last year because of the interest the numerous ladies attending the convention took in her cooking class which not only provides a place for them to go but also enables them to take an active part in our convention activities which is of course as it should be.

I must at this stage of my address express on behalf of this Association, our hearty thanks to the members of the Kiwanis Club of Picton for their untiring efforts to make this convention an outstanding success and with them, I would couple the name of Mr. W. I. Hicks, Dairy Instructor of Prince Edward County, who has certainly not spared himself on our behalf.

I cannot close this address without expressing my hearty thanks and deep appreciation of the loyal co-operation and assistance I have received from the officers and directors of this Association during 1934 and bespeak for my successor the same in equal measure.

To all members of this Association I convey my thanks and best wishes for a prosperous season during 1935. Our cheese factory patrons will I hope have a more prosperous season in 1935 and I would extend this sentiment to include the town of Picton and surrounding community. To all in advance I wish a Merry Christmas and a bright and prosperous New Year.

Direct Assessment of Chain Stores Favored by Hastings County Council in Session

Assessment to be Collected Through Taxes Levied

ASK LEGISLATION

Also Concur in Resolution For Betterment of Cheese Market

Hastings County Council in their first direct move of the December session, which opened in this city on Tuesday afternoon went on record as favoring direct assessment by the municipalities of "large chain and departmental concerns", the assessment to be collected through taxes levied in accordance with the amount of business done in the particular municipality in which they locate.

In concurring with a resolution previously passed by the Ontario County Council at its June Session Hastings County Council will join the movement to have the Ontario Legislature at its next session enact legislation empowering the councils of all municipalities to pass bylaws whereby these taxes can be lawfully levied. The move is ostensibly aimed at the protection of the smaller tradesmen of the municipalities.

Resolution Passed

The resolution in full passed by the Ontario County Council and which received unanimous endorsation by the Hastings County Council is as follows

"That this County Council view with alarm the serious inroads being made into the legitimate trade of the merchants of the smaller urban and the rural places by large chain and departmental concerns, who in direct competition with our own merchants pay nothing whatsoever for the privilege, whereas our merchants have to shoulder the heavy burden of municipal, provincial and Dominion taxes. The investigations of the Stevens Commission at Ottawa have revealed the magnitude of the operations of these large outside concerns, who are taking away annually thousands of dollars from our citizens in this and other counties. This Council recommends that the Ontario Legislature at its next session enact legislation empowering the Councils of all municipalities to pass by-laws whereby taxes can be levied on all outside concerns in accordance with the amount of business they do in local municipalities taxes to be collected from them by way of assessment. Also that municipalities be given the power to exact licenses from outside manufacturers who are now exempt under the Act".

Moved in its concurrence by Reeve Wm. West of Stirling Village and seconded by L. E. Neal, of Marmora and Lake, it was carried without discussion. A copy of the resolution will be sent the local representatives.

Seek Better Market

The Provincial Government through its Minister of Agriculture will be called upon to seek some solution for better marketing facilities for cheese, butter and other dairy products in a second resolution passed by the County Council during the afternoon. This resolution is a concurrence in one passed by the Haldimand County Council this year. The resolution is:

"That the Agricultural Committee of the County of Haldimand petition the Honorable Provincial Minister of Agriculture as follows:

"While in the past a great deal of attention has been paid to the problems affecting the whole milk trade, we are of the opinion, that the depressed condition of the dairy products in general are aggravating the problems of the whole milk trade and to some extent nullifying their efforts.

"Therefore we suggest, that the attention of the Department focus around the problems affecting the production and marketing of cheese, butter and other dairy products in the belief that this would very materially help the dairy industry in general."

"That's a splendid idea," commented Reeve Judson Gunter, Bancroft, in moving that Council concur. Seconded by Reeve Henry Larkin, Tyendinaga, it was carried without discussion.

Hospital Indigents

The third resolution concurred, and previously passed by the Perth County Council, if effective, will require parents of hospitalized cases, at present on indigent lists, in sanitariums and hospitals to care for their sons or daughters by payment, where able. And that no one be admitted to the hospital unless upon the consent of the head of the municipality from which the patient came. And that a copy of the resolution be sent the Hon. Dr. Faulkner, Minister of Health for Ontario."

Opposition to the change by the provincial government in Old Age Pension Boards on the ground, that the heads of the local Boards are in closer contact with applicants and conditions of their particular municipality are thus able to effect an appreciable saving in administration was also voiced by County Council in their concurrence of a fourth resolution previously passed by Lincoln County Council. The department will be notified by copy of the resolution.

QUAKER PUFFED RICE PUFFED WHEAT

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Is every woman entitled to love and happiness?

Unquestionably. But if you ask me how definite her chance is of obtaining these golden treasures—of securing them while she is still young—I can by no means give as clear an answer.

The truth is that life is a thing of chance and compromise, and that many of the happiest existences seem to achieve their happiness by accident. Happiness, in short, isn't a thing you can hold out and bargain for.

These wise remarks are really addressed to a very nice girl who signs herself "Defrauded." Her grievance is that she has had no real girlhood and yet that she is now at the brink of a far from glamorous marriage.

"I am 18," she writes me, "and I haven't begun to live. If you want to know what I'm like, I'm a good, plain, sensible girl. I mean, that's the way people describe me. It isn't the way I feel.

"As for boys, they simply don't see me, and I don't blame them. It isn't that I'm a monster; I just haven't any dash or sparkle, and my clothes are terrible. I don't go to parties or dances; I don't belong to any 'crowd'. I might as well be a hundred years old.

"My parents are too poor to do anything for me, and what could you do with a girl like me, anyway?

"Now something has happened that frightens me. A friend of my family, whose wife died a few years ago, wants to marry me. He likes me and he knows I have been brought up to be useful. He has two young children.

"My parents are so eager for me to consent to this marriage that they think and talk of nothing else. The man I speak of has a great deal more money than we have. I suppose I shall agree to it, after a while.

"Then everything will be over, and I shall never know anything about love, just as I don't really know what it is to be young.

"What do you advise, Miss Fairfax? Shall I do as my parents wish, or shall I run away somewhere and find a life of my own? And possibly discover love?"

It's always pitiful when people who are very romantic inside haven't romantic exteriors. There's bound to be unhappiness sooner or later.

But, of course, "Defrauded's" idea of running away from her fate is very young-girlish indeed, and altogether impossible. She admits that, although her girlhood has lacked gayety, this is really nobody's fault. Some lives are like that—many lives, perhaps.

As for love, her middle-aged suitor is doubtless more in love with her than she knows. He may have found it hard to seem as loverlike as he felt toward a girl whom he has known as a child.

Since the girl does not dislike him, and is perhaps even fond of him, this is quite likely to be one of the cases where she would learn to love him very much after marriage. A man of 30 is just as lovable as a boy of 20, although a girl of 18 may not suspect it.

Altogether, I should think that her chances of happiness are, from a mature point of view, pretty good. With a husband to be loved, step-children to be loved, and with, later on, babies of her own fairly clamoring to be adored, I do not see that the girl's life need be a starved or lonely one.

She must, of cource, make her own choice. I hope that it will be a wise one and that she will have a full and happy life.

Weddings

EVANS—BELL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the bride's home, 271 William Street, yesterday, when Laura Marion Ruth (Reg. N.), youngest daughter of Mr. E. B. and the late Mrs. Bell became the bride of Mr. Alfred Henry Evans, son of the late Mr. James Evans, of Camborne, Cornwall, England, and of Mrs. Mabel Evans Waddell of Belleville. The ceremony was performed at high noon by Rev. I. B. Naylor.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a charming gown of white crepe, with tulle veil caught to her hair with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of pale yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Josephine Sampson, Reg. N., attended the bride and was attired in poudre blue, with bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Miss Gladys Emerson was maid of honor and wore royal blue with matching accessories.

Mr. Don Carman, Toronto, attended the groom.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. Bradley who also sang a delightful solo during the signing of the register.

Wedding luncheon was served to about sixty guests, all relatives and close friends of the young couple. The rooms were prettily decorated in pink and white. Mrs. Walter Breach, Miss Olive M. Bush, Reg. N., and Miss Gladys White, Reg. N., assisted in the serving. Toasts to the bride were proposed by Mr. E. B. Bell, Miss Margaret Thompson and Mr. Earl Hammett, the groom replying.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to eastern points and on their return they will reside at 271 William Street.

GUIDES PREPARE BALES FOR WEST

Toys, Dolls, Underwear, For Needy Children in Saskatchewan

One hundred and ten children of the dried-out areas of Saskatchewan will experience a wonderful Christmas this year when the bales, prepared and sent by the Girl Guides of Company Three A. and B. reach them. Destined for McKague and Hazenmore, the latter place having had no crops in six years and residents existing on the bare necessities of life, the huge bundles are filled with toys and other articles that will gladden the hearts of the youthful recipients.

The Guides have been busy sewing since the middle of November and warm nightgowns, daintily featherstitched, and flannelette underwear have been fashioned by skilful fingers. There are also stockings for every child, who will also receive a toy, book or game. Snug toques and mittens are also provided and the range of toys affords something suitable for every age.

Last evening the girls packed the bales which are now ready for shipping. The instructions of the Guides to the people in the West is that articles be distributed to all in need irrespective of denominational affiliation or racial origin.

The money for the articles was earned entirely by the Guides.

A CHILD'S INDIGESTION Relieved!

A mother of five children says, "When my eldest baby was four months old he was very ill with indigestion and constipation. My physician advised me to try Baby's Own Tablets . . . Now he is a fine sturdy boy." Many an ailing child has been made well and happy with Baby's Own Tablets. Easy to take . . . the children think they are candies and always safe even for the tiniest babe. 25c package at your druggist's.

RENO GOLD MINES

The buying for the past few days is reported to have come from the coast while the east has been selling. There have been many weak spots in the eastern mining market of late. The strong behavior of Reno in the face of unsettlement in the general market has naturally invited much selling in the stock.

The months immediately ahead are very important for Reno. Results of opening up of three new levels will have a considerable influence on the price of the stock.

3 Men Chained Refusing Jobs

Paintsville, Ky., Dec. 5.—(AP)—In a scene reminiscent of colonial days three men who refused to work out fines imposed for drunkenness were chained to power line poles on Main street here today.

Large crowds gathered to see Town Marshall Jess Allen bind the men with log chains and attach two 25-pound iron balls to each man and lock them with padlocks to separate posts.

Allen said he acted on orders of Police Judge R. A. Patrick, who said later that the trio would stay there, except at night, until they agreed to work out their fines.

The men chained were James Price 25; William Dills, 25; and other organizations for the improvement of the cheesemaking industry.

Reviews Cheese Situation

H. L. Waters of A. A. Ayer and Company, Montreal, representing the Montreal Cheese and Butter Exporters' Association reviewed the cheese situation for the past year.

(Mr. Waters' address will appear in a later issue).

W. E. Schuster, President Central Ontario Commerce Crusaders thought Canada was not getting her fair share of the 50,000 tons of food products imported daily by the United Kingdom. He thought if cheesemakers and patrons of Central, Eastedn and Western Ontario organized, they could reduce fixed charges, leaving more profit for themselves from the export of cheese.

Banks and Dairy Industry

Mr. G.A.C. Weir, manager of the local branch, Bank of Montreal, Belleville, gave a splendid address on "Banking and Its Relationship to the Dairy Industry.

The interest of the Canadian banks in the Dairying Industry of Canada is a very vital one, as it would appear to be impossible to have a return of satisfactory times until the farming industry is placed in a more satisfactory position. The largest buying power we have in the country is the farmer.

During the serious depression which has extended over a period of five years and really a longer period for the farming industry, the farmer has been forced to carry on with his machinery and equipment much longer than he should have. His buildings have not been kept up, as they should have been, and if he were able to receive reasonable prices for his produce, he would immediately be in the market for a large amount of equipment and everything which would help to put his property into proper condition.

Competition Keener

The manufacturing of cheese which is an important part of the Dairying industry, has been steadily falling off for some years, which can be accounted for by the fact that the price of cheese, obtained for some years has been so low that it hardly pays the expense of producing it. One reason for the low production during the last fifteen years, is the increase in the manufacture of butter, canned milk and cream, milk powders and ice cream, and it is altogether likely that the production of milk has really shown no decrease. If cheese production still continues to decrease, the situation of butter will suffer from increased production.

Should Exploit Local Market

It would appear that if the cheese industry is to be saved for Canada some radical changes will have to be made in the handling of the product. Canada is not a cheese eating country, and something might be done along the line of trying to increase our local consumption. The high tariff in the United States has closed this market, and it leaves practically the British market as our only source of export. This market is the most highly competitive market of all food stuffs in the world and unfortunately the British buyer will only buy on a consignment basis, and we have to compete with the entire cheese markets of the world, especially the cheese from New Zealand, which country is able to produce cheese practically the whole year through, while our product is of a seasonable nature.

The present arrangement of selling our cheese is satisfactory to a certain extent, as the various cheese factories have no working capital, and the producer needs his money at once to carry on. Under the present system the cheese factories do not have to take a risk in the rise and fall of the price of cheese, nor the serious matter of fluctuation of exchange which has entered into the picture more in the past ten years. In other words, at the present time the buyer of cheese takes a risk in the fluctuation in price and exchange and the marketing of the product.

Deplores Marketing Arrangement

The chief difficulty of the present arrangement, from inquiries we have made in the British market, is that New Zealand consigns all her cheese to Great Britain, and there is a constant supply of the commodity at all times. In the case of Canadian cheese, which commands a higher price than that from New Zealand, we are informed that if a retail dealer presses the sale of Canadian cheese, and is successful in having it used, he can never be sure of being able to obtain a supply from week to week, as very often it cannot be procured on the wholesale market.

If any changes were made in the marketing of our cheese in Great Britain, a number of very serious questions would have to be dealt with, as the cheese would have to be shipped on a consignment basis, the producer would not be able to obtain his money monthly, as under the present arrangement, unless some large corporation was formed to finance the operation of marketing. With his cheese shipped on consignment basis to a commission house in Great Britain the shipper really has nothing to offer the bank, until it is sold. This difficulty might be overcome by the Dominion Government having sufficient storage plants at strategic points in Great Britain, where the cheese could be shipped to the order of the bank, and in this way, the bank would at least have control of the commodity until it was sold, and the exporter should be able to borrow sufficient on the shipment to at least pay the producer of the milk. The Dominion Government might go so far in the way of subsidy as to guarantee the fluctuation in exchange. Any change in the handling of the cheese on the British market would be a serious undertaking and no change should be contemplated without careful consideration and definite arrangements made for the financing of the entire proposition.

It must be borne in mind at all times that the British market is highly competitive and there is practically no way of increasing the price of cheese on this market, by any other means than supply and demand. We have had a very good example of this in the West, in relation to the wheat pools, which have cost the taxpayers of the Dominion of Canada several millions of dollars.

Suggestions for Improvement

The following points might be considered:

(a)—The amalgamation of certain factories situated close together and in this way cut down the overhead.

(b)—The production of more cheese, as apparently the British market will absorb far more cheese than we are producing at the present time.

(c)—The manufacture of cheese in smaller weights than generally used at the present time.

(d)—The association to press the government for more assistance and the obtaining of lower freight rates.

(e)—The question of marketing cheese on the British market the same as New Zealand.

The cheese industry can count on the full co-operation of the Canadian banks and any assistance that may increase the production on the British market, or assistance of any nature which would be beneficial to the industry.

"Baldy" Cotton Star of Game When Leafs Defeat Bruins With Goal by Charlie Conacher

Cellar Teams, Canadiens and St. Louis Eagles Score Wins

JOE LAMB SOLD

Rookies Starting to Show Class Warranting Their Purchase

By A. E. Fulford, Canadian Press Staff Writer

A confirmed hockey tourist who doesn't mind a bit of change now and then, Joe Lamb bid goodbye to Montreal Canadiens with a generous gesture that probably had Leo Dandurand wondering today whether the cash he got for the centre man would compensate for his loss.

While Boston Bruins were announcing they had bought the former Sussex, N.B., amateur for cash and passed him on to St. Louis Eagles for Max Kaminsky and Desse Roche, Lamb led the Habitants to a 5-3 win over New York Rangers in Montreal last night, scoring two goals and assisting in two others.

Lamb, who has seen service with Montreal Maroons, Ottawa, New York Americans, Boston and Canadiens since he turned pro in 1927, goes to St. Louis just as they are snapping out of an eight-game losing streak. They defeated New York Americans 2-0 last night, the first time they have won since they downed New York Rangers in their second game of the season.

Cellar Teams Win

Wins by Canadiens and Eagles, cellar teams in the Canadian section, were the second of the season for both teams and highlighted a night of National League hockey that also saw Toronto Leafs defeat Bruins 1-0 in Boston. Habitant's only other victory was also at Rangers' expense.

Armand Mondou joined Scotty Bowman of St. Louis, as a successful penalty marksman when he beat Andy Aitkenhead for Canadiens' first goal after Alex. Levinsky had tripped Roger Jenkins. Lamb's two goals came in the second period with a marker by Lynn Patrick, Coach Lester's son, sandwiched in between them.

Goals by Bert Connolly, Moncton recruit, and Bun Cook in the third tied the score but another rookie, Nels Crutchfield, put Canadiens out ahead and Pete Lepine made it sure. Lamb was in on both Canadien third period goals.

Bill Beveridge gave an outstanding exhibition of goaltending in shutting out the Americans at St. Louis. He handled 43 shots, 20 of them in the third period when the New Yorkers made desperate efforts to tie things up.

Cotton Star of Leafs' Win

Nick Wasnie got the first goal nine minutes after the game started and Eddie Gerard's boys held control after that. The second came in the third period when Syd Howe slid along the ice carrying the puck on his chest and Carl Voss pounced on it and beat Roy Worters. Howe got an assist.

Charlie Conacher, Toronto's big left winger, crept up to within a point of his teammate Harvey Jackson in the scoring lists when he tallied the Leafs' goal against Boston. Taking the puck on the right boards he stickhandled thru' the Boston defence and drove a backhander past Tiny Thompson in the first period.

Joe Primeau recovered from a thumb injury, centre of Leaf line that also boasts Jackson and Conacher made his first appearance of the league season but the trio failed to show their usual fast combination. Harold "Baldy" Cotton, who was all set for a trip to the minors earlier in the season, was the real star of the game, shining on both attack and defence.

MAY CLEAR UP SITUATION

London, Ont., Dec. 5.—(CP)—The rather involved situation in regard to the managership of London Tecumsehs International League hockey club will likely be considerably cleared up today when doctor's report on the condition of Toots Holway is received by the club directors

Frank Nighbor, who has been pinch hitting for Holway since the Tecs' pilot was stricken with stomach ulcers, announced that he is willing to remain here on the job until Holway is pronounced fit for duty. Nighbor is ready to turn the job back to Holway at any time and he has heard nothing further from the Ottawa source about an offer to take over the management of St. Louis Eagles in the National League.

Holway arrived back in London late Monday night and was given two X-ray tests. He will get another to-morrow morning. Big Toots does not look very well and it is regarded as doubtful if findings on the tests will indicate that he is in shape to stand the worry and strain of managing the team at present.

FOUR VICTORIES FOR HAMILTON

Defeat Varsity 5-2 And Oakville Ties With Port Colborne

(By the Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers, carrying more scoring punch than they did last season when they won the Ontario Hockey Association championship, rested securely on the top limb of the Senior "A" O.H.A. standing today with four victories in as many games played.

The Hamilton squad were extended by University of Toronto at the collegian's rink last night but won out 5-2 to defeat Warren Stevens' blues for the second time this season. Meanwhile, in the only other scheduled Senior "A" tilt "Dinty" Moore and his Port Colborne Sailors played to a scoreless draw with the new senior entry, Oakville "Villains," intermediate champions of Ontario last year, in a dull, listless game.

In the Toronto game, the Tigers failed to show the advantage the score indicates and there were times when the youthful collegians had the snarling Tigers disorganized and lined up behind their own blue line. Defenseman Howard put Hamilton in the lead midway thru' the first period but two quick goals early in the second session by Normie McLelland and Ernie Rey put U. of T. in the lead.

Tigers Always in Front

Hamilton counted twice before the end of the period however, on goals by Howard Liscombe and Maxie Bennett to take a one goal lead. Maxie Bennett and "Toe" Blake added two more for Hamilton in the final frame.

At Port Colborne the game was livened by a feud in the overtime period between Vince Upper of the Ports and Wingman Ronald of the visitors. "Dinty" Moore stellar Sailor goalie, displayed a black eye suffered in the game at Hamilton last Friday. Moore stopped a backhand shot from the stick of Maxie Bennett with his face in the Hamilton game and was rushed to hospital where it was feared the cheekbone was broken. It later developed the worst Moore had was a sore face and a black eye.

Friday night Toronto All-Stars meet Hamilton in Jungletown for the first time this season and Port Colborne and Oakville renew their scoreless game at Toronto.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

Every once in a while, and more especially when some of the so-called higher up teams in the N. H. L. are in the doldrums, the cry is heard—shorten the defensive areas, widen the goal-mouth, let's have a more wide-open game and score more goals. Col. Hammond, owner of the New York Rangers and Art Ross of the Boston Bruins, are prime movers of drastic changes in the N.H.L. rules these days and simply because the Rangers and the Bruins cannot seem to win games this season with any degree of consistency. Ross favours moving the two blue lines a few feet back towards the goals, while the Ranger faction favours wider goal-mouths and a convexed blue line, from the centre of the present blue line in towards the boards. Naturally with Ross leading the inventive-minded moguls, something insofar as a change of rules can be looked for in the N.H.L. next season, either smaller defensive zones or wider goal-mouths.

A few changes have been consummated in local city hockey league of late, the major one being the expulsion of the Trenton Imperials, who have been replaced by the South End A. C. The only reason given for the ousting of the Imperials was the objection by some of the local clubs to the effect that the Labrash-led aggregation was too strong for a local city league competition. Originally the Trenton delegates very graciously presented their application at the inaugural meeting of the league. This application was received without an objectionable voice being raised, but later a "nigger appeared in the wood-pile" with the result that the Imperials are out in the cold. It might be of interest to those at the helm of local hockey activities, to know, that it was only at the suggestion of interested persons in Trenton that a local intermediate O.H.A. team was made possible, or perhaps we should say the Trenton suggestion was paramount in the local entry being filed. Some local city league managers seem to think that the Imperials are too strong, that is after watching them in the Kingston City loop. It must be remembered, however, that the Imperials of the Kingston loop, are depending a lot on the services of Carl Morgan, Roy Covert and Harry Morgan, all of whom will not be with the Imperials in a local city league. Had the local clubs objected to Joe Gould poor Joey) and allowed the Imperials into the fold with another goalkeeper, a better feeling of sportsmanship might have resulted.

At any rate we now have a six teamed city hockey league embracing S.E.A.C., United Cigars, 20th Century Club, S.W.A.A.C., Aajmaa Club and Grills A.C. All managers have been scouring the town, and within a radius of 25 miles of Belleville, to endeavour procuring the services of the best players possible. Judging from the pre-season interest being taken in the loop, city league hockey is headed toward rejuvenation locally. President Harry Rollins announced yesterday that league certificates would be issued to club executives on December 11th, twenty certificates to be presented each manager, but only 15 players can be passed by the league executive. Incidently the clubs will have from now until the day following the opening of the league to sign players, all certificates must be in the hands of Secretary Bill Fry by that date. The players' certificates will be passed on the night following the opening of the league. Naturally the city league schedule cannot be drafted until after the release of the two local O.H.A. schedules.

Following the defeat of Bill Crawford at the hands of Ken Mayberry in a local ring recently, Matchmaker Clem Allen picked a tough opponent for the Oshawa boxer in Freddie Parry of the Stewart-Warner A. C. stable. Parry has had just enough professional experience to polish him off for his return to the amateur ring. The "pride of the C. N. R. Station" has been training ardently for the past few months for his initial appearance on Promoter Allen's card. Another good bout scheduled for next Monday night at the "Y" is the Tony Ronca-Howard Wheeler bout. Ronca is a hard hitting youth from Peterboro who is reputed to pack a terrific wallop. A fourth Lift Lock City scrapper to appear in the local ring on Monday will be Pete Vittnell, who meets Bill Crawford in the semi-windup bout of the night. Another bout that should please and prove a thriller will be the return engagement between Duggie Robinson and Mark Storms. These two lads have beaten each other with regularity and always give the fans a treat.

Formerly a star catcher for the Tribe, and since then manager of many minor league teams including Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League where he played as well as managed, Steve O'Neill is back in big-time baseball with Cleveland Indians. He will act as coach, but with Manager Walter Johnson in failing health it is expected he will be virtually assistant manager.

Ching Johnson of the New York Rangers ice hockey team is reported to receive a salary of $6,500 this season.

Webster Took Wrong Turn And Lost Marathon Jaunt

But Adds Crowe Trophy as Outstanding Amateur to Many Other Athletic Awards

By M. J. WALSH
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Hamilton, Dec. 5—When Harold Webster, who started in Derbyshire, Eng. 42 years ago, a journey which has seen him loping along most of the well-known marathon routes of Canada and United States adds the Crowe award, awarded to this Dominion's outstanding amateur athlete for 1934, he'll be up against a real problem.

Harold has won so many trophies that he can't afford to carry insurance on them and his son, Douglas, who occupies the position of custodian of the cups, is as baffled as his famous dad.

The Webster home is absolutely cluttered up with gold watches, gold medals, electrical devices and scores of other prizes won by Webster since he first hit the cinders in 1913 in Vancouver.

The rising price of gold has made many of these medals even more valuable than their sentimental worth.

Harold, however, has to work for a living, and, in making both ends meet, there is no room left for insurance premiums.

His Midland burr falling pleasantly on the ear of a Central Press Canadian correspondent, Webster expressed his keen pleasure at winning the Crowe award.

Twice he has taken the C. N. E. 2-mile race, and the first long-distance man to join the Hamilton Olympic Club, he has also held the two-mile, five-mile, six-mile and twelve-mile Canadian titles.

The only reason he hasn't taken the 15-mile event is because this race is not listed, for Webster has beaten Ontario's best at this distance — Billy Reynolds, Walter Hornby and Dick Wilding.

No Sign Posts

Despite the ease with which he beats people like Dave Komonen, however, this marathoner's life is not all beer and skittles.

Just a short time ago, he accepted an invitation to race at an American Legion marathon in Wilmington, Del. A group of fellow runners were anxious to make the trip—Harold was not. But knowing that the jaunt depended on him and, anxious to encourage the younger runners, he set out with them in the type of cars reporters usually own.

It broke down several times en route— it was a cold night — and Webster was huddled with two other runners in the rumble seat. They arrived at the scene of the race at two o'clock on the morning of the event. Then, to make matters worse, the officials had neglected to post sign posts indicating the route of the race, and Webster, with a commanding lead at the 23-mile mark, lost his way and the race, hunting for the right turn in the road.

It's all in the day's work to the 42-year old road-burner, however, and his son, Douglas, now 14, is following in his father's footsteps, running a mile daily to and from school in pretty fair time.

Tigers Would Buy Material If Available

Detroit, Dec. 5 (AP)—Frank J. Navin, President of the pennant-winning Tigers, and Mickey Cochrane, his manager, are going to market.

They need some pitching strength and an additional outfielder or two and so Sunday, after a solemn conference, Mickey and his boss plan to depart for New York to attend the annual meeting of the Major Leagues.

Pending their departure for the trading post, it appeared the Tigers will depend on one of their rookie hurlers coming through with the port-sided pitching strength, that is desired. They will have Clyde Hatter, former Louisville southpaw, Jake Wade and Joe Sullivan, left-handers who will come up from the minors next spring.

At the same time there may be a couple of seasoned left-handers on the market. Wally Stewart is said to be packing up his bags to leave Washington, and Earl Whitehill also may be available.

The rumor persists, that Al Simmons will come to Detroit. That has been denied both at Navin Field and Chicago, but the removal of the screen from left field at the Detroit park is taken as an indication that Navin and Cochrane have eyes on someone who would knock the ball over that wall.

BASKETBALL

Upsets predominated at the opening dual bill of the second half of the Y.M.C.A. house basketball league last evening, when the Deacon A.C. kids dropped their initial game of the season to the "Y" golds by the score of 23 to 13, while the St. Michael's A.C. staged a hectic last period rally to down the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" by the score of 31 to 25. Both games were keenly contested with the winning quartettes showing ability to finish strongly.

The opening game saw the Y.M.C.A. squad lead the Deacon A. C. winners of the first half of the league schedule, by a 14 to 8 score at the half way mark, but in the final half the "Y" squad outscored their opponents nine to five and won by a 23 to 13 score. Burley with 12 points Wickerson with 8 and Scott with three points led the winning Golds, while Henry and Cole proved the most prolific point gainers for the losing team.

The line-ups —Y.M.C.A.— 23 — Burley, Scott, MacLean, Wickerson, White, Cather and Aitkins. Deacon A.C.—Faulkner, Henry, Cole, Tobe, Dickens, Muir, Scott, Kikes and Countryman.

The surprise of the evening was the reversal of form shown by the St. Michael A.C. when they staged a hectic last period rally to down the R.C.A.F. 31 to 25. The "Irish" were trailing by an 11 to 8 score at the half way mark but a determined effort on the part of the "Irish" led by Temple and Hilton gave the St. Mikes their initial victory of the second half and a tie with the "Y" team. Every member of the St. Michael quartette played a stellar game and well deserved the victory that they enjoyed. The "Irish" only placed four men on the floor, this quartette finishing the game, all entering into the score at sometime or other. Every member of the "Flyers" also scored at least one point in a wide open game that thrilled.

The line-ups—St. Michael's A.C. —31— Langton, Hilton, Schrieder and Temple. R.C.A.F.—25— Smith, Pafford, Burdes, Reeves, Broadbent and Mitchell.

Referee for both games—Ralph Morden.

Ann Steps Out

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

"I wanted to ask you something" he said, touching the sleeve of her coat. "Don't get angry. But do you think it will be a good idea for your family to live with us?"

"I've thought of that. I'm going to give them the house and we'll take an apartment and buy a summer place."

"But why...."

Her eyes were steady and very blue. With a little difficulty—because the mention of his name always hurt—she said, "I don't want to bring a new husband into John's home. I couldn't!"

"Oh," and chuckled. "You are a sensitive creature."

"Not sensitive—respectful."

As the lights from Nick's house appeared, Doug put his arms around her and held her cold face close to his.

"I can't believe it's you half the time," he said, kissing her. "You aren't the same. You're wonderful, Ann."

"You've drunk more than one toast" Ann reminded him. "What is Angela going to think of you?"

Nick came to the door. "Guests!" he called back to Angela. "Come in", and held open the door. "Hello, Doug. Helo Ann."

"Were celebrating" said Doug, "my return to freedom."

Ann took off her coat. Angela in black chiffon got up and came to her. Hello, dear. Is this your Doug?" she extended a slim white hand to him. "So—you're Doug."

"And you're Angela."

"Doug's had one drink too many" Ann apologized with a little laugh a rather sad laugh Nick thought. "You mustn't mind him."

"A man doesn't get a divorce every day," said Doug.

Nick looked at Ann and at her pathetic pretense at not caring that Doug had been drinking. "His first night out with her," he thought, "and he does this."

Angela, quick to grasp situations, said, "Come and talk to me Doug. Ann hasn't seen Nick for several days and they're business partners you know."

Ann smoked a cigaret, not tasting it, not seeing the drifting smoke. When she was with Nick, her fears vanished. Safe harbor she thought.

Angela took Doug on the veranda. "I think," she had said to Ann, "he needs a little air. Even the ride down didn't help."

Nick heard the low rumble of their voices from the verandah. He looked at Ann, sitting on the cushion before the fire and the way the light brought out the bronze colors of her hair.

"I'm sorry for bringing him," she said, not looking at him, speaking with effort.

"You didn't know," said Nick "Do you feel the same?"

She smiled and shrugged. "I told Gail that women had loved men in spite of their weaknesses."

Her eyes met his steadily but there was despair in them. "Nick, I'm still not sure and I must know soon. I must. There is nothing anyone can do—not even you."

The words echoed through her deeply. Nick saw uncertainty and bewilderment in her face as the light from the fire caught each expression.

Angela and Doug came back into the room again.

"I think we'd better go home," said Ann.

"Not yet," said Doug, brightening "The company's too charming. Angela and I have discovered that we know a lot of people."

Again Ann was summoned by letter to the Hamill home in Roland Park. She didn't tell her family or Nick. She dressed and drove there prepared for the worst. Somehow she couldn't think of the aristocratic figure of Mrs. Hamill in her high backed chair without feeling afraid of her. Even Louise's attempts at friendship had not lessened that feeling.

The butler led the way into the drawing room and Mrs. Hamill, sitting in her favorite chair, saw not the timid, frightened girl she had known previously, but a young woman, poised, sure of herself, and superbly dressed.

"You were probably surprised to receive my letter" she said to Ann, pouring her a cup of tea and passing it to her.

"Yes, I was. I had no idea what you could want with me."

"I didn't know until very recently that it was you who paid for Louise's trip to Europe. I heard it through gossip, and Louise told me it was true. I sent for you to thank you. It was very generous of you."

"If John's money can be of any help to his family," said Ann, "I'm willing to share it. I don't want to be selfish."

Mrs. Hamill put her tea cup on the mahogany table.

"I've been mistaken about you, my dear. When I first heard of you, I thought you were a common young girl looking for money. And I thought when you came into my son's money that you would have no idea what to do with it. Newly rich people are usually very vulgar, you know. She smiled at Ann. "You have not been vulgar. You have used it to a very great advantage."

Ann felt no fear toward her now. Mrs. Hamill's cold exterior melted a little. Was she at last seeing something human in this woman who, as John had told her, had loved a man and never realized how much she loved him until he had died?

"I have tried not to disgrace your name," said Ann.

"You've done extremely well for yourself. There isn't a door that is not open to you. Frankly, Ann, I admire you."

Louise came in from downtown. She looked frightened seeing Ann with her mother.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

"Mother," Louise said, "if you've sent for Ann to humiliate her again...."

"On the contrary," said Mrs. Hamill, "I'm making a desperate effort to be kind to her, but I'm afraid it will take some time for her to get over her first impression of me."

Ann sighed and smiled. Louise looked relieved.

"We owe you a great apology" said Louise.

"My only regret," said Ann, "is that John doesn't know about this."

"He understands," said Mrs. Hamill lowering her eyes. "He probably knew that you would remake yourself."

The afternoon lengthened and Ann felt quite at ease in the room she had once thought unbearable. She looked around the room thinking of Nick and John in it as small boys and of the woman, their mother, who loved them and did not know how to show that love, who thought that to show love was to forfeit pride.

Presently Mrs. Hamill said, "I heard that Douglas St. John wants to marry you, Ann."

"He was the first boy I ever loved and I've known him all my life."

"He isn't good enough for you," protested Louise. "A St. John isn't good enough for a Hamill. They're newly rich, too, you know. And that was one of the things that came between him and Gail."

"I didn't know that was one of their difficulties," said Ann.

Mrs. Hamill, mistress of any situation, said, "You are foolish to be swept off your feet. He's a very attractive boy, I've heard. But he likes to drink and every new face attracts him."

"It's an odd thing," said Ann, interrupting, "but when I used to now him, I never knew anything about his weaknesses. Of course I saw him only on school holidays and I knew that he went with girls who had money, but I had no idea of his reputation."

"A reputation for drink and pretty girls," said Louise.

"He's young. He may change," defended Ann ever gallant. "He's been spoiled."

"I'd consider it very carefully, if I were you," said Mrs. Hamill. "To change from the name of Hamill to St. John is stepping down the ladder, Ann. Remember that."

Ann hurried home to see her mother. Jean said, "So—the old lady finally melted. Wait until Nick hears about it."

"Mothers," said Mrs. Dryden, "are alike under the skin."

Nick found out and called Ann from his office.

"Congratulations," he said with feeling, "for bringing a mother and her son together again."

Ann was seeing Doug constantly now. He had taken a position in his father's office and she knew that his parents were urging him toward an early marriage. And a year ago, she thought, they would have ignored her on the street.

Gary Hinton had, as she said, dropped out of the running.

"I'll be a game loser" he said, rather sadly. "You're a swell girl, Ann. We've had good times together. But when a girl doesn't want to be kissed, another man is usually the reason. I thought it was Nick at first but I was mistaken."

"You've shown me an awfully good time," she said.

They said a casual good-bye, and Ann never knew that she was the only girl with whom Gary had ever been serious; nor did she know that his parents considered his lost conquest the only conquest for a woman that a Hinton had ever lost.

Her life now centered entirely around Doug— being with him, meeting him downtown for lunch, riding with him at night. They went to the island often to see Angela and Nick.

She was lunching with him downtown one day. Doug liked to be seen out with her. He liked for people to pass their table and whisper, "There's Ann and Doug. They're going to get married—an old love bloomed anew."

"Loving me doesn't make you happy," he said, his dark eyes disturbed. "It used to. Seeing me, having me just a little while, used to make you happy. I won't deny Ann, that during the years that you waited for me, loved me, believed in me, I made love to other girls. I didn't think you'd fit in my crowd — that's why I never asked you up to the school proms. You weren't the smart, clever, beautiful creature you are today."

"I'm older," she said, "and I've been married too but I still think that love should make people happy. Everyone is against us. It isn't as simple as it used to be. You see, only recently I've learned about your reputation."

"That's a lot of nonsense!" he cried. "I've changed. It's the Hamills, isn't it, who don't approve of me? They don't like me because my father stayed home and didn't get into the war and made a lot of money. He didn't get bumped off like Louise's sweetheart did. A dead hero doesn't know anything about his fame. And the Hamills resent people who make money by their wits."

"They don't influence me," said Ann. "I must believe in you myself."

"Nick doesn't like me either. I don't know why. He has Angela, hasn't he?"

"Yes, thought Ann, he had Angela —beautiful and serene.

"Every one is against me," he said in a hurt voice. "Everybody but you. Don't let me down, Ann. I couldn't stand it if you did."

She stretched out her hand across the table. "I never have," she said, feeling superior, stronger than he, and knowing it was that superiority and strength in her he clung to and needed.

They said good-bye on the downtown street. "I wish I could chuck the office," he said gloomily. "I hate to think of being chained to a desk all my life."

"But, dear," smiled Ann, her small face framed in autumn fur, "you'll have a wife to support soon."

She shopped — buying clothes that Doug would like. A new evening dress some woollen things for her visits to the island this winter. She bought Jean a short fur jacket for her birthday and sent Angela some new books and magazines.

When she reached home, her mother met her with a telegram in her hand.

"What's wrong?" asked Ann.

Mrs. Dryden looked as though she didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

"Jean and Dick—a telegram from Washington. They were married this morning." Mrs. Dryden's hand trembled. "They're so young Ann."

"They're young but they're in love. It's probably the best thing that ever happened to Jean. Dick Nelson is a fine boy. It's nothing to worry about."

Mr. Dryden summoned home from the Hamill agency where he was now working steadily, came in the room. He looked amused. "She said she had a headache and wanted to go home," he said with a twinkle in his eyes. "I guess she and Dick had it all planned days before."

Ann took the crumpled yellow paper. I'll call them and tell them to come home. I wish though they hadn't eloped. We," she looked up, "we won't reproach them. We want them to be happy. Jean is lucky Mother. She has married the first boy she ever loved."

She went to the telephone and called their hotel. Dick's voice, timid like the runaway child he was, answered.

"Ann? Oh! You got the telegram Wait—it's Jean. She wants to talk to you."

Then Jean's voice—thrilled and happy.

"Don't bawl me out," she said, laughing. "We saved you the expense of a wedding didn't we? I know you think we're two crazy kids but we know what we're doing. Are we forgiven?"

"Of course you are. But we want you to come home. But why...."

Ann could visualise Jean in the hotel room with Dick beside her. Was it envy she felt for her sister's happiness?

"Why didn't we wait?" asked Jean. "Well—you see—we didn't want to lose something we feel now. You understand Ann. We wanted to get married while we were young and crazily in love."

"And you are right," said Ann, "only come home and let us see you go away properly on your honeymoon. I dare say Nick can fix it up with Dick's boss. And I bought a fur coat for you for your birthday. It will come in very nicely now."

"Gosh" she laughed into the mouthpiece. "Tomorrow's my birthday and I'd forgotten all about it. I haven't thought about anything but Dick. All right, Ann we'll come back."

She gave the phone to Dick. "I'm glad you feel this way about it," he said. "I swear to you I'll be good to her, work for her."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was listening to her wrist watch not going and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I was wishing I didn't have to do my homewerk, saying, Hay ma, hay pop, whats you think Skinny Martin did Sattiday? He tripped and bumped his head against the ceeling, I said.

Now how many times have I told you about exaggerating? ma said, and I said, Well G, ma, I'm not exaggerating, it really happened.

Now that's a delibrit story and you deserve a harty smack, ma said. Willyum, she said.

Meening pop, and he said, Now what's all this nonsense, Benny? and I said, Well G wizzickers, pop, it's true, and he said, It's true that he tripped and bumped his head on the ceeling?

Yes sir, I said, and pop said, The berden of proof in this case is on the defendant, bleeve me.

Meening how was it true, and I said, He climbed up to the tip top of the paperhanger's ladder while the paperhanger was away for his lunch, and he lost his ballents and pritty neer fell off and banged his head agenst the ceeling trying to stay on.

Yee gods, there are more things in heaven and earth, pop said, and ma said, Such a reggamaroll, I dont bleeve it anyway.

Well gosh ma, I know a more peculiar axsident than that even, I said. A fish got over his head in water and drownded, I said.

Now really, Willyum, are you going to allow that? ma said, and pop said, I dont think I am, but perhaps I know very little about it.

Sure he did, pop, I said. He was a guy named Alonso Fish, that's A. Fish, for short, and he stepped out over his head and got drownded, I said.

Pop thinking it was more of a joke than ma, but I had to do my homewerk anyways.

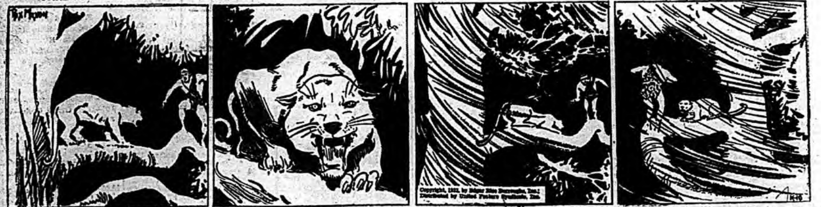
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Copyright, 1933, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc.; Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The enraged panther leaped up the rough bole to the very branch upon which Tarzan stood. Now the two faced each other upon even footing and Sheeta [illegible] a quick revenge and a supper all in one.

The hairless ape-thing with the tiny fangs and the puny talons would be helpless before him. The heavy limb bent beneath the weight of the two beasts as Sheeta crept cautiously out upon it.

The wind had risen to a mighty force. Even the greatest giants of the forest swayed, groaning to its lash. The branch upon which man and beast faced each other swayed and bent.

Goro, the moon, was now entirely obscured, but vivid flashes of lightning lit up the jungle at brief intervals, revealing the grim tableau of primitive passion upon the treacherous branch.

FRIENDS HONOR MRS. J.J. WILSON

Handsome Hymnary is Presented by Sunday School

West Huntingdon.—The farmers here were given two half holidays last week. The first was on Wednesday afternoon, when Mr. Lorne Wilson held a successful auction sale. There as an extra large crowd present and good prices were realised for the various articles that were auctioned off by Mr. Henry Wallace.

Also on Thursday afternoon Mr. Fred Murray of Church Street, held a similar sale and good prices were procured also for Mr. Murray's cattle and machinery.

Mr. Phillips has rented the Clayton Hagerman farm for next year.

Recent visitors at Mr. William Fitchitt's of Victoria Avenue, were Miss Mary Gray of Roslin, Mrs. Jennie French of Belleville, Mr. Orval Parks of Tyendinaga, and Mr. Robert Peoples, of Belleville.

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Friday when the young people of the community met at the home of Mr. Geo. Cooke for their weekly meeting. Mr. Elmer Post, leader of the devotional program, opened the meeting with use of Hymn 38, after which Mr. Carr led in prayer. An interesting paper was then given by Miss Georgia Pitman on Hymns and Their Writers. Rev. Merriam gave a short talk on the New Oxford Group. A song was then rendered by Annie Cooke, Leah Carr and Helen Wright. All repeated the Mispah Benediction which closed the devotional part of the program, after which Miss Evelyn McInroy, the President, opened the social part of the program with community singing with Mrs. Wm. Pitchitt as pianist. The roll call was answered with current events.

Miss Georgia Pitman was chosen as leader of the devotional period and Mr. Elvin Carr, Albert Ashley and Francis Reid were appointed in charge of social program.

Mr. Moran took charge of a peanut contest which provided much merriment. Other games were also much enjoyed. Carl and Harold Thompson favored the gathering with a mouth organ and violin selection. Mr. Carr then gave a reading.

The social program was then closed with all singing, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" after which a tasty lunch was served and a vote of thanks tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Cooke for use of their home.

The United Sunday School presented Mrs. J. J. Wilson with a handsome edition of the New Hymnary as a slight token of the services she has rendered to the School. The W.M.S. also presented her with a tablecloth. Mrs. Wilson and Lorne are moving to their new home in Stirling this week.

Mrs. Arthur Dunn of Port Hope was a recent guest of her mother, Mrs. J. J. Wilson.

Mrs. Sarah Fargey and Don spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins of Thurlow.

Mr. Ferguson of Norwood, new Liberal candidate for Hastings-Peterboro, was entertained at Mr. Peter McInroy's on Wednesday evening.

Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Reddick of Omeme, called at Mr. Geo. Post's on Wednesday.

Mrs. John Holden of Moira was the guest of Mrs. Melville Donnan on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vice of Oshawa attended Mr. Lorne Wilson's sale on Wednesday.

TREAT THAT COLD Promptly

Attack it at the source!

The "common" cold causes more lost time from gainful work than any other disease. If you do catch cold, rid yourself of it as quickly as you can by attacking it at its source.

A cold must be treated for what it is—an internal infection. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is positive in action. It goes right to the source of the trouble. It does the four things necessary. First, it opens the bowels; second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever; third, it relieves the headache and "grippy" feeling; fourth, it tones up the system and fortifies it against further attacks.

The druggist nearest you has Grove's. They're in a white box (the large size is most economical to buy). Keep Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine on hand at all times. It has what it takes to stop that cold quickly and effectively. 43

LUMBERING OPERATIONS NOW SLACKENING OFF

Some Small Camps Will be Run Later in Season

Lumbering operations in North Hastings at the present time have slackened off with operators waiting for needed snow to commence the first cutting, it is reported by the men of the north now in the city attending the December session of County Council. Although the work will not be carried on very heavily this season it is expected that a considerable number of men will find employment at the various small camps. Reeve James Sprackett of Gilmour, states that he expects to operate a small camp later in the season. In the district of Bancroft, it is reported that lumber is moving more freely than it was during the earlier part of the season.

NEW ORCHESTRA GUESTS OF CLUB

Rev. W. J. Walker Continues Talk on Eastern Situation

The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Men's Club was held on Tuesday evening with the usual supper being served by the ladies. Mr. Vernon Weir presided and many new members and guests were introduced.

Other special guests of the evening were the members of the Sunday School orchestra, recently organized and directed by Prof. Wheatley, composed of Mrs. M. P. Anderson, Miss Helen Chant, Mrs Dorothy Horie and Mr. Jas. Allison. Their selections which included a violin solo by Miss Chant and a soprano saxophone solo by Mr. Allison were greatly enjoyed by all.

The speaker for the evening was the Minister of St. Andrew's church Rev. W. J. Walker, B.A., B.D., who gave a continuation of his address delivered to the Club last month. Previously he had dealt with the political and economic situation in Europe and on this occasion he described the Eastern situation in a very graphic and interesting manner with special reference to Japan, China and Russia. He explained how Japan had risen in the course of 80 years from a place of obscurity to one of great economic importance and world power. Her need for an outlet for her increasing population was creating a serious problem which was solved by her entrance into Manchuria, ostensibly to protect her large interests in that land. Thus she was brought into the conflict with both China and Russia. Russia alive to the danger was arming and strengthening Siberia, especially that part lying over against Japan. The speaker dealt with the various aspects of this situation, the possibilities of war and the consequences which would be very serious not only to the East but to the whole world no matter which side wcn.

In closing he pointed out that we are largely responsible for the state of affairs in these lands for if the nations which have known Christ were truly Christian then Japan and Russia and China would have been brought to the feet of Christ long ago and instead of there being envy, greed and hatred amongst them they would be living on the higher plane of the Kingdom of God.

Mr. E. V. Ilsey ably expressed the thanks of the members and guests to the speaker for his thoughtful and instructive address.

CLOTHES FOR MEN TO BE MORE COLOURFUL

Local Tip Top Tailors' Dealer Reports Advance Showing of Next Spring's Styles

Clothes for men this coming Spring will be more colourful. Gone will be the staid conservative styles, the drab colors that have marked men's clothes throughout this twentieth century. In their place will be shades wih beige and green predominating, while the man whose Spring outfit is up to date will find numerous little new style wrinkles are the vogue.

This is the word brought back to Belleville by Mr. Wilbur who recently attended the Tip Top Tailors' first showing of the new Spring styles in Toronto recently.

A feature of the suit and topcoat models is the bi' swing style, which advance orders indicate will be very popular this coming Spring. Topcoats, Mr. Wilbur said, will be featured by a large number, of brown and fawn models.

Mr. Wilbur states that Tip Top Tailors this year are celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary and plans are being made by company heads to mark the occasion suitably.

RABBITS PLACED "ON THE SPOT"

Have Changed Coats to White But North Has no Snow

Hastings County cotton tail rabbits frolicking over the uplands of the northern townships this year have been placed on the spot. Nature several weeks ago gave them their annual winter coat, soft and startlingly white, but has so far failed to provide the snow to go with their winter covering. And just now as the bunnies scamper about the woods and brush they stand out like a lighthouse.

Although snow was deep and temperatures were hovering around the twenty below zero point at this date last year, farmers this year even in the district of Dungannon are still pasturing their stock, only a sprinkle of snow has so far fallen in the north, and only one or two cold days have been felt this season, it is reported by Mr. J. L. Churcher, Reeve of Dungannon.

SHOTGUN IS USED TO SECURE DEER

Reeve of Tudor and Cashel Brings Down Fine Buck

Mr. James Sprackett, Reeve of the townships of Tudor and Cashel, and son of ex-Alderman George Sprackett of this city, believes he might have become a hunter of note if he had started at the game early enough.

Although he has lived in his home district of Gilmour practically all his life he had never taken part in a deer hunt until this season. Then on his first day out this year he bagged a record sized buck. Scorning the use of the modern high-power rifle, Reeve Sprackett secured his trophy with an old fashioned shotgun.

The buck weighed in the neighborhood of 190 lbs. It was loping down a runway in the vicinity of Silver Lake near Grimsthorpe when a well placed charge of buckshot tumbled it. Ten others of the party each got their deer this year in the same district.

NATURE PROVIDES FOR WILD LIFE OF NORTH

Partridge and Deer. Plentiful. and Season has Been to Advantage

"Nature is balancing her budget this year in favor of the wild life," commented R. C. Brett, naturalist-Reeve of Limerick Township who arrived in the city to take his seat at the December session of Hastings County Council.

"Last year was a hard one all around. We believed that the deep snow and the zero weather which lasted so long would mean the death of plenty of deer and partridge. But this year they seem more plentiful than ever. And if this kind of weather keeps up they'll be more plentiful still."

Recent rains have filled the swamps resulting in great benefit to the country, pasture has been lush for the deer the partridge have had plenty of berries and seeds to eat and the north is in better shape than it has been for years reports the observant Reeve.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"The Gay Divorcee"

Called Screen's First True Musical Comedy

"The Gay Divorcee," the feature attraction starting at the Belle Theatre today is declared to be the first "true musical comedy" ever presented on the screen.

Studio officials, it is said, exhausted every possibility to accurately capture the giddy, headlong speed of the plot, which as a stage play starring Fred Astaire, played 238 performances in New York and six months in the Palace Theatre, London.

Hit numbers of the original play have been retained, including the celebrated "Night and Day" number, to the music of which Astaire does his famous "Dance of the Moods." There is also Astaire's sensational wild dance of joy and abandonment, wherein, having at last won Ginger Rogers, the lady of his dreams, he celebrates with a daring reprise of "The Continental" over tables, chairs, davenports and what-nots.

Besides being a remarkably funny, gay and brisk romantic comedy "The Gay Divorcee," presents strikingly unusual settings and a bevy of beauties who combine charming femininity and extreme daring.

Architecturally, the settings are more like a fantasy than anything else, particularly in the conception of a hotel as it may be fifty years from now.

The exterior, covering a floor space of some 22,000 square feet, resembles a futuristic drawing. The interiors are even more exciting, what with fur-lined bedrooms, frosted glass mantelpieces large enough to dance upon, and the most amazing bed of yesterday, today and tomorrow.

This couch which is occupied by Ginger Rogers in one of the comedy's most amusing sequences, will never be practical until moths are entirely exterminated. It is upholstered with long white fur from head to foot, and bears a spread to match, so that the whole thing resembles a polar bear . . a marvellous setting for one so vivacious as Miss Rogers.

The girls in the chorus of 100 were selected by three unbiased beauty judges from thousands of applicants.

The plot of "The Gay Divorcee" is a 100-mile-an-hour romance, laugh festival and spectacle, with no pause for parking.

"The Gay Divorcee' is said to be the most ambitious production of the season from a musical standpoint.

Numbers by five celebrated songmakers are presented: "Night and Day" by Cole Porter; "Don't Let it Bother You," by Gordon and Reval; "Looking for a Needle in a Haystack," and "The Continental", both by Con Conrad and Herb Magidson and "K-nock Kneez," by Gordon and Reval.

Gordon and Reval wrote music and lyrics for "Broadway Through a Keyhole," "We're Not Dressing," "Here Comes the Bride" and many other screen hits. Conrad and Magidson wrote the current hit, "Yes, Sir I Love Your Daughter," Conrad himself wrote "Memory Lane," "Margy", "Lonesome and Sorry" and "The Champaigne Waltz."

Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly, the screen's ace comediennes are appearing on the same program in "Done in Oil," an uproarious comedy dispensing 28 minutes of wholesome laughter.

AT THE CAPITOL

"My Song For You"

Hilarious! Enchanting! Delightful!

"My Song For You" coming to the Capitol Thursday, and starring Jan Kiepura is a worthy successor to "Be Mine Tonight", one of the most successful of musical comedies.

In the story Gatti (Jan Kiepura) is a famous singer, who has a bright and energetic manager (Sonnie Hale). The theme song is a tuneful number that will win great popularity. The singer is heard in this, as well as in excerpts from opera, and towards the end of the picture sings "Ave Maria" with telling effect.

The story of the film affords Gatti many opportunities. He "falls for" a very charming girl (Aileen Marson), who wanders by accident on to the stage during a rehearsal of scenes in "Aida". The girl rebuffs him, but eventually requiring an introduction for her sweetheart (Emlyn Williams) consents to dine with the singer. At this point the manager (Sonnie Hale) comes into the picture—with a delightful sequence. Gatti has promised to broadcast that night, and to keep faith with the public his manager has to deputise. Sonnie Hale did good work in "Be Mine To-night" but in this new picture he has a part that he invests with great humour.

"My Song For You" will be welcomed as an outstanding contribution to first-class musical entertainment. The outdoor locations are fascinatingly picturesque and the settings are sumptuous. In every department the production is claimed to be much more than adequate.

"Girl in Danger"

Ralph Bellamy delivers his usually fine performance in "Girl in Ranger", hit number two on this excellent double bill, in his role of Inspector Trent, the detective character he has made famous in a series of thrilling and gripping stories of crime and criminals.

The story, as have others of the same series, moves along at an interesting pace from the very start. Bellamy as Trent, the police inspector, is called in to solve the mystery of the theft, and to recover the missing Cortes emerald.

The story revolves around Gloria Gale, society girl, who is bored with the humdrum existence of the rich girl. Seeking thrills and adventure, she assists a crook in the theft of the emerald. Before she can prevent it, she is involved in a complicated set of circumstances in which an underworld gang and the entire police force of a large city figure.

Trent, one the trail of the stolen stone, meets the girl. Confident she has the emerald, he attempts to get it from her. The underworld, double-crossed by the real thief, is also after the treasure. Thrills come swiftly when both the law and the lawless strive to get the stone away from her.

Shirley Grey is seen as the society girl, with the balance of the cast including such well-known and capable players as J. Carrol Naish and Arthur Hohl.

A funny cartoon "Scrappy's Auto Show," and Capitol News complete the programme.

Last complete show at 8:40.

Leaving Tonight—Barbara Stanwyck in "A Lost Lady" and "King Kelly," a hilarious musical comedy.

He defeated Ben De Forth 37 to 36.

Mrs. De Forth who had intended to cast her ballot for her husband, arrived three minutes after the polls closed.

SAAR POLICING AGREEMENT MADE

Sir John Simon Congratulated by British House on Announcement

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 6 (C.P. Cable)—Germany's agreement to the despatch of an international military force to keep order in the Saar during the plebiscite period, was announced to the House of Commons this afternoon by Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon.

Sir John officially informed the House of the swift new moves whereby Britain is taking more active steps to maintain peace in Europe by contributing to an international force in the Saar that will not include French or German soldiers, but will be under authority of the League—in itself a fast step forward for the League of Nations.

Conditions

Conditions for sending British troops were outlined by the Foreign Secretary as follows:

1.—The proposed international force should not include troops from either France or Germany;

2.—Other countries conveniently situated should also provide contingents;

3.—Both France and Germany should assent.

France has already agreed to an international force, Sir John said, being willing to abstain from participating while the critical plebiscite is being taken, in which the Saar votes whether to return to Germany, join France or remain under the League.

"I am happy to inform the House" he continued, "that I have now received a reply from the German government, who say they consider it would be very helpful to have this international force in the Saar before, during and after the plebiscite. Italy has agreed to co-operate on the same conditions as Great Britain."

Sir John was unable to say how many British troops would be required as negotiations were now proceeding with other governments. (An infantry battalion has been suggested.)

Sir John Congratulated

The Opposition immediately joined in congratulating Sir John on the spirit of co-operation shown in the Government's decision. George Lansbury, Labor leader, said he hoped this co-operation would continue with happier relations for all concerned.

Dictatorship by 'Clique' Or 'Rump' Organization Protested by Liberals

Meeting at City Hall Declares Convention Must Be Delayed

INTERFERENCE CHARGED

Liberals State "Clique" Planned Coup For Monday Meeting

Challenging so-called dictatorship by a small "clique" which was named as "this rump organization" of the South Hastings Liberal Association, Liberals of the Federal riding who filled the City Hall last night unanimously decided to oppose at the meeting called for Monday next the holding of a convention immediately thereafter for the purpose of the selection of a candidate to contest the riding in the next Federal elections.

A resolution was passed in this respect "in the interest of the united party, true Liberalism and British justice" on motion of Mr. P. C. MacLaurin seconded by A. H. Ketcheson.

Mention of names in connection with the allegations was sedulously avoided by the speakers.

Says Candidate Is Picked

Mayor Tice who was chairman charged that this small group had already picked a candidate for the Liberals without consultation with the party in the effort to ride roughshod through without opposition. The mayor mentioned the reputed "candidate" as "a mayor, but not the mayor of Belleville."

Allegation was made that a member of this group had proffered and evidently used the position as political leverage in an effort to oust Mayor Tice from the city's chief magistracy in this week's election.

"There will be no split in the Liberal party" was the united voice of the speakers, Byron O. Lott, of sixty years' experience in public life, affirming that he had seen such rifts before as that of "this little Tammany ring" but "don't take this crowd too seriously," he urged.

The chief question was that of opposition to the holding of a convention immediately after the annual meeting of the association on Monday next. "I can assure you that ways and means will be taken so that there will be no convention that day," said Charles A. Cameron who presented a review of recent developments in the political field. "Time must be given for consideration after organization for the choice of a candidate" was the general viewpoint, and the time for the convention was suggested a month or six weeks after the meeting so that no candidate can be forced through "before anyone can do anything about it or get around to stop it."

"Do we want, as good Liberals, to get into the position where we are guided or ruled by a dictator or a bunch of dictators?" asked P. C. MacLaurin. "There are no Liberals here with axes to grind."

TWO SUFFOCATED BY GAS FUMES

Children of Bruce Sutcliffe Victims But Wife Will Survive

Toronto, Dec. 6—(CP)—A young mother today fought for her life in hospital, unaware of the deaths of her two young sons who remained by her side in a gas-filled house until they fell victims to the fumes, that escaped from the cellar furnace. In a critical condition Mrs. Nellie Joan Sutcliffe received no inkling of the loss of her sons, while her youthful husband arranged for the funerals.

The boys were John Allan 'Buddy' Sutcliffe, six years of age, and Donald Bruce Sutcliffe, aged seven. Their father, Bruce Sutcliffe returned home yesterday from his duties as a postal clerk to find his wife stretched on the floor, her arms wrapped around one son and the other boy lying beneath a buffet. His sons gone, Sutcliffe today anxiously hoped for the recovery of his wife, who managed to survive the fumes because she fell near a door, where a draught fanned her face, saving her from death.

600 LIBERALS GATHER AT CLUB

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner Passing Through City Speaks Briefly

One of the largest gatherings to grace the Belleville Liberal Club rooms since the night the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, swept the riding of West Hastings to victory last June, afforded itself of an evening's entertainment last night at the official re-opening for the season of the local Liberal Club rooms when over 600 jammed their way into the far-too-small auditorium to enjoy an evening of euchre and dancing.

Dr. Faulkner Speaks

Hon. Dr. Faulkner on his way back to Toronto, after speaking at the Cheesemakers' Banquet in Picton, where he represented the Government, called at the Liberal Club Rooms, where he made a short speech. He said in part, that he could not go near to Belleville without paying a call to the Club, where he was sure he would find his loyal supporters.

It was very inspiring to see before him such a large gathering even though there was no election in sight. Such enthusiasm he had not witnessed since the nineteenth day of last June. He pleaded for unity now the election was over, and asked his loyal followers, regardless of colour, creed or party, to carry out the ideal of the Club, when it was instituted, which was to care for the less fortunate in our midst, by lending a helping hand. He paid his respects to the splendid executive he had and to his supporters, both old and young, and asked all to make use of the

FIRE DESTROYS TERRILL HOME

Gardenville Residents Suffer Severe Loss

Carrying Place, Dec. 6 (Special)—Fire of unknown origin which began in an unused attic and swept rapidly down destroyed the home of Mr. Sherman Terrill and family in Gardenville early Tuesday forenoon. The fire was first noticed by Mr. Terrill himself while he was in the fields some distance away, but since the attic in which the blaze apparently originated was sealed, little could be done to check the flames. Quickly a volunteer brigade of fire fighters was formed, and furniture and effects from the lower story of the house were carried to safety. The upper part of the structure was by this time fully ablaze, and efforts to rescue bedding and furniture from the second floor were of no avail. A bucket brigade went into action to save a small shed only a few feet away; and though the heat was blistering they stuck to their task and succeeded. The Terrill home was a fine large frame building, newly painted last season, and its loss means much to the family. A small amount of insurance was carried, but not enough to guarantee any great return.

ACTION FORECAST ON PROBE FINDING STATES BENNETT

Willing For Trade Agreement With U. S. on Equitable Basis

GIVES RECORD

Address at Brockville Suggested of Pending Election

Brockville, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—Assurance the Dominion Government would take such action as it was competent to take in regard to findings of the Mass Buying and Price Spreads Commission and would willingly conclude a trade agreement with the United States was given by Premier R. B. Bennett in an address here last night winding up a busy day for the Prime Minister.

Any trade agreement with the country to the south would have to be "on fair and just terms," Mr. Bennett said. He did not want any bargain with any country "if I had to give away my country for the bargain."

Mr. Bennett motored to Ottawa late last night. In the brief period in between noon yesterday and the hour of his departure he attended a luncheon in his honor, spoke at the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association, went to a banquet, where he made a short address and finally made a speech at a large public meeting.

Upheld Trade Agreements

Mr. Bennett informed his audience he would probably seek further opportunities during the coming months to go more fully into the record of the government and detail its accomplishments. He warned his listeners that defeat of his government and election of the Liberals would mean destruction of the 1932 Empire Trade Agreements. These, he insisted, had proven of the greatest benefit to Canada. The Dominion had been given a sheltered market in the United Kingdom. Canada's exports to the United Kingdom had shown tremendous advances since negotiation of the agreements.

Work of the Commission on Price Spreads and Mass Buying was the subject of reference by the Prime Minister. The commission had not reported yet, he told his audience, but when it did so the "Government will take such action as it is competent to take." He asserted any suggestion that the Government was not behind the commission was false. The Government had provided the funds for it to function, and was standing behind it.

Suggestive of Election

The Prime Minister's speech was suggestive of election campaigns. He defended the record of his Government, charged that the Liberals had gone out of power leaving a legacy of debt and defunct railways, and that his Government was called upon to take heroic measures to save the country. While insisting that he was not a high tariff man, Mr. Bennett declared increases of duties had been necessary when he came into power in order to re-establish Canada on a sound trading basis. Canada's credit had been saved by the Government, he said.

The Government's peace, order and good government legislation had proven the salvation of the pulp and paper industry, Mr. Bennett stated. He gave it as his opinion that Canada would never have had a Central Bank if it had been left to the Liberals to establish one. He also stated the Dominion Marketing Legislation was proving of inestimable benefit to the farmers of Canada and instanced particularly the producers of flue cured tobacco who, he said, had been enabled to secure enhanced prices for their produce because of the law. He praised the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act as a valuable piece of legislation in helping the agriculturists to get on their feet again.

SIX DIE FROM BURNS

Perpignan, France, Dec. 6 (AP)—Six persons died today of burns and injuries suffered during a fire and panic in a barn used as a motion picture theatre yesterday.

All of them died in a hospital during the day. The death list was made up of five boys between the ages of two and 11 years and one aged woman.

Ejection is Sequel to Death of King Alexander

Szeged, Hungary, Dec. 6 (AP) — Long lines of Hungarian refugees ejected from Yugoslavia because of Yugoslav resentment over their countrymen's alleged complicity in the assassination of King Alexander streamed over the border into their homeland today.

Exhausted, bedraggled and dejected, they told harrowing stories of hardship. Some were barefoot, some coatless, others were sick.

AEMILIUS JARVIS CASE FOR PROBE STATES ROEBUCK

Royal Commission May Be Set up to Study Conviction

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Attorney General Will Recommend Inquiry Into Conviction

TORONTO Dec. 6.—(CP)—Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Ontario Attorney General announced today he would recommend to the next meeting of the Ontario Cabinet that a Royal Commission be set up to inquire into the conviction of Aemilius Jarvis of Toronto on a charge of conspiracy in 1923.

Jarvis was sentenced to six months in the Toronto Jail Farm and fined $60,000 on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Provincial Government in bond transactions.

Mr. Jarvis has long complained that he was improperly and unjustly convicted Mr. Roebuck said, and the duty of the Commission will be to find that out.

If this contention is upheld the Attorney General's Department will urge the Federal Minister of Justice to order a new trial for Jarvis.

While the Attorney General did not make a definite announcement as to the judge who would preside over the inquiry he expected it would be a high court judge.

The Cabinet is meeting today but Mr. Roebuck will not have the necessary material available to submit to his ministers so his recommendation will come before the first meeting of Cabinet next week.

HOPE FOR FLIERS IS ALMOST LOST

Search Continues Over Large Area of Pacific

Sydney, N.S.W. Dec. 6—(AP) — The wives of three fliers down in the Pacific waited together today in the home of Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm for news. They have been without sleep since Tuesday.

Mrs. Ulm expressed through newspapers her deep gratitude for the vigorous search American planes and ships are conducting for the lost pilots.

Honolulu, Dec. 6—(AP)— Weary but willing naval searchers went on relentlessly today in the hunt for Flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions, missing since Tuesday when lack of fuel forced their trans-Pacific monoplane into the ocean.

Pilots of a dozen navy seaplanes plotted courses over 200,000 square miles of the adjacent Pacific, which has been combed the last two days for the ill-fated fliers. Not until all hope was vanished will the search end.

Chances Dwindle

Chances dwindled, however, as the hours pile up past the time it was believed the "Star of Australia" could remain aflot with Ulm, co-

MARX NAZI CHIEF OUSTED BY PARTY

Gottfried Feder Removed From All His Offices

Berlin, Dec. 6.— (CP-Havas)—Gottfried Feder, the "Karl Marx" of Nazism, whose anti-capitalistic slogans served Adolf Hitler with the ammunition by which he rose to power was today ousted from the Nazi party and removed from all his offices.

His dismissal was regarded as the final and complete victory of the capitalistic element in Nazism which under the guidance of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht has been forcing out the so-called Socialistic and Radical tendencies of the National Socialist Party.

FIVE-ALARM FIRE

San Francisco, Dec. 6—(AP)—A five alarm fire routed hundreds of guests from their beds in the smart St. Francis Hotel early today before firemen brought the blaze under control half an hour after it broke out.

Firemen said the blaze was checked so quickly guests were never in any real danger and sent them back to the rooms not long after they were awakened.

Manager James McCabe declined to estimate the amount of damage.

May Build Sanitarium In Eastern Ontario Says Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner

Minister of Health Speaks on Tuberculosis at Picton

JUDGE IS CHAIRMAN

Banquet of Cheesemakers Most Successful Event

"I am not stating that the government will build a sanitarium in Eastern Ontario but I am stating, that my address here tonight is the starting of a campaign to erect such a building in this section of the Province so that tuberculosis, one of the dreaded human ailments may be checked", said Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health and member for West Hastings at the Central Ontario Cheesemaker's convention banquet held at Picton on Wednesday evening in St. Mary's Magdaline parish hall.

So large was the gathering, the ladies of the guild of the church had to arrange extra tables in the basement for the guests. At the conclusion of the repast, which to say the least was sumptuous in every particular, those at the second table moved to the auditorium, where the program was delivered. His Honor Judge Evan H. McLean of Prince Edward County most acceptably filled the position of chairman and in his witty manner, welcomed all to the banquet and paid special thanks for the convention being held in Prince Edward County, one of the finest in the Province of Ontario. He expressed the regret of John A. Weese, M.P., for Prince Edward-Lennox on not being able to attend, he having undergone an emergency operation for sinus trouble on Wednesday afternoon.

Artists Entertain

Duncan Cowan and his capable staff of artists were in charge of the program and the audience was most delighted with Scotch wits, highland songs and the merry twinkle of feet. Miss Jean Simpson, contralto gave a number of selections in Highland Costume, while Miss Ethel Evans talented violin-

Clarke Tells Du Pont Letter Not Running Arms Inquiry

Washington, Dec. 6—(AP)—Evidence that the Du Pont Company sent a shipment of powder to Holland in 1929 for reshipment to China—while an embargo was in effect against sending munitions directly to China—was received today by the United States Senate investigators.

Du Pont a muntions, manufacturer, was told that the latter was not "running this investigation".

It started when Clark contended that powder had no beneficial effect on mankind.

"Did you feel that way during the war," Du Pont asked.

"Certainly," Clark, who served with A.E.F., replied.

Salaries Paid During Illness

Ottawa, Dec. 6—(CP)—Hubert Hunt, a former store manager and superintendent for Dominion Stores in Ottawa was a witness today before the parliamentary mass buying commission.

Hunt said he had a serious breakdown eight years ago and while he was away, Dominion Stores paid his full salary of $35. Four years ago, he had another breakdown and again the company paid his full salary. Two years ago, Hunt found he could not continue his work and since then the company has been paying about 55 percent of his salary.

WATERFRONT THREATENED

Portland, Me., Dec. 5—(AP)— A general alarm fire today threatened the Portland waterfront. The blaze broke out in the two-story wooden plant of the New England Bran Company and quickly spread to another wooden structure occupied by J. J. Jacobs, a boatbuilder. The plant of the American Radiator Company was the next to catch fire.

'MODERN NAPOLEON'

"Modern Napoleon" is designation being given Gen. Jose Estigarribia (below), commander of the small Paraguayan army, which routed larger, better equipped Bolivian army led by German war veterans, in campaign which has virtually ended six-year war over "Chaco" territory. Eusebio Alaya, president of Paraguay, is shown above.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 6.—A shallow depression has caused light snowfalls on the Great Lakes and another is centred in Wyoming. Local snowfalls or flurries have also occured in Quebec and Southern Saskatchewan. The weather remains comparatively mild in Alberta but quite cold in Manitoba and it is becoming colder in Ontario.

Lake Superior—Moderate northerly winds, mostly fair and cold; snowflurries near the Soo.

Kenora and Rainy River—Moderate winds, fine and cold.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan — Moderate winds; partly cloudy with slightly higher temperature.

Alberta—Northwesterly winds; fair and continuing comparatively mild.

FINED FOR HAVING ILLICIT STILL

Clayton Youngs, Sulphide, pleaded guilty to a charge laid under the Excise Act when arraigned before Magistrate Casement at Madoc, yesterday. Youngs admitted in open court of operating an illicit still, suitable for the manufacture of moonshine liquor and was fined the minimum fine of $100.00 and costs. Unable to pay the fine, Youngs was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail in default. The case was investigated by the R.C.M.P., who discovered the still in operation, later taking Youngs into custody. He admitted ownership and operations of the illicit still.

Monsignor Bearzotte who as Secretary to His Excellency Most Rev. Andrea Cassulo, Apostolic Delegate to Canada, visited Belleville four years ago on the opening of St. Michael's Academy has been appointed to the Apostolic Nunciature in Dublin.

Monsignor Bearzotte has been several years in Canada, previously serving as secretary to His Excellency Monsignor di Maria, now Nuncio to Switzerland. In his new appointment in Dublin he succeeds Archbishop Riben recently appointed Apostolic Delegate to Africa.

W. H. LOUGHEED IN C.I.D. TORONTO

Information was received at the local office of the Ontario Provincial Police, through Inspector F. Gardner, to the effect that Staff Inspector W. H. Lougheed had been attached to the Criminal Investigation Department of the O.P.P. Inspector Lougheed is well known in this district having previously been district inspector for District No. 8, stationed at Belleville for seven years. His many local friends will be glad to learn of his advancement. Inspector Lougheed was moved to Toronto and attached to the headquarters department as Staff Inspector one year ago and succeeded in office by Inspector Frank Gardner, previously of Cochrane.

CHIMNEY BLAZE IS EXTINGUISHED

A chimney blaze that resulted in little damage, broke out at the residence of Mr. J. Aikens, Sidney Street about 6.30 today. Despite the fact that the residence was outside the city limits, one detachment from the local fire department was dispatched to the scene of the fire and soon had matters well under control.

A. Y. P. A. RALLY

The third annual rally of the Hastings and Prince Edward Local Council of the Anglican Young People's Association was held last evening in the Parish House of St. Thomas Church, with an attendance of two hundred and ten. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar of St. Thomas Church, Miss Frances Lazier, President of the local branch and Mr. G. C. Craven, Stirling, President of the Hastings and Prince Edward Local Council.

The address of the evening, entitled "Where Are We Going?" was delivered by Mr. Leonard Mills, Toronto, President of the Provincial Council and Vice-President of the Dominion Council. He brought greetings from the Ontario organization and gave an interesting address on the four-fold program of the A.Y.P.A., worship, work, fellowship and edification.

Mr. Roger Thompson of St. Thomas' A.Y.P.A. led in the discussion period. After roll call there was election of officers, Rev. A. S. McConnell, Stirling, presiding. The election resulted as follows:

President—Mr. Reg. Abraham, Picton.

Vice - President — Mr. Roger Thompson, Belleville.

Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Eleanor MacRostie, Frankford.

Chaplain—Rev. J. M. Brownlie, Wellington.

Convener of the Extension Committee—Mr. G. H. Carver, Wellington.

Miss Frances Lazier presided for the program which included instrumental numbers by Wellington members and a play by Tweed branch.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served by the St. Thomas' Branch. The interesting rally concluded with dancing, St. Thomas' A.Y.P.A. Orchestra supplying the music.

MARLBANK MAN TAKES OWN LIFE

Leslie Davis, 70, Despondent Due to Continued Ill-Health

Apparently despondent due to continued ill health Mr. Leslie Davis, 70, of Marlbank, took his own life early today when he shot himself while sitting in bed. Although no immediate members of the family actually saw the incident, the report of a gun being discharged was heard and upon investigation the body of the unfortunate man was found lying across the bed. Upon the arrival of Dr. G. G. Hunt of Marlbank, it was disclosed that the unfortunate man had died instantly.

Mr. Davis resided in Marlbank only a few hundred yards from the home of his son, Lyle Davis. Except for being in poor health the family could give no reason for the elderly man's actions. Provincial Constable McBrien of Belleville investigated and found that Mr. Davis had procured a .32 calibre revolver, and while in a sitting position, placed the barrel close to his right temple and pulled the trigger. The bullet passed through the elderly man's head, emerging behind the left ear. Death came instantly, stated authorities. The question of an inquest has not been decided as yet. A widow and son survive.

Police News

Apparently broken when struck by a passing motor car, the stop sign at the corner of Victoria avenue and Hillcrest avenue was discovered lying on the ground by a local citizen yesterday. The matter was reported to the police who are investigating.

One lone inebriate graced the police cells last evening. The youth was picked up by P. C. Evans after having allegedly caused a disturbance at a public meeting held locally last night. The accused will appear in open court tomorrow.

An epidemic of robberies have been reported in Port Hope lately. Local police have been informed of the articles missing, the majority being automobile accessories.

Ten transients applied for a night's lodging at the local police station last night. Of the ten men to sign the register at the sergeant's desk one was born in Poland, another in Austria, while the remaining eight were British subjects, all being born within the Empire. No serious motor accidents have been reported locally in over a week.

FIRE PROTECTION IN JAIL NEEDED

Report of Prison Inspector Received By County Council

A strong recommendation, that some method of fire protection for the county jail should be installed at an early date, and that unless a stand pipe and hose are provided, fire extinguishers should be placed at strategic points in the building, was made Hastings County Councillors in the report submitted at the present December session of council by Mr. T. M. Gourlay, Inspector of Prisons, following his October visit to the local jail.

A recommendation also, that a new kitchen be built for the jail is contained in the report. The one now in use, it was pointed out by the inspector is situated at the end of a long corridor and is not satisfactory. Food must be carried along this corridor through the fire hole and the prisoners are also bathed at one end of the kitchen. A more suitable arrangement should be undertaken at an early date.

It is pointed out in the report, that no especial privileges may be granted any prisoner such as tobacco, special diet, etc., unless ordered by the Gaol Surgeon in the interests of the prisoners' health. The regulations must be followed in this respect, and if special privileges are granted the Gaol Surgeon will specify the reason and the privilege granted in the local Gaol Surgeon's register.

At the time of the inspection of the local jail on October 23, the total number of prisoners in custody were as follows:

Male 18; Female 0; Total 18.

Accommodation lists single cells for twelve males and double cells for three males and three females.

General Condition Good

The general condition of the gaol is satisfactory as far as cleanlines and care is concerned. The gaol is a safe place of restraint. The walls and yards are in good condition except for one section of the women's yard on the main wall, where some tuck pointing should be done.

The present cost of maintaining a prisoner in the jail is listed at 11.93 cents per day for food. Food is served in accordance with the regulations and is good quality. Supplies are purchased by tender. One prisoner explained that no syrup is served in the gaol and that sugar was used entirely. The following is an example of the food served

Breakfast	Dinner	Supper
Porridge	Meat or Soup	Porridge
Sugar	Bread	Sugar
Bread	Vegetables	Bread
Tea	Tea	Tea

In the recommendation made by the inspector it was cited that prisoners should be clothed according to regulations, and a supply of summer and winter clothing be secured at once.

Syrup could be used as a substitute for sugar from time to time. The door to the women's yard is in a very poor condition and should be removed without delay. The floors throughout the gaol are well kept, but they are rough and weak in some points. A suggestion is made that they be replaced by concrete flooring.

rooms, which were theirs and pleaded for them not be carried away with fictitious or selfish motives which might spring up in their midst.

He explained his arduous duties as Minister of Health and how sorry he was that he could not be in Belleville more often. He, however, wanted the supporters of his to be loyal in all things, to Canada, to the King and he wished that he might be inspired to do what was right in his capacity as a Minister of the Crown and their respresentative in Parliament.

Long before the official evening's program was begun the hall resounded with merriment as over 400 sat down to participate in two hours of pastime at euchre. The hallways outside and the adjacent anterooms were pressed into service to accommodate the overflow crowd that was on hand to re-open the season. President Harold Holton of the Belleville Liberal Association was on hand to welcome the gathering while Chairman Thomas Mason personally and officially welcomed the enthusiastic crowd on behalf of the Belleville Liberal Association.

For two hours euchre was indulged in and the games were keenly contested. At the conclusion of the games all scores were returned to the committee in charge with the result that Mrs. A. Keegan was announced as winner of first prize in the ladies' section with Mrs Pritchard second. In the gentlemen's class Mr. Pritchard was first and P. Polwell second. Mrs. Violet Boudreau won the two dollar door prize. Luncheon was served after the cards, the refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee. The refreshments were prepared by the entertainment committee of the local Liberal Association.

Later the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed, the music being supplied by Charlie Goyer's orchestra until the early hours of the morning. Modern round dancing and old-time square dancing alternated in the program. At the conclusion of the evening's entertainment the gathering dispersed singing high the praises of the Belleville Liberal Association.

EXPENDITURES ON ROADS, BRIDGES WITHIN ESTIMATES

108 Miles Resurfaced at Cost of Only 6 Cents a Yard

HOLDBACK IS PAID

Hon. Dr. Faulkner Praised For Meeting Committee of Council

Expenditures of the Roads and Bridges Committee of Hastings County were kept well within the estimates during the past year, it was reported by chairman of the committee, Reeve James Moore, in rendering his report for the year's activities to Hastings County Council on Wednesday.

During the year a total of 108 miles of roads throughout the county were resurfaced, 46 miles with crushed stone and 62 miles with gravel. Of this amount of material only 30 percent was purchased by the county at an average cost of 6 cents per yard. Considerable other work was accomplished.

The following is the detailed report submitted by Chairman James Moore of the committee and adopted without comment by County Council on Wednesday. It is for the period between December 1st and Nov. 30th.

As the end of the year in which the schedules of expenditures are reported to the Government is Nov. 30th, we are able to give a complete report as from Dec. 1st, 1933, to Nov. 30th, 1934.

In the report of the January Session, we asked for an appropriation of 2 mills assessment in addition to the amounts that would be forthcoming from the Government by way of subsidy and on the relief projects.

Your committee made representation to the Relief Department of the Government and had the approval of two projects making a total labor expenditure of $63,666, with an estimated number of days labor of 39,000 days. The work proceeded very satisfactorily until about the middle of September when the Clerk got notice, that relief assistance would be discontinued. The Warden then went to Toronto and interviewed the authorities to allow the County to continue, but did not get favourable consideration. We continued to the end of the month and then closed down all work but the patrolling; this cut off about 8,200 days of work and left several jobs not completed and some other work that was under consideration had to be abandoned.

In the distribution of costs of relief work 2-3 of labor cost was paid by the Governments of the Dominion and Province sharing equally, the balance of the labor (1-3), and cost of materials and supervision would be paid or divided on an equal basis between the County and the Province. Your committee thought it advisable to stop the gang work during the latter part of July and August, as during that period, there was considerable work available with the farmers.

Praises Hon. Dr. Faulkner

On August 28th, a special meeting of the committee was called to discuss, with the Hon. Dr. Falukner and Mr. Peter McLaren, the prospects of the Bancroft Road being taken over by the Province and assuming 100 percent of the cost, and also the connecting links through the villages on the other highways.

We appreciate having a member of the Cabinet in the person of the Hon. Dr. Faulkner, who was born in our County and a resident of our County town, and who is willing to meet the committee and discuss the problems effecting the County and thereby create a closer co-operation between the Government and the County. We are very grateful for the successful efforts put forth by the Hon. Dr. Faulkner in getting the Government to take over the Bancroft road and assume the entire costs. This will relieve the County of a very large percent of the expenditures and enable the County to maintain other County roads in a much better condition. We believe this road would best serve the County interest by locating it as close as practical to the present road so the County will not have to continue to maintain a road into the north.

Pays Holdback

In the contract with the Raynor Construction Co., in 1932, for the paving of the Madoc road, 15 per cent of the costs of the road was held back as a maintenance guarantee, until such time as a satisfactory bond was given. This was done in July and the Treasurer was called upon to pay this holdback which amounted to $18,814.35. As there was no provision made for the paying of this amount in the estimates and we had only authority to expend on roads up to a 2 mill levy, this and the closing off of the relief work, very considerably affected our completions of the program of the year, but we are pleased to report, that we have kept the expenditures within the estimate but a great amount of work planned was left over for next season.

Number of men employed each month are: December and January 187; February 455; March 416; April 460; May 133; June 371; July 302; August 106; September 255; October 133 and November 28. Number days worked: 30,770. Number of accident on which compensation, was paid was 7. Amount of compensation paid, $559.16. Medical Aid, $234.00. Hospitals, $108.50. Total $901.16, estimated cost to the County, $2260.00. In the fall of 1933 the County had a contract for supplying 2500 tons of crushed stone for contractors on High. No. 37 and on this contract the County realized a profit of $972.63.

There have been 108 miles of road resurfaced, 46 miles with crushed stone and 62 miles with; gravel 34,794 yds., of which 10 percent was pit run gravel, 60 percent taken from County pits and quarries and 30 percent purchased at an average cost of 6 cents per yd., was used in re-surfacing the roads. Total cost was $26,489.71 or 75.8 cents per yd. 12 miles graded, 3 large concrete culverts, 1 bridge extension were constructed and 52 tile culverts were used. 1 wooden bridge was replaced with a 10 ft. multiplate metal culvert; 18 miles were treated with dust layer.

The committee is composed of Jas. Moore, chairman, F. A. Reynolds, Judson Gunter, Wesley Grey, Henry Larkin, The Warden.

30 NEW STUDENTS AT COMMUNITY SCHOOL

Radio Mechanics Is Added to the Curriculum of Popular Classes

Thirty new students were registered last evening at the Community School for Leisure Time, sponsored by the Young Women's Guild of John Street United Church. A new and very popular subject was added to the curriculum, that of radio mechanics, with Mr. Jack Dewar acting as teacher, and it is expected that this study will be particularly successful.

All classes were well attended. At the reading club of which Miss White and Miss Masson are conveners, Miss Masson spoke on the "development of the novel". Next week Miss Merry will address this group on the drama and other speakers will be Mrs. A. E. McColl on "art" and Mrs. George H. Stobie on "music and composers".

A class is being formed in child training with Mrs. E. R. Logie as leader and other classes which were busily at work last evening included sewing, penmanship, book-keeping, current history and mathematics. Several registered last evening for the class in show card writing which is being conducted by Miss Muriel Wardner.

The response to the undertaking of the Guild has been most enthusiastic. Last evening's meeting was the second of the school and it was marked by a very large registration which shows the desire to make leisure hours profitable and interesting.

"Dear Sir,—

"May I ask sufficient space in your columns to reply to Comrade No. 17943, Q.M.A.A.C., Aldershot Command. May I quote from Article 3 of the Constitution of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League. "All women shall be eligible for membership in the Auxiliary who have served with the forces of the British Empire or her Allies in the Great War, or in any of the wars of the Empire, and the mothers, sisters and daughters of such women, or who are widows, wives, mothers, sisters and daughters, also grandmothers, granddaughters 16 years and over, of the men who served with the said forces during the Great War.

"The local Branch of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. No. 99 are only too anxious to bring about the unity of all who have served in His Majesty's Navy, Army, Air Force or any Auxiliary Force, to further among them the spirit of comradeship and mutual help and the close and kindly ties of active service. I shall be very pleased indeed, to send form of application to our comrade or any comrades to membership in the Canadian Legion or the Ladies' Auxiliary B.E.S.L. May I close with the words of our late comrade, Sir Arthur Currie, "They served till death, why not we". Thanking you for the space you have allowed me for this letter,

"Yours very truly,
"D. Bradford,

PRIZES AWARDED TO MAKERS AT CHEESE MEETING

John Hall, Rednersville, Tops Contest For Cheese Scoring

BAILEY'S GROUP WINS

Thomas Bowerman, M. P. Speaks on Condition of Farmers

Picton, Dec. 6 (Special) — The Wednesday morning session of the cheesemaker's convention opened with almost every seat in the hall occupied. W. E. Brennan, acted as chairman. Following Mr. Barr's address Mr. T. J. Hicks of Montreal announced the prize winners of the cheese scoring competition:

1st Competition:

John Hall, Rednersville, 96 points.
C. W. Hamilton, Belton 96 points.
J. M. Wilkinson, Tweed, 96 points.

There were 34 entries in this competition. Over 14 scored 90 points and the lowest score was 60 points with 4 scoring 95.

2nd competition open to prize winning teams of the 1933 competition: (1) Mr. Harvey's group 96. (2) Mr. Bailey's group 95.

Competition open to 3 cheese-makers from each of ten Dairy Instructor's groups of Central Ontario: $20, Mr. Lynn's group 96 points. $15, Mr. Hick's group 94 points. $10, Mr. C. J. Brennan's group 92 points. $5, J. A. Murray's group 91 points.

Mr. Hicks Senior Dairy Produce Grader, next gave the figures compiled for the first elveen months of 1934 on graded cheese. He was sorry to report a decrease of 135,115 boxes compared with 1933 which is 12.8 percent lower than any year since official grading was put in force, and about 900,000 boxes or 47.4 percent lower than in 1925. The decrease in Ontario is 96,124 boxes or 11.26 per cent less cheese graded than in the same period in 1933. But it was encouraging to note a higher percentage of first grade cheese in 1934 than in any year since official grading started.

The main defect in workmanship in Ontario cheese was found by the graders to be cracked or greasy rinds and 2,130 cheese were placed in second grade on account of this defect. Poor marking, poor finish, vat numbers and date of manufacture carelessly marked accounted for 435 cheese receiving low grading. Rancid flavor and flavors that were not clean and fruity were also prominent.

Since the amendment of the Dairy Act, at the last session of Parliament circular No. 3 has been mailed to every cheese factory giving instruction on marking cheese. No cheese is now graded until the youngest vat is at least eight days old. This regulation was put into effect ot overcome the complaints of some importers in Great Britain.

New Superintendent

Dr. Gibson was next introduced. Coming from the Agriculture College at Guelph, he becomes the new superintendent of the Eastern Dairy School at Kingston at the beginning of 1935. Of Scotch and Irish descent, Dr. Gibson was born in England but has lived in Canada for the past 25 years. He has had experience as a cheesemaker in England and Ireland, and as a chemist in connection with the Dairy department, at Guelph Agricultural College. Dr. Gibson hopes to render service to all parts of the dairy industry. He thinks the surplus of milk and butter offers a ray of hope to the cheesemen. We must produce more cheese for the Old Country markets as they wish a greater continuity of supply.

Mr. Lorne Anderson, Dairy Produce Grader, reported observations of his official trip to the United Kingdom last June. He called on retailers and visited docks where cheese landed. He found that the cheese arrived for the most part in good condition. Cheese boxes did not always stand up when shipped by rail to inland centres. Boxes this year seemed poorer than usual. He called on 116 retail merchants and found the market unsettled and dull for the past few months. New Zealand has steadily improved the quantity and quality of her cheese. Canadian cheese has decreased in quantity. New Zealand cheese can be bought cheaper but the better shops carry Canadian cheese. The British do not like our October cheese so well as they think it not sufficiently matured when it arrives. Mr. Anderson thought that the proper temperature of the curing rooms of makers needed more attention. Our competitors are putting forth every effort to improve quality and Canada must too. Lack of volume and continuity of supply, handicaps us in the British market while good boxing and proper dating is important.

Thos. Bowerman, M.P.P., Prince Edward-Lennox, expressed his sympathy for the deplorable condition of the farmer today. Selling milk at from 50 to 60c per hundred pounds, he is operating at a loss. The old cow used to be an asset on a farm and helped to pay off many a mortgage. Now she is a star boarder. Mr. Bowerman suggested reducing cost of overhead, and a reduction in the cost of cheesemakers' supplies as measures needed. The Minister of Agriculture has promised all help possible to the industry. He is prepared to send men to the Old Country to try to stimulate the market there, and thinks establishment of cold storage centres for curing cheese might be a good investment for the government. Mr. Bowerman offered to bring to the attention of the government any measures sponsored by the convention.

Mr. J. K. Paterson, manager local branch Canadian Bank of Commerce, gave some observations of the cheese industry that he had made as an outsider. He thought cheese factories had made few changes since establishment to meet changing conditions. Salesmen on the local boards seem to have to accept prices offered by the buyers and do not seem to know conditions of the British market. There is no central authority or organization to meet competition. Marketing in New Zealand and Australia is aided by their governments.

Here farmers are drifting away from the cheese factories, and if steps are not taken to encourage them in the next two months, many factories may close. The speaker thought our domestic market could be exploited to a greater extent. Consumers here found difficulty often in getting good mature cheese at least three months' old. Mr. Paterson stated that the banks stood ready to do all in their power to help the cheese industry.

The following prizes were awarded at the Convention yesterday in the County Cheesefactory Competition:

NEW JAIL FLOORS ARE SUGGESTED

Ways and Means Committee Will Discuss Question of Flooring

Notices of motions, reading of reports and brief discussion of various matters characterized the Wednesday morning session of Hastings County Council convening at Shire Hall this week in the last meeting of the year.

A communication received from Magistrate E. J. Butler of this city asked:

"Has the County any bylaw appointing one of your county constables a special officer under the Liquor Control Act? If there is such a bylaw I would be glad if you would let me have a copy as the existence of a bylaw of this nature makes a difference in reference to the disposition of fines under the Liquor Control Act."

Following the reading of the communication, it was decided to advise the county solicitor to prepare a bylaw to this effect and have it in readiness for council in the Committee on Bylaws. A notice of motion that a bylaw to appoint a special officer of the Liquor Control Act for the County was received later from Reeve R. Thompson.

New Jail Floors?

Prisoners at the County Gaol may be favored with a new floor as the result of a recommendation made to that effect by Reeve West of Stirling who introduced a deputation of a concern specializing in the placement of asphaltic composition floors. The cost of the flooring, samples of which were shown by the deputation will cost 30 cents per square foot for solid black. Colored flooring is five cents per foot higher. The floors which would be installed in the corridors of the jail proper, would be fireproof, noiseless, dustless and would replace the wooden flooring now badly worn. The matter was asked to be referred to the Finance Committee on motion of Reeve Burke.

Reeve Gilroy of Wollaston opposed this move. "We should have more discussion on this. I move that it be referred to the Ways and Means. The latter motion carried.

Corn Borer Menace.

In spite of the adoption of new methods of eradication and control, the corn borer is making a gain in some sections of the province, and is little more than held in check in others, it was reported by Corn Borer Inspector for the County, Chas. Marvin, who presented his report. "In Hastings County little direct gain in the fight against the pest is noted," he said.

"We have been trying to get the farmers who are growing corn to adopt the system of a 'sacrifice belt' around their corn. This means planting several rows of corn ear-[illegible]id, encircling the remainder of the crop. Then in the early spring the corn borers emerge and concentrate upon the early corn, leaving the rest of the field alone. Many of them have adopted this and it has helped a lot."

No Convictions

No convictions under the Act were registered last year, although several farmers received last warnings. One man will be assessed the cost of clearing his patch by a laborer hired when he refused to do it himself."

Reeve Ford, Frankford asked: "Do you think there is any less in the county, or are we just holding our own with the borer?"

"I'm not quite prepared to answer that in the affirmative, but according to reports of chief entomologist Caeser, the borer has been shown making a gain in many sections. There has been a little more moisture this summer and the borer has been favored."

The report was received and adopted.

Several notices of motions were given:

By Reeve L. E. Neal Marmora and Lake, notice of motion was given that an auditor be appointed for the year 1934.

By Reeve R. Thompson, Rawdon A bylaw to appoint a County Constable and a special officer under the Liquor Control Act.

By Reeve Campbell Wallbridge, Madoc. A bylaw to grant the Bell Telephone Company certain rights in constructing telephone lines through the county.

By Reeve Bronson, Carlow: A bylaw appointing a caretaker for the County Buildings and Shire Hall.

SYMBOLISM OF ROYALTY

It has become a commonplace to say that in Great Britain what the monarchy has lost as an institution it has regained as a spectacle and a symbol. But today, as all Britain surrenders itself to festival in honor of the marriage of the King's youngest son, one can only marvel again at the ease of the transition, the success with which there have been reconstituted under the new plan all the splendors of the old. Among the seventy-odd "royalties" gathered for the occasion there may be a distressingly large proportion of ex-es, radio broadcasters may be hidden in the sacrarium of the Abbey, with their instruments ready to transmit the royal vows to vast and vulgar multitudes; titled guests may be writing for the newspaper; the inaccessibility, the great town houses, the glacial grandeur of the old aristocracy may be dissolving. Things may not be what they once were, but were they ever? Could a similar occasion in the pre-war years have enlisted so intense an interest and enthusiasm, turned out such vast crowds to cheer themselves hoarse with loyalty, or filled the country with so many holiday parties and merrymakings by high and low?—New York Herald-Tribune.

AN IMPORTANT STEP

Removing appointments of the medical staffs of mental hospitals from the influence of politics requires no commendation. It is a plain, common-sense step, as Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Provincial Minister of Health, doubtless would say. That the move has not been made earlier is merely evidence of the general attitude which has prevailed toward these institutions, so long regarded as places of routine and of little public concern.

If Dr. Faulkner is able to bring psychiatry to a surer level in medical science and make the mental hospitals such in fact instead of detention houses, he will earn the gratitude of thousands of patients and help to solve the problem of a rapidly increasing public burden. It must be said that great advancement has been made in recent years in the treatment of these unfortunate patients and that a growing circle of scientists and medical men is devoting time and energy profitably to the study of restorative measures. As a result the "insane asylum" has passed as a designation. There remains, however, the enlarging demand for accommodation as evidence that the subject is one to which too great attention cannot be given. Appointment of an Examining Board of Experts is recognition of the necessity for closer specialization and of the field available for qualified graduates

Along with this there is need for development of a new public attitude toward these institutions. The people at large need to understand that mental illness is a misfortune, and not a disgrace, and that it is not inevitably a permanent condition. Indeed, public education along this line may prove helpful to both patient and psychiatrist. It is not inconceivable that the day will come when the expert will be called in to prescribe for the mentally ill as well as those having physical ailments.—Toronto Gobe.

HERE AND ELSEWHERE

Many 1934 municipal councils fared far worse than the Belleville council which will come back in January with only two of its members defeated and two others absent who declined to run. In one municipality, the mayor alone remains of the substantial council which in 1934 carried the municipal burdens.

Reasons for this are not difficult to find. There is an unrest born of the strenuous times through which many have passed for the last three to five years. There may even be unrest caused by signs of revival which stirs up the electorate to expect new things. During the past economic lull there has been a deal of thinking by unemployed and property owner with the resultant intensification of interest in civic affairs.

Belleville during the lull has been marked with unemployment of some dimensions but not with unrest and discontent. This is probably due to the feeling that those in authority have been doing all they can to alleviate distress and to keep the wheels of industry moving.

It must be considered as a tribute to the work of the past year that the 1934 municipal body weathered the election storm so well, as well as a mark of the electors who appreciate what the present city government has accomplished.

PREDICTIONS

Word from weather bureaus the other day was that the mild spell was definitely ended and that winter was just around the corner. Repetition of this prediction made it look very much like a determined effort to get rid of the fine temperature we have been enjoying, and as the weather while not becoming extra warm has not yet gone far below the freezing point at night, it looked, not as if all signs pointed to an early plunge into the wintry temperatures but as if someone thought a change was about due and wanted to be the first to tell and so claim the prize for the winter "I told you so."

Some days ago farmers in the city still failed to fall for this prediction—they knew that the small animals were still in the fields and running at large in the woods and thereon they founded their belief that the day of the advent of winter was not yet come. This week they predicted mild weather yet.

Who knows? Some say that weather cannot be foretold by the skins and habits of animals and birds. The safest step is to: Wait and see.

NO RACIAL PURITY

Germany in its stressing of the pure Aryan race as the German ideal is so much talk for the sake of the public consumption and is only believed by blind patriots. No race is pure. Germany knows that. She knows of mixed races on the Polish and Russian boundary, mixed races in the province of Holstein, and mixed races on the western front, between Belgium, France and Germany. Hitler probably knows of, but he does not speak of, the mixture of races which has gone into every race in history. Indeed it is doubtful if there is any race which has not mixed to some degree. Looking to the conservative Orient, even the Chinese and the Japanese are not pure races.

Indeed mixing of races according to experts means new races. And that is what has taken place. The racial mixture in Britain has developed a race not Saxon and not Angle, not Jutish, nor Norse, nor Danish, nor Celtic but Anglo-Saxon or British. Britishers believe that it was fortunate for the world that this mixture took place through the peculiar position of Britain which made it subject to the attacks of Angles, Jutes and Saxons, Romans, Norsemen, Danes, and Normans as well as to commercial invasions in later centuries. Fortunately blood streams in the British race are of cognate races, not of races very much apart.

What will happen in Africa is difficult to see. That the whites will continue to develop that continent is clear enough, but will there be mixture of black and white? Probably not.

FROZEN FRUIT

The place of refrigeration in the economic and agricultural life of man is becoming more and more marked. The fruit industry is one which will profit much by this development. Hamilton Spectator remarks that "if fruit can be kept in refrigeration plants and sold to customers at a reasonable price throughout the year, in a condition hardly inferior to that of the freshly-picked product, it will undoubtedly mean much to fruit-growers and customers as well."

This is not only possible, but is actually being done in Canada, with the co-operation of the Dominion Experimental farms. A Toronto newspaper recently published an advertisement announcing that a dairy company would deliver to its customers 'the choicest strawberries and raspberries selected and packed by a freezing process which makes it possible to retain the original flavour and appearance.' The price was given as twenty-five cents, for a quantity equal to the average box of freshly picked fruit. According to the advertisement, customers were advised to buy the berries the day before they were used and to serve them when the merest trace of frost crystals were still present. This fruit is packed in syrup and frozen.

What the results of this method may be, no one can state, but it may be that in the course of time the method may be applied with a refrigerating system.

What this will mean to the kitchen of the future, the fruit industry, the operator of cold storages, and the shippers is an intriguing thought.

ILLITERACY IN ONTARIO

It may surprise most of us to learn that in Ontario there are 156,626 people over five years of age who can neither read nor write, and 9,290 who can read only. This, at first blush, and in the light of our claims about the finest educational system in the world, plus millions spent on education, seems disturbing.

But it needn't be. Ontario, after all, has a population of 3,500,000, and if 156,626 of these, including a goodly number of children between the ages of five and eight years, plus a good many others who did not have the advantages of the existing educational system, are unable to read or write, there is little for alarm.

Actually, Ontario's literacy percentage is 94.81, this comparing with a percentage for the Dominion as a whole of 92.34, and with Quebec percentage of 90.30. Thirty years ago the literacy percentage for the whole of Canada was 82.88 per cent.; the percentage for Ontario correspondingly low.

It is right, of course, and commendable, to aspire to 100 per cent. perfection in literacy, but we know of no nation that has achieved it, and it is to be doubted whether any nation ever will. Moreover, it is important not to confuse literacy with education. A man or woman may be able to read or write, and yet fall far short of being educated—in the truest sense. Also, it would be quite possible for people with a literacy percentage of 80 per cent. to be better educated than a people with a literacy percentage of 100 per cent. Instruction is not necessarily education. —tawa Journal.

A FRIEND'S PORTRAIT

She found such joy of living
In every breath she drew,
She needs must pass that joy along
Always, to all she knew.

And those about her treasured
Her presence more than gold
For she had gifts of rarer stuff
To offer young and old.

She gave her faith and friendship,
She gave her trust and truth,
The ardor of her honest thought,
Her splendid strength and youth.

She knew our faults and follies,
And yet she understood
How, hidden in our hearts we held
A cherished spark of good.

Ah! words can never paint her;
To show her charm aright
The palette needs a sunbeam's gold,
For she was wrought of light!

A SEPULCHRAL LAUGH is often mentioned by descriptive writers—personally we have never heard one—but we do know that folks with a broad sense of humor can get a laugh even out of a cemetery. Here's an inscription found in an English cemetery which is rather odd:

JOHNATHAN THOMPSON
A good husband and affectionate Father
Whose disconsolate Widow and Orphans
Continue to carry on the Tripe and Trotter business
At the same shop as before their bereavement.

Here's one from a Massachusetts cemetery:

Sacred to the Memory of
JAMES H. RANDOM
Who Died August 6, 1800
His widow who mourns as one who can be comforted, aged 24 and possessing every qualification for a good wife, lives at No.
4, Church Street, in this village.

One from a Wiltshire, England, tombstone:

Beneath this stone, in hopes of Zion
Is laid the landlord of the Lion
Resigned unto the Heavenly Will
His son keeps on the business still.

A very common epitaph in many cemeteries in the United States is this:

Remember man as you pass by,
As you are now so once was I
As I am now you soon will be
Prepare for Death and follow Me.

"COMIC STRIPS," so called, are very popular with newspaper readers. Originally confined to humor these strips now embrace history, geography, romance and thrillers, besides the old laugh interest for which appetite never wanes. Ma and Pa think that "Mr. and Mrs." in this G. F. J. is just right, with perhaps "Jiggs and Maggie" as second choice. Big Sister likes "Tillie the Toiler" and the young 'uns just eat up "Tarzan" and the Martin Johnson adventures. The modern daily newspaper is surely a wonderful production and a long step forward from the newspapers of grandfather's day.

A Scotsman in a small way of business was complaining to a friend of bad trade, and asked if he could give him any suggestions that might help improve it.

"Yes," replied the friend. "There is my friend, McNab. Send him five of your mackintoshes and an invoice for four; he will be so pleased at getting one thrown in that he will take them and might work up a good trade."

When they met again, some little time later, the friend said: "Well, how did you get on with McNab?"

"Oh, there was no business there," was the reply. "He just sent me a nice letter saying he returned the four mackintoshes and regretted that he could not work up any sale for them."

In the terrible, staggering, abnormal world of war—that death-in-life of nostalgia, fatigue, confusion and pain—men were at their best. The men who struggled at hand-grips with fire and mud and wire and disrupting earth were at their best. They learned pity. The finest of them pitied others only, I suppose; and the others pitied themselves first and their comrades next—but all felt pity and loving kindness. They were not here for gain or fame, whatever reasons or imaginings may have brought them. The ordinary business of normal existance was gone with all its envy and malice, its competitive tricks and its class consciousness. They were brothers here in suffering and peril. All were equal in manhood. Officers were different only in their authority and responsibilities. Is it so today, with the survivors? I think not. They struggled elbow to elbow then against fire, mud, wire and disrupting sandbags, in equal distress in equal peril of hurts and death, victims in common to a madness of which they were equally innocent. But it is not so with them today. Now it is every man for him self. The ration parties do not come up now, with equal rations to all. Men must rustle their own rations now; and it seems that there is not enough for all. If some eat, others must go hungry. If some climb, others must fall. The world is still mad, but with a more complicated and less bloody madness, and the actual comradeship of then is only a name and a sad gesture now— but the vague forces and persons who sat back and fattened in safety in those years still sit fat and safe. Well, some of them.

The padres, like others, have returned to a competitive world and lost touch with comradeship.

Then, the padres were good soldiers and good comrades in a mad world.

"The chaplain of the regiment (4th Canadian Mounted Rifles), Captain A. G. Wilken, was in the trenches at the time of the attack. He acted as guide to a party of volunteer stretcher-bearers who took out the wounded and returned with ammunition to the front line. He was killed during the final assault." Canada in Flanders. Vol. I "...... whom the older C.M. R.'s remember and love is Allan Gillies Wilken, taken prisoner on the Somme in June, 1916. Wilken overstayed his tour of duty in the line to do the work of one who had important business farther back. The Boche came over and carried Wilken off and kept him for nearly two years in German prison camps. He volunteered to go with the rank and file in preference to the officers' camp, to which he was entitled to be sent. Punishments came to him (this was in Germany) for his efforts on behalf of (other) prisoners, whilst the man who should have relieved him in the line (at Sanctuary Wood, June 1916) received promotion and rewards. When the time came for Wilken to be exchanged, the British Government asked him to stay (in Germany) and continue his labors for the men (prisoners)....and when he came home even the promotion which was his due was denied. But there are greater rewards....and the greatest is to feel that one has played the man. Allan Gillies Wilken has that and is content." Canada in the Great War.

Here is heroic, though confused and conflicting history.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MISUNDERSTANDING CAUSED BY UNAVOIDABLY BROKEN APPOINTMENT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were employed by the same concern and went together very happily for five months. We had an engagement which I could not keep, because I missed the bus and was an hour late getting home. It was not possible to telephone. I explained this the next morning to my friend, but he has not spoken to me since.

Do you think his anger is justified? What can I do to regain his friendship, even though he is taking the wrong attitude on this affair?

Puzzled.

To my way of thinking, your friend is entirely unjustified in his unreasonable attitude about the broken date. One does miss a bus, sometimes, and telephones are not always convenient. He really should apologize. Doubtless, by the time you see this in print, his "mad" will have evaporated.

WHAT IS HIS DUTY TO HIS INVALID FIANCEE?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The girl I hoped to marry has developed a serious illness—tuberculosis. And while I love her devotedly, still I think it unfair to myself, or any children we might have, to marry her. This I have broached to her as tactfully as I could. But she doesn't seem to understand. I hate to be brutally frank.

Her mother has come to our home to see me, and says if I break the engagement now, her daughter will surely die. They have no regular doctor, and I'm a poor young man, working on a small salary. How could I take care of an invalid wife, even if there were not this other question of inheriting disease? Please go into this with your unfailing common sense.

Martin B.

Your objection to going on with this girl is only rational. If the girl is in the first stages of T.B. she can be cured. Rest, as much sleep as possible, fresh air day and night, and a nutritious diet of milk, eggs, easily-digested meats, green vegetables, will work miracles.

If possible, try to persuade her to go to a sanitarium. If that isn't feasible, have her mother put her in the sunniest room in the house, and have plenty of fresh air without draughts. Consult the best doctor procurable.

If the girl makes a complete recovery—as many have—you might even consider fulfilling your engagement. If she does not, it will be kinder not to break off immediately. If she begins the cure with hopefulness, her chances of recovery are better than if she began in a melancholy state of mind.

HER LETTER MAY HAVE BEEN LOST

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We were such good friends and wrote to each other regularly for a year. His letters were full of plans about coming to see me, but we lived so far apart and the expense of the journey was so great that he never was able to manage a visit.

Then I was very badly hurt in a motor accident. I was taken to a hospital, didn't know much about anything for a long time.

When I was convalescing, I wrote to him and gave the letter to a nurse to post. I asked her later, if she mailed it, and she said she had given it to someone else.

My friend has never answered this letter. I feel deeply hurt, and of late I'm beginning to wonder if he ever received it.

Anna.

Why not write to the friend again, and tell him of your accident. You gave the letter to a nurse to mail and she gave it to someone else. The letter may never have reached its destination. Put an end to the uncertainty of writing, and this time mail the letter personally.

LACK OF PROSPECTS TERMINATES FRIENDSHIP

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend had to quit college and he went into one of the C.C. camps. We wrote regularly and, when it was possible, he came to see me. One night he told me he wasn't coming any more because he couldn't afford to take me places, and it wasn't right that I should pass up all my chances for him.

I told him I'd rather stay at home with him than go out with any other man in the world. But he doesn't come any more and has only answered my letters with picture postals.

Dorothy.

Perhaps he thought you were getting too serious and, as he saw no prospects of marriage, decided it was better not to see you regularly. Don't you think it would be sensible to take his advice and go out with other young men? You know they can always come back when prospects brighten.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SECOND HELPING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In sending one's plate for a second helping, what do you do with your knife and fork?

U.

A very definite thing—when we pass our plate for a second helping, the knife and fork are left on the plate, placed as securely as possible that they will not be pushed from the plate as it is being passed. This means that the knife and fork are placed together, in the center of the plate, the knife on the right and the fork on the left, as they would be at the place, parallel to each other, and the handles turned a bit to the right. If we take them from the plate there is nothing to do with them....we can't hold them in the hand, for this looks very awkward, and we can't, of course, place them on the tablecloth, for this would soil the cloth.

TOASTED

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please let me know if a girl should stand or remain seated when a "toast" is being tendered her by several men much her senior?

T.

She would remain seated....one always does when a toast is being given to one.

BRIDE'S CAKE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me some of the ridiculous "jimcracks" that are usually put in the bride's cake?

Thank You.

Some of the trinkets that are baked in a bride's cake are: a ring for the one to be married next; a cat for the old maid; dice for the most fortunate one; a wishbone for the one who will achieve the heart's desire; a mitten for the bachelor; a dime or a new penny for the one who is to be wealthy; a four-leaf clover or a horseshoe for the lucky one.

LATE SNACK

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me what you should order when you go to get something to eat after a dance or after a show? I have read lots of helpful hints in your column, and I hope you will help me.

Subscriber.

Indeed I shall help you, but I wish that you would be kind enough to send me an addressed envelope and let me send you a pamphlet I have prepared on "After Theatre Eats." It is several pages long, and in it I have listed everything I could think of that is appropriate to eat after a dance or the theatre—from a humble roll and coffee to the aristocratic dishes "under glass".

PRESENTING THE DOCTOR

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When introducing a doctor (a young boy friend of mine,) I am quite undecided as to what I should say. Is it correct to say "Doctor Blank" or should it be just "Mr. Blank"?

W.

A doctor should be introduced by his professional title: "Mrs. Brown, may I present Dr. Blank?"

BLONDES ARE LIKED when it comes to furs for dark woolen sports wear coats. A most useful coat is of dark mixture herringbone tweed with a panel-like bolero treatment in natural lynx which entirely covers the front of the bodice. Polar wolf is being used for dark tweeds.

GLADYS McGUIRE EDGAR BURLEIGH WIN GOLD MEDALS

Public Speaking Contest For Warden's Medals Success

NOT MANY SPEAKERS

Agricultural Representative Also Distributes Prizes

A diminutive Miss from Hungerford Township and a pupil of Tweed Consolidated School yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the local Collegiate Institute captured the honors as premier junior orator of the County of Hastings.

Twelve-year-old Gladys McGuire, daughter of Public School Inspector A. W. McGuire of Centre Hastings, was adjudged the best speaker in the annual Championship Public School Speaking Contest under the auspices of Hastings County Council held during the afternoon.

The annual event, although smaller than last year in number of contestants was one of the best on record, characterized by Mr. J. O. Herity of this city, one of the three official judges, as the best he had attended in many years.

As winner of the Girls' Speaking Contest and winner also of the contest, little Miss McGuire was presented with the Gold Medal donated by Warden Jordan and the championship trophy donated by Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater.

Gladys chose as her topic "Canadian Citizenship". She based her requirements of this citizenship on three things, Pride, Loyalty and Duty. "Pride because of the greatness of Canada, its contribution to the world; Loyalty to the traditions of the country; Duty which symbolizes true citizenship."

Edgar Burleigh of School Section No. 19 Thurlow was adjudged the best speaker in the Boys' class. He received also a Gold Medal donated by the Warden.

Six Speakers from all sections of the county entered the contest. Miss Phyllis Sills of School Section 19, Thurlow, chose as her topic: "Pauline Johnston" a follower of the lives and traditions of the North American Indians, a contributor of note to Canadian literature.

Audrey Sharpe, School Section No. 3, Rawdon chose as her subject: "The Contribution of Public Schools to Citizenship"; Miss Freda Mullett of School Section No. 25, Huntingdon, chose "The Wheat Growing Industry in Danger". Master Edgar Burleigh of School Section 19, Thurlow "The Advantage of Being Brought up in a Rural Community" and Donald Nix of School Section 8, Rawdon "The Value of Education to a Farmer."

Mr. J. O. Herity, the Rev. I. B. Naylor and Mrs. C. Heard all of this city acted as judges during the afternoon, faced with the hard task of choosing from among the speakers ,the best of the group and the best of each class.

"As has been usual in these contests", stated Mr. Herity, spokesman for the judges "this has been a difficult task to decide, who is the best speaker. The oratory we have heard improves year by year; the delivery and the subjects get better all the time."

Warden Complimented

Warden Jordan was complimented by Mr. Herity for the efforts of himself and members of the County Council in keeping the annual event alive. "It is a very worthy object. If some of us had had the opportunity the children of today have, we perhaps wouldn't be so awkward, when called upon to speak on occasions."

"During the formative and the plastic years of youth such contests bring out the latent talent, often developing a speaker of excellence from the junior ranks," added Mr. Herity.

The announcement of the winners were then made by him on behalf of the other judges.

Besides the award of the prizes to the little contestants in the speaking contest, many other prizes for scholars of the rural schools were made by Warden Jordan and members of the county council.

Mr. Jos. Wilson, agricultural representative of this district who was in charge of the day received high tribute from the Warden and members of the council for his efforts on behalf of the scholars and schools in the county in arranging the annual event.

The following program was carried out during the afternoon.

LIFE DUE TO PARENTAGE

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Sir Andrew Macphail, noted McGill University medical and literary authority, said today in an interview survival of the Dionne quintuplet sisters was due in large measure to their sturdy French-Canadian heritage.

"There is no sturdier parent stock. The quintuplets could not have had a greater heritage," he said. He declared also he believed that the "remedy for what we call the depression can be found in imitating the French-Canadians and getting back to the land."

BOARD ROOM GOSSIP

It is years since an estimate of B.C. silver's ore reserves have been available as the property has not been worked since back in 1926 or 192. If memory serves banks consulting engineer for English interests estimated around $11,000,000 of silver-gold ore indicated. It was on this basis London sets its price and the Guggenheim interests representating Premier would not agree. In 1931 Cromwell Hockley chairman and managing director of Selukwe Gold and Mining Finance Co., of London and which owns a substatial block of B.C. Silver stated that $6,000,000 to $10,000,0000 was reasonable production to expect from B.C. Silver.

The estimate of $11,000,000 was made of silver and gold ore. 1-3 silver 2-3 gold. This would be based on $20 gold that with $35 gold the value would rise to $17,500,000. $3,600,000 silver and $13,900,000 gold.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

Financial Service says: "In Canadian Industrial Alcohol's balance sheet just published the Company's inventory is carried at $6,773,286 or cost. According to Gordon W. Scott, the President, the Company owns 7,000,000 American proof gals. of American type whiskies. It is also understood that it owns about 2 million gals. of Canadian type liquor for a total of 9 million gals. Even at average price of $2.50 a gallon this has an apparent value of $22,500,000 or over $15,000,000 more than shown on books.

A similar condition exists with regard to Robert McNish & Co., Ltd., a subsidiary. Company's inventory is carried at $1,077,235 which is cost. There is no doubt this inventory is more valuable than report indicates. Consequently while inclusion of deficit of Robert N. McNish and Co., Ltd., of $2,495,899 is shown in report this actually is not an ordinary deficit but only a bookkeeping entry and is now recurring.

BREWING CORPORATION

Operating profits for final quarter of fisca year ended Oct. 31, 1934, were almost double those for like period of 1933. After all charges net profit available for dividend amounted to $156,249 against loss of $26,809 in similar 1933 quarter, the profit this year being equal to about 94 cents a share on Preferred. In his accompanying remarks, President E. P. Taylor states volume of busines under the new conditions of sale in Ontario has been up to expectations and it appears the profits in next 12 months will be in excess of Preferred dividend requirements more substantial earnings depending on the success of the management in obtaining a larger share of the available business in Ontario.

Austria to Give up Captain I. Poderjay

Vienna, Dec. 6 (AP)—Austria decided today to grant the United States request for extradition of Captain Ivan Poderjay, wanted in connection with the disappearance of his bride, Agnes Tufverson, Detroit and New York Attorney.

LAKE SHIPPING LESSENS

Lake shipping continued to dwindle today as freighters still plying the fresh water routes about Ontario prepared for immediate quarters of the "official" ending of the season a week hence when insurance can no longer be obtained. Since Dec. 1 the rates have increased sharply

Hay Demand Slowing Up

The prolonged open autumn weather throughout Canada has resulted in a much less demand for market hay than expected earlier in the season, according to the Dominion Seed Branch at Ottawa. The demand has been particularly slow in eastern Canada, with a tendency toward lower prices.

Construction and lumber companies and other interests bought large supplies in September and October against a possible shortage, which accounts for the present easing in demand and prices. Demand is confined to seasonal requirements and a small export demand in the United States.

So far as Ontario is concerned, demand is slow for hay in the eastern section. There have been a few shipments to New York State. A large part of the 1934 crop of market hay is still in growers' hands in the Ottawa Valley and the St. Lawrence counties, and consists mainly of timothy and timothy-clover mixed. The prices being paid growers range from $10 to $12 per ton.

Prices to the growers for timothy, in Northern Ontario, range from $11 to $14 per ton, with a steady demand in towns and cities. There is practically no surplus of market hay in Central Ontario and the prices range from $16 to $16.50 per ton, and $6 for oat straw.

In Southwestern Ontario alfalfa has been the principal hay in supply this year. There is also fair quantity of timothy and timothy-grass mixed. Little clover hay is available. Demand for hay is only fair as live stock is still on pasture in many localities. Prices to growers are lower than during September, ranging from $14 to $16 per ton for timothy No. 1. Markets such as Toronto are expected to require the available supply in the district. The growers are being paid $5.50 to $7.50 for oat straw and $7 to $8 for wheat straw.

Bacon Hogs Steady; Outside Points Up

Bacon hog prices were unchanged on major Canadian live stock markets yesterday. The majority of outside points closed 5 to 15 cents per cwt. higher. Offerings were moderately light.

Hog prices were unchanged, locally. Bacons sold at $7.15 f.o.b., $7.50 off truck and $7.90 weighed off cars. Sows closed at $4.90 per cwt. Butchers, lights and feeders sold at a discount of $1, with heavies $1.50 per head. Selects brought the usual $1. premium. The market was unsettled in early trading. Receipts totalled 940 head.

Winnipeg Dec. 6—Hogs were steady on the local live stock market yesterday. Bacons sold at $6.60, heavies $6.10, lights and feeders $4.50 to $6 and sows $4.60 to $5.10. Receipts were 2,180 head.

Bacon hogs sold at outside points as follows: Kitchener. $7.15. 15 cents per cwt. higher; London, $7.15, 15 cents higher; Peterboro, $7.10, 10 cents higher; Brantford, $7.15, 5 cents higher; Barrie, $7, unchanged, and Hull, $7.25, unchanged.

Montreal, Dec. 6 — Not enough hogs were offered to establish a market yesterday. Offerings totalled 51 head.

EXPORT CLEARANCE HIGHER

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP) — An Increase of more than 300,000 bushels was shown in export clearances of wheat for the week ended Nov. 30. when they amounted to 3,240,532 bushels as compared with 2,923,429 bushels in the previous week. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Dec. 6—(AP)— The stock market was a highly selective affair today although the progressive trend still appeared to predominate.

Trading was quite active in various groups. The coppers came to life for substantial gains and the aviation and farm machinery divisions improved materially. At the same time most of the old-line leaders were unable to do anything in particular, Bonds were fairly firm.

Among Canadian shares International Nickel and Dominion Stores were up fractionally, while Dome and McIntyre ruled about unchanged. On the curb, Lake Shore rose nearly a point, but Hiram Walker held about even. Dominion government 4s improved slightly. Canadian dollar gained 1-8 of a cent at 102 1-4 cents.

Shares of National Lead got up 3 points, while Briggs and McKesson & Robbins advanced fractions to a point, all to new highs for the year. Anaconda and Kennecott Coppers gained around a point each and Cerro De Pasco, U.S. Smelting and American Smelting were fractionally higher. Case, Deere and International Harvester were a point or so better, as were Peoples Drug, Allied Chemical and Liquid Carbonic.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 6 — The improved position of the wheat market was reflected in the action of the agricultural implement and some of the bakery stocks in which substantial gains were registered today.

The whole board was firm to strong on good buying among the other inter-listed leaders.

Distillers Seagrams and Ford A again teamed up in the market leadership, the former advancing ¾ to 16¼.

On heavy turnover while Ford scored a smaller advance Walker's common and Industrial Alcohol A. also advanced fractionally.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 6—Senior golds and the copper stocks displayed firming tendencies today while silver and the secondary gold stocks were barely steady and the penny issues mainly soft.

Lake Shore, Hollinger, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves all chalked up moderate gains with trading fair in spots. In the base metals Noranda came to the front with an advance of 75 cents. Hudson Bay, while active, was less buoyant, showing an advance of 25 cents.

Little Long Lac was the strongest of the non-producers of the gold group, hitting 5.25 and holding steady.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Dec. 6—Selective buying prevailed in the stock market today. Trading was active. Advances of fractions to a point or more were recorded among Aircraft, metal, farm shares and a number of miscellaneous specialties. Rails and utilities were narrow. Santa Fe, U.S. Steel, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas were steady, while firmness was shown by Liquid Carbonic, Deere, Briggs, Kennecott and Aviation Corporation. Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.

HOG PRICES

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Four gains and one loss were registered on bacon hog prices at reporting market points today.

Stratford and Peterboro showed the largest advances, gaining 15 cents while Hull was up 10 and Brantford up five. London moved against the general trend, losing 15 cents. Today's prices:

London $7.00; Hull $7.35. Kitchener $7.15; Brantford $7.20; Barrie $7.15; Stratford $7.15; Peterboro $7.25.

Dictatorship by 'Clique' Or 'Rump' Organization Protested by Liberals

The meeting was orderly and attentive, and marked by spontaneous applause.

Chairman Pleased at Meeting

The chairman in a few words opened the meeting—"This meeting was called to see just how many of you would come and talk over the present situation which has developed in this riding. And you are here in large numbers and we are going to talk it over. I do not know what is going to be said. For the last seven days I have been busy but I came out on top. (Applause).

"I never saw a finer aggregation of citizens than I see here tonight and I have been used to appearing before audiences here at least twice a year for the past ten years."

Change Has Come

"Fourteen years ago when I first came to Belleville, a Liberal hardly dare show his head and tonight in spite of opposition we are able to pack the hall" said Charles A. Cameron, barrister, who explained the purpose of the meeting." A change has come over the place. (laughter).

"Mr. Tice is here as Mayor for 1934 and 1935 and I think he is to be congratulated on having survived the most violent mayoralty campaign." (cheers)

Mr. Cameron went back over the past few months. He said that after the provincial victory of June 19th, Liberals in Ontario felt that advantage should be taken of the wave of Liberalism which had swept over the province and that organization should be effected in the federal field for the next elections by selection of candidates and by completing a good bit of the "spade work."

Says Nigger in Wood Pile

"What happened in Belleville?" asked Mr. Cameron. "I have been approached at least a hundred times and asked 'What is the matter with South Hastings?' I said there is nothing I can do. I endeavored to contact those of the South Hastings executive and I got no information. I could not find out who the officers were. All the information I got was that South Hastings Liberals will have no annual meeting until the spring of 1935. It meant there was a nigger in the woodpile somewhere."

Almost by accident, it was learned, he said, not long ago that a meeting was to be held in Lindsay of the Central Ontario Liberal executive. The secretary of that organization, who happens to be the president, the speaker was told, of the South Hastings Liberal executive, said on the floor of the Lindsay meeting that as he had accepted a position of emolument, the government had asked him to resign his position on the association. "That came from the public platform, I assume this is correct," said Mr. Cameron. Then came the time for reports from the riding executives and Mr. Heath for Hastings-Peterboro reported that his riding was organized. Then the present Mayor of Trenton ("I do not know who appointed him?" remarked Mr. Cameron)—threw the meeting at Lindsay into consternation to hear him say South Hastings was organized and ready for a convention as was Hastings-Peterboro.

Report Patronage Threatened

"We did not want anything done behind cover," Mr. Cameron went on," and when we came back to Belleville we decided to hold a meeting to discuss quietly the matter. This was held. In that week much had been done."

In one township were men who had pledged themselves to come to the meeting and on Wednesday night, its said that man went to that township association and said: "I want to tell you if any of you go to that meeting your township is off the slate and you'll get no patronage."

"Do we want any man to take that attitude?" asked Mr. Cameron.

"We held a successful meeting. We wanted no onflict. We even yet held out the olive branch. We passed no strong resolutions. They were told at the meeting it was the intention to convene an annual meeting and they would fix the date."

One Name Before Convention?

"There has been no meeting of the South Hastings Liberal Association for two or three years. We claim there is no South Hastings Liberal Association. By what authority do they say to hold the meeting?"

"Is that fair? Is that Liberalism?" again interrogated Mr. Cameron, the reply from the audience being a chorus "No."

"Does it not sound as if only one man was to have the opportunity of placing his name on the ballot?"

"There is one thing about this meeting, it is not convened in the interest of any one candidate. All are privileged to have a chance to put their name on the ballot.

Calls It "Rump" Organization

"This rump organization which I say has no constituted authority, no constitution, determined at last to spring a convention for the choice of a candidate at that meeting. We have been told that there was to be a meeting on December 10th and that the convention is to be held one hour later. "It looked black and we determined much to our regret that we would have to do something. We decided to put a notice in the newspaper on Saturday regarding this meeting In Monday evening's paper there appeared a counter-attack — a notice for the first time calling a convention for next week."

Holds Up Bill

Mr. Cameron held up a bill at the bottom of which were printed the words "The meeting to be held on Wednesday evening next is not official" and on which were no names. "I ask you in this large meeting whether this meeting is official or whether it is not. What do you say? Is it fair to have this meeting tonight or is it not fair?"

Voices—"Fair, sure," "sure".

"What happened in the city on Monday? We had a mayoralty contest in which our present chairman was one of the candidates, a mayor of three years standing, and one who happens to be a good Liberal. I congratulate him for that (applause). My own views are that politics should not enter into city affairs and as far as I am concerned it never will and so far as Mayor Tice is concerned it will not, I know."

Backing Reported Pledged

"At the last moment a gentleman for whom I have the greatest respect presented himself for election. He is a Conservative and I respect him for that. But what took place?

Mr. Cameron told of a report that some one from the South Hastings Association had approached this candidate and offered him the backing of the organization. The offer, if made, was apparently taken up. It was reported that members of the organization made a house-to-house canvass. What was the result? Mayor Tice was elected. (Cheers.).

"As a counter blast we find a request is held out for Liberals for a dance and free refreshments tonight merely for the purpose of taking Liberals away from this meeting. But we cannot fail. If this meeting becomes so dry you feel you need some refreshment, you will be at liberty to go to this free lunch.

"We want no quarrel with anyone and we are going to accomplish our purpose that there shall be no differences.

Urged to Attend Monday's Meeting

"I want to say something regarding the meeting on Monday next. We desire you and everyone of your friends to be present at that meeting and show by your presence that you will be the ones who will have control of South Hastings. The issue is in your hands and I can assure you ways and means will be taken so that there shall be no convention that day, that there must be time given to enable all to consider and then at a convention which will be called later to decide on a candidate when all the ace cards will not be held by one person but a fair and square deal will be given to all."

"As far as I am concerned," the chairman remarked after Mr. Cameron had concluded, "this Liberal meeting is for all Liberals in South Hastings who want to join us. It is not held in the interests of any particular few.

"You would almost think Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King or the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn were here tonight by the way in which you have come out and listened to just ordinary members of the party."

Says Riding Represented

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O. and bar, publicly congratulated the city at large for the splendid choice in electing Mayor George O. Tice their chief executive for the year 1935.

"Whether this is an official or an unofficial meeting matters little when we have representatives from throughout the whole riding on hand to give their support tonight," he continued.

"All I can do here on the platform is to corroborate what the previous speakers have said. I can only express the same sentiments and thoughts given you by Mr. Chas. Cameron, one of the promoters of this meeting of protest. I do not anticipate being a candidate or of holding any office. But true Liberalism must prevail through this South Hastings riding regardless of creed or affiliations.

"This meeting was called to explain the situation in as fair and clear a manner as it is possible to do so. It was explained to you in that fair and impartial way. You are now left with your own opinion on the whole thing."

Speaks of Monday Meeting

Colonel Vanderwater reiterated his appeal for all Liberals to be present at the meeting to be held in the city on Monday afternoon. "And bring all you can with you to it; each person should bring twenty or more when they come, just to show them what is going on in their ranks," he urged.

Mr. A. J. Gough of Stirling, vice-president of the Thurlow Liberal Association was brief and to the point. He assured the audience that the executives of the Association he represented would tender to all Liberals anywhere in the riding a fair and square deal to all.

Mr. P. C. MacLaurin who followed said: "We are here on this platform at one of the most important meetings held in South Hastings in a long time. We in Canada as members of the Liberal party believe in British justice. We believe in a square deal to all; we don't believe in carrying on behind closed doors, or of working in the dark. We do not favor the idea of springing something on the people at the last moment, without them having a choice on the matter or of being able to pass in judgment.

"If we are going to have the opportunity to express ourselves in the coming election we must come here and acquaint ourselves with what is going on.

"This evening I tuned in on Amos and Andy, as I suppose the greater number of you also do. I heard the Kingfish as Mayor and Dictator of Webber City. (Sallies of laughter and applause greeted this remark.)

No Dictator Wanted

It is the same sort of tactics which will produce the same results here," he continued after the applause and hubub had died down.

"Do we want—as good Liberals—do we want to get into the position where we will be guided or ruled by a dictator or a bunch of dictators?" (No, came a shout.)

"There are no Liberals here on this platform with an axe to grind. We have no motive other than to ask you to be on hand at the meeting being held in this city on the afternoon of December 10."

Mention had been made by Mr. Cameron of the advertisement which was being issued calling attention to the December meeting. Mr. MacLaurin referred to it.

"I'd like to see that sheet which advertises that meeting," thundered Mr. MacLaurin. "I'd like to see who is calling it together—to see whose name appears on it. Is there a name on it, of a secretary or a president. No!. Yet, when we meet here we are told that our meeting is not official. We are called the unofficial party.

"The Liberal rooms are as much our rooms as theirs," the speaker told his cheering audience.

"We don't want any split in this riding. But unless we appear and show ourselves, we will be in that danger.

Charges Candidate Picked

"We don't want an annual meeting called by a comparatively small body of those who do not represent the riding. We don't want a meeting and a convention at the same time. The convention should be at least one month later than the meeting. The officers' names should be brought to into the open for every one to see and make up one's mind. Six weeks is not too long for this."

The party referred to by Mr. MacLaurin was charged by him as having a candidate already picked "whom they are attempting to ride through before anyone can do anything about it, or get around to stop it."

"Perhaps I'm exceeding my five minutes," Mr. MacLaurin remarked suddenly remembering and turning to Mayor Tice, chairman.

'Go ahead! go on" came a roar from the crowded hall.

"I've done all in my power" to smooth things over in this section during the past few weeks. But I couldn't get anyone to listen to me," Mr. MacLaurin continued. "If we allow things to go on as they are at the present, however, serious trouble may follow. We have now the best chance electors have ever had to go ahead and elect our member who will represent us in power after the next election—when Mackenzie King leads the Government." (Cheers).

Resolution Adopted

"At this point I want to put a resolution. I want to make it clear enough for all. The resolution is that we oppose and disapprove and protest against the calling of an annual meeting and a convention one hour later for the purpose of choosing a candidate to represent us."

"In the interest of the united party, true Liberalism and British justice, I move this resolution."

"And I'll be very happy to second that, Mr. chairman, and ask that you put it to vote," responded Mr. A. H. Ketcheson.

"A standing vote," urged a voice.

"Ready for the motion?" asked Mayor Tice. "Then I'll ask that all who are in favor of it rise."

As one man the audience, a large percentage of which are women, rose and responded to the vote to record it unanimously.

Mayor Tice hesitated while he was still on his feet after calling the motion.

"Mr. MacLaurin has intimated that he could tell you a lot of things that are going on around here," remarked the Mayor. "But I could tell him things he never even thought of. I can tell him just one thing. They've picked a candidate already, and the candidate is a Mayor. But the Mayor is not me. (Applause). I just wanted to keep my skirts clear on this.' (Cheers).

No Dissension Seen

Byron O. Lott of Halloway was not a stranger to the large crowd present, judging by the enthusiastic applause which greeted his introduction by the chairman.

"I have never been as proud to call myself a Liberal as I am tonight," stated Mr. Lott as the applause died into silence.

"I can safely say I see the more intelligent people here tonight, the people who think for themselves There is none of the rabble. All here are good sound Liberals."

"I'm an old Liberal myself. I cast my first vote for Alex Mackenzie back in the year 1878. Now you can figure out my age."

"I'm sorry to see the dissension in the ranks of the Liberals of South Hastings. But it doesn't come from any serious rift in the party. It will be ironed out. I don't want to cause any trouble here tonight, but I don't like the manipulations of the little, light Tammany ring now at work. They have seated themselves in the saddle to get all the plums. The old true Liberals are left on the outside to look in the window." (Applause).

"Don't take this crowd too seriously. There isn't one of them that could influence ——— or ———" (the speaker was drowned out in gales of hand clapping and laughter). "So don't be too serious about the thing."

Sees Menace in Group

"We've had difficulties before in the ranks. I've seen it a good many times in the sixty years and more that I've been in the political arena. Tonight I see people from all the four parts of the county. I'm satisfied that we have the true backing of the true Liberals and that we will come out all right. We are the government of the people for the people. We do not want the gang to come to us and offer their support in the election of their own choosing. Tonight I'd like to say a few words that keep running through my mind."

Mr. Lott referred to the election days of the late Charles Hanna.

"Back in those days we found the same little gang running around until they finally boosted him out—the best man they ever had. I told Dr. Faulkner if he doesn't boost them out they'll boost him out (applause). Don't get this wrong. It isn't Dr. Fualkner's fault all this is going on. He is one of the best members we've ever had. Everyone likes him. He has the confidence of the whole cabinet. They look up to him in Toronto. He doesn't know what's going on."

"Gentlemen and ladies, get out and show them they can't dominate or rule the roost in South Hastings. Then we'll go in and win the next election and have our own representative in power down there to legislate for the good of all."

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Lott received the greatest ovation of the evening, second only to Mayor Tice's reception.

"I guess I should have had B. O. Lott down with me in Belleville here on Monday," Mayor Tice said (laughter).

Thorough-Going Liberal

Mayor Tice made a graceful reference to his one-time commercial college master, the late John W. Johnson, mayor of the city for four years, the only other man but Mr. Tice who had held the office for four consecutive terms. Mr. Tice said he went to the Ontario Business College as a young man and was trained there and he was pleased to follow in the footsteps of Mr. Johnson as a four-year mayor. The mayor referred to the fact that the present principal of this institution, the O.B.C., was on the platform and would speak, Mr. I. L. Moore, whose industry he praised as of great importance to the city.

"I happened to be on the committee calling this meeting together," said Mr. Moore. "and I have no apology to make for that. I have always been a thorough-going Liberal.

No Choice On Monday

"We have the most splendid opportunity in South Hastings in thirty years—I have been in Belleville for thirty years. There is no doubt that the Ottawa government will change and we have a chance to carry this riding. Now it is going to take time to choose a candidate. I can think of five men or so of whom the riding would be proud. We cannot choose the right man right off the bat and we are not going to make the choice on Monday."

Meetings of the association should be annual and the idea of officers carrying on for three years without a meeting is not right, he thought.

Recently Mr. Moore said a Conservative had said as reported in the press that no Liberal was proud of the Liberal Premier in Ontario and that he and other Conservatives were proud of having voted for "Honest George Henry" (laughter). Mr. Moore went on: "He was easily satisfied. But I am very pleased with Mr. Hepburn. I am more pleased now than I was first when I heard him here two or three years ago. This man has exceptional ability and is going to give the province as good government as Sir James Whitney. The trouble started after Sir James Whitney passed on and his place was taken by others and Mr. Henry."

Sees Danger in Clique

Mr. Moore said he was proud of Dr. Faulkner and thought it an honor that he has been chosen to be a cabinet minister. He is doing good work. "But if that clique is not disposed of Dr. Faulkner cannot be re-elected at the next election," Mr. Moore warned.

"I have been told the local clique organized the last election and through their efforts elected Dr. Faulkner. But Dr. Faulkner himself did a great deal of work which helped in his election. "Many ridings changed and this clique was not responsible for that. The landslide was all over where they never had taken part.

"You all know your English history. You know it is just too bad what happened at the Battle of Hastings to Harold." Here the audience took charge and roared in gales of laughter while Mr. Moore waited for the laughter to subside. Then he said: "I do not want to inject any personality into this. . . ." and again the audience laughed.

Mr. Moore answering a charge that he had heard that he "had not done a thing" in the recent election, declared he knew of votes which he had influenced for Dr. Faulkner.

"We want to go into the contest unitedly. A few people will be hurt. They will put in their resignations and they will be hurt. That is just too bad. But there is not going to be any split in the party here. Some of my Conservative friends are speaking of a split in the Liberal party. There is not going to be a split." (Applause).

Mr. Moore closed by saying the Liberals would carry the riding in the federal election.

J. A. Lott's Protest

Mr. J. A. Lott, ex-president of the Sidney Liberal Association, was brief. He expressed his complete sympathy with the movement to have things brought out "into the daylight." He also referred to the days of the late Chas. Hanna when the same trouble was being experienced.

"As ex-president of the Sidney Township Association some time ago I approached the local party to see just what candidate might be named for the coming election. I wasn't told in the exact words, but they gave me the impression that it was none of my business, that I was just a hick farmer from the country. I want to join in this movement and lend my weight to having things conducted in a more open manner."

Two Camps Denied

Col. W. R. Rierdon was introduced.

"Lots of people on the street during the past few weeks have been stopping us with the question: 'What's the matter with the Belleville Liberal Association?' While on the surface we may appear disgruntled and while it may appear that there are two camps of Liberals, it is not exactly that. The better Liberals are now out to remedy this condition and to overcome all this.

"We don't blame anyone in the audience for the trouble. It is not the people's fault that we're in the present condition. We merely asked you people to come here tonight and hear for yourselves just what is what. We want you to join us in your thousands on December 10. We would like to ask that you consider carefully what has been said tonight. Only a misunderstanding brought all this about—but it has been aggravated by the actions of some people."

Colonel Rierdon urged his audience to come out and start afresh with an organization working under constitutional authority.

"All these men you have seen on the platform here tonight will be more than gald to assist you in any way, but they need your help, too. Then turn out on Monday to help them, and be convinced that this will all pass over and that we will be stronger than ever then."

What Might Have Been

The meeting was almost at its close. But before a motion was made to adjourn, Mayor Tice, acting as chairman during the evening had a few words to say. It is to the credit of all who crowded into the packed hall that not one left before the last note of "God Save the King" had been sung in chorus.

Now he stood on the stage and raised his hand to silence the applause that had followed Col. Rierdon's closing remarks.

"I want to thank you for the attendance tonight. It has been the most wonderful political meeting—the largest—that I have ever seen in this hall."

Mayor Tice referred to the events of the past week when the city was gripped by nomination and election fever.

"I'm the man who suffered all last week. I heard one man say today—and he didn't know I was listening. I suppose—that they had changed around at least seven hundred votes, anyhow. Let me tell you this. If I had the election tomorrow, I would and could have beat him by three thousand votes!" A bedlam of noise and cheering followed ths remark by Mayor Tice.

"I could stand here all night and tell you things—things that you never even knew existed," continued Mayor Tice in a quiet tone. "I could tell you that this city was canvassed from north to south and from east to west five days before the election. And some of the canvassing was done by people who live outside the city. It was canvassed politically, remember that. These men were out to lick me."

Mayor Tells of 'Threat'

"On Tuesday last I went down to the City Hall to get my papers out. I was approached by a certain man of an organization, this in my third year as Mayor. I said "No, nothing doing. I added that I stood four square to the wind.'

" 'All right, Mr. Mayor,' he told me, 'you won't get any further.'

"There are ladies here in the audience, I see. I can't tell tell you what I told him before he left."

"Never have I injected politics or anything else in to any of my campaigns. I have never actively canvassed for a vote. I have never even asked for one. But at five or six o'clock that evening, I kind of wished I had asked for a lot of them. (laughter).

Harmony Necessary

"Ladies and gentlemen, politics is just the same as keeping house, or doing any job. You must have harmony to carry on. All you people will be notified of meetings to be held. You must help us to help yourselves."

"Is there anyone in the audience who has any questions to ask, or who wishes to say anything?" invited the Mayor.

A woman stood up in the middle of the audience.

"How is it that my boy could get work on the roads when the Conservative party was in, but now that his own party is in, he can't get any kind of work?"

"Madam, you come to me in the morning at ten o'clock at the City Hall; I'll tell you why your boy can't get work," replied the Mayor in the middle of another medley of cheers and handclapping.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of "God Save the King." But not all who attended rushed immediately out of the building. Small knots of men and women stood for many minutes in the hall discussing various topics long after the platform had been deserted.

STATES NOBEL CO. 'WINKED' AT ARMS

Senator Vandenberg Makes Statement at U. S. Probe

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — A statement that Nobel, Ltd., British munitions firm founded by the donor of the International Peace Prize, was guilty of "winking" at the rearming of Germany in violation of the Versailles treaty were presented today to the Senate Munitions Committee.

The committee also received evidence that the State Department in 1925 recognized the Allies were conniving with Germany in violating the Versailles treaty because permitting the illegal manufacture of explosives in Germany "swelled the reparations fund."

Correspondence between the Du Pont Company and its foreign department drew the charge of "winking" from Senator Arthur Vandenberg, (R., Mich) who was conducting the inquiry.

One of the letters plainly said Nobel could have brought pressure on the British government to stop violation of the peace pact by German manufacturers in 1926 but did not do so because of its German connection.

The evidence about the State Department was in a letter from Aiken Simonds, Du Pont Washington representative, to his company, reporting on a conversation he had with Allen W. Dulles, chief of the Department's near eastern division. The letter said in reference to manufacture and export of explosives from Germany in violation of the treaty:

"Mr. Dulles said he was well aware of this and that he was also aware that powder and other munitions were continually shipped out of Germany with the connivance of the Allies since the resulting sales of munitions swelled the reparation fund."

Irenee Du Pont, on the witness stand, took issue with Vandenberg for placing blame on the Nobel Company.

He characterized it as "rank nonsense" to blame munitions manufacturers for not enforcing the treaty when the governments concerned undoubtedly had the same information the companies had.

"Certainly the British government knew all about this situation," Du Pont said. "It seems to me you should question them about why they didn't act."

Vandenberg agreed that the British knew of the matter and referred to a confidential government report prepared in 1926 and distributed in Allied governmental circles.

Trent Canal Waters Lowest in History

CARRYING PLACE—"Not much like the old days," said one of the older residents of the community as he climbed into the car a few mornings ago to ride to Trenton, "things are certainly different now. Never in all my days have I seen the canal waters so low, and I've lived here for over sixty years and helped build the canal. I remember away back in '77 down east here on the Bay there was an old warehouse and a dock there then with a pier running out a little way. I used to fish there as a boy in four feet of water. Caught big ones, too, right there off the pier in water so shallow I could see every move of the fish. There don't seem to be so many of them now. Can't hardly get a good fish now. I fished all this summer without getting one good one. And I never saw the bay so low. We have had years with low water before, but never anything like this. Whole strips of the bottom of the canal are dry along the edges in places. The water has gone out so far along the bay shore that you can see the rock piles which were dumped when they dug the canal—something never seen before."

Mr. and Mrs. Will Tice and family of Belleville called Saturday evening on Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hennessey and family.

With a change for colder weather in the air, sufferers from coughs and colds are giving thanks. The mild weather of the autumn has been conducive to the spread of disease, and a crisp cold spell is just what is needed to purify the air and nip the germs of these complaints. Local aspirants for hockey honors are eyeing Corrigan's pond with anxious eyes, preserving the glossy surface from sticks and stones thrown by thoughtless children as they pass. Last winter several rousing games were enjoyed against Smithfield hockeyists, and if the present plans are followed, the local lads plan to have a team ready to meet outside competition before long.

The Parish Hall was brightly lighted again on Friday evening as the same group of young people from Allisonville who held a dance here two weeks ago gave another of them. A very large crowd attended and dancing was enjoyed until the early hours of the morning. Music was supplied by an orchestra brought from Allisonville and vicinity.

Mr. Will Hanthorn made a recent motor trip to Toronto.

Misfortune stalks motorists when colder weather comes. Mr. Clifford Baker's car suffered a broken driveshaft last Friday.

Mr. Fred Hennessey, for the past several months employed near Detlor, spent the week-end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hennessey.

Christmas is in the offing and both Christmas exams and preparations for the concert have begun in the local school.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Norrington and Barry spent Saturday and Sunday in Picton.

"Hearsay" Shouts Du Pont Challenging Senate Probe

Suggests Herbert Hoover And Others be Called to to Give Evidence

Washington, Dec. 6.—The United States senate munitions committee was challenged late Wednesday by Irenee Du Pont to call Herbert Hoover or others who might be able to give first hand evidence on whether the munitions industry interfered with the 1925 Geneva Arms Conferenc.

Earlier, the committee was told by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) that evidence indicated Nobel' Ltd., British munitions firm founded by the donor of the international peace prize, was guilty of "winking" at the re-arming of Germany in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

Du Pont, a munitions manufacturer, said the committee was building up a case against the munitions industry based on hearsay while ignoring evidence of those who could tell the committee the facts.

"The name of Herbert Hoover was mentioned here yesterday in connection with a meeting of the Geneva Arms Trade Control Conference.

"Hoover is now a private citizen and available. Why doesn't the committee call him here for questioning?"

REFUSED LOAN, OFFERS TO DUEL

Ukrainian Posts Notices All Over Sudbury Without Result

Sudbury Ont., Dec. 6—(CP) — When Nick Sasich refused to trust him with a small loan with which to play poker, Nick Drakichs' blood boiled and he challenged Sasich to a duel.

Sasich ignored the verbal gauntlet and today Drakichs posted a notice in Serbian in barbershops, grocery stores, rooming houses and on telephone poles through the Donovan district of Sudbury. The notice read:

"Invitation to Nick Sasich to a duel on Dec. 9 in the Ukrainian Hall on Monk Street at 1:30 p.m.

"I will pay rental of the hall.

"Choose your own weapons."

"It is your duty to be there.

"(Signed) Nick Drakichs".

Sasich consulted his friends. His opponent is much younger than he, his. Besides, he said, he had never fought a duel and has only a slight acquaintance with pistols, swords, jack-knives, axes or spades, the weapons which his challenger suggested might be chosen for the conflict.

Sasich's friends decided he had better ignore the challenge. He did and police started an investigation.

BRITAIN OFFERS TO POLICE SAAR

Anthony Eden, British Delegate Creates Stir at League

Geneva, Dec. 6.—Anthony Eden, British delegate to the League of Nations, announced late yesterday that if France will agree not to send troops into the Saar Basin territory and if Germany is willing, Great Britain will police the Saar with British troops during the Saar plebiscite next month.

The British offer created an immediate sensation in the League of Nations.

Eden's proposal was made directly to the League in full meeting. The council already had heard a report on the outlook for the plebiscite. It specifeld that if the Saarites voted in favor of continuing their present League rule, rather than to be annexed to France or Germany, that the League would become the "titular sovereign" of the Saar.

But the announcement of the British envoy was not the only sensation of the day.

Pierre Laval, France's foreign minister, told the council that France absolutely will not participate in any international force which may be sent into the Saar.

Previously France had warned the world that she was ready to enter the Saar with troops for the maintenance of order, should the League governing committee call for them.

Good Quality, High Prices Of Canadian Cheese Affect Old Country Consumption

N. Zealand Supplies Trade With Poorer Quality at Lower Price

BRANDED CHEESE

Suggestion Made to Label Cheese as is Done With Graded Beef

Picton. Dec. 6 (Special)—"Looking back over the past year, one can see signs, some very faint and others quite positive, of the lifting of the greatest depression in history, which has now spread itself over the past four years, leaving a trail of financial ruin and distress in its course, and dominating every commercial activity," said Mr. H. L. Waters of Messrs. A. A. Ayer and Co. of Montreal and representing the Montreal Cheese and Butter Exporters' Association, at the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association in session here.

With the words, "I should like to express my pleasure at being with you again at your annual convention and to bring you the greetings of the Montreal Provision Trades Association and their best wishes for the continued success of your excellent organization," Mr. Waters launched into his subject.

"The same conditions have prevailed all over the world, no scarcity of any commodity anywhere, but a tragic scarcity of money in the pockets of consumers to buy these commodities, resulting in more or less of a scramble by exporting countries to sell their surpluses in the markets of the world which, in the case of dairy products particularly, means the United Kingdom as the only large importing market available. Unfortunately, the producers of dairy products have not gained any advantage yet from the partial revival of trade in the past year, as supplies have continued to pour, in ever increasing quantities month by month, to the United Kingdom. With butter particularly the United Kingdom market has been saturated, largely following interference with the law of supply and demand. This is a natural law which has governed mankind from the beginning of time and maintains a rough equilibrium between production and consumption, that is when the price of any commodity falls to an unprofitable level, production declines until a reaction takes place through scarcity. Of recent years production has been artificially stimulated by means of subsidies, equalization schemes or depreciated exchange, while demand has had to look after itself, which, owing to unemployment and the scarcity of money in consumers' pockets, it has been unable to do. It is estimated that British consumers for the year 1933-1934 had supplies of 460,500 tons of butter which cost them £35 millions and, in 1929-30 (which may be taken as a reasonable post-war year) supplies were 294,720 tons costing £46 million. That is what over-production is costing exporting countries in butter, and is further proof that mankind cannot break a natural law and be immune from the consequences.

"Now I am perhaps letting myself drift into a talk on economics, which I candidly admit is beyond my powers, so before becoming involved any deeper in the subject I will take up with you a review of the cheese situation for the past year.

"You may remember that when I spoke to you last year at Napanee I pointed out that, following the departure from the Gold Standard by Great Britain in September, 1931, the 1932 season had wound up rather badly for exporters, and we then looked back over the 1933 season which from fluctuating exchange, excessive production and heavy stocks had also been a season of peculiar difficulties for exporters, winding up with a considerable quantity of cheese shipped on consignment owing to lack of demand. These cheese moved slowly during the winter and returns were extremely disappointing.

"The stock position at the first of May last still showed heavy stocks, some 150,000 cheese more than the previous year—I should perhaps explain again that when I refer to stocks it includes Canadians in the three principal ports of the United Kingdom, London, Liverpool and Bristol, in store in Montreal and afloat to the United Kingdom. New Zealands in store in New Zealand, afloat to the United Kingdom and on steamers partially loaded but not finally cleared from New Zealand. This stock position gradually improved until at the first of November, for the first time for two years, showed less stocks than the preceding year—this being brought about by the decreased production in Canada combined with a decrease in New Zealand gradings for the last three months of their year ended the 31st of July, and a decrease for the first three months of their new season which commenced August 1 last.

Exchange

"Now a few words about exchange—you will remember the 1933 season showed an opening at the government stabilization rate of $4.60 followed by an advance, (caused by the United States debasing their dollar in an effort to raise commodity prices) culminating with a high point of $5.00 about mid July, then an erratic decline to $4.65 in mid October with another upward movement to $5.34 in mid November, followed by an immediate decline to $5.00. The past season opened with a rate of around $5.00 and then remained within a 5 point range until the end of August when the rate was $4.95. There was then a steady decline to $4.78 in mid October followed by a steady recovery to $4.86 by mid November. You will thus see that the exporters' worries over exchange have been less pronounced this season, the only really anxious time being during September and early October.

Export Sales

"With plentiful stocks, and general business conditions still beclouded, together with the weak butter market in the United Kingdom, it has been a "buyers' market" for United Kingdom importers and they did not have to reach out for cheese or anticipate their requirements as they knew there were plenty of cheese available and could not see any reason for prices advancing. In consequence the season dragged along with little animation to the market, and an absence of any spirited buying over the cable, which resulted in gradually declining prices at country boards, and a great uncertainty for exporters over the final outcome of the season. Towards the end of October, following conferences concerning quota restrictions and with reports that New Zealand production was showing considerable decline a marked change came over the market, with a good demand for summer-made cold stored cheese, and this change also synchronized with advancing sterling and prices advanced to levels where exporters could get their money back on the earlier higher costing cheese, plus their carrying charges and in consequence the season wound up with stocks of cheese available for export pretty well cleared and a more satisfactory stock position in Montreal than for some years. The buying spurt lasted just about long enough to get available cheese cleared, as the market during the last week of navigation petered out and prices in London declined again.

Consumption and Prices

"Figures for the ten months, January to October, indicate a smaller distribution of Canadians in the United Kingdom being an average monthly rate of about 53,500 cheese compared with 55,000 the previous year, while New Zealands were somewhat less at an average of 239,000 per month against almost 245,000 last year. It is interesting to observe that, for the month of October when stocks of Canadian cheese are usually at the highest point of the year in the United Kingdom and New Zealand at their lowest, the distribution of Canadians was almost equal to last year, being about 123,000 each year, and this year the price of Canadians in London during October was for the first time for many years lower than New Zealands. In this fact may be the means of enlarging the demand for Canadian cheese. For many years Canada has rightfully prided herself on the premium obtained for Canadian over New Zealand cheese, but this very premium may have acted as a boomerang and actually been a source of harm to the industry. In the stress of economic conditions consumers have sought the best value for their money and New Zealands being lower in price have appealed to the masses, who may be buying more on price than quality. In this connection I quote from some letters received from one of our English correspondents—an old house—with no axe to grind, except to report conditions as they see them:

"24th August. It is difficult in many quarters to persuade the trade to take on Canadian cheese and I know for an absolute fact that at some points the buyers have so far imported less cheese than they have done for many years past, which only confirms what we have maintained for quite a while, that the trade on new season's Canadians are not inclined to pay the premium which they have paid in the past for them over New Zealand."

"14th September. It is getting increasingly difficult to market Canadian cheese over here, and if Canada wishes us to increase her cheese business on this side, she will have to bring her prices more in line with New Zealand, as only very limited quantities can be marketed at the differential now in price."

Production

"As I already stated, the production of cheese in New Zealand for the first three months of the new season shows a decline of over 30,000 cheese, equivalent to just over 6 per cent, and while it is, of course, too early for even any prophecies on the future trend, it is interesting to observe that this rate of decline would amount to over 170,000 cheese on their previous year's production, which amount would, of course, materially change the future trend of the market. Another factor has, however, arisen—the British government have guaranteed minimum prices for milk used for manufacturing purposes, including milk made into cheese on farms, but at the same time the government are launching a campaign to increase the consumption of fluid milk, so that the surplus for manufacturing purposes may not be so very great, depending on the success of the fluid milk campaign. I saw an advertisement in an English paper last summer where a firm advertised cheese at 25/-30-45/- per cwt. and inviting buyers to make selections. This was probably cheese made from surplus milk, but the low price would fill the demand of those buying on price and displace the consumption of that much better quality cheese.

I would like to quote just a few figures showing the increase in production in New Zealand in the past two decades:

Year		No. of Cows	Butter Fat Production Per Cow
1913-14	....	701312	156.52
1923-24	....	1312588	174.10
1933-34	....	1960000	220.00

The figures for the last year are estimated.

"The use of fertilizers has declined appreciably in New Zealand, the 1929 figure of 161,986 tons having declined to 91,995 in 1933, but has risen this year to 117,561 tons.

What of the Future?

"The average price on the Belleville Board this past season was about 9½c compared with 10c in 1933 and 9¼c in 1932. Needless to say these prices are disheartening to the producer, and all connected with the industry earnestly hope that a substantial increase will come, but in the variety of schemes put forward there seems a tendency to strive for the unattainable goal of forcing higher prices, and neglecting the obvious end at which to start, viz: lowering the cost of production, which is what Canada's chief competitor, New Zealand, is doing—witness the steadily increasing production of butter fat per cow there. It is the constant effort in the manufacturing industries to so lower the cost of production that goods can be offered at lower prices, and thus enable more consumers to buy. No glorifeld marketing schemes or artificial control of prices can succeed in doing what the producer must do for himself—get down the costs of production through elimination of worthless cows, inferior bulls, improper feeding methods. The world is still no nearer the evolution of any marketing scheme which will supplant the law of supply and demand, one by one schemes, which are heralded as the solution of the producers' problems, fall by the wayside, each successive failure being blamed on some extraneous circumstances or some sinister but imaginary influence, but they all refuse to face the inescapable fact that if a scheme can or does succeed in manufacturing synthetic higher prices, the inevitable result is decreased consumption and increased production—that result is immutable, as sure as night follows day. It is an accepted commercial maxim that everything in the nature of restrictive influences in a competitive market invariably reacts adversely to the vendor, unless the commodity constitutes a monopoly.

"The reorganization of the Cheese Boards in Ontario was a forward step taken by the industry and the officers and members of these boards are to be congratulated. The cheese were put up for sale to the highest bidder and competition assured the full market price with prompt payment and no further market risks — the change of so many factories from regulars to board cheese assured keen competition among exporters and others to enable them to obtain their supplies, but if any factories felt like holding for higher prices they were free to do so. The cost of handling between the factory and the English importer is as low as possible, competition among exporters being so keen that every possible saving is being effected by them in the sale and handling of their products, only by doing so can they hope to survive.

Domestic Consumption

"I am glad to see that this subject is receiving increasing attention, and is being taken up by many organizations, speakers and the press—it is perhaps the most important subject facing the industry today and holds promise of more possibilities of attainment than any other angle of the situation. Domestic consumption of cheese in this country might be divided under two headings—the use of cheese for its food value, as the principal part of a meal and supplanting other foods such as meat, eggs, etc., and its use as a flavoring or contiment or a dessert. Under the first heading larger consumption would come from a realization of its food value and economy. I like your program note with the Mae West touch, "cheese is the cheapest of all foods — eat four ounces a day. It adds more years to your life, more life to your years." This is quite true, but I am afraid a steady diet of four ounces per day would require a great deal of energy to use it up and the ordinary man would soon be receiving warning admonitions from his doctor. Under the second category, quality must be the beacon to attract the consumer—used in these forms of a condimant or appetizer cheese must be matured, and to turn out a well matured cheese we must start with a sound cheese and then give it the necessary time and care to develop that nutty matured flavor that cannot be compared to anything else, and can only be described as 'cheese' flavor and which cannot be attained to so great or fine a degree in the cheese of any other country as in our Canadian cheese. I came across a very interesting description of Canadain cheese recently in a publication. I quote:

"'We are free to admit that good, old, nippy Canadian cheese hath no peer. It is the best cheese in the world. It has no holes in it for the odor to escape, like Swiss cheese. It does not rely on adventitious flavor, garlic to wit, to give it a zip—like Camembert. It does not make itself smelt in the community like Limburger. It does not call on death or progressive decay to make it tasty—like Stilton or Gorgonzola.

"'Canadian cheese is pure and undefiled. Its virtues are modest and unassuming. It is a well-behaved, orderly sort of cheese. It is not like certain cheeses, which we relish and at the same time deplore—cheese that will not be led or otherwise eased in, but come bounding if one so much as whistles. Canadian cheese is no blusterer, no rash unmannerly intruder. It waits to be carried in, in its proper dish, where it remains under cover till it is invited to emerge.'

"I might here mention one matter that needs correction—I refer to the practice of some makers in boxing their cheese before the rinds have properly dried out and hardened. If a cheese is to be carried to ripen into the matured article it must have an absolutely sound rind, otherwise during the months of storage it will develop wet ends and start rind decay and cause serious loss when the cheese is finally cut up. I have no doubt that the department officials will take this up with their usual efficiency and take steps to ensure that all cheese are properly "rinded" when boxed.

"Now as to methods to bring about this much desired and necessary increase in consumption. National Cheese Week was held a few weeks ago and in Montreal I think the results were distinctly encouraging. The week was inaugurated by a parade of trucks bearing signs of "National Cheese Week", and arrangements were made for a band to lead the parade, but owing to a misunderstanding in booking the date, the band did not turn up and the only music provided was the honking of horns. This was most unfortunate and detracted materially from the publicity of the parade, but valuable lessons were learned and I think the event can be "put over" in a larger way another year.

"Advertising must, of course, be used, but this is expensive and the cheapest and best advertising is a satisfied customer, and I feel that consumption will grow quicker from satisfied customers than from any other source, that is have the cheese so good that when a user takes some he will smack his lips and want some more—this applies, of course, particularly to those who use the matured, full-flavored article.

"Another factor in increased consumption is the retailer and I think there is one of the directions in which the greatest possibility for good lies—to the average retailer cheese is just cheese and he pays little attention to the quality or maturity of what he sells, but simply buys on price or takes what he is given by his wholesaler. If retailers could be awakened to the possibilities of their cheese trade and take more interest in their cheese counters they would better realize the business building possibilities of cheese and that to build up a reputation for selling something better than the ordinary in cheese is worth while.

"A good deal of discussion is taking place regarding the grading of cheese for domestic consumption and selling on grades. There can be no question that this would be of great benefit and is most desirable but one can foresee many difficulties in formulating a workable system and I have thought that possibly a voluntary scheme something in the nature of the Red and Blue Brands for beef might be workable. As I see it, apart from quality, cheese would have to come under three headings—mild, medium and strong, or some such descriptions—the point then arises when does a mild cheese become medium and when does a medium cheese become strong? I know that consumers are often disappointed when they go into a store and ask for some strong cheese and are served with something that is at best only medium, (the quality may be good, but it has not that matured flavor) the consumer takes it home, is disappointed and does not care for it, and it lies around until it dries out and becomes moldy and is perhaps thrown away. If that customer had been served what he asked for, some good quality strong cheese, he would probably have eaten it promptly and been back for more. I have often been asked by acquaintances: "Where can I get some real good old strong cheese?" Then there is the point of the ultimate strength of flavor in cheese. I know one store in Montreal where they have a reputation for the ultimate in strong cheese, their only complaint they cannot get it strong enough. The proprietor himself once told me of going into a warehouse to buy cheese, and, on being asked exactly what he wanted, answered: "Bring out your dead". They have a trade for cheese three, four, five years' old—anything, so long as it is old enough. I have seen them with cheese I would describe as "decomposed". The volume, of course, is not large, but it illustrates my point of the variety of tastes of the public and it would be of no avail to have regulations to assure cheese of first or second grade sold on their quality where the difficulty at present seems to be more a matter of degree of maturity. Complaints are made of second grade cheese being sold without being so described or perhaps without any grading, but I think this would only apply to cheese in its mild form as it is doubtful if any wholesaler would carry second grade cheese for long.

"I have no doubt the department officials are giving this whole matter of domestic grading their earnest consideration and will be able to formulate some workable policy and I just give these angles of it as worthy perhaps of some consideration.

"In conclusion, Mr. chairman and gentlemen, I feel after reading over what I have written that some parts may be considered somewhat pessimistic, but with the better wind up of the past season's business, the improved stock position, the possibilities of expansion of the domestic market, and the very evident determination of all sections of the industry to work together to find some solution of its problems, that one may be justified in feeling that perhaps the worst is past and that brighter days may be in store for the industry, and particularly for the producer who labors so long and arduously to provide the raw material for manufacture and who for the past few years has seen his returns dwindle to less than his actual costs, following world conditions over which he has no control."

TOOK PILLS FOR 30 YEARS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter:

"After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat cheese, and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. Ed. Forsythe. (Address furnished upon request.)

Science says ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

FATHER RESCUES FAMILY FROM GAS

Rushes with Unconscious Baby Son to Hospital to Save Him

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Awakened by the odor of coal gas today, E. Treadwell, a school teacher, discovered his sixteen months' old son, Billy, in a coma, overcome by the fumes arising from the furnace. Rushing into his wife's room he found her and their four-year-old daughter, Trudie, slightly affected.

Hastily dressing, he summoned a taxi cab and wrapping his unconscious son in warm clothes, rushed him to a hospital where artificial respiration was applied. Two hours later the boy returned home.

FLAVOR OF MILK IS LARGE FACTOR

G. H. Barr Stresses Value of Following Instructors

Picton, Dec. 6 (Special)—George H. Barr, Director of the Dairy Branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, speaking at the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' convention here on Wednesday said:

"In making out the report you have in your hands, I had three objects in view — (1) To show the cheese patrons the effect of sending tainted and overripe milk to the factory. The flavour of the cheese cannot be better than the flavor of the milk, and the patrons in each group can judge for themselves from the total defects in flavor whether they are as clean and careful about their milk supply as the patrons in other districts. Such a comparison ought to provide some food for thought.

"(2) This report ought to make the cheesemakers do some real serious thinking. We can all understand how one man may do finer work than another, but it is not so easy to understand how 19 makers in one instructor's group get through the season with only 88 cheese under first grade, and another group of 24 makers had 1793 cheese picked out, nor why a group of 19 makers should have only 14 flavor defects, and another group of 24 makers had 142 nor why a group of 16 makers had only 2 mechanical defects in the season, and another group of 22 makers had 265 mechanical defects. How does it come that so many real good cheesemakers get into one group and so many rather poor makers get into another?

"This brings up the third point. To what extent are the instructors and the Director of Dairying responsible for these conditions?

"I have been trying to get our staff of instructors to agree on certain fundamental principles in the management of factories and in the methods of making the cheese; and after ten years, I know that the closer we work to the principles which we have laid down, the better success we have had in getting fine quality cheese. It would be folly to try to get a uniform quality of cheese in over seven hundred factories if 34 instructors were advocating 34 methods of handling curds. It is team-work that counts.

"An instructor must be first and always a teacher. It is one thing to know a thing; it is an entirely different thing to tell what you know, but the important thing in an instructor's work is to be able to show the other fellow how to do a thing and get him to do it—that's the real test of an instructor's ability.

"I am going to make one broad statement—which I believe covers the whole situation of successful cheesemaking in Ontario; and I make it after ten years of close observation on instruction work in Eastern Ontario. It is this, "the makers who are following the advice of the instructors the closest are making the finest cheese and have the smallest percentage of under grade cheese.

"There are two types of cheesemakers who have always given a lot of trouble. First, the men who will not co-operate or play the game square with the instructors; second, the careless, indifferent men who are too lazy to keep their factories clean and tidy and finish and box their cheese properly. We are gradually eliminating both types in issuing certificates and permits. We will always take chances in issuing beginners' permits—but if we stop the slovenly, don't care young man the first season, we will protect our best makers from unfair competition, save the patrons a lot of money, and do the whole industry a good turn."

INDIANS IN N. W. T. OVERRUN WITH "T.B."

Col. Cornwall Says Steps Must be Taken to Curb Spread

Toronto, Dec. 6—(CP)—Col. J. K. 'Peace River Jim' Cornwall widely-known northwestern character said today that unless steps are taken at once to curb tuberculosis among Indians of the Northwest Territories "it will go down in history as a national crime."

"Fully 33 1-3 percent of all the Indians in that territory have tuberculosis very badly," Col. Cornwall said. The Colonel is paying a visit here.

Ann Steps Out

by MARGARET GERMAN NICHOLS

"I've never doubted you" said Ann. "Come back on the first train and I'll see if I can scrape together some cash for a wedding present."

"We don't want cash," said Dick "We want your blessing."

She called Nick at the office. "Runaway children," he cried. "I like their courage. Don't reproach them, Ann. Don't put a single cloud in their way in the beginning."

"I'm not, I've only asked them to come back on the next train and we're all going to the station to meet them. I want you to come along too."

"Gladly."

"And Nick I want you to call Dick's boss and ask him for two weeks off. I want them to have a honeymoon."

"I'll do it at once and I'll meet you at the station."

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

They waited for the train to come in — Mr. and Mrs. Dryden, Ann, Nick. Nick had stopped at a store for rice.

"It's a little late for it," he said, "but we've got to start Jean and Dick off right."

"Surprises," said Mrs. Dryden, "are a daily diet in this family."

Nick understood that thoughtful look on Ann's face. She turned to him and said in a low voice, "I'm glad they did it. I'm glad they didn't wait. They would have missed something if they had."

The train came in. They saw the youthful figures of Jean and Dick. Both wore their practical business clothes. Jean waved to them —her bright face smiling.

"No tears," Ann cautioned her mother. "No tears."

There were kisses and the shaking of hands and congratulations all around.

"You're to get in the town car," Nick told them, showering them with rice, "and ride home—alone. We'll follow."

Wang prepared one of his well known feasts. At nine o'clock they were still at the table. Jean and Dick were still dressed in their rumpled business clothes in which they had been married.

"I believe in honeymoons," said Ann. She turned to Dick. "Mr. Abell has given you two weeks for your honeymoon.. You can go whenever you and Jean want to start."

"I've always remembered," said Jean, "your saying something about a mountain lodge. I've seen them only in the movies but the idea appeals to me. But I don't know of any place."

"I do," spoke up Nick, remembering Ann's honeymoon that she had never had. "I know a chap who has a lodge in New Hampshire."

"Are you going there," asked Jean, "when you get married?"

"When I get married—" he said, "yes."

"Could you arrange for them to go?" Ann asked.

"Yes. At once. Excuse me."

He went into the hall and called New York. He came back to the dining room smiling.

"It's all set. Bill says just stop off in New York at his apartment and he'll tell you all about it. He has a caretaker at the place, an old man, and his wife does the housekeeping and cooking."

"It sounds heavenly," said Jean. "I was up there one summer," Nick said. "The place is situated on a lake. It's very rustic inside—deer heads all around, skins on the floor, an enormous fireplace and it's miles from any other house. The old couple have a little car Bill bought for them and he says you can run around in it. He keeps two horses there, too."

"I can't think of anything more divine," said Jean. "And I want to go at once. I don't give a hang about clothes, and neither does Dick. We'll get the train tonight."

"You can stop in New York and pick up the warm things you'll need," said Ann.

"Dick," Jean asked her husband, "why didn't we do this sooner?"

Jean went upstairs to pack. Nick drove Dick home to get his clothes.

"You don't think I'm crazy for doing this, do you?" Jean asked Ann, looking very serious for one so terribly young.

"I'm glad. I told Nick that."

"Ann, we don't want your money. We didn't get married expecting that. Dick's been saving and I've been, too. We have a little."

"But mine is a wedding present," said Ann, giving Jean a handsome check. And she was thinking that when they returned she would have a small downtown apartment rented and furnished for them.

"Are you going to continue working?" Ann asked.

"Yes. I wouldn't be happy just doing nothing. I like to be busy."

They saw them off on the midnight train. The eager, happy faces of Jean and Dick peered at them through the musty train window. "They have each other," thought Ann. "They have their high hopes and ambitions and their splendid love."

Mr. and Mrs. Dryden went home in the town car. And Ann walked out of the station at Nick's side. Her face was pensive in the half-light, her curls escaped the sides of her hat. She dug her hands in the pockets of her coat.

"Where to?" asked Nick. "Home?"

"No," said Ann, "not home," brushing rice from her coat sleeve. "Just drive—drive anywhere. I feel as though I would like to ride with you tonight, Nick, and never come back."

They drove through the country. Nick didn't speak because he knew she didn't want to talk. Presently when he slowed down the car, he saw that she was asleep and that her head rested against his shoulder. He put his arm protectingly around her and drew her close to him, looking now and then at her tired, lovely face.

"Dear, Ann," he thought. "That idol of Doug she has tried so hard to patch together is crumbling again—falling all around her."

Angela and Nick were sitting before the fire one night. Angela, with the smoke of her cigaret hovering about her dark hear, looked down at Nick's thoughtful face as he put fresh logs on the fire.

"I want to help you," she said. "I am willing to forever lose Ann's friendship if I can help you and her. It will take something like this to bring her to her senses. She is sticking to Doug only because of her great loyalty. She isn't happy. When love doesn't make one happy, it isn't the right kind of love."

"But your suggestion," said Nick, "is trickery."

She shook her head.

"It isn't really. My suggestion was that you give a house party and invite Ann and Doug. And I'll make Doug make love to me, and Ann will see. It isn't trickery, Nick. Doug has tried to kiss me—that first night Ann brought him down."

"I don't think her loyalty will be shaken ever by that," he said, lighting his pipe. "She feels that he needs her so much she'll marry him and put up with his faults."

"Ann doesn't love him," said Angela, who had infinite wisdom in such matters. "In her hearts it is you she loves. I have seen her look at you. I have seen her touch you. But you have never made love to her, Nick. You have kissed her only once, and you told her it was the kiss of another man—John's kiss. You've never made her see you as a lover."

"I don't want to trick her," he said.

"There will be no need of that. I shall only have to be alone with Doug a few minutes and he'll try to kiss me. I won't have to encourage him. Nick you've got to do it! You can't let her waste her life on a boy who isn't worthy of her. You can't let her marry him because of her loyalty and pity. She'd be miserable with him. He plays on her sympathy—that's all."

Nick walked about the room. "All right," he said. "I'll do it, but we'll set no trap. We'll just see how it works out. And I am going to have the same people here I had the last time. Ann likes them. They're not the society crowd. They're my personal friends."

Angela got up and touched his shoulder. "You've been the best friend I ever had. If Ann hates me when she finds me in Doug's arms, I can stand it because I know it will send her to you. And besides—I haven't told you—but I'm going to get married. I'm going to marry Ronald Farber."

"The young professor?" asked Nick.

"Yes. Once I thought, when he asked me the first several times, that I couldn't be a prof's wife. Now I'd rather be that than anything else in the world. "She lifted her handsome dark head. "I'll go away—the same night Ann finds us together. I'll be all packed and you can leave the car out for me. You'll find it at the station in Baltimore. Perhaps, later, Ann will understand and not hate me, Later—when she's your wife."

"I'm sure she'll understand," he said, "but I don't want you to sacrifice...."

"Silly! Of course I'll do it gladly. It will open Ann's eyes."

Brave girl," he said. "I hope you are right."

Ann driving down to Nick's house party with Doug, remembered the last party there. "They're real people," she said to Doug, moving closed to him to escape the wind and rain. "You'll like them. People who write or paint—people who do things."

"I wish it would stop raining," said Doug. "I can't think of anything worse than being closed up in the house for a whole week-end with a lot of nutty writers and artists."

"Angela isn't a writer," said Ann. "I'm glad of that."

They were late because Jean and Dick had arrived home that day and had much to talk about. Ann had driven them downtown and opened the door of a small, newly furnished apartment, and said, "It's yours." And she had left them laughing like children, curled up together in a big chair before the window, looking at the rain.

CHAPTER THIRTY

The people at Nick's party welcomed Ann warmly. Doug was introduced to them and Ann wondered why he was so determined to be bored with them. He attached himself to Angela at once who seemed thought Ann, very willing to relieve him of his boredom.

When Ann came downstairs after unpacking her bag, she found the guests playing bridge and dancing. She saw Doug, with a bored frown on his face, waiting for her.

"Ann, why did you drag me into something like this?"

"Nick asked me and I had a good time the last time."

"Nick asked you? When we're married, are you going to do everything he asks you?"

Angela came out of the dining room with a tray of cock-tails.

"Perhaps," said Doug, sampling one, "this will help some."

Ann said nothing, and she supposed that her dream of having a house like Nick's on the island would vanish a-borning. Doug liked the rush of the city, his crowd, his clubs. After their marriage life would be a series of parties and the same people. Ann was tired of them. She thought of Jean and Dick snug in their little apartment, sitting together in one chair, laughing. "That's what I've always wanted," she thought. "A love like theirs and security. To belong to one man to him alone."

The next night, Sunday, many of the guests departed early. It had not ceased to rain during the entire week-end but to many of them the rain outside made them all feel closer together. "The intimacy of rain" said Nick. A few guests remained for the night.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I was wishing I didn't have to do my homewerk and me was reeding the paper, saying. There's a very original article by P. Willis Hinkle today, he claims if a man has the will and the spirrit he can move a mountain.

Just one man all alone? Like fun, I said, and pop said, I'm afraid you're taking a figurative remark literly, Benny. The mountain Mr. Hinkle has reference to is a simbolic rather than an acual one. What he meens to say is, if a man wants to do a thing badly enough he can do it in spite of seemingly insurmountable obstacles. In fact a man of grate deeds, welcomes obstacles just for the joy of overcoming them, and that's a way we should all be. A gole reached through difficulties, is the eny one to be proud of. A Greek named Demosthenese made up his mind to become a grate orator although he had a serious impediment in his speech, and he lived to hear large Greek audiences cheer his oratory till the werds could hardly be heard. And a German composer named Baytoven was stone deff but he wrote such wonderful music that many people with perfeck hearing cant understand it to this day, pop said.

And he got behind the sporting page and I had a ideer and I got a froning iron and a hammer and started to crack my bag of nuts, pop saying, Hay, for Peet sake I cant reed while you're making that infernal racket, and I said, Well G, pop, why dont you try it just to see if you can, like Baytoven and what's his name.

Hee hee that's rite, Willyum, heer's a good chance to practice what you preech, ma said, and pop said. And I'll send him up to his own room with his little boiler factory and then I'll try to reed in spite of the additional strane and anxiety caused by the uncertainty of not knowing whether he's hitting his fingers or not. Fallward march, young fellow, he said.

Meening me, wich I did.

ZION'S HILL Y. P. ARE ENTERTAINED AT PARSONAGE

PLAINFIELD—The young people of Zion's Hill were entertained at the Parsonage in Plainfield where they held their regular semi-monthly meeting, Monday evening. Mr. Cecil Ketcheson, the president, was in charge and opened the meeting by the singing of "My Hope is Built on Nothing Less," and "A Better Day is Coming," after which Mrs. Everson led in prayer. The minutes were read and the roll called by Miss Margaret Tuffts. Miss Olive Searles then took charge and announced hymn 279, "Just As I Am Thine Own To Be," after which she offered prayer. A first Scripture lesson was read by Margaret Tuffts, Orval May and Homer Townsend spoke on the topic, "The Christian Home." Mrs. Ross Caverly gave a reading on "Home," Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson contributed an instrumental number.

Mrs. William Tuffts gave a talk on "Home Missions," Miss Helen Caskey read the second Scripture lesson. Mrs. Floyd Sheffield offered prayer. Six of the young men contributed a chorus. The meeting was closed with prayer by the pastor who said the benediction.

Mr. Everson led the group in a number of contests and puns after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Everson. Before leaving for home Mr. Cecil Ketcheson moved and Bruce Beckwith seconded a vote of thnaks to Mr. and Mrs. Everson for their kind hospitality. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Caverly.

On Wednesday evening a number of the neighbors and relatives of Mrs. Joseph Phillips gathered at her home on the eight of Thurlow to extend congratulations on the occasion of her eightieth birthday. Friends were present from Madoc and Morganston.

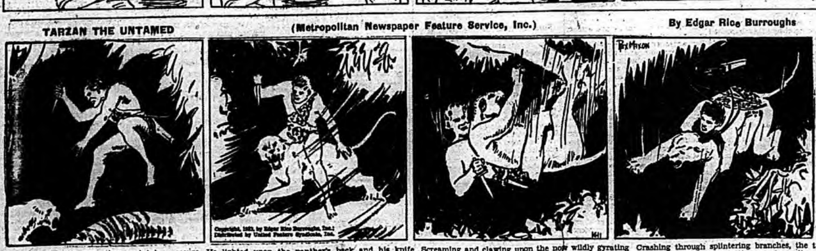
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Copyright, 1932, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc.; Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
REX MAXON

Sheeta could do little more than maintain a secure footing and it was this moment that Tarzan chose to charge. With a roar that mingled with the booming thunder, he leaped.

He lighted upon the panther's back and his knife struck deep into the tawny side. Then Sheeta, impelled by pain, rage, hate, and the instinct for self-preservation, went mad!

Screaming and clawing upon the now wildly gyrating limb, the panther attempted to turn upon the ape-thing clinging to his back. Clutching frantically to save himself, he plunged into the dark ness.

Crashing through splintering branches, the two fell. Not for an instant did the ape-man relinquish his death hold. It was the unwritten law of the jungle —one or both must die before the battle ended.

SOCCER .... SIDELIGHTS

By Central Press Canadian

London, Dec 5—In every international match this season, the choice for centre half-back on the all-England eleven has been cast in favor of a Derby County player, Geo. Barker, who plays this position.. regularly on the County line. Barker is considered the finest pivot man, the motherland has had on her representative team since the day of Fatty Wedlock. He is a big strapping fellow who throws everything into the game. His wings get plenty of opportunity to show themselves when Barker is in the line for close observers rate him one of the best feeding halves in the game to-day. Barker has youth on his side and should be a power on Derby County's attack for many years. He was secured by his present club for a mere songs. They wouldn't part with him now for a good round sum as football players go.

"Dizzy" Dean Accepts Terms With Cardinals

Bradenton, Fla., Dec. 6 (CP) — "Me and Paul are gonna win 50 games next year."

That should clinch the 1935 National League pennant for the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals for who would make such a statement but Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean?

"I just accepted terms with the Cardinals, which means the old pennant is in the bag for our ball club," Dean announced. In a telephone conversation yesterday with Sam Breadon, President of the Cardinals, at St. Louis, things were patched up.

"With me and Paul breezing 'em across next year, there ain't nothing that can keep the Cardinals from the top."

"Dizzy" declined to say exactly how much these 50 games would cost the Cards, but announced his salary would be 'between $20,000 and $26,000."

"Since I won thirty games for $8,500 last year, and I'm gonna be paid more than twice that much next season, I reckon you could figure me good for 90 games in 1935, if you really wanted to figure," the "great one" said.

"But" that sounds crazy and old Dizz ain't making any impossible statements, so tell the folks that me and Paul are gonna win at least 50 games next year. That ain't many ball games for us Deans to win in one year."

"Dizzy" said all his negotiations to the present with the Cardinals have been devoted to his own salary, and that the matter of getting brother Paul signed would have to come up later.

Paul wants $12,000, "Dizzy" said, which is well above the terms offered by the Cardinals. But "Dizzy" doesn't expect Paul to have "any trouble reaching a satisfactory agreement."

"Mr. Breadon has treated me nice and he'll do the right thing by Paul too," the elder Dean declared.

VOLLEYBALL

The "Y" seniors and the Belleville business men were the victors in a twin bill of volleyball played in the Y.M.C.A. league last evening. All six games played proved spirited and saw action personified before the ultimate winners were declared.

In the opening set the "Y" seniors won in straight games defeating the Hydro men 15-12; 15-12 and 15-7. The night cap affair brought together the local Business men versus the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" with the former carrying too much class. The "spiking" of the two winning squads overshadowed that of their opponents. The Business men won their set from the "Flyers" in three straight sets, only being forced slightly in the opening match. The scores in favour of the Business men were 75-13; 15-9 and 15-10.

The lineups:

R.C.A.F.—Walton, Benson, Watts, Mitchell, Burdes and Jones.

Business Men—Shapiro, White, McFee, Houston, Hitchon and Neal.

"Y" Seniors — Wickerson, Maclean, Cather, Burley, Cole and Scott.

Hydro — Poste, O. Munnings, K. Munnings, Davis, Meyers and Blaker.

Referee: Ralph Morden.

EXPECTS TO COACH AT 80

Stockton, Calif., Dec. 6 (AP) — Amos Alonzo Stagg, 72-year-old coaching marvel, expects to be doing the same thing when he's 80.

"From the way I feel now, I expect that at 80 years I will still be active and able to run about and coach football teams," said the gridiron patriarch who now is coaching at the college of the Pacific.

"I get in a little exercise every morning. First I run and walk a mile and a half or so. Then I bat a tennis ball around a few hundred times. Then I run and walk back home."

MAY BUILD SANITARIUM

ist delighted with numbers in a most artistic manner. Little Miss May Cameron in dances, that were different entertained the audience, while Miss Margaret Clements, pianist, accompanied the artists and also gave two piano numbers. Each number was encored and a vote of thanks tendered to the performers. An event entirely unexpected was the presentation to Mrs. Jacob Yanover, nee Annie Safe, former stenographer at the Agricultural office in Belleville, by Hon. Dr. Faulkner, of a beautiful dinner wagon, the gift of the cheesemakers of the association.

Besides the address given by Hon. Dr. Faulkner was one by Rev. William Allan, minister at Dovercourt Road Presbyterian Church in Toronto. His address "A Scotsman at Home and Abroad", was bubbling over with humor and packed full of sound philosophy served in the most charming manner. It was a rare delight to all, who were privileged to be present and at times gales of laughter rocked the room. In opening his address the Minister of Health stated he was delighted to come to Prince Edward County, who through its isolation has developed a peculiar type of residents but residents, who are proud of their ancestry and who have developed their county to a high state of efficiency. The speaker praised the cheese industry for the help it had given Prince Edward County but expressed the opinion, that the cause of the poor year in this industry has been caused through a lack of markets and "that is not speaking politically", said Dr. Faulkner.

Milk as a Food

"If one is able to pay taxes," continued the Minister of Health "you must receive pay for your work and certainly sure the cheese industry has paid off many mortgages in this country. I wish to speak for a few minutes on 'fluid milk as a food product' believing it to be the most fertile field for bacteria, from it coming tuberculosis, Bangs Disease and Septic sore throat". What is the function of the Provincial Board of Health with respect to these diseases? and he answered the question by stating, that the board did not pretend to cure but every effort was bent for the prevention and spread of these dread diseases. The Minister of Health showed that Bovine tuberculosis was prevalent in nearly every part of the world and he praised pasteurization for the good that it had accomplished. Toronto since 1914 has not had a case of bovine tuberculosis and a great deal of that is due to the use of pasteurized milk as a food product.

The speaker showed, that the death rate from scarlet fever, lofgr haRl lllllllll h' l,nJbill typhoid fever, smallpox and septic sore throat was 64 per 100,000 in 1910, 55 in 1920 and five in 1932. The government last year spent over three millions in preventing these diseases and it was money well spent. Coming to the matter of sanitariums, Hon. Dr. Faulkner showed the progress made by having one at Hamilton and Niagara Falls for at Hamilton the death rate fifteen years ago was 120 per 100,000 and today it is between 30 and 40. The department has found a great disparagement in the death rate throughout the Province and for this reason I am here tonight to start a campaign for the erection of a sanitarium in this section of the Province. The government cannot pay the whole cost and it is up to the residents of this section to work hand in hand to help raise the funds to put this dream into realization. The speaker gave the death rate in this section of the Province to show the need of such a sanitarium. Trenton death rate was given as 69.2 in 100,000, Belleville 71.1, Prince Edward County 59.2, Hastings County 62.1, Northumberland County 40.8, Lennox and Addington 19.1, while Northern Ontario is 68.6. The fourteen eastern counties is 57 and the four counties of Leeds, Grenville, Stormont and Glengary is 76.4.

Cheese Not Offender

In developing his theme Hon. Dr. Faulkner stated, that it was found by laboratory tests, that cheese was not an offender in the propogation of any disease but the producers must be better educated in the care of the milk. He contended that the public schools were not examined according to law, quoting an instance, that four cases of tuberculosis were found in one small school. The indigent account of the Province of Ontario, who pay not 60 per cent. with 7 1-2 per cent. discount was $6,400,000 last year and that indigent patients were staying twice as long in hospitals, than those able to pay their bills. "I say to the Reeves, Mayors and Health Boards, investigate your indigent patients to see, that they are not making of the hospitals, a boarding house", said Dr. Faulkner. The Minister of Health gave credit to the former government for making health surveys in certain localities and this work will be furthered by a donation from the Rockfeller Foundation.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner stated, that the health nurse in a locality should not be condemned but should be given every assistance. The Boards of Health should be carefully chosen and their work should be active and not passive. Some boards do not spend enough to make the work show a result and many medical officers are not amply paid. He asked for the sympathetic co-operation of all and any constructive criticism would be welcomed by the Department of Health.

He explained that an active education campaign should be carried on to show results of these diseases and in this work he especially praised the Women's Institutes, fraternal organization and Service Clubs. The thanks of the gathering were expressed to Dr. Faulkner by the chairman, who hoped, that something tangible would come from the interesting address delivered. The convention closed with the National Anthem.

IRLING Y.P.S. AT BURNBRAE

St. Andrew's Group Members Attend Meeting

irling, Dec. 6—The Young Peo-le's Society of St. Andrew's hurch, Stirling, accepted the in-itation of the St. Andrew's Young eople of Burnbrae Church to be ith them on Monday evening and resent the programme for the vening. Accordingly over forty oung people from Stirling journeyed o Burnbrae to avail themselves of his hospitable invitation. The eeting opened with a word of elcome directed to the visitors by he President of the Burnbrae oung People.

The Stirling President, James ohnson then assumed charge call-ng on all to join in singing the pening hymn, No. 445 after which ev. McMillan in the absence of ev. Koffend led in prayer. After nother hymn had been sung, Miss nez Elgie read the Scripture les-on. At the conclusion of the De-otional period, Messrs. Art Dun-an and Bill Dermedy rendered a eautiful vocal duet, "Have Thine wn Way, Lord." Mrs. Charles argey next delighted with a piano election.

The main feature of the evening as the address delivered by Mr. rthur Duncan on "The Philosophy f Mother Goose." At the outset, r. Duncan enumerated the four ssentials in the development of the hild's mind which essentials are o be found only in Mother Goose hymes, namely simplicity, humour, ction and mystery. Although we lder people may scoff at the pure implicity of Mother Goose's hymes, a great deal of good may ell be gained from their homely ruths. How apt is the simile of the elf-styled man of today to Little ack Horner who kept persistently epeating "What a good boy am I" nd again what a fitting compari-on we have of Humpty Dumpty nd his fall to our man of the day, erhaps an influential broker or inancial magnate of some sort who ay crash to ruin as they inevit-bly do crash, to nothingness. In hat little verse of Jack Spratt and is wife, we find the solution to he modern problem of inadequate istribution of foodstuffs.

The speaker in his remarks tressed the point that if we, in xchange for the surplus commodi-ies of other countries could export ur surplus to them for consump-ion, we would, as nations, like ck Spratt and his wife "lick the atter clean." Every country should e brought to the realization of he fact that to hoard their sur-lus of foodstuffs while other coun-ies suffer from famine, is direct-y in opposition to the teachings f Christ. It is to discourage such oarding that God ordained that oodstuffs should be made of a erishable nature. Let us also bear n mind the words of God who bade s not to take forethought for the orrow but gather only sufficient anna for our daily needs. The roducts stored in those immense rain elevators and storage plants hould be loosed to the starving ublic and thus, cease to be a onument to the starvation of housands. Mr. Duncan delighted he young people with his address o full of real philosophy.

Lunch was then served and a so-ial half hour spent during which nterval, Mr. William Dermedy on ehalf of the Stirling Young People n suitable terms expressed the ap-reciation of that group for the ospitable invitation tendered to hem by Burnbrae. Mr. Harold aker heartily endorsed this vote f thanks and the evening was con-luded with the singing of the oxology. The local group of St. Andrew's Young People are hap-ily anticipating the return visit of he Burnbrae younger folk in the ear future.

Miss M. Allen returned to To-onto on Tuesday after spending he past month the guest of Rev. . A. and Mrs. Koffend.

The Monday evening meeting of t. Paul's Young People's Society as conducted under the auspices f the Christian Endeavour Depart-ent with the Young People's Pre-ident, Mr. Harry Hulin in the hair. Devotional exercises were onducted with Miss Mary Hulin eading the Scripture lesson from orinthians and Mr. Fred Hulin eading in prayer.

The meeting which was in charge f Mr. Harry Lovibond, first vice resident opened with Miss H. athison rendering a vocal solo, Little Old Church in the Valley" ccompanied at the piano by Mrs. . W. Rowland. It was at this junc-ure that the guest speaker of the vening, Rev. H. H. Lackey of the vanhoe Circuit addressed the oung people at length dealing with he subject, "The Conservation of he ideal of Jesus as practiced in ur Lives." Jesus stands out supre-ely in bold relief as the great eligious teacher, consecrating very day of His life to His Heaven-y Father. Especially in those trying oments of His life did He com-une with God—at one time going p into the solitudes of the moun-ain to pray—at another time, into he garden, before Pontius Pilate and lastly, in the dying moments on the cross, when He asked His Heavenly Father to forgive His exe-cutioners. The secret of His entire life lay in the power of prayer and this tendency to emulate Christ in this respect always has and always will be, universal. Constant recourse to God, not the spasmodic sort, has an uplifting influence on the every-day family life, making it more elevated, intelligent and consecrated to God. It was here that the speak-er introduced the book, "The Trans-forming of Friendship" by Lester Weatherhead using as the keynote those well-known words, "Speak Lord, for thy Servant Heareth." Rev. Lackey pictured in words a mother who after a wearisome day, full of troubles and forebodings, un-burdens her heart to Jesus who restores her inward happiness. Later in life, he portrays the children of this mother, the son melancholy and disconsolate in his college room. Jesus, seeing his plight, en-ters his life bestowing on him the gift of faith, the only thing which makes life worth while. Meantime, the daughter segregated from home and family, pines lonely and friend-less in an obscure city boarding house. Jesus, touched with pity at the sight, restores her faith and ideals and brings to her soul a new tranquillity and interest in living. In concluding the speaker admon-ished us to listen to the voice of God as he speaks to us in the sil-ence of our souls, day by day.

Miss Mary Lackey rendered a beautiful piano number, Beethoven's "Minuet in G," after which Mr. Harry Lovibond staged a jumbled bird contest, all divisions carrying off equal honors. Sixty-five persons were in attendance. The pronuncia-tion of the Mizpah Benediction brought the evening to a close.

Misses Alice Carlow, Jean Mc-Cubbin and Jane Moffat were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. McGuire of Belleville.

Friends in Stirling and vicinity were grieved to hear of the passing in Campbellford on Monday, Dec. 3rd of Dr. Albert Edward Tweedie in his seventy-third year. The fun-eral services were held on Wednes-day afternoon at the home of his son, Mr. Percy A. Tweedie, Booth Street, Campbellford with inter-ment in Stirling cemetery. It will be remembered that the late Albert Tweedie resided in Stirling for the greater part of his lifetime where he conducted a practice as a veterin-ary surgeon, removing to Campbell-ford only a few years ago.

St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church plan to hold joint congregational ser-vices on Sunday next, the morning worship being held in St. Paul's and the eventide service in St. An-drew's, Rev. E. K. Rowland of St. Paul's conducting both services.

Rev. J. A. Koffend left for To-ronto on Tuesday where he will remain for a brief period while undergoing pedal treatment.

Stirling friends of Dr. J. R. Guthridge were delighted to hear of his election to the office of alderman for the city of Belleville for the term 1934 to 1935. Dr. Guthridge conducted a dental prac-tice in Stirling for several years prior to his removal to Belleville and during that period made a host of friends who are very pleased to learn of his success.

Mr. Charles Linn dairy instructor for this district and Mr. Morris Rose were in Picton on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at-tending the convention of the cheesemakers and their banquet on Wednesday evening. A great num-ber of district cheesemakers also attended Wednesday evening.

Messrs. Leslie Clemens, Bert Heagle, Harold Juby and Douglas Rowe were in Toronto attending the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Donohue have returned home after spending the past week in Toronto and attend-ing the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. Will Fox was in Picton on Tuesday on a business trip.

Mrs. Roy Finkle and Betty of Sid-ney were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy B. Duffin.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Patterson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wells and Mrs. W. C. Pitman were Sunday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Patterson.

Miss Freida Thomas of Belleville is the guest for a few days of her sister, Mrs. Edgar Salisbury.

Miss Winnifred Ward of the Kingston General Hospital is the guest for a fortnight of her par-ents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ward.

Rev. J. A. Koffend occupied the pulpit in St. Andrew's Church at the matinal services while in the evening Rev. McMillan of Burn-brae conducted the eventide ser-vices.

Mrs. Descent and Della left on Friday for Toronto where they have taken up their abode.

Misses Cecilia Pekeski and Evelyn Bertrand were in Marmora visiting friends over the week end.

The Girl Guides are holding their weekly meetings on Friday evening and are at present employed in fashioning articles for Christmas stockings and baskets for the needy.

Mr. Donald Haggerty of the Bank of Montreal staff, Brantford was a week end visitor in Stirling.

Mr. Gordon Bailey of the King-ston branch of the Bank of Mont-real staff was a week end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey, Harold.

Mr. Cecil Baker of the Peterboro branch of the Royal Bank spent the week end at his home in Bonar-law and called on a number of Stirling friends.

Mr. James Cranston has taken up residence in one of the Maynes' apartments on Mill Street.

The Stirling branch of the Ang-lican Young People visited the Mar-mora branch on Sunday evening taking charge of the services. The delegation was made up of Misses Margaret Bateman and Margaret Cook and Messrs. Gerald C. Craven, Bruce Bell and Howard Morrow, local president.

Miss Ellen Shea of Stoco spent the week end at her home here.

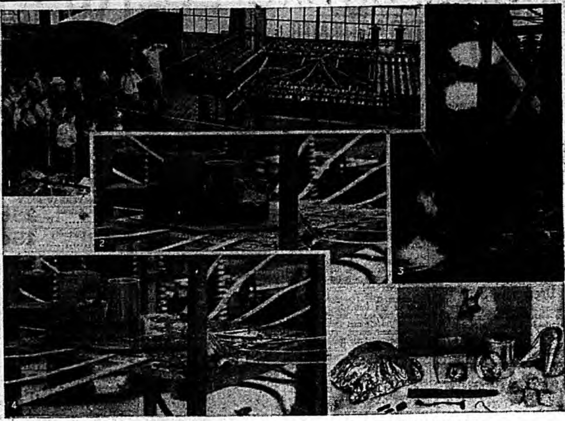
Manufactured Lightning Surpasses Nature's Most Destructive Bolts



GENERAL ELECTRIC HARNESSES JOVE'S THUNDER IN LATEST LABORATORY TESTS

Man-made lightning causes heavy copper wire to disappear as vapor, blasts reinforced concrete into bits, and explodes iron wire with a shower of sparks, in the high voltage lab-oratory of the General Electric Com-pany at Pittsfield, Mass., pictured here: Picture No. 1 shows a group of engineer about to witness dis-charge of a quarter-million amperes from the generator in the centre of the banked capacitators. The engi-neers are forced to plug their ears against the ear-splitting reverbera-tions of thunder. Cans, glass beaker and spoon about to receive the de-structive force of a man-made bolt of lightning are shown in (2). No. 3 pictures a high amperage generator discharging a bolt of lightning representing 30,000,000 kilowatts. A shattered glass beaker, punctured can and partially-consumed spoon in No. 4 show the destruction caused by the passage of electrical energy. No. 5 records the imprint of the 250,000 ampere discharge of light-ning during experiments and tests relating to the transmission and dis-tribution of electrical energy. The General Electric engineers in these tests have been successful in pro-ducing electrical discharges exceed-ing those of any direct lightning strokes yet recorded.

"My Song For You"

A Gay And Glorious Musical Comedy

Of all the numbers that are sung by Jan Kiepura in his latest screen success "My Song For You" now playing at the Capitol theatre none meets with such applause as his singing of "Ave Maria" which ap-pears to touch a responsive chord in the hearts of all. The circum-stances have as much to do with this as the undying appeal of the famous song.

The girl Jan loves is about to be married to another and in sheer bitterness of spirits or desperation, if you will, Kiepura puts all his heart and soul into the rendition of their wedding song. So effective-ly, in fact, does he sing the number that the girl breaks down and re-fuses to go on with the ceremony. There is another triumph for sly Cupid as the girl realizes that the singer is the man she really loves and that her proposed marriage to another out of pique was a queer vaguary of the divine passion.

"Be Mine Tonight" established Kiepura as the peer of all screen singers, and Canadian audiences have eagerly awaited his return. In "My Song for You" he demon-strates that his is the greatest ten-or voice since Caruso. Combining as he does an admirable personality with his great vocal gifts, there is every reason to anticipate an ever widening popularity for Jan Kie-pura. If you missed seeing him in "Be Mine Tonight" by all means be thrilled by his golden voice in "My Song For You."

"Girl in Danger"

"Girl in Danger" a thrilling de-tective melodrama, featuring Ralph Bellamy in the role of Incpector Trent, with Shirley Grey, Arthur Hohl and Charles Sabin in the sec-ond feature attraction on this same programme.

The film is an exciting delinea-tion of Inspector Trent's amazing adventures tracking down a ring of jewel thieves, particularly in the case of a stolen emerald, in which a thrill-seeking society girl has been innocently implicated.

Pert, blonde-headed Shirley Grey portrays the adventurous so-cial deb who aids the conspirators in the burglary of the famous "Cortez Emerald". Getting herself involved in the affair for a lark, Miss Grey soon finds herself the center of a turbulent series of thrills and adventures, including police cross-examination, a kid-napping, and a narrow escape from death at the hands of a desperate criminal.

The solution of the baffling rob-bery devolves upon Inspector Trent and is his usual deliberate manner he adds wits and wit to the un-ravelling of the mystery.

A clever cartoon "Scrappy's Auto Show", and the Capitol News pre-cede the showing of the feature at-tractions.

Last complete show at 8.50.

AT THE BELLE

"The Gay Divorcee"

Astaire and Rogers Score a Big Hit in "Gay Divorcee"

For sheer novelty, sensational spectacles and peals of laughter, "The Gay Divorcee" which opened a three days engagement at the Belle yesterday, (Wednesday) be-fore large audiences at each per-formance, rates the gratitude of all moviegoers.

Many a day has passed since Hollywood producers have released such a thoroughly hilarious story of romantic complications; and many a year has gone into oblivion since movieland has produced, as this picture does, musical spect-acles so intriguing and interesting. It is a new triumph for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, while the com-edy work of Alice Brady, challeng-ing that of Edward Everett Horton who plays opposite her, is a revel-ation.

This RKO-Radio comedy, a chal-lenge to the immensely popular for-mer Astaire and Rogers vehicle "Flying Down To Rio", has every audience appeal imaginable.

Astaire again proves himself to be a welcome new screen type, a romantic light comedian with boundless charm, nonchalance and whimsicality. Miss Rogers is excel-lent, even amazing, in her dances with Astaire, in which she rivals the grace of this man who danced his way into the hearts of New Yorkers and Londoners.

They introduce a new dance, call-ed "The Continental" that is seem-ingly more provocative than their former success "The Carioca."

Others in the cast include Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore who repeat the same roles they enacted in the stage success from which the film was adapted.

The film's musical numbers are credited to five noted composers. Cole, Porter, who wrote the music and lyrics for the play; Mack Gor-don and Harry Revel and Con Con-rad and Herb Magidson.

Mark Sandrich directed. Dave Gould staged the brilliant ensem-bles featuring fifty girls and fifty boys.

In addition to "The Gay Divorcee" the program is balanced off with a snappy and pleasing comedy en-titled "Done in Oil" with the screens two most popular comedi-ennes' Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly building up the comedy sit-uations throughout.

Evening performances start today and Friday at 7 p.m. and 9.10 p.m.

Story Classic Makes Great Film Featuring Pauline Lord in Debut

One of America's immortal clas-sics, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," has been made into a charming, absorbing and delightful photoplay by Paramount and will open a three days engagement at the Belle Theatre commencing on Saturday.

Adapted from the play by Alice Hegan Rice and Anne Crawford Flexner, the film also incorporates several elements of the book which has delighted millions of readers, young and old, for nearly two gen-erations.

OVER-PETTED SONS ALWAYS HANDICAPPED

They Lack Strong Characters And Are Timid And Fearful

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health And Psychology

It has always been considered ad-mirable to see a son who is most devoted to his mother, and a mo-ther, who, in turn, is completely wrapped up in her son.

There is something beautiful about such a relationship, to be sure. But does it not carry with it grave dangers? Is it not possible for mothers to love their sons too much? And what happens to the son who is the victim of an over-abundance of mother love?

Does he marry early? No; he marries late or not at all. Does such a son often make a great name for himself in the world? No; usually his performances are med-iocre and average.

Do over-petted sons possess strong character? No; They tend to be timid and fearful. Lastly, are they happy? How can they be? How can a man who is tied down by his mother's apron strings possibly be as happy as a normal, virile, he-man who glories in the race and struggle of life, who yearns to make a place and name for himself un-aided and alone, who starts from the very beginning with the ambi-tion to found and maintain a home all his very own?

Mothers who have grown sons living at home with them may take exception to what I say. I do not, however, claim that such mothers are wilfully and deliberately stand-ing in the way of their sons' hap-piness and success.

That such selfish mothers do act-ually exist there can be no question. Often the mother transfers her love to one of her sons, the eldest, per-haps, or perhaps to all of them. For this the husband suffers.

The mother revivifies her youth in the attentions she bestows upon her sons. It all happens at the ex-pense of the father, who, neces-sarily, is forced to take a back seat.

Yes, such situations are some-times created with full intent and knowledge on the part of the moth-er as to what she is doing, and what the results must inevitably be.

But, luckily, it is not the rule. Most mothers do not commit such tragedies consciously and knowing-ly. It is only fair and just to say that their over-idealized love of son is a fact they sense vaguely or not at all.

Nevertheless, so far as the effects on the sons are concerned, the re-sults are identical. A son needs his mother as much as a daughter does. But he does not need her guidance, protection and affection as long.

The world needs upstanding, strong, masculine men. We don't want brutes devoid of tenderness, culture, refinement. These soften-ing, socializing qualities come from the mother, and it is the unquestion-able duty of every mother to see that such traits are inculcated in her son's character make-up.

But, mother, be careful not to overdo it. Don't try to hold your babies too long. Remember the needs of the race. Marriage and procreation are a sociological neces-sity.

You may have regrets and anguish when your sons begin to court the girls, when they no longer look up to you as the ideal they want to live for and fight for. You may even feel jealous. Then is the time you must display the finest and most ennobling mother trait you undoubt-edly possess—self-sacrifice.

Can anything be more wonderful than a mother subserving her own personal feelings and desires for the good of her sons and for the great-est and most advanced upbuilding of the human race?

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Cook ordinary oatmeal from three to four hours—preferably in a dou-ble boiler. Cereals that are "pre-pared", that is, those which already have been cooked previously, usual-ly had best be cooked for an hour longer to be sure the cooking pro-cess really is sufficient.

Glad He Took His Friend's Advice

And Used Dodd's Kidney Pills Which Made Him Well.

Mr. Harbottle Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills To All Sufferers.

Markdale, Ont., Dec. 6 (Special) —"I am writing you a letter which I hope you will publish," writes Mr. James Harbottle, a resident of this place. "I suffered for about three years with my kidneys. A friend told me about Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I decided to give them a trial. I took two boxes and they com-pletely relieved me. I am now in my sixties, and am still farming. No pills can beat Dodd's Kidney Pills for the kidneys. I recommend them to any one suffering with their kidneys and sincerely thank you for showing me the way back to perfect health."

The road to good health lies through the kidneys. If they are kept well and strong, they do their work of straining all the impuri-ties out of the blood stream. If they are weak and out of order the impurities stay in the blood and sickness is the sure result. Dodd's Kidney Pills keep the kidneys in condition to do their full work of cleaning and purifying the blood. Keep a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house at all times.

Trenton School Board Action Dismissed Against Corporation

Town's Defence is Inability to Pay Because of Uncollected Taxes

Trenton, Dec. 6 (Special)— The Trenton Public School Board and the Town council have been in quite a controversy over financial matters while the teachers of the various public schools are still waiting for their November cheque and 65 per cent. of their October salary, which they have not received.

In an interview Mayor Harry Cory gave the Ontario Intelligencer an explanation of the situation. He stated that the town had financed the school board up to 70 per cent. of their estimates but had only collected 64 per cent. of the taxes and were unable to pay the school board any monies until the taxes were collected. The School Board had a fund which had been accruing since 1916 amounting to approximately $11,000, and with permission of the Department of Education the town asked the School Board to borrow from this fund sufficient for maintenance for the balance of the current year, the same to be replaced as the taxes were collected. "This, the School Board refused to do," stated the mayor, "and hence the law suit." The Board applied to the Supreme Court of Ontario through their solicitor, Howard D. Graham, K.C., for mandamus.

When Harry Sager, chairman of the Public School Board was approached on the situation he stated "that the Board had nothing official from the Board of Education concerning the right to borrow from their $11,000 fund. He said that the mayor had given permission to use this money but this was not enough authority for the board.

The case of the Public School Board against the town was heard in Toronto on Tuesday at Osgoode Hall and dismissed by Mr. Justice Kingstone.

Decision Far-Reaching

A decision that may be of far-reaching importance in similar cases was delivered by Mr. Justice Kingstone in dismissing the application of the Public School Board of Trustees of Trenton for a mandatory order compelling the Municipal Corporation of the Town of Trenton to pay $8,769, the balance owing the trustees, according to the estimates.

His Lordship ruled that as the School Board had been unable to show that the town had funds available for school purposes at present, that the order should not go.

The school board had pressed the motion in order that school teachers salaries now in arrears and certain outstanding accounts might be paid. The town fought the motion on the ground that only a percentage of the taxes had been collected and the funds were not on hand.

H. D. Graham, for the board, stated that 65 to 70 per cent. of the estimates for public school purposes had been paid. The town, he said, pleaded non-payment of taxes in refusing to honor requisitions of the board for the balance. He argued that the council would have to prove that the taxes were uncollectable. "We have been unable to pay the balance of teachers' salaries in October, November salaries are due and December salaries will be due in three weeks," Mr. Graham explained.

Mr. Justice Kingstone asked H. J. Smith, for the town, why the money was not paid according to the statute.

"If the town is not getting taxes, how is it going to get the money from the general fund?" queried Mr. Smith.

Asked by His Lordship why the town did not borrow some money, Mr. Smith replied there was no "statutory duty" upon any government to make a loan to the municipality.

Must Show Ability to Pay

"But there is a statutory duty for you to pay the money," His Lordship observed.

Before such an order could be granted, it must be shown the town actually had the funds, according to Mr. Smith.

"Are there no funds at all? Is the town bankrupt?" demanded Justice Kingstone.

"We have no sums to pay this amount—we haven't any such sum" replied Mr. Smith.

"There is no question that not all the taxes have not been paid—but if all the municipalities acted like Trenton, all the school boards would be in the same position as we are," said Mr. Graham. "In our case the schools are being discriminated against.

"There isn't one word in the mayor's or treasurer's affidavit indicating that they can't go to the bank tomorrow and borrow the money."

His Lordship suggested that the matter be adjourned two weeks and the parties endeavour to arrange an amicable settlement.

"The town is anxious to do its level best," said Mr. Smith.

"I don't know whether that's good enough," remarked the court.

Mr. Smith said there was $11,000 in the school board treasury which might be drawn on in the meantime. Mr. Graham argued that the only requirement of a mandatory order in this case was to satisfy the court "that the party complained of has distinctly determined not to do what is demanded."

The council, he argued, could not reduce or moderate the amount authorized in the estimates unless there were items included not for school purposes, he said.

MISS K. MCMAHON DIES AT TACOMA

Wellknown Belleville Native Lived Many Years on Coast

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 6.—(By Mail)—Miss Kathleen McMahon, for many years a member of the faculty at Stadium High School, died Thursday, (November 29), in a local hospital from an attack of pneumonia which developed after an operation.

Miss McMahon was a native of Belleville, Ont., where she was born 55 years ago. She was educated in Germany and France, receiving a degree from the University of Zurich, Switzerland. She came to Tacoma from Canada 30 years ago and taught first at DeKoven Hall, a boys' school maintained at that time at DeKoven, on Steilacoom lake.

Later she went to Stadium high school to teach French and rapidly became recognized as one of the leading high school French teachers in this part of the country. During her association at Stadium she was much beloved by pupils and faculty members with whom she worked, and her pupils practically always received high rating upon matriculation at the University of Washington or other institutions of higher learning.

During the World war Miss McMahon obtained a leave of absence and was in charge of Red Cross recreation huts in Northern France. After the Armistice she did executive work for the organization on the Riviera for a time and then returned to Tacoma to resume her teaching. She retired from her Stadium position five years ago.

Miss McMahon is survived by her uncle, Gen. James M. Ashton; a cousin, Mrs. Esther Ashton Wilson of Colorado, and her two sons, Ashton and Thomas Wilson, who have made their home with her in Tacoma for a number of years. Funeral services for Miss McMahon were held Saturday at 1.30 p.m. at the Buckley-King funeral church, Rev. Arthur Bell presiding; burial was in Tacoma cemetery.

In the Tacoma, (Wash.) News Tribune the following editorial reference to Miss McMahon's life was made:

"Death on the holiday removed Miss Kathleen McMahon, one of Tacoma's best known women. For a number of years she was a teacher at the Stadium High School, but it was for her war work that she was most distinguished. Educated in French school abroad, she spoke the language fluently and served during the war in the Red Cross in Europe. When she retired as a teacher several years ago she kept her contacts with patients at the war hospitals and with the young people of the city. She had a cheery and winning personality and an unusual ability to gain and retain the friendship of the young. She was the niece of General James M. Ashton and will be missed by a wide circle of friends."

Miss McMahon is well known here and friends have kept up correspondence with her for years. Her father was the late Eugene McMahon a well known barrister in Belleville many years ago.

1,200 Children Bring 1,200 Toys

Twelve hundred old toys or books were brought by the children of Belleville to the Capitol Theatre on Tuesday afternoon after four o'clock when they were admitted to a moving picture program, the only admission being a toy or book. The fire department under Chief Lynch, four firemen, two policemen and Plainclothesman Fred Isard lined the twelve hundred children up outside the theatre and marshalled them on their way into the interior. Every available space was taken up and many stood.

Then followed a great time for the children, sixty-five minutes of comedies, such fine films as Silly Symphonies, Mickie Mouse and others, two reel comedies, Rubinoff and his Orchestra and so on.

The large crowd of boys and girls delighted with their entertainment, thought the Capitol Theatre and its manager, Mr. Edwards, the best ever and did not forget the firemen under whose direction the event was staged with the assistance of the theatre.

Twelve barrels of toys were collected and these will be repaired and painted and made ready for the firemen's Christmas gifts to children in Belleville.

FINANCIER ENDS LIFE

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)— Norman D. Perry, President of the Associated Securities Corporation, committed suicide today by shooting himself while standing on the parapet of the Woodbine Bridge. His body tumbled into the ravine 90 feet below.

Some children playing nearby heard two shots and an investigation was started. The bridge is at the north end of Woodbine Avenue.

Indigent Hospital Accounts Up $7000 in County Says Report

Considerable Money Paid on Repair of County Buildings

An increase of $7,000.00 in indigent accounts for the County of Hastings during the past year is revealed in the report of Finance Committee presented to Hastings County Council on Wednesday. Contained in the report is a strong recommendation that these accounts should be discouraged to the fullest extent by all local municipal officers and by medical men. To date, it is shown by the report a total of $20,197.10 has been paid out of these accounts.

The following is the report of the committee presented:

Your committee has met three times since June.

At the meeting in August, your committee thought it in the best interests of the county to add ex-Warden R. M. Mitchell, newly elected Deputy-Reeve of Thurlow township, to your committee to fill the vacancy caused by election of Mr. E. S. Denyes as County Clerk, as a very large percentage of the indigent accounts are from Thurlow.

A special committee of your Finance and Public Property Committee was appointed, who made an inventory of all equipment in the different offices which is on file in the Clerk's office.

Another special committee was authorized to go to Toronto and interview the Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, with regard to purchasing of land occupied by the County buildings in the City of Belleville, who reported that the land could be purchased.

Money for Repairs

Considerable money has been paid out for repairs on County Buildings such as gaol, registry office and Shire Hall roof. The roof on Shire Hall should have been replaced new but at this time your committee did not feel justified to make the expenditure but we believe this is the last repair work that should be done on it. Some walls in the corridors of the Court Building and ceilings in Shire Hall and committee room are in need of repair. The gaol and yards appear to be in a fine state of repair under the efficient gaoler, Mr. French, whom we believe, has the county interest in mind at all times.

We have had a very rapid increase in indigent accounts which should be discouraged to the fullest extent by all of our local municipal officers and doctors, as this very expensive public liability is a very heavy burden on taxpayers. A total of $20,197.10 has been paid up to date; an increase of $7,000 over last year. Considerable disputes arise over who is an indigent and residency of an indigent. The Dominion Air Camp at Trenton has men, who, if taken sick after leaving there, give their residence as Sidney, and yet have never lived there except while in the Air Camp, which may create a heavy expense to county and township and does not seem fair. At the present time we have one account for Lukian Mereszka, for whom the solicitors of Toronto Consumptive Hospital, Messrs Godfrey and Corcoran have threatened to issue a writ against County of Hastings. Up until the present we have been able to postpone this action, but undoubtedly we will be forced to settle for this account sooner or later.

Your committee have also found the services of the legal advisor, Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C., very beneficial to the county and believe he should be retained as such.

Your committee wish to bring to the attention of the members of the County Council, the fact that the County owns a number of lots situated in the township of Sidney. I would suggest that the county take the necessary steps to see that they remain the property of the County.

In looking over the bylaws of the County of Hastings, I note that it is a good many years since there has been a bylaw accorded, engaging and setting the salary of the caretakers and I would suggest that a new bylaw be prepared and presented to the Council at this session and that the County Council in session hire and set the salaries of the caretakers of the County buildings.

Your committee also recommended that grants of all kinds be greatly curtailed in the future.

At this time we wish to compliment Mr. Denyes, Mr. Haggerty, and their staff for their information and co-operation in completing this work and performing their duties in their respective offices.

A list of general and indigent accounts paid by your committee since last sessions amounts to $10,520.60.

All of which is respectfully submitted:

WM. WEST,
Chairman

Obituary

ROBERT T. NEILSON

Word has just been received in Belleville announcing the death of Robert T. Neilson which occurred at his home in Chicago, about two weeks ago. The late Mr. Neilson was born in Belleville, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Neilson who were prominent residents of this city many years ago and resided on John street. The late Miss Sarah Neilson and the late Miss Jessie Neilson were sisters of the late Mr. Neilson. He is survived by his widow.

LATE BENJAMIN C. WEESE

The funeral of the late Benjamin C. Weese who died in Ontario Hospital, Kingston on December 3rd., took place Wednesday, Dec. 5th. to Cataraqui Cemetery, Kingston. Rev. Mr. Smart officiated at the services. Those attending were his widow, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weese, son and daughter-in-law, also his brother, Henry of Malone.

DR. J. G. WISHART

Dr. David James Gibb Wishart, one of the outstanding medical men in Toronto, expert specialist in ear, nose and throat diseases, who had been suffering from pneumonia for the last few weeks, died yesterday at his residence, 76 Collier St., in his 76th year.

The passing of Dr. Wishart closes a medical career extending over nearly half a century and removes an outstanding figure in the profession in Toronto. He was born at Madoc, Ont., September 11, 1859, his father being the late Rev. David B. Wishart, Presbyterian minister in Madoc for many years; educated at Brantford Collegate and the University of Toronto, graduating in arts in 1882. He took his medical course at McGill University, receiving his M.D. in 1885, taking post-graduate work and gaining his L.R.C.P. in London, England, the same year. Later he took the M.D. and C.M. degrees at Trinity University, Toronto, in 1887.

Dr. Wishart practiced in Toronto and held many important positions in connection with various branches of the profession and its recognized societies. He served on the staffs of old Trinity Medical School and of the medical faculty, University of Toronto, and was generally recognized as an expert specialist in ear, nose and throat diseases. He was a former president of the Academy of Medicine and the Ontario Medical Association. He also rendered valuable service at the Toronto General, St. Michael's and Sick Children's Hospital.

He was a member of the York and Toronto Golf Clubs, of St. Andrew's Society of Ionic Lodge, A.F., and A.M., and the medical fraternities. He attended St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King Street West.

Surviving are his wife, Rebecca Maria Gunther Wishart, three daughters, Mrs. Max Bethune, Miss Maria G. and Jean Wishart and Gordon T. Wishart, all of Toronto.

ing the tragedy that nearly claimed his entire family, Sutcliffe described how he felt the urge to run as he walked down the street toward his Beaches district home, while returning from work. He had phoned his home at noon but received no answer and believed the family was out. While the phone rang the unconscious forms of mother and sons lay still on the floor.

When he reached his home no person answered the door and the father became frantic, smashed his way into the residence through a cellar window and climbed to the main floor where he found his wife and sons.

Mr. Sutcliffe, proprietor of "Fir Hirst" in Trenton is a relative and left for Toronto after hearing of the tragedy over the radio.

Trenton, Dec. 6—(Special)—The news of the untimely deaths in Toronto, yesterday that claimed the lives of Buddie and Don Sutcliffe, aged six and seven, who were asphyxiated and their mother, who is only given a slight chance to live, gave the citizens of Trenton a terrible shock today. Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sutcliffe are both Trenton people. Mrs. Sutcliffe is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Nugent, who reside on the Trenton-Belleville Road. Capt. Bruce Sutcliffe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sutcliffe of 'Firhurst', Trenton. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sutcliffe were born here where they went to school. Captain Sutcliffe is an officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the parents in the sudden deaths of their two young sons and they hope and pray for a speedy recovery of Mrs. Sutcliffe.

DINNER TENDERED TO WING COM. BREADNER

The New Commander G. O. Johnson Was One of the Guests

In honour of Wing Commander L. S. Breadner of the Trenton Airport, twenty or more officers and officials of the Airport and friends tendered him a dinner at the Belleville Club on Tuesday evening. Among those present was Wing Commander G. O. Johnson, who is taking Wing Command Breadner's place while he is away in England.

The toast to the guest of honour was proposed by Flight Lieutenant George Heakes, the youngest officer at the Airport and was suitably responded to by Wing Commander Breadner. Several other impromptu speeches were made by other guests. The officers of the airforce attended in full dress.

Rodgers Adrift 9 Days

In 1925, Commander Rodgers and his crew drifted for nine days in a seaplane which forced down en-route here from the mainland. They finally were found northeast of Kaui, norther island near Honolulu, where the search for Ulm was concentrated today.

Ulm flashed and S.O.S. Tuesday morning saying he would land in the ocean, but he was off his course and did not know his position.

Average flying conditions with good visibility and calm seas were forecast today by Lieut. E. W. Stephens, Navy Meteorologist.

Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith Australian trans-Pacific flier who twice has flown between here and the mainland, expressed belief his countrymen probably were in the area north of here.

"We probably will send 12 planes out today," Commander E. W. Tod directing the naval searchers, said "We are wearing out our men pretty rapidly. Some of them spent 1 hours in the air yesterday and almost as much Tuesday."

Surface craft played searchlight across the surging waters throughout the night.

FINDS REAL BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT

On a tour of the western United States, Winthrop W. Aldrich ABOVE, chairman of board of Chase National Bank, and in the volume o erful banking houses in the U.S., declares:

"As I see the business situation it has improvid very definitely and very subtantially since the middle of September. This improvement is manifest both in business and financial sentiment, and in the volume of business activity. The volume of business, holding well through May and June, declined in July and declined further, rather sharply, in late August and the first half of September.

"Since that time there has been an improvement which is substantially better than seasonal and this improvement continues in the latest available business figures.

"We are making the trip to ascertain the feeling and the attitude of the various sections of the country rather than to advise" Aldrich added

Lecturer and Demonstrator Stresses Value of Cheese In the Preparing of Food

"Canadians Not Cheese Eaters" Says Miss Pepper

MANY ADDRESSES

Says Industry in Good Shape Despite Year Just Passed

Picton, Dec. 6 (Special)—"Canadians are not cheese eaters," the Central Ontario Cheesemakers convention were told on Tuesday afternoon by Miss Laura Pepper, lecturer and demonstrator for the Dominion Government. The convention was closed early in order that delegates might prepare for the banquet in the evening at the Parish Hall of St. Mary Magdaline Church. The town of Picton opened their hearts to the delegates and the result has been one of the best conventions in the history of the association.

Miss Pepper in her address stressed the value of milk and cheese but was firm in the opinion that not sufficient of this product was used in our own country. She also stated that it was difficult to purchase a high quality cheese over the counters of the ordinary store in Canada but if cheese was to be used more extensively, the makers would have to produce a better class of cheese for domestic consumption. "There is too much new cheese on our markets," said Miss Pepper. The speaker showed that contrary to general belief, cheese was not hard to digest and it was the finest of food and could be made up in many ways to increase the consumption. In the afternoon, the demonstrator showed the ladies how to make many tasty dishes using cheese as the principal ingredient.

History of Dairy School

Following this speaker L. A. Zufelt, superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kingston was called upon by the chairman, R. V. Illsey of Belleville, for his annual statement. Mr. Zufelt has been connected with the Kingston school since it was established in 1894 but gave intimation that he was retiring in the near future and that it would probably be the last time he would attend in an official capacity. The meeting in general was sorry to hear of his departure but all praised this official for the splendid work that he has accomplished. Mr. Zufelt in speaking to the convention stated he was not going to deal with a controversial question of the industry but that he would confine himself to a history of the school in which he labored for the past 40 years.

The Eastern Dairy School

It has been suggested that it would be interesting to have a short record made of the activities and accomplishments of the Eastern Dairy School, as a great many people have but a meagre idea of just what this institution has meant to the dairy industry of Eastern Ontario.

The School was established in 1894 by Queen's University. A building was erected on the ground of the old collegiate institute which was donated by the City of Kingston to Queen's for this purpose. Arrangements were made by the board of governors of Queen's with the late Dr. Jas. W. Robertson, then Dairy Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada, to provide a staff and take over the operation of the School. The first classes were held in November of 1894, just forty years ago. Two members of Dr. Robertson's staff, Mr. J. A. Ruddick, (now Dr. Ruddick) and Mr. L. A. Zufelt were detailed to take over the task of giving instruction to the students, Dr. Ruddick to act as business manager and give instruction in cheese making, whilst Mr. Zufelt took charge of the Separators, Butter making, and Milk-testing departments. There were also a staff of assistants to help out in the various departments. After the first few weeks of operation Dr Ruddick found his time so fully occupied that he could not do justice to the Cheese department, so Mr. G. G. Publow was engaged to take charge of the manufacturing end of this department. Queen's University also provided two lecturers, Dr. Goodwin on Dairy Chemistry and Dr. W. T. Connell, on Dairy Bacteriology.

For the first few years several courses were given each winter of from two to six weeks duration, beginning in November and ending the later part of March. Of late years, however, only one regular course has been given and the length increased to eleven or twelve weeks starting the first week in January and closing the third week in March. This course was made much more comprehensive and covered the entire field of dairying, stressing, however, the scientific principals governing the manufacture of cheese and butter. Examinations were held at the end of the course and diplomas issued to successful students. The popularity of the School became so pronounced that additions to the original building were necessary every few years to provide suitable accommodation for the students and the expansion of the subjects taught. In 1922 the building was destroyed by fire and was replaced by the present structure.

Taken Over by Department

In 1896 the School was taken over by the Department of Agriculture of the Province of Ontario and Mr. Ruddick became its first Superintendent. In 1898 Mr. Ruddick resigned to accept a position in New Zealand, and was succeeded by Mr. J. W. Hart. In 1903 Mr. Hart was succeeded by Mr. J. W. Mitchell, who held the position till 1908, when Mr. G. G. Publow received the appointment on Mr. Mitchell's retirement. In January 1911 Mr. Publow retired and the present Superintendent, Mr. L. A. Zufelt received the appointment.

During the forty years of the School's activities 4,458 students have attended the various courses and written their names on the register of attendance. What this has meant to the dairy industry it is difficult to estimate. We do know however, that the reputation of Ontario cheese and butter makers is not surpassed by those of any other country on the North American continent and that students of the Eastern Dairy School may always be found at the top of the list of successful manufacturers and leaders of dairy education. In this connection it may be permissible to mention just a few of the outstanding examples of graduates of the Eastern Dairy School, who have later become leaders in their particular field,—

J. F. Singleton, Dairy Commissioner for the Dominion, W. A. Wilson, Animal Products Trade Commissioner, in Great Britain, W. M. Singleton Superintendent of Dairying New Zealand, Prof. H. A. Derby, in charge of the Marketing Branch, Ottawa, besides a host of others all filling responsible and important positions in the dairy industry.

Contributes to Science

The Eastern Dairy School has also contributed much to the advancement of the scientific knowledge of the various processes and agencies governing the manufacture of cheese and butter. During all these years the School has constantly been seeking after knowledge and by careful research and experimentation has been able to sift the chaff from the wheat and reliable information passed on to the industry. The Eastern Dairy School was the first institution to perfect and adopt the present alkali test in the manufacture of cheese and butter. It was also in the forefront in working out a successful method of pasteurizing sour cream by first neutralizing a portion of the acid. Moisture and salt control without injury to the texture of the butter was also another of its achievements. An exhaustive study of the characteristics and physical properties of butter fat was also made so that the butter maker could work more intelligently.

In the field of cheese making advancement was perhaps even more pronounced. The use of the Alkali test opened up a wide field for research. The function of rennet, that agency without which it becomes impossible to produce our present typ eof cheese, was thoroughly studied and its action noted. At last the mysterious became intelligible. We learned that lactic acid and moisture played important parts in the action of rennet and that this action, or function of rennet could be controlled by controlling moisture and acid. In effect the cheese maker and butter maker were given the necessary scientific knowledge which enabled them to determine just what affect each of the various processes and agencies used would have on the finished product. By working more intelligently and knowing what effect each action would have, it was comparitively easy to bring about improvement in the finished product. For this reason the quality of our cheese has constantly been advancing, until now we stand well to the fore as the producers of the finest cheddar cheese in the world. A simple appartus for testing the moisture content of cheese was designed as well as a quick and accurate test for casein in milk.

Always Try New Theories

Owing to the fact that cheese and butter are being manufactured at the School during the entire year exceptional facilities are provided for trying out and proving new theories and methods before being passed on to the makers. For this reason information obtained from the School has always been reliable and dependable. The School also sends out each year hundreds of pure lactic acid cultures, the use of which has now become universal and part of the every day process for making cheese.

One might go on indefinitely relating the activities of the School to the point of boredom. The achievements of the School is but the history of dairying of Eastern Ontario. It has become part and parcel of this great industry and the hub about which all dairy activities revolve.

Dairy Commissioner Speaks

J. F. Singleton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner at Ottawa, in opening his brief remarks stated that he believed that conventions were top heavy with addresses. "There should be more time given over to discussion of the various problems brought before the meeting," said Mr. Singleton. He spoke of the recent meeting of the National Dairy Council in Toronto, where only one address was given by Hon. Robert Weir but there were many brilliant ideas evolved from the meeting and the members left with a different idea of the whole dairy industry. The speaker was of the opinion that the industry was not decreasing although the cheese industry had not had as good a year as formerly. He showed that the cheese production was down 13 million pounds in the first ten months of the year but there was a 13 million pound increase in the production of butter with a pound of butter equalling two pounds of cheese. Figures were quoted to show that 729,000 pounds of cheese have been imported into Canada in ten months but this was special varieties of cheese. Over 15 million pounds of cheese had been exported in the month of October or more than one-third that was exported during the first ten months of the year. He showed that cheese prices were only down one-quarter to one-third of a cent a pound while butter was up five-eights but English exporters he showed paid closer to the English value this year than last. Speaking directly of the butter industry, Mr. Singleton explained the condition of the butter market being caused by everyone taking a flyer in butter on the market. "We have been going through an evolution," said tthe speaker, "and the increased consumption of dairy products has been caused by a domestic market coming into being. Milk has been diverted into other channels other than cheese production the speaker was sure for in 1900 36 million pounds of milk was produced and in 1934 236 million pounds, and our exports have increased 88 per cent. in the past ten years.

Experts Praise Quality

Mr. Singleton told of his trip to the Old Country this year and received an expression of opinion from the big exporters, who admitted that the quality of Canadian cheese could not be denied but that the price had to be brought down to that of New Zealand and Australian cheese. This the speaker thought impossible and not likely to occur as the Canadian cheese went into a better class of homes, than the Australian or New Zealand cheese but this higher class of trade had nearly reached the saturation point. The exporters would like us in Canada to consign the cheese but I do not think that the Canadian producer will ever stand for that method. Mr. Singleton explained how the Canadian cheese drew a premium in the English market showing that sale was only made of one to five boxes at a time. "If our old cheese was put out in 200 box lots the market would be broken in short order," said the speaker. The speaker was sure that we in this country had too much of an inferiority complex about the cheese business and showed that in 1907 the conditions were nearly as bad as they are today but things righted themselves and it will in this case.

Gift of Club Bag

At this point in the program the Prince Edward cheesemakers were called to the front of the convention hall with W. I. Hicks, the dairy instructor for the county and after an address by one of the members, Mr. Hicks was presented with a beautiful club bag. Although taken by surprise, Mr. Hicks expressed his pleasure for the fine gift and told the gathering he was proud of the record of the makers under his charge.

Mr. J. L. Joss, who was scheduled to speak at the convention sent a telegram, which was read, expressing his inability to be present due to urgent business with the Co-Operative Association with which he is connected but hoped that the convention would be a successful one.

The closing address of the afternoon was delivered by A. L. Fraser, secretary of the National Dairy Council, who gave some pertinent facts to the convention.

The privilege of addressing a group of men engaged in the production and marketing of Cheese is much appreciated. I had not enjoyed that privilege previous to the week before last, when I was invited to address the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association.

I am told, that there has been a measure of hostility towards the Council on the part of the Cheese industry and that there have been specific reasons for this. What these reasons are I do not know, and I do not think, that any good purpose is served by harking back to these old disagreements. These are times in which we must face present and future conditions. We need all our energy and the best of goodwill for that purpose.

I have been connected with the industry for only a year and a half, and I think it but fair to say, that in delving into the past and looking at the work the Council has done, including publicity I cannot find any period in which cheese has not had its proper place in all our publicity work, and in which it has not received as much help as the Council was able to give it, when movements appeared which had for their object, or which might develop into conditions detrimental to the cheese interests.

Works With Remuneration

The Secretary of the Council has acted as Secretary of the National Cheese Week, and that without remuneration. In this connection, I would like to express my personal appreciation of the very excellent help given to me by Mr. J. L. Irwin and by the Belleville Cheese Board. Had we received such assistance generally, the Week would have been a greater success than it was. As it is I am pleased to be able to tell you that it was a splendid success, and I hope in time to be more specific in this statement.

It is difficult for me to determine just what to speak to you about, but having been asked to address you, I think the best thing I can do is to give you some impressions in regard to cheese which I have formed in the year and a half in which I have been connected with the dairy industry.

As a background to these impressions I would like to remind you that the National Dairy Council is, after all, what I term the "Service Organization" of the industry and the co-ordinating body, and as such our contacts with Government departments are frequent and in fact almost constant. We could not function, usefully at least, without these contacts and the numerous courtesies extended to us by Government officials. I would like to express my personal appreciation of this and to tell you that I consider the dairy industry is exceedingly well served by the officers of the Government in charge of the destiny of our industry.

Following upon the observations which I have made regarding our own Government department I would like to make some comparisons between what has been done by the cheese and butter industry in Canada with the experience of New Zealand.

I am not dealing with any other country than New Zealand, but I believe, that if I had the figures for Australia, as I have for New Zealand the story would be very similar.

Explains Working of Board

I have before me as I dictate this address the Tenth Annual Report of the New Zealand Dairy Produce Control Board. As I understand this Board it was promulgated by the industry in New Zealand with the blessing and aid of the Government and for the purpose of stimulating and, may I say, intensifying production of dairy products in that country so as to obtain a larger place therefore in the markets of the world. "The world" in this case means Great Britain, because of the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of exporting dairy products to any other country in the world.

I am not going to weary you with a lot of figures, but this report of the New Zealahd Dairy Board is, as I have stated, the tenth annual report, and deals with their operations up to and including July 31st 1934. It shows that for the ten years ending on that date, their cheese production has been increased by approximately 51 million pounds, or about 28 per cent. and that the gross amount which they received for their 1934 production (including the increase) was approximately $7,500,000 less than in 1925, or a decline of about 24 per cent. I can make comparisons of prices with 1930 only—as I am without early data—but since 1930, since when the great increase has occurred, cheese on the London market has declined from nearly 80 shillings to between 42 and 52 shillings in 1934. It is my submission that this stimulated production, constituting a glut on the market, is responsible for this decline and has contributed to the demoralization of the dairy industry throughout the world.

While increasing the production of cheese in New Zealand, butter has been hugely increased, with the result, that in the past ten years, production of these two commodities (combined) has increased from 279 million pounds to 470 million pounds an increase of 200 million pounds, or about 71 per cent. The total value received for 1934 production was again approximately $7,500,000 less than in 1924. (I am dealing in round figures only.)

Had our Canadian industry been stampeded into a similar programme our butter and cheese business would, I am afraid, be in such a deplorable condition today, that few of us would want to continue in it.

Our own production has declined and prices have declined, but again I submit that we have the answer in the foregoing.

Cost is Exorbitant

I would like to say one more thing about this New Zealand Board. The cost for the ten years and six months of operation has been £513,203. 14. 10, or approximately $2,500,000, all covered by levies on cheese and butter and the cost during 1934 was £81,037. 14. 10, or approximately $400,000. A considerable portion of this has been very effectively spent in advertising New Zealand dairy products in the British Empire but even allowing for this, the levies are very important.

Another interesting comparison: the New Zealand Board is said to have accomplished great things in bringing about reductions in freight rates, but we find that in 1934, while they had obtained in the past ten years a decrease of 20.18 per cent. in freight rates on butter, we in Canada had obtained a reduction of 21.43 per cent. and while they had obtained a reduction of 21.5 per cent. on cheese, we in Canada had obtained a reduction of 25 per cent.

Without any desire to do more than deal with facts, I submit that the Canadian policy has been a saner one for us than had we followed New Zealand's, and that we should deliberate and investigate very carefully before launching anything similar at this time or in the future. True, they have secured for themselves, and quite largely at our expense, a very large share of the British market but at what a cost to them! And what a cost to the industry throughout the world!

They may be able to continue at this rate, but I doubt it, and I would be inclined to think that if they do continue, it will be at the cost of reducing their producers to a condition approaching penury.

In this connection I am impressed by the public utterances of one member of the parliament of Australia, in which he refers to the dairy industry of that country as being in a "calamitous condition". With all our troubles we can hardly say this of our conditions in Canada.

Tells of Meeting

On the 20th, 21st and 22nd of November, the National Dairy Council held its annual meeting in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. The meeting was called at this date instead of in March in the hope that out of this meeting would be developed some plan for dealing with the exportable surplus of the dairy production. The surplus of butter was a pressing matter and we hoped that a plan could be agreed upon which could be taken back by our delegates or the secretary of the council to the various provincial dairy conventions that are being held throughout Canada in the months of January and February and either endorsed or modifeid and that by that method we could say that we have canvassed the entire dairy industry across Canada, and obtained a uannimous expression of opinion. While our gathering was called to deal largely with the exportable surplus of butter, it developed into a discussion of the cheese industry. There were cheese men there by invitation, and I am sorry that they were not there in an official capacity, and these men will, I am sure, agree with me when I say it was rather splendid to find the producers and the creamery men expressing very general concern regarding the plight of the cheese industry. We had no papers or speeches, except from the Hon. Robert Weir, who pointed out that consideration must be given to the cheese industry in any scheme presented. Various plans were discussed. I myself had one which was based on the assumption that levies could not be applied to the fluid milk production or to the cream production in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. But much to my surprise the producers for fluid milk brought in a resolution calling upon the council to set in motion a plan for levies. That work will be gone on with and again as I have pointed out, the plan will be taken to the various dairy conventions for approval.

No Levy Scheme

Previous to the annual meeting I had tried to figure out the possibility of levies receiving the favorable consideration of the producer, and quite frankly I had assumed that such a plan would not be considered, and you must remember that the producer is the man who will decide this, at least this is my own view. I do not think the Minister of Agriculture or the Marketing Board can accept or will accept any levy scheme which has not been voted upon favorably by the representative number of producers.

Now what is the situation in regard to the milk production in Canada? We find that in 1933 this production was, in round figures, 16 billion pounds of milk, and that the distribution is substantially under four major headings—milk for fluid consumption, or used on the farm, 43 per cent.; creamery butter, 31.925 per cent.; dairy butter, 15.556 per cent.; and factory cheese, 7.761 per cent. I have asked myself if a vote of the milk producers were taken, (and the system, as I have stated, can be instituted only by producer vote), would the 43 per cent. of the more or less sheltered producers for fluid markets vote for it? Would the farmers of Ontario and Quebec, who are producing nearly two-thirds of our creamery butter in Canada vote for it?

I had made up my own mind that they would not vote for it, and I had made up my mind that no legislative body would act without such a vote. I had assumed that the fluid milk producer would say that he had built up his market over a long period of years with superior herds and equipment, and that he is entitled to the full compensation of the market. I feel that the dairy butter producer simply could not be reached, and I felt that the producer for the making of creamery butter in Ontario and Quebec would say, "Why should we?"

Supply Answer in Discussion

I had assumed that the west would be agreeable as an increased make of cheese in the east might make a better market in that territory for the surplus production of the butter of the west. However, the officers of the eastern Milk Producers' Association state that they think it fair, and they recognize that their own price structure is very artificial without giving consideration to cheese. The west, contrary to my view, may be the most difficult element to deal with, as the producer there may find it hard to understand why, when he is receiving 13c or 14c per pound butter fat, he should be called upon to pay a levy for the assistance of his brother in the east who is getting from the cheese factory upwards of 20c. There is an answer to this and we will have to supply that answer in discussions this winter.

It is not going to be an easy task, but I wish to give you my assurance that efforts will be made, and I wish also to say that the producer for the fluid milk market will have to come into the picture or it will not work out.

Your situation is not bright, but I cannot but think that there is a way out. I think, and hope you will not mind my saying so, that there is room for better government of your industry, particularly in Ontario. I think that you should be organized into a single unit, so that you can speak with a single voice in your own interests, and in the interests of the industry as a whole. I believe that such will result in increasing the per capita consumption in Canada. We have just had an example in Cheese Week, which has just been conducted. There is room for this, and you will agree with me when I remind you that the British people eat double the cheese we eat in Canada, and the Swiss eat five times as much. This leaves us with ample margin on which to work.

I would like to have a little "poke" at your own quality, which goes to the Canadian consumer. From past experience I would say there is not much consumer appeal in what is sold in the stores. Although a cheese-eater all my life, I did not know what good cheese was until I was introduced to it last winter by Mr. J. F. Singleton and Mr. Joseph Burgess.

A central organization could, I am sure, improve your relations with the creamery interests and other branches of our industry.

I have had something to do recently with helping some of the creamery men to prepare a code of ethics to improve relations with other branches of the industry, and I fancy this points directly to the cheese industry.

Now I have not come here to sell the National Dairy Council to you. I am here to get acquainted with you, and to hear your problems, so that you will feel more free to use our organization, and that we can serve you with better intelligence.

I would, however, suggest to you that we can serve you as a central organization much cheaper, and quite as effectively as you can serve yourselves with a separate organization. I think we can do it at half the cost, and providing you are paying nothing. I do not think we have had one cent from the cheese industry for six years, and I have made a calculation of $1,060 as a proportionate share for each year.

We are going on serving you unless you tell us not to, and whether you develop any plan of direct co-operation with us or not, I hope that you will regard us in a friendly way, and use us where you can.

WARNS BLOW AT LITTLE ENTENTE MEANS WAR

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Redwater, Alta., Dec. 7 (CP) — Gophers have re-appeared with arrival of springlike weather. Mild weather has brought several of these hibernating animals to the surface for a jaunt about the fields. Peter Danelovich, who saw one, doubted the identification, and chasing one to its den, awaited its re-appearance and verified the species. Section men have also reported sighting several.

. . . .

Hutchinson, Kas., Dec. 7 (CP) —The School Board is financially embarrassed and is going to be compelled to plead with the bankers—to accept money, not to loan it.

It seems that when the December tax distribution is made, the Board will have $172,000 more than may be deposited legally in the banks unless the banks post more security.

. . . .

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (CP)—A homing pigeon, back in the loft of Tony Horak, has established some sort of a record for endurance.

Two years and two months after it left Little Rock, Ark., for St. Louis in a 300-mile cup race — ordinarily an eight-hour flight— the pigeon landed here. Twenty-four others in the race, which began in a severe electrical storm, have never been sighted.

. . . .

St. Paul, Dec. 7 (CP)—The physical training of a boxer will be part of the routine for his deputies when Thomas J. (Tommy) Gibbons, of St. Paul, former heavyweight fighter, takes office January 7 as Ramsey County sheriff.

Three hours a week of physical education will be only one of many new ideas introduced by the man who once fought Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight crown.

Gibbons said today he will build [illegible] of young, physically fit men, and have a [illegible] of men "who have had a lot of police experience."

He said a major aim will be to "discourage young boys and girls from patronizing 'joints' in the country."

. . . .

Kiel, Germany, Dec. 7 (CP)— A young storm troop member greeted his employer one day in the orthodox fashion, saying "Heil Hitler."

He received the reply, "I am not Herr Hitler. I am Herr Schroeder. Greet me with a good morning."

The youth related the episode and an angry crowd gathered about the Schroeder establishment. Schroeder was taken into protective custody yesterday.

. . . .

Falls City, Neb, Dec. 7 (CP)— Marcelli Zorn, 12, of Falls City, has learned when not to laugh.

She was laughing at antics of her baby sister yesterday until the baby threw a stove bolt into her mouth. It slipped down into her right lung. Surgeons made an incision in her windpipe and extracted the bolt.

The physicians said she would recover.

. . . .

Perugia, Italy, Dec. 7 (CP-Havas) —Fossilized remains of a giant hippopotamus that lived 1,000,000 years ago were found today by a farm worker ploughing near this city. Turned over to the local scientific institute, the pieces of bone were declared to be parts of an animal that roamed the wastes of Southwestern Europe before the first appearance of man.

. . . .

Titusville, Pa., Dec. 7 (CP) — It's no use trying to scare a bear all by yourself. Ask Sam Reynolds.

Sam stood on a log looking for deer. A bear dashed out of the bush and on toward Sam.

"I yelled and waved my arms and screeched, but he came right on," was Reynold's story.

The yells brought three companions, however, and the reinforcement seems to make bruin change his mind. He ambled peacefully back into the bush.

WOMAN LAY ILL 30 HOURS ON FLOOR

Kitchener, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP)— Miss Mary Miller, 69 year old Baden spinster, is in a serious condition at her home there after lying unconscious on the floor of her home for over 30 hours following a heart attack.

She was overcome Wednesday morning and the discovery was not made until Thursday afternoon when she was found in night attire in the unheated house.

Miss Miller lived alone. Her condition is reported considerably improved today.

ALLOWANCE MADE FOR SHRINKAGE MANAGER SWEARS

Evidence is Given That Public Has Been Protected

DEDUCTIONS IN 1933

Numa Landry on Stand Before Mass Buying Probe

Ottawa, Dec. 7 (CP)— Managers for Thrift Stores, Limited of Montreal receive adequate allowances from headoffice for shrinkage, wastage and damaged goods, enabling them to balance their stock without cheating the public, the Parliamentary Mass Buying Commission was told today by Numa Landry, a manager and former superintendent.

Landry was attempting to combat evidence given some days ago by R. A. Sair, a dismissed manager, who claimed he was forced to give short-weight, over-charge his customers and adulterate goods to balance his stock because of inadequate allowances. Landry said as Sair's supervisor, he never refused him a credit and showed that Sair received allowances of $174, representing eight percent in sales, in November, 1933.

Salaries

Thrift Stores paid salaries and commissions to their managers deducting stock shortages. In 1933 deductions totalled $18,000 or 75 percent of all commissions.

Landry said he could not explain the extent of stock shortages, insisting any manager could secure credits to cover necessary allowances.

"How can you account for that," asked Sam Factor, Lib., Toronto West, Centre, referring to the extent of the stock shortages as reflected in commission deductions.

Landry said he could only blame bad management and "outside of that I cannot tell you."

If goods were delivered to the stores at full weight and the exact selling price, Norman Somerville, Commissioner counsel asked, "how in the world can there be an overage in the stock."

An overage, Landry replied generally resulted from an error in stock-taking.

Overages

"Would there be scores of overages in your district (of 18 stores) in a year," Somerville asked.

"I could not say how many, there were a few."

Hector Le Blanc, manager for Thrift Stores at 3558 Park Avenue also was a witness. He said he resented Sair's evidence that all Thrift Store managers were thieves.

W. A. Merrill of Montreal, counsel for Thrift Stores read into the record a telegram from Roy Raney, Fredericton, N.B., as a forcer Thrift Store employe. Raney offered to be a witness on their behalf. His telegram read:

"Sair's statement could only be made by a person with disordered mind—I was employed by Thrift Stores seven years and their instruction and treatment of employes were of the best."

DEATH OF CATTLE STARTS LAWSUIT

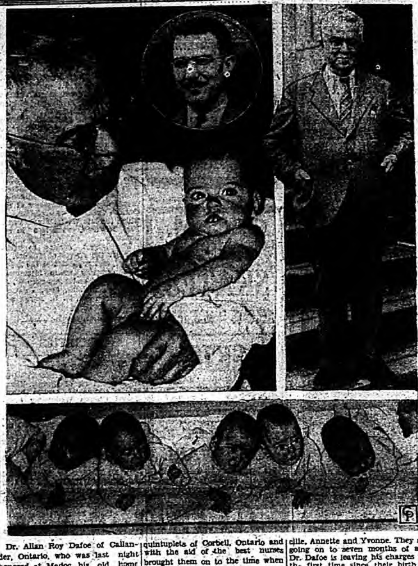
17 Animals Alleged to Have Bled to Death After Dehorning

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 7.—(CP)— An unusual and interesting case involving the death of seventeen cattle, which allegedly bled to death as the result of dehorning operations is slated for trial before His Honor Judge A. D. Hardy, at the sittings of Brant County Court opening here on Dec. 11.

The case is one in which Wylie Guthrie is suing Herbert Hyndman for $475 for the loss of the cattle. The plaintiff claims that he engaged the defendant, whom he was led to believe was fully qualified to dehorn the cattle and as a result of his lack of skill the cattle bled to death.

The defendant on the other hand, says he undertook the task as a friendly, neighborly act, and that he merely assisted at the dehorning. The case is listed for jury trial.

Dr. Dafoe and the Dionne Quintuplets



Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe of Callander, Ontario, who was last night honored at Madoc, his old home town, is here shown. Dr. Dafoe has been recommended for the Nobel prize in medicine and it is rumored that his name may be included in the King's New Year's honor list. Dr. Dafoe won fame as the physician who attended the Dionne quintuplets of Corbell, Ontario and with the aid of the best nurses brought them on to the time when their expectancy of life is as good as or perhaps better than that of the average child. With the doctor's picture appear those of the five sisters, a healthy lot. The doctor is shown holding Marie. Below, from left to right are Marie, Emilie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne. They are going on to seven months of age. Dr. Dafoe is leaving his charges for the first time since their birth to deliver a series of lectures in New York. During his absence, Dr. G. P. Hamblin (inset) will be in attendance. Dr. Dafoe is also seen at right as he prepared to leave for New York.—(Photo Copyright by Central Press Canadia.)

Population Turns Out En Masse to Shake Hand of Old Friend

TRIBUTES ARE PAID

Madoc, December 7 (Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)— Back in his old home place on a brief visit, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe of the northland, famed throughout the medical and newspaper worlds for his services in connection with the birth of the quintuplet Dionne sisters, felt himself much a boy again as Thursday night he mixed with hundreds of old friends of the village and countryside, who had known him and his father before him. It was a typical homecoming of a man who had earned his spurs as a physician and doctor, but it was Roy Dafoe whom the villagers and the folk of the countryside met last night.

It was a great big "family affair." Indeed the whole day had been one. First at Lakefield, and then at Tweed among relatives and friends and at last in the very place he was born, Dr. Dafoe who was accompanied by two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Marcellus, and Mrs. Hunter Henry, was at home. The whole community was that great family.

At six thirty last evening about fifty members of the Madoc Community Club and their wives met at Blue's Hotel to attend the banquet being tenderd Dr. A. Roy Dafoe. Mr. John Rutherford, president of the club and manager of the Madoc branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, was the toastmaster. Following a delicious dinner, Mr Rutherford called the meeting to order and with a few words paid homage to the distinguished guest and welcomed Dr. Dafoe and his sisters Mrs. J. E. Marcellus and Mrs.

MERCURY POISONING IS CAUSE OF DEATH

Child Scalded When Tin of Hot Water Spills Over Legs

Ottawa, Dec. 7 (CP)—Little Gilbert W. Scharf, two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Scharf, of Ottawa, died from mercury poisoning, the result of an error of judgment on the part of a local druggist and the child's parents in providing their own medical treatment, a coroner's jury declared here.

The child was scalded when a tin of hot water was accidentally spilled over his legs by a sister as they were "playing house." He died last Saturday, Dec. 1.

Use of a "charm" to treat the scalds was revealed by Mrs. Sarah Scharf, grandmother of the baby, who said that an ointment containing certain ingredients the nature of which she would not reveal, was her method of treatment. In addition to these ingredients the healing ointment contained red lead, chalk and lard.

Pearce, acting counsel for the Canadian Government seeking the extradition of Captain Freeman Hatfield on a charge of defrauding the Government of $71,276, has attached a $10,000 savings account of Hatfield's in the Howard Savings Bank at Newark, N.J., and sealed a safety deposit box there.

SLIGHT HOPE OF FINDING AIRMEN

Roaring Wind Near Honolulu Blows Out The Faintest Hope

Honolulu, Dec. 7—(CP)—A roaring wind blew out all but the faintest hope today that three Australian aviators who were forced down on the ocean in a California-Honolulu flight still lived.

Rain rough weather and low visibility conspired with the wind to leave the possibility a Japanese fishing boat had picked up Flight Lieutenant Charles T. P. Ulm and his two companions virtually the only hope, that they were alive. In the face of these conditions it was considered next to impossible for Lieut. Ulm, Co-Pilot George Littlejohn and Navigator L. J. Skilling to hold out even if they had survived until today.

A southwest storm blew up with such force last night that it drove Lieut. Herbert Riley of the navy 30 miles off his course and made him two and a half hours behind schedule, in returning from a fruitless search by plane for the aviators.

Nevertheless United States Naval, Army and Coastguard officials gave no indication they were ready to give up the quest for the airmen.

Reward Offered

Sydney Australia, Dec. 7.—(AP) —The Australian Government requested Governor Joseph B. Poindexter of Hawaii today to charter thirty Japanese sampans in its behalf to join the search for Lieut. Charles T. P. Ulm and his two campanions.

The Government also offered a reward of £1250 (approximately $5,962) for finding the aviators, missing since his trans-Pacific aeroplane, the Star of Australia was forced down in the ocean off the Hawaiian Islands two days ago.

U.S.. MUNITIONS PROBE

American Company Explains all Dependent on War Dept. Approval

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—A post-war agreement between the Du Pont Powder Company and Nobel, Ltd., British Munitions Company, to exchange all patents, including military secrets, was disclosed today to the United States Senate Munitions Committee.

Officials of the American Company quickly explained that the agreement to give military patents to the British was dependent upon War Department approval.

Under questioning by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) Du Pont officials testified Nobel was granted a non-exclusive license to a valuable military powder improvement in 1923.

Hugh Cherrie of Walkerville Working Above Tank Greasing Cables

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP)—Hugh Cherrie, 40, of Walkerville, drowned this morning when he fell into a tank of water at the main plant of the Chrysler Corporation, in East Windsor. It is believed he had been in the tank about an hour before his body was brought out. Members of the Windsor fire department rescue squad labored over the body nearly two hours in an attempt to restore life.

Cherrie had been working above the tank, greasing some cables when he fell in.

CHEESE BUYER OF LEEDS, DIES

John B. Wilson Connected With Industry For Many Years

Brockville, Ont., Dec. 7—(CP)— John B. Wilson, leading figure in the Leeds county dairy trade for many years, died last night at his home at Wilstead, near Gananoque, aged 78.

A native of that vicinity he was widely known as a cheese buyer and at one time represented a combination of more than 30 factories scattered all over Ontario and registered on the Brockville Cheese Board.

Recently he had been buyer for James Alexander, Montreal. He was at one time Patrons of Industry candidate for election to the Ontario Legislature in South Leeds.

Besides his widow, a son, Harold Wilson, Montreal, and a daughter, Miss Mae Wilson, at home, survive.

W. J. Wilson, ex-Mayor of Gananoque is a nephew.

Reil Rebellion Comrades of 90th Rifles Meet

London, Dec. 7.—Four men who fought as privates in western Canada's Riel Rebellion of 1885 encountered one another at a luncheon today. They were A. N. Mouat of Vancouver; Sir Eustace Fiennes of Windesham, Surrey; Major Harry Mullins of Paddington and John G. Brown of Renfrewshire, all over 70 years of age.

"I am on a general holiday," Mouat told The Canadian Press, "and I traced my old comrades of the 90th Winnipeg Rifles, Fiennes and Mullins. I knew dear old John Brown was in Glasgow so I invited him to come and join us after near fifty years."

Each of the quartette displayed the "little black devil" badge of the 90th Winnipegs.

General Conspiracy Seen Against War-Born States Benes Informs League

DANGERS ON BORDER

Tense Situation Develops on Hungarian Border

Geneva, Dec. 7.—(AP)— Eduard Benes, Czechoslovakian Foreign Minister, warned the League of Nations Council today that if anyone strikes a blow at the unity of the Little Entente —Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania— war will result.

Dr Benes declared that under a treaty between Soviet Russia and the little entente, that country would become an aggressor which should give support to armed bands or which should refrain from depriving such bands of protection.

By Joseph E. Sharkey, copyright 1934, by the Associated Press.

Startling Charge

Geneva, Dec. 7.—A general conspiracy against the territorial integrity of the new states born of the Great War was charged before the League of Nations Council today, by Eduard Benes, Foreign Minister of Czechoslovakia. Benes' startling allegation came during heated discussion of Yugoslav charges that the assassination of King Alexander at Marseille October 9th was plotted in Hungary.

To this Hungary, through her representative Tibor Eckhardt, countered with the assertion that Croats meeting in the United States passed the death sentence on Alexander.

A sensation was created by Benes' speech, in the course of which he declared "attempts similar to the Marseille crime were organized against Slovakia on the Northern Hungarian frontier"

Criticising Hungarian authorities for giving asylum to alleged terrorists, Benes said the forces which permit organization of gangs of terrorists seeks to detach Croatia from Yugoslavia and Slovakia from Czechoslovakia.

"They seek to strike a blow at the historial development of Danubian Europe," he asserted.

Terrorists

Just before Benes spoke Tewfik Bey, Turkish delegate, had proposed an agreement concerning terrorists to reduce the possibilities of assassinations, and Benes told the League Council.

"If such a treaty existed today between the Little Entente and Hungary, the terrorists acts of which Yugoslavia was a victim would make Hungary an aggressor and the Little Entente would have the right to defend themselves by their armed forces.

(CP and AP Cable)

Yugoslavia today formally denounced Hungary before the League of Nations as guilty of complicity in the murder of Yugoslavia's King Alexander at Marseille. The Hungarian-Yugoslav border situation continued tense as thousands of former Hungarians were expelled from Yugoslavia, but Yugoslav troops alleged to have violated the frontier were said to have withdrawn.

Geneva: Foreign Minister Bogolyub Yevtich of Yugoslavia asserted the Marseille assassinations and other outrages in Yugoslavia were plotted on Hungarian soil with the tacid connivance of Hungarian authorities, and asked measures to prevent such "menaces to peace."

Feeling in Hungary

Szeged, Hungary: The city was anxious as summarily-expelled refuges continued to arrive from Yugoslavia. Yugoslav troops who crossed the border three miles distant retired but remained near the frontier.

Budapest: The Hungarian cabinet met in special session with the country indignant over the Yugoslav expulsions.

Maribou, Yugoslavia: Travellers asserted Hungarian citizens along the border were being armed in fear of invasion.

Belgrade: Yugoslav officials denied any frontier violation, asserted Yugoslavia was content to leave the affair to the league.

Rome: Italy, sponsor of Hungary, was gravely concerned and believed Yugoslavia was attempting to force the issue, fearing the League would decline to blame Hungary for the Marseille murders.

Alleged Meeting in U. S.

(Copyright, 1934 by the Associated Press

Geneva, Dec. 7—Tibor Sckhardt, Hungary's delegate to the League of Nations, charged today that Croats meeting in the United States had pronounced a death sentence against the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia, who was assassinaed two months ago in Marseille.

He included this charge in his defence before the League of Nations Council against Yugoslav charges that Alexander's death was plotted in Hungary.

His statements were in reply to direct accusations levelled against Hungary or Bogolyub Yevtich, Yugoslavia's Foreign Minister, who denounced the Hungarian government.

LINER LAUNCHED 'ACROSS WORLD'

Prince in Australia Gives Signal to English Shipyard

Barrow-in-Furness, England, Dec. 7 (C.P. Cable)—On a signal from the other side of the world the new 20,000 ton liner Orion of the Orient Line was launched from Vickers-Armstrong's yards here today.

The liner is for the Australian service and the ship started down the ways after the Duke of Gloucester, His Majesty's third son, pulled a switch at a ceremony in the city hall at Brisbane, Queensland, where he was attending an ex-servicemen's concert.

The Duke also made a speech which was broadcast here.

Sir Alan Anderson, chairman of the Orient Line, who was also in Australia, spoke following the Duke. In turn the listeners on the other side of the world heard broadcast details of the actual launching.

GUNNERS' CLUB HEAR COL. RIERDON

Speaks on Early History of Artillery in Belleville

Over sixty veterans who served in the Canadian Artillery met at a regular meeting of the local Gunners' Club held in the Veteran Memorial building recently to hear a comrade and officer, Col. Rierdon speak. Ex-artillerymen from all parts of the immediate district attended the second meeting of this new organization, recently inaugurated in Belleville. The Gunners' Club is open to all ex-overseas artillerymen with no membership fee attached for initiation.

Col. Rierdon spoke to the gathering on the subjects of "The Early History of Artillery in Belleville; The Need of Artillery Organization, and Pensions As Applied to Returned Men." His remarks were quite to the point and covered each phase in a capable manner. President Fred Wiggins, of the Gunners' Club, occupied the chair and presented an enjoyable programme of solos, readings and community singing. Following the remarks of the evening's speaker, refreshments were served.

It was the unanimous voice of the gathering, that regular meetings of the club were now in order with the next meeting being slated for Friday, December 28th in the Memorial Hall. At present a register is being kept by the secretary in order that a list of the names of all ex-artillerymen may be compiled. Every ex-overseas man, who served in the Canadian Artillery during the late war is requested to attend or submit his name for reference.

The marriage took place at Danbury, Conn., during Reichert's tour through the state.

REDNERSVILLE WOMEN'S GUILD HOLDS MEETING

The Woman's Guild of Rednersville met last Wednesday for an all day's quilting party at "Fair Haven Cottage" with a full number of members and friends, the work, went quickly and merrily along.

A picnic dinner was served in the enclosed sun porch with Mrs. Frank and Mrs. Harry Dempsey assisting the hostess. An unusual feature of the quilt is the perfect reproduction picture of the old home in which Miss Jones' mother was born some eighty years ago, and is perfectly outlined with rose colored cotton by Miss Jennie Redner of Saint John's Guild, Belleville. The names of some thirty-five aunts and cousins are very perfectly arranged in a floral design of old rose and white. The Guild is to be congratulated on their fine work which Miss Jones prizes very highly and hopes for more such happy occasions throughout the winter season.

Miss Jennie Redner, Mr. and Mrs. George Darling of Belleville, were guests of Miss B. Jones over the week-end in Rednersville.

Reverend Arthur and Mrs. Struther were able to be at the Guild meeting Wednesday it being the first time since Mr. Struthers returned from the hospital. Reverend Mr. Struther took charge of the devotional period.

While attending the thirty-third annual convention of the Woman's Institute of Central Ontario last week in the Royal York, Toronto, Miss Helen Redner and Miss B. Jones had the honour of meeting Miss B. McDermand, the newly appointed Superintendent of the Ontario Woman's Institutes, Toronto and thoroughly enjoyed her address to the convention. Also the outstanding Canadian woman whose name appears in the New Year's Honours' List of His Majesty the King in 1934, as Commander of the Order of the British Empire (C.B.E.) Dr. Helen MacMurchy.

War Debt Factors Are Quite Unchanged

London, Dec. 7 (CP-Havas) — Great Britain's reply to the United States note concerning the Dec. 15 instalment of the British war debt has been drafted, it was learned today. Reliable quarters said it will contend that no new factors have been introduced to cause it to modify its previous decision.

Great Britain ceased making "token" payments on her war debts last June 15 when it was ruled that such payments did not protect her against being classed as a defaulter.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE BELCH

After a lengthy illness the death occurred this Friday morning at her home in the third concession of Thurlow of Sarah Melissa Belch, wife of Mr. George Belch.

The late Mrs. Belch was born in Tyendinaga township 50 years ago, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott. The greater part of her life was spent in Thurlow township where she was highly esteemed by many friends who will regret to learn of her death. She was a member of the Church of England.

Left to mourn her loss besides the husband are two sons, George and Clifford Belch of Belleville; three daughters, Mrs. Roy Chisholm and Mrs. Everett Vance of Belleville, and Miss Margaret Belch at home; one brother, James Elliott, of Tyendinaga.

LATE WILLIAM H. FINKLE

Trenton, Dec. 7 (Special)—King Street United Church was thronged with citizens from all ranks of life to pay their last respects to a beloved citizen, the late William Herbert Finkle, whose funeral was held yesterday afternoon. Rev. A. K. Edmison, M.A., pastor of the church that deceased served so faithfully, was in charge of the services.

The wealth of floral tributes showed the high esteem that the late William Herbert Finkle held in the community of his birth. Representatives from the business and social life of Trenton, together with many from the rural sections who had the pleasure of dealing with the deceased in his creamery business, filled the large edifice to overflowing. Many members of the Ontario Creamery Association, of which the late W. H. Finkle was a Past President, were also in attendance.

The largest cortege to pass through the streets of Trenton in many years proceeded to the Belleville cemetery where interment took place. The bearers were W. J. Potts, J. Reddick, Geo. Johnson, H. Wright, Sr., E. L. Fraser and D. Harrison.

SOCIETIES

CARMEL Y. P. S.

Corbyville, Dec. 7 (Special)—The regular meeting of Carmel Young Peoples' Society was held in Carmel United Church Wednesday evening. The president Miss Mildred Jones called the meeting to order. After singing the Doxology and repeating the Lord's Prayer Mr. Horton, Christian Fellowship Convener took charge of the worship service.

The Scripture reading was found in Luke 10: 24-37, Matt. 20: 28, John 13: 12-15. Mr. Horton read and explained this lesson. He told the story to illustrate the fact that "we are often called from our own work to serve others." He advised to "read the twentieth chapter of Matthew if we felt at the end of the year we hadn't accomplished as much as we had hoped." Miss Jones read a paragraph showing how various Bible Characters found the secret of Happiness. Mr. Horton led in prayer. Miss Margaret Reynolds gave a reading entitled "The Unending Christmas,' followed which Mrs. W. Simmons sang the verses and the congregation sang the chorus of "Wonderful Story of Love." Miss Hazel Horton gave a talk on the topic "The Secret of Happiness". She pointed out that the secret of happiness was service. To illustrate service she took the life of Jesus who went about doing good. She pointed out many ways in which young people could serve and urged them to take as their motto, "I Serve." Mrs. Simmons sang "In the Old Fashioned Way". The members read in unison the visit of the Wise Men to King Herod. The meeting was closed with hymn, "O Master let Me Walk With The", and the Mizpah Benediction.

CAR TURNS TURTLE ON FOXBORO ROAD

Four Passengers Miraculously Escape Serious Injury

Four persons miraculously escaped serious injury when an automobile driven by W. L. Jones of Stirling, turned turtle near Ross' Corners on the Foxboro Road at 2:30 a.m. today. Mr. Jones was driving a new sedan northward on Highway No. 14, when in some unknown manner the motor car failed to make the turn at Ross' Corners. The automobile left the highway on the lefthand side of the road and turned over four times before coming to a stop. Traffic Officer Sam Ervine investigated the accident and reported, that the motor car was a complete wreck. None of the four occupants in the vehicle sustained serious injuries, although it was necessary to remove two of them to the Belleville General Hospital for immediate medical attention. After examination the persons were dismissed from the institution. Charges of reckless driving were laid against the operator of the car.

POLICE COURT

All major cases to be presented on today's local police court docket before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., were postponed with only a comparatively few minor cases being disposed of.

Two local citizens were given a month "on the hill' after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication. It was the second offence for both inebriates with the customary $50 fine being imposed. In default of payment the penalty imposed was one month. Another local citizen was deprived of his individual motor operator's license, after pleading guilty to a charge under the H.T.A.

A family dispute was amicably settled by His Worship Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., representing the Crown.

Police News

Local police were informed to keep an observant eye for an automobile stolen at Cobourg early today. The vehicle was described as being a 1928 Buick painted dark blue and bearing licence plates numbered— LX-750. Chief Ruse of Cobourg forwarded the information to the Belleville police department. A constant vigil was kept at the corner of Bridge and Front streets, early today, but no sign of the missing motor car was forthcoming.

Judging from the number of transients to apply at the sergeant's desk in quest of a warm night's lodging last night, the cold snap that visited this community yesterday apparently kept the "knights of the road" from the beaten highways and byways. Only eight transients were afforded a bed at the police station last evening.

Motor accidents on local streets have been at a remarkably low ebb recently, not a single motor accident having been reported in the City of Belleville, for one full week.

MOTHER OF HIGHWAY MINISTER IS DEAD

Hamilton, Dec. 7 (CP)—Mrs. Mary Baker McQuesten, mother of the Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Public Works and Highways, died during the night at her home here aged 85. She was born in Brantford, on October 10, 1849. The daughter of Commander Thomas Baker, R.N., and Mary Jane McIlwaine. Mrs. McQuesten's father, as first lieutenant served on the battleship St. Lawrence, which was constructed at Kingston in 1813. Subsequently he rose to the rank of Commander in the British Navy before he decided to retire from the service to enter the ministry. He came out to Canada under the auspices of the London Missionary Society, and settled in Newmarket, Ont., where Mrs. K. McQuesten attended the Newmarket Grammar School and spent most of her life.

Aside from her absorbing interest in her home and family, Mrs. McQuesten found time to devote to the activities of McNab Street Presbyterian Church where she was one of the oldest members. Since girlhood she had been interested in missionary work and for many years had been Honorary President of the Ontario Provincial Women's Missionary Society.

In June, 1873, she married Isaac Baldwin McQuesten.

SIGNAL SYSTEMS TAKE DANGER OUT OF RAILROADING

Nelson "Pat" Patterson, 39 Years at Throttle Tells of Experiences

NOT SO MANY THRILLS

Daring Motor Car Drivers Bugbear of The Engineer

Thirty-nine years of continuous railroading, thirty-five o which have been spent at the throttle, graduating from the old, squat-stack wood burners to the present position as engineer of the fastest train in the world for the distance covered, the crack Montreal-Toronto express which clicks over the 334-mile gap between those two cities in six and one-half hours, counting stops, finds Mr. Nelson "Pat" Patterson of 237 Albert St., this city, just as keen on his job as the day he first took out his own engine from the local yards at the age of 21.

But railroading doesn't give him the thrill it used to, he will admit today. There is a vast difference between piloting the old type engine and the thundering monsters of the present day era. It is not so difficult holding one's feet in the cab of the latest type 2100 Moguls. This smoothness was missing twenty or twenty-five years ago.

In these days of electric block signals systems there is not so much thought of train wrecks among engineers. With this system the engineer is warned two miles ahead if there is another train on the track ahead, and that gives plenty of time to stop even the biggest trains but the things which adds the most grey hairs to the head of the modern railroader is the reckless automobile driver who will take any chance to beat the train to the crossing, states Mr. Patterson.

Remebers First Trip

"These fairy tales about the steel nerves of engineers are mostly that", explains the veteran. "Constantly we are on the alert for something to happen. Often the strain gets too much for some of them. Two hours or so at the throttle of a fast train is enough for any engineer."

Mr. Patterson well remembers the first day he was privileged to take out his own locomotive. The day he graduated from the ranks of the "tallow pots" was perhaps one of his best remembered ones. And the first time he ever held the throttle of his own engine was his greatest thrill, "even if it was only a little mud hen, hauling a work train," he admits. For two years he drove this little engine when the double track was being put in between Toronto and Montreal.

Mr. Patterson's father before him had been a conductor on the old Grand Trunk line, and the son was destined to have railroading in his blood. His chief recreation as a boy he remembers, was watching the trains rumble by his home near the tracks. His odd moments were spent in making the acquaintanceship of engineers and others who worked on the line. Then when he became old enough his first job was that of railroading. Serving his apprenticeship in the round house and yards, he graduated successively through the various stages until today his steady hand guides the tons of whistling metal that makes up the crack express.

The express covers the distance between Montreal and Toronto in just six and one-half hours and the strain is so great that there are three changes of crews in that distance. The average running speed is 60 miles per hour with a top speed of 70 miles. Seven stops are made in that distance. One of the important stops is Belleville.

Two Hours Sufficient

Two hours at the throttle is sufficient for any engineer in these days of high speed, states Mr. Patterson. "For myself, I am only in the cab for a period of two hours and five minutes, but when I step down to the ground again I know I've had enough. It isn't until you get home and have a rest for a few minutes that you begin to realize how tired you really are."

Train wrecks? The veteran engineer has been in four of them. But even that did not shake his nerve nor prompt him to quit the game be likes so well. None of them were serious. One time, before the block system now in use had been installed, he rounded a curve and saw another freight train stalled on the tracks dead ahead.

"I jammed on the brakes and leaped," he said. "The engine plowed through the caboose of the train and half way into the first car before it stopped."

With larger engines and better devices, the engineer seldom thinks of leaping when a crash appears inevitable. Like the captain of the ship he sticks to his post. But he is safer in the cab, even in a big wreck than he would be if he jumped.

Besides his four major wrecks, Mr. Patterson has figured in several level crossing accidents in which the occupants of the motor cars were killed. The risky driver is no safe bet for either engineer or fireman.

It isn't so hard on us if the car comes from the other side of the cab, but when they come from the engineer's side it makes it bad. There is a great reaction after a smash like that and it generally leaves us shaky for some time. I have always been able to take the train through, however. Sometimes the thoughts of a crash will stay with you for days, but you try resolutely to put it out of your mind."

Missed by Inches

Once near Whitby a car load of people were missed by a half inch or so when the machine stalled on the crossing. That was some years ago but the memory of that day is still fresh in the local engineer's memory.

"I thought that we were going to hit them sure. The crossing there runs at an angle with the track. I noticed the driver didn't seem to be slackening speed in spite of the fact that I was blowing the whistle for the crossing. Then I grabbed the brakes and got set. The car just got clear. All this time the fireman was hanging out of the cab window, open-mouthed. He said later that the engine had missed the crowded machine by about half an inch, and one woman was so scared that she was trying to jump through the windshield.

Familiarity breeds contempt in the case of many older drivers who try to beat the train to the crossing. "One of the coolest drivers I ever saw was down near Port Huron. He drove his little truck onto the crossing, and it stalled. He didn't get excited or jump out and leave it there. Although the train was roaring down on him just a short distance away he calmly put the car into reverse and backed off the track just in time. As we passed we almost took the paint off the fender."

Railroading is a great life, Mr. Patterson will tell you. "There is always the fascination of guiding the huge locomotive along its run, and the thrill of association with those who have devoted the best years of their life to the job. But there is also the strain and the responsibility that grips and holds even the veteran of the rail every working day of his life.

"But even at that, it's worth it," he will add.

OUTSTANDING WOMEN NAMED

New York, Dec. 7.—(CP)— Ontario's mother of quintuplets is considered by Arthur Brisbane to be one of the outstanding women of 1934.

Mrs. Oliva Dionne of Callander, Ont., whose five little girls are prospering, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt wife of the United States President, and five others are named by the well known editor and news-commentator as the outstanding women of the year, in a magazine article published today.

THREE SEAMEN DIE FEARED AT COAST

Rigors of Close of Navigation Marked at Coast

Attention swung today from the rigors of navigation's close on the Great Lakes to the hazards of ice, fire and storm on the Arctic and North Atlantic. Three seamen were believed dead.

At Letty Harbor on the Arctic rim the auxiliary schooner Margot A. was ice-locked, and it was unknown how long the food supply of her six-men crew would last. Rescue by air was planned, but the "in-between" season with its tricky landing and take-off conditions made success uncertain.

The wreckage on Newfoundland's southeastern coast caused grave fear the Schooner Gertie had struck on Stone Island and gone down with her crew of three.

PUBLIC FINANCE SUBJECT OF TALK

Open Forum of Chamber of Commerce Being Held Tonight

As the result of a very interesting and constructive brief address which was delivered by Mr. E. V. Ilsey on "Public Finance" at the regular weekly business meeting of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, it was decided by the directors to invite Mr. MacDonnell, the President of the Toronto Board of Trade and General Manager of the National Trust Company, to come to Belleville at some time convenient to him and address an open forum meeting upon financial matters to the study of which he has given much time and upon which he is considered to be an authority.

Mr. J. O. Herity, the secretary-manager reported that arrangements are completed for the meeting, which will be held this Friday evening under the auspices of the Open Forum Committee of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at the conclusion of the dinner, which will be served at the Queen's Hotel commencing at a quarter past six o'clock. It is expected, that a large number will be present to hear Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P. speak on "The Coal Situation" and Mr. E. V. Ilsey speak on "The Parking Problem." Both subjects are of much local interest and a general discussion of them will take place at the conclusion of the addresses.

To Hold Training Course

The directors decided to arrange for a Business Training Course to be held weekly during the winter and to commence probably the latter part of January. This year the cost will be no greater, than last year and there will be eight lectures instead of five as were given last year.

Mr Herity referred to the party which was given last Friday night by the management of the American Hardware Company for their employees and friends and stated, that it was a most enjoyable and successful affair.

The large new additional building which has been under construction for some time for this company is now about completed and a large part of the new machinery has been installed. For some time the works have been running at full capacity and occasionally it has been necessary to run overtime.

Mr. W. C. Springer, the president of the Chamber, presided at the meeting and the following directors were present: Messrs. H. E. Fairfield, W. H. Morton, J. B. Boyce, E. V. Ilsey, E. P. Bernstein, Mackenzie Robertson and H. W. Ackerman.

Hungary Has Many Opponents In Little Entente

By The Canadian Press

The geographical and political lineup of the Balkans, age-old centre of diplomatic scheming, finds Hungary virtually surrounded by members of the Little Entente, regarded as her opponents.

Hungary's situation is approximately this:

To the south and west lies Yugoslavia, Rumania borders her on the east and Czechoslovakia on the north. The Little Entente ring is broken only by a stretch of Austrian border to the west.

As against the Little Entente Hungary has often looked to Rome for comfort. The tieups were brought out clearly when Yugoslavia's charges of Hungarian complicity in the assassination of King Alexander were made at Geneva recently.

Rumanian and Czechoslovakia fyled notes supporting Yugoslavia. Italy let it be known that she would support Hungary and would demand an airing of the accusations.

There has long been ill-feeling between Yugoslavia and Italy, who are neighbors. Yugoslavia was concerned when Premier Mussolini sent troops to the Austrian border, near the Yugoslav frontier, During the Nazi revolt in Austria last July

This feeling again cropped up, when King Alexander was slain. Dr. Ante Pavelich alleged Croat terrorist leader, was arrested in Italy in connection with the crime but Italy refused France's request for his and a companion's extradition.

France has long been close to the Little Entente while Italy, Hungary and Austria last summer signed an economic accord.

A frontier treaty between Hungary and Yugoslavia, covering trade and arms shipments which was reached only last July, was broken last week by Yugoslavia.

485 TRANSIENTS HOUSED IN NOV.

Falling Off Due to Discontinuance of Feeding Same

"Since we discontinued feeding transients there has been a marked falling off of tramps and transients in Belleville," stated Sergeant Harman today in reference to the steady decrease of transients to be afforded a night's lodging in the local police cells. Statistics in the record book kept at the sergeant's desk at the police station, clearly show that there are less transients stopping in Belleville every day.

Compiled figures show that 485 transients were afforded a bed in out of the cold autumn blasts during the month of November of this year, over 100 less than the month of November 1933. "The transients can no longer procure free meals in Belleville and therefore pass up this city in preference to Kingston Brockville, where they are afforded meals", pointed cut Sergeant Harman as he intimated, that the absence of free meals discouraged transients from stopping in Belleville for any lengthy period. The police department are of the firm belief, that there is also a decrease in pan handling on local streets, although several cases have been reported of late. In many cases these transients refuse to accept work, apparently being satisfied to pan handle sufficient money to procure a bottle of wine," aded the sergeant as he stated, that many of the inebriates to appear in the local police court of late had been transients.

For the first five days of the present month there have been only 52 transients sign the register at the Sergeant's desk, in quest of a warm night's lodging. Last Saturday saw 16 housed at the police station, Sunday 11, Monday, seven, Tuesday eight, and Wednesday night ten. These figures are far in decrease of those over similar period for many years past. When registered at the sergeant's desk the applicant must state his name, where he was born, his destination and his age. Thus far this year New Zealand was the berth place given for the transient to be the farthest from home. The ages of transients range from 16 to 75, it was disclosed. During the period, when free meals were afforded transients in Belleville as high as 50 have been housed in the police cells in one night, as many as to have applied thus far this month, collectively.

SOCIETIES

HOLLOWAY STREET W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Holloway Street United Church was held in the church parlour on Wednesday, December 5th, with about sixty-five members and visitors present.

The President, Mrs. M. D. Denton was in the chair with Mrs. Gordon Hall acting as Recording Secretary in the absence of Mrs. Bush. The meeting opened with hymn 118, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" after which Rev. Mr. Newman led in prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as read.

Rev. Mr. Newman took charge of the meeting by calling for the report of the nominating committee. Mrs. Chas. Moore submitted this report showing a conscientious and satisfactory interest throughout which was accepted and the ballot marked by the presiding officer.

Mrs. Denton then resumed the chair asking for the various reports. The Corresponding Secretary read a couple of letters received. The Strangers' Secretary reported fifteen calls made during the month. It was decided to use the Devotional Leaflet again for the coming year, also moved and carried that Mrs. S. P. Hagerman and Mrs. James Cordes audit the books.

Group 10 took charge of the program with Mrs. Leavens acting in place of the leader, Mrs. Hyde, who was absent.

This part of the meeting opened with a hymn, No. 116, and after that the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

The Rev. Mr. Newman gave an inspiring message on Christian Stewardship, using the expression, " Serve" as a lead mentioning the fact that if we have one talent or many use them for God.

Mrs. Leaven read the Scripture Lesson found in the second chapter of Matthew, 1 to 8 verses. A splendid Temperance reading was given by Mrs. Sweetnam and the Devotional Leaflet read by Mrs. Kerr. Mrs. (Rev.) Newman very capably managed the "Peace" section and afterward the audience was interested in a lovely Christmas story by Mrs. Cameron. The solo rendered by Mrs. Gordon Hall, "God Will Take Care of You" was appreciated.

The offering was taken by Mrs. C. Ostrom and Mrs. Donnelly. Prayer by Mrs. Leavens. It was decided to pack a box for the needy for Christmas with Mrs. Jennie Hogle taking charge of this. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Group 10 served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

TRAVEL MADE HIM CONSTIPATED
Salesman Says Kruschen the Only Thing
TO KEEP HIM "ON HIS TOES"

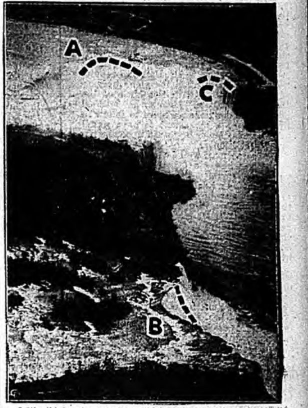
"I am a commercial traveller," writes a correspondent, "and due to endless travelling by train, I find that I become constipated if I do not keep myself well purged. Kruschen Salts is the only thing that will do this effectively, and not interfere with my work. I take a large dose of Kruschen every Saturday night, and on Sunday, when I have no work to do, the Salts act on me. On week days I take a small dose the first thing on rising. It is necessary that I be 'on my toes' all through the day, and this is the only way that it possibly can be done. I have tried other laxatives, and they have proven to be either unreliable or harsh in their action."—V. L.

Half the ills which afflict humanity can be traced to one root cause. That cause is internal sluggishness: failure to keep the system free from poisonous waste matter. Auto-toxemia, or self-poisoning, is the inevitable penalty.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clear of those impurities which, if allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

NIAGARA FALLS AGAIN!



In the third major rock slide within a year, 200,000 tons of rock slid from Table Rock, Horseshoe Falls (Canadian) again changing the contour of the falls. The spot where the break occurred is where spectators often stand to view the spectacle of the caract. The three most recent breaks are shown ABOVE, "C" being the latest. The break at "B" occurred five months ago.

WHERE SLIDE TOOK PLACE AT NIAGARA

This view of the mighty Niagara Falls, taken at the base of Table Rock, on the Canadian side, shows part of the 200,000 tons of roch which suddenly dropped into the river gorge, changing the contour of the great cataract for the second time within five months. The new break was over 100 feet wide and was located at a spot on which visitors often stood to obtain one of the best views of the falls.

MADOC'S FAMOUS DOCTOR

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, who came to fame in the northland, has received the honor of his own village, Madoc, and though a modest man who does not seek notoriety, he like any other man can not but be affected by the spontaneous acclaim with which he was received in the ancestral place, where he was born and where his father practised medicine and became known far and wide throughout the district as a family physician of rare skill and devotion.

This returning home when fame has come upon him is a natural event in human life. Man cannot quite sever himself from that place which is to him forever home. Sooner or later from the far ends of the earth he comes, because the "home" spot is the one place where the soil, the streets, the houses, and the people are just a little more than the mere soil, streets, houses and people of other spots on earth.

Love of home that prompts him to go back not to win acclaim, but to meet the old friends or the sons and daughters of old friends of years past—that is one of the most healthful experiences a man can have. In the midst of the memories of other days, he is then at his greatest just as the hero of mythology was, who was strong only when his feet were firmly planted on the earth.

Honor has come to Dr. Dafoe: a reputation which has girdled the globe because of his association with the birth of the Dionne quintuplets, honors in medical practice, and perchance more to follow in the wake of a movement to have signal international honor bestowed upon the beloved practitioner.

Madoc so may well be proud of her great son whose chief distinction is his devotion to humanity, through the agency of his calling as a healer of human ills and as the physician who ushers in new lives into this glorious world of life's grand and sad experiences. If Madoc rejoices in what he has done, Hastings County cannot but claim a share in the honor which has been done Madoc. His village is made known because of at least one great man.

Madoc and Hastings, and through those who attended last night's function, everyone in these parts, rightly honor this outstanding man. They know that when he goes to New York he will bear with him goodwill and best wishes of his nativefolk for many years of devotion to humanity as expressed by the banquet and reception at Madoc into a world of medical men who will sit at the feet of this Northland doctor and as disciples learn his methods. They know that all the praise they have given him will not spoil this good, modest, kindly, family doctor.

ROCK FALL AT NIAGARA

The fall of a section of rock at Niagara Falls this week draws attention to the fact that this is the third time in a few years when enduring rock has given way and fallen into the swirling maelstrom. The section which fell on Tuesday morning was not large but it fell at the point of vantage from which countless persons have watched the falling waters plunging down the face of the rocky wall far below or caught up in spray. This fact alone lends interest as it may lead to some changes in the area which sightseers are permitted to invade for the purpose of proximity to the rocks.

Nature which made the Falls one of her greatest showpieces in the entire world is busily engaged in breaking up her masterpiece of wonder and grandeur. Foot by foot the Horseshoe Falls are receding, and the rate is not slow, no less than five inches a year. While the ordinary observer does not notice from year to year the change, it means that disintegration is taking off in a hundred years no less than about forty-two feet of rock.

Those who have stood on the Canadian side watching the majestic revelation of power feel a sense of awe that no other place in the world so quickly summons up. They experience a sense of sadness that even this glorious sight of nature may some day not be seen—that many thousands of years hence the waters of Niagara will fall over little falls and there will be no cataract, except in records in books, in paintings, perhaps in buildings and in the reconstruction of the past by scientists yet-to-be. This is difficult to realize but science says it is the ultimate end of the glory and majesty of Niagara.

Seeing this wonder of the world, Canadians are also sensitive of the shock which these rocks must be enduring. Even nature cannot endure forever the force of passing water. Near the falls there is evidence of vibration. It is no wonder that the rock gives way.

But though some day it pass, what a picture in the midst of this unnoticed slow retreat of the water has been permitted to man, through long ages, if there were inhabitants there before the Indian came to paint Niagara in one of his most glorious legends of the Red man's faith when he saw in the mist a maiden. It is estimated that 25,000 or 30,000 years have elapsed since the falls began to retreat from Lewiston, and primitive civilization as man understands it today was nowhere then in evidence even in the East. In the thousands of years which yet remain to permit men and women tto gaze upon this marvel, mankind will be allowed to profit by the feelings which it inspires—a feeling of majesty, and of awe, a sense of the relentless, unceasing, tireless work of construction and destruction in nature.

Man has been blamed by some for attempting to destroy Niagara cataract by the industrialization and development of the power but this complaint has not been so far justified. Indeed the commercialization within limits and use of safeguards have made it possible for more persons to see Niagara than could ever have seen it in an undeveloped state.

CHRISTMAS TREE RAIDS

Farmers in the neighborhood of Orangeville are said to be placing guards on their wood lots this season to prevent theft of Christmas trees.

It is said that wooded areas within easy access of the cities have been raided frequently as the Christmas season approached, by individuals who cut down the young trees, haul them by truck to the cities and leave the farmers mourning the gradual destruction of their bush areas. In some cases as many as two thousand trees were taken from one farm in a season without any compensation to the owner of the bush.

The Christmas tree institution is widely blamed for some menace to the perpetuation of our Canadian forests. Between now and December 25, there is a demand for millions of young trees to provide the centre-piece for the Yuletide decorations. No doubt, if the operations to provide these trees were carried out in a rational manner, no serious damage would be done to the forests, in which there are plenty of uncommercial tree prospects to take care of the demand. Irresponsible dealers in Christmas trees however, have been in the habit of making their forays in thosse places where ready access to the material offered some advantage. They have succeeded in creating considerable hostility to themselves in the farm communities, where, no doubt, definite plans have been formulated to intercept the tree raiders.

In more remote northern areas in Canada, there is virtually unlimited Christmas tree material, but, as in many other departments of commerce, it is found that to bring in Christmas trees from a considerable distance entails a cost that the consumer is not readily willing to meet. That encourages the predatory practices that are complained of. The older parts of the country find that they must now plant trees instead of destroying them recklessly. Evidently, the Christmas trees must be obtained at greater distances, whatever inconvenience and expense that alteration in methods will entail.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

MORE CHURCHLIKE CHURCHES

The Church of Scotland has formulated plans whereby the "barn" type of church will disappear from the land. New buildings will conform to a definite Gothic style, and if there is not enough money to design a fitting exterior, it will be patterned in such a way that the church can be transformed into a beautiful sanctuary as funds permit. Old churches are to be made over when possible, and in course of time, every church will be aesthetically correct.

In this country there are very many churches which can be described as depressing. They are not only "barn" types, having little resemblance to a church except the shape of the windows and a place for the minister to stand, but the environment in which they are situated is utterly uninviting. There is not a sign of a flower bed, the grass is often uncut and ragged, and nearby are ancient, dilapidated wooden structures where in the pre-motor age horses and buggies were sheltered. A lot of churches would look better if the old sheds were torn down and the space occupied by a bed of flowers.—St. Thomas Times Journal.

NAUTICAL RESURRECTION

A ship which had been laid up at Cardiff docks for three and a half years went to sea again last month.

The steamer was the "J. Duncan," owned by J. Duncan & Co., and had been given up for dead. Her new lease of life started with a commission to take 2,000 tons of coal to Bordeaux.

All the firm's fleet of eleven vessels are now back in commission after protracted inactivity.

It is another indication of shipping recovery in South Wales. Three years ago half the vessels registered at Cardiff were idle. Now only about a dozen are off the active list.—Industrial Britain.

JUST IN CASE YOU MISSED THIS:—

"The preacher of today needs courage of a lion, the skin of a hippopotamus, the endurance of a camel, the sagacity of an elephant, the patience of a donkey, and as many lives as a cat." So said Dr. Edgar De Witt Jones, addressing the Metropolitan Church Federation at St. Louis, Missouri, and so reported in a C. P despatch appearing in this G.F.J. Tuesday evening under "News Briefs and Oddities," Front Page. There's a preacher with a nifty name which should get him in where the Rev John Smith, Brown or Black, might fear to go. The fact that Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones comes from Missouri may shed some light on his strange utterance—but he'll have to show us. Preachers in Missouri may have to be equipped with all the safeguards he mentions, but whyfor and because. F'rinstance he mentions the endurance of a camel—now the camel can go seven days without a drink but there is no need of any Missourian doing that since repeal—and if he had the skin of a hippo he would scarcely need the courage of a lion, especially with the sagacity of an elephant or the patience of a donkey. But why bring the poor old donkey into it—because he is somewhat of an ass, or what? Eh, What? A preacher with all those attributes would not be preaching he would be Exhibit No. 1 in the Greatest Show on Earth.

MANY MAJOR AND MINOR CANDIDATES have been nominated and elected to municipal office this and other years but Brockville, likewise known as "City of the Thousand Islands", "Island City" and what have you? made sure of a Major Candidate this year when it elected by acclamation Editor Thomas Major, of the Recorder and Times to the Mayoralty. Editor Major has given much of his time to civic government in the past and comes to the Mayor's chair with a knowledge of municipal affairs which will be a great value to the municipality. Mayor Major was virtually brought up and educated on Hon. George P. Graham's newspaper, the Brockville Recorder, and is one of those Grade A newspaper men who know the business from the hell box up with ability to feed the web press if necessary. Toronto had a Tommy Church for Mayor whom they wished to make a permanent institution until Parliament called him higher, and Brockville now has a Tommy Major for Mayor, whose sense of humor, ability and wisdom fits him admirably for the high office of chief executive of that community. Congratulations, Tommy, from the Fourth Estate of Belleville.

BRAVERY

Two kinds of valiant folk there are,
And which is stronger who can know,
The gallant lad who goes to war,
The tearless maid who bids him go?

O, bravery is a stirring thing
When banners, drums and marching feet
Go past while patriots' voices sing
Along the crowded street!

But bravery can be lonely, too,
Within a quiet house somewhere,
When tasks have dwindled to a few
And silence weights the air.

Which is the braver, who can say,
The smiling soldier or the lass
Who by his hearth alone must stay
And hear the eager legions pass?
—Aline Michaelis.

DUTH SCHULTZ, New York racketeer handled millions of dollars from booze and other illegal endeavours. He laughed at Uncle Saw's income laws and refused to pay any kind of taxes. Uncle Sam finally put salt on his tail and his gang scenting another Capone dethronement prepared, it is said, to present him to his Uncle Samuel on a slab. Dutch didn't care for the idea and rushed to the police for safety, and is now happily resting in a cell, willing to face any kind of a charge as long as it carries with it reasonable assurance of a vacation behind the bars in safety for a sufficient time to permit his enemies to cool off and forget him. The way of the transgressor is not as easy as it was in the United States.

"Suppose, Robbie, that another boy should strike your right cheek," asked the Sunday school teacher; "what would you do?"

"Give him the other cheek to strike," answered Bobbie.

"That's right," said the teacher.

"Yessum," added Bobbie, "and then if he struck me I'd paralyze him."

Padre A. G. Wilken. Where and what is he now? A bishop, I hope; for I take it that "Canada In The Great War" is right and that "Canada In Flanders" is wrong each in its account of what happened to him on June 2nd, 1918. (See yesterday's piece). But Lord Beaverbrook's account is the better contribution to military history of the two, despite its statement that the beloved padre of the 4th C.M.R. was killed; for the statement was in accordance with the official report of the time, and the date, place and circumstances of the incident are correctly, though briefly, recorded. (See yesterday's piece). On the other hand, the contributor of the Wilken story to "Canada In The Great War" starts off most unhistorically by stating that whatever happened to that heroic padre took place "on the Somme in June, 1916." (See yesterday's column). It was at the Battle of Sanctuary Wood that the enemy got Captain Wilken. The Canadians did not operate in the Somme area until September, 1916. The errors of historians however detract nothing from the heroism of the actions of Captain the Rev. Allan Gillis Wilken, one-time chaplain of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

The Canadian Mounted Rifles boasted yet another notable padre in Captain the Rev. Robert Ridgeway, M.C. and again M.C. I quote a story, said to be given on good authority, which speaks well for Padre Ridgeway's heart and soul.

"A certain person of importance had come from England to tell the chaplains in the field how to do their work. "Get in right with the general', he said. 'That's the first thing to do. Get in right with the general and you'll get on.' 'Dam the generall!' said Rev. Ridgeway, rising in his seat. 'A chaplain's first duty is to his men'."

Good old padre! That's the stuff to give the troops.

But the chances are that Ridgeway was in right with his immediate general, just as he was with his colonel. Our generals were no fools. They respected a man who did his job right, whatever his job or his rank. They would not have got to be generals otherwise —not in the Canadian Army Corps.

It is written that Ridgeway "lived in the line" and that the officer commanding the regiment to which he was attached made a point of seeing that his comrades were officially recognized.

And there was Frederick George Scott, of Quebec, Senior Chaplain of the 1st Canadian Division, person and poet. He is still with us. He brought the admiration and affection of tens of thousands of men of all other ranks out of that war with him, and a C.M.G., a D.S.O. and the Medal of the Royal Humane Society out of that war with him.

A Child's Life

Padre Scott bagged the Royal Humane Society's award in 1914, when he and the old division were still on Salisbury Plain. At the risk of his life, he saved a child from being run over by a locomotive. I heard of it at the time. Canon Scott—not then of military renown but even then a famous poet and well known divine—was, with others, on a platform in a railway station, waiting for a train. As the train appeared, so did a child, a mere toddler, appear on the track. It looked like a sure case of sudden, innocent death; and all except the canon were spell-bound with horror. The canon made a jump and a dash for it, snatched up the child and flung it to safety and was himself flung by the engine.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 7th., 1914

Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Dowling and her son, left today for Chicago.

Major P. McL. Forin of this city, who is taking a military course at Kingston, spent yesterday in the city.

Mrs. Fred Ridley of this city, spent several days in Trenton recently.

At the Y.M.C.A. building this afternoon a meeting was held at which representatives from the city council, county council and the Mayor of Trenton were present. The object of the meeting was to consider the procuring of more suitable quarters for the children who are wards of the Children's Aid Society.

Night before last the New Balmoral Hotel was entered and a quantity of liquor was stolen. The police are investigating the affair.

Judging from what we have heard recently, the only man who could beat Ald. Charles Sulman for Mayor next January is our old and esteemed friend Santa Claus and he won't run.

Band at the rink to-night.

A meeting of the Board of Trade was held last night at which the following were present: Messrs. C. M. Stork, S. Kenney, W. C. Mikel, J. F. Wills, W. J. McCamon, C. M. Reid, A. McGie, W. B. Deacon, J. P. Thomas, Col. Ponton and Col. Lazier. The matter of the site for the new drill shed was discussed. Mr. McCamon thought that the site selected was not the most suitable, but he did not think a change could be made as the city council had virtually purchased the hospital lot and presented it to the Government. Mr. Stork did not think the hospital lot was large enough or central enough. Col. Lazier thought the hospital lot should not be used for the drill shed. It should be used for a park. Mr. Thomas stated that the title had passed to the Government and the engineer had taken levels, etc. Mr. Mikel said the hospital lot was selected by the Government and the title had passed to the Government, but a change might yet be made. Mr. C. M. Reid thought the Government would do what the citizens desired in the matter. He believed most citizens were against the use of the Hospital Lot for the building of a drill shed and moved that the city council be asked to memorialize the Government to change the site. Col. Lazier seconded the motion which was carried and a special committee composed of Col. Ponton, Col. Lazier, Mr. C. M. Stork and Mr. C. M. Reid was appointed to take the matter into consideration and interview the city council regarding the same.

Mr. Byron Way, who has been the proprietor of the Hub Hotel for several years, has sold out to Mr. Wm. Brown, who is well and favorably known in the city. Mr. Brown will remodel the house throughout.

Mr. George Pope of this city has been appointed land valuator on the Trent Valley Canal work. He is at present working in the Simcoe and Balsam Lake section.

The price of bread has been reduced in Belleville from ten cents to nine cents per loaf. In Stirling and other places the price has been eight cents per loaf for some time and considering the price of flower it should not be more.

The members of the Rev. A. L. Geen's Bible Class were entertained by him last evening at Moodie Cottage and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Among those present were the new rector of Christ Church, the Rev. Canon Burke and Mr. and Mrs. C. Hudson.

The contest for the Mayoralty opened today with Mr. J. E. Walmsley and Mr. Powell as candidates.

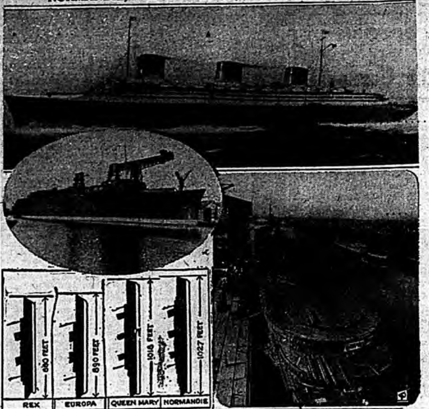
NORMANDIE, LARGEST LINER, NEARS COMPLETION



Since the recent launching of England's gigantic new liner, Queen Mary, French merchant marine circles are furiously pushing ahead to put finishing touches to its masterpiece, the Normandie, which will be the world's largest steamship. With an overall length of 1,027 feet and a total displacement of 75,000 tons, the Normandie is scheduled to make its first voyage in Atlantic service, May 29, 1935. ABOVE are shown illustrations of the giant liner in various stages of construction including an artist's conception of the finished ship cleaving the waves.

PROGRAM GIVEN BY MALE CHOIR

Varied Numbers Presented at Mount Pleasant Church

Rawdon.—On Monday evening, December 3rd, despite a blinding snowstorm the "Crossman Male Choir" of Napanee, made a return trip to Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, and delighted the large audience who had gathered in the church hall with their splendid numbers of music, readings and singing. Truly it was a varied programme and every number was heartily applauded.

The enjoyable program included the following numbers: Chorus—"Just Swinging Along"; Recitations by Mr. John Wood Thompson; Vocal Solo—Mr. Adam Scott; Male Quartette—"The Good Old Songs For Me"; Instrumental Selection—Mr. Nelles Dafoe; Vocal Solo—Mr. H. P. Crossman; Vocal Solo—Mr. Garnet Brooks; Chorus—"I'll Take You Home Kathleen"; Recitation—Mr. Garnet Brooks; Vocal Duet—Messrs. Bradshaw and Dafoe; Selection by eight-piece Orchestra; Vocal Duet—Messrs. Crossman and Bowen; Reading—Mr. J. W. Thompson; Vocal Solo—Mr. Garnet Brooks; Selection by Orchestra.

The Male Chorus was then introduced by Mr. H. P. Crossman, chorus leader. They were: Mrs. James Robson, pianist; Mr. Carl Denyes, Secretary-Treasurer; Mr. Arnold Rodgers, General Manager; Messrs. Adam Scott of Forest Hills; Bob Woodcock, Garnet Brooks, Lynn Crossman, Clarence Bradshaw, Malcolm Woodcock and Ernie Smith, of Napanee; Messrs. William Robson and James Robson of Bath; who live fifty-two miles from Mount Pleasant; Mr. E. I. Babcock, of Morven; Mr. Bert Bowen of Deseronto, and Mr. Nelles' Dafoe of West Lake. The cast also includes Mr. John W. Thompson and Mr. Adrian Babcock.

The chorus then sang in good voice, "Alexander" and Mr. Adam Scott in a Scotch costume sang two comical numbers.

The male quartette sang two songs by request.

Mr. Garnet Brooks was heard in a splendid Temperance selection and graciously replied to the hearty applause with another recitation.

At this juncture Mr. Scott voiced the appreciation of the choir for the invitation to pay this return visit and paid tribute to the work of Rev. Joblin on Rawdon circuit. The orchestra then delighted with two selections and the chorus sang a closing number, "Good Night and Sweet Farewell" followed by the National Anthem. Those present included the community people and a few guests were also in attendance from several nearby places. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $40.95.

After the programme the Napanee guests were served a hot supper. The guests extended to the ladies deepest thanks for the appetizing supper and Rev. Joblin assured them that the pleasure was all belonging to Mount Pleasant. Both groups joined in heartily singing to each other, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows"

The Crossman Male Choir have attended over twenty functions this fall and they are surely a company of merit which speaks well for their leader, Mr. H. P. Crossman who has done so much to train the voices.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith of Mount Pleasant and Mr. J. A. MacMurchy of Toronto, are enjoying a two weeks' holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Loizeaux, Baltimore, Maryland.

The Allan School section is receiving much publicity these days through the tax bills. When the bills were delivered early in November, folks in S.S. No. 3 were amazed at the size of the taxes. After a great deal of commotion they were corrected as some folks in the section had notified the clerk that the new school was paid for in 1932, five years after its erection. However, the clerk looked up the records and last week a new set of bills were delivered and these were identical with the first as the school was not paid for. It seems that through an oversight somewhere the debenture wasn't figured in 1933 and nothing was paid towards the debt. The debenture is over sixty-seven hundred dollars and is figured this year at 5 1-10 mills in addition to a 3 mill tax for local school purposes. As nothing was paid in 1933 the debenture won't be cleared until 1938, giving the ratepayers an extra year of grace. However, the main topic of conversation is where the extra thirty or forty dollars is to be found to meet the bill.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sarles are visiting relatives at Kincardine and Guelph.

On Sunday morning at Mount Pleasant after the close of the Sunday School period a splendid report of the recent County Sunday School Convention recently held at St. Mark's Anglican Church, Bonarlaw, was given by Mrs. Merle Spencer. Following this Mrs. Allan Bailey, Temperance Secretary, presided and all joined in "The Army of Temperance is Gathering Its Men." Mr. Fred Elgie of Stirling gave a splendid address on the subject dealing with Temperance from various angles. Miss Frances McKeown sang a solo, "The Bird—With a Broken Wing" and the Superintendent, Mr. James Sharp, gave a few brief remarks.

Mr. Fred Elgie of Stirling spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey and attended both services at Mount Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Curry are holidaying with Mr. Herbert Smith.

Mr. Bert Jeffs has been visiting his cousin, Mr. Ivan Sarles, Salem.

Miss Dorothy Joblin was a dinner guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Bailey on Sunday.

Miss Vera Rose of Halloway spent the week-end with Miss Olive McConnell.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson, Mrs. Gilbert Smith, Miss Helen Smith, Mr. Claude Sharp, Misses Mildred Sharp, Vera McAdam, Olive McConnell, Muriel Milligan, Isobel Turner, Messrs. Norman McConnell, Herbert Smith and Lester Hay represented Mount Pleasant at Carmel United Church last Friday evening when the young people presented their play, "Birthright Reclaimed". Miss Mildred Sharp assisted with the programme and recited a humorous selection, "The Song of the Farm" and also rendered a pleasing solo, "Dream Daddy".

Miss Frances McKeown entertained, Misses Isobel Turner Dorothy Joblin and Muriel Milligan on Sunday.

Mrs. George Heagle and grandchildren, Eleanor, Allan and June of Wellman's spent Tuesday with Mrs. Ernest White.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Seeley of Chatterton and Master Douglas Miller of Madoc is holidaying this week with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sharp.

Mrs. Blake Sharp received word of the death of her uncle, Dr. A. T. Tweedie, of Campbellford on Monday evening, December 3rd. The doctor has been in ill health for several years. The funeral was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Tweedie, Campbellford, on Wednesday afternoon, with burial in Stirling.

MRS. GEO. STAPLEY ELECTED PRESIDENT EMPEY HILL W.M.S.

Empey Hill, Dec. 7—Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Husband entertained Mr. and Mrs. W. Shane, Mr. and Mrs J. Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. J. Chambers on Thursday.

Mr. and Mars. Gordon Toppings and family, Mr. and Mrs. R. Toppings, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Woodcock visited at Mr. Stewart Sheltor's, Napanee, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. McMath, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Harvey, Messrs. Delbert Harvey and MoGillovary McMath were tea guests at Mr. F. Kimmerly's on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack McCrea, Alvin and Mrs. Wm. Kerr of Napanee, spent a day recently at Mr. G. Toppings.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Ashley had dinner on Saturday with Mrs. A. Penny and sons, Napanee.

Mr and Mrs. Wm. Waddingham visited friends in Toronto last week and attended the Royal Winter Fair.

Miss M. Penny spent the week end at Mr. King Scott's, Forest Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Husband were tea guests at Mr. E. Waddingham's on Sunday and at Mr. Robt. Harvey's on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Winter, of Napanee and Mr. and Mrs. Neil Tremayne of Belleville visited at Mr. Robt. Millings on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sexsmith and Miss A. Sills and Mr. W. Smith of Niagara Falls were recent visitors at Mr. O. E. Ashley's.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Toppings spent the tea hour on Saturday at Mr. Earl Whiteman's, Melrose.

Miss Alma Wood of Selby, is spending a few days at Mr. B. Kimmerly's.

Mrs. A. Penny and Messrs. Earle and Kenneth Penny, Napanee, spent Sunday at Mr. M. P. Husband's.

Mrs. N. Haggerty has gone to spend the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Bert Fretts.

A large crowd assembled at Mr. H. Bartlett's on Tuesday evening for a pot luck supper under the auspices of L. A. and W.M.S. and certainly did justice to the many tempting dishes set before them.

After supper the W.M.S. elected their officers for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Geo. Stapley.
1st Vice.—Mrs. Wm. Bell.
Secretary—Mrs. O. E. Ashley.
Treasurer—Mrs. C. Abbott.
Pianist—Mrs. F. Kimmerly.

The L.A. also elected their officers:

President—Mrs. F. Hutchinson.
1st Vice.—Mrs. W. Penny.
Secretary—Mrs. S. E. Winter.
Treasurer—Mrs. E. Price.

Mrs. Bell had charge of the programme and a very interesting half hour was sepnt. Business was disposed of and the meeting closed with Mizpah Benediction.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Husband, Mr. and Mrs. F. Husband spent Wednesday in Belleville at Mr. A. Charlton's.

Mrs. Bruce Russell and Miss Mabel called on Mrs. A. Penny, Napanee, on Thursday.

Trenton and District

O.H.A. TEAM IN TRENTON IS OUT

Strong Town League Will Be Run is Decision of Officials

Trenton, Dec. 7 (Special)— The O.H.A. called a meeting Wednesday night in Trenton and as usual no more than three turned out. After last season the local officers found that they were again in the red to the tune of $66.00, It was decided to drop out of the O.H.A. for a season or two and operate a town league. This would give the youngsters a chance to get seasoned with the has-beens and eventually Trenton would be able to produce O.H.A. brand hockey.

The executive of the Belleville City League pulled a fast one on Trenton. When the idea was originated in Belleville to operate a city league, representatives were sent here to encourage Trenton to enter a team. George LaBrash, who is the main backer of hockey in Trenton, decided he would enter his "Imperials". The entry was received at Belleville and a letter sent to Mr. LaBrash stating that an entry fee of seven dollars was necessary before December the 11th and the next day he received another letter stating that the Trenton team had been thrown out because they might be too strong. If this is the case the Belleville City League will not dish up a very good brand of hockey to the cash customers this winter. We have lost several players including George Pilion, Ken Begin, Frank Bohan and Ray Fox. If Belleville does not re-consider their decision Trenton may apply for a berth in the Trent Valley League. We are glad to hear for once, that Belleville is afraid of Trenton hockey. We might also state that no doubt, Manager Thomas will need some Trenton players on his O. H. A. teams.

Business Changes Hands

Two promnent Trentonians were involved in a business transfer this week. George LaBrash, well kown Trenton sports promoter and member of the Town Council, sold his lease on the Imperial Gas Station on Dundas St. E., that he has managed since it's erection in 1928, to J. H. Kinney. Mr. Kinney was for many years in charge of the brewery warehouse in Trenton but was ousted by the Hepburn government on Nov. 1 at last.

Brewery Warehouse Moves

The brewery warehouse in Trenton has moved from it's former stand on Ridgeway St. that is owned by W. H. Ireland ex-M.P.P. to Jacques Block on Front St., formerly occupied by the old Whirlwind Store. Mr. T. Jacques is the owner of the new quarters and the building is at present undergoing extensive alterations. E. E. Wiggins is the contractor in charge.

Two Car Accidents, None Injured

Dr. J. W. Johnson had his car considerably damaged Tuesday noon when his car, and a truck owned and driven by Lawrence LaBelle, collided at the intersection of King and Ridgeway Sts. A lamp post at the corner was broken off when the car bumped over the curb after the impact. Dr. Johnson was coming off King St. while LaBelle was going north on Ridgeway. It is alleged that a line of box cars on the C. N. R. track obscured the viey of both drivers.

A car driven by Carman Donato, bumped the rear of a car owned by Henry LaFleur, and driven by his son Joffre, on Front St. Tuesday noon. The gas tank and rear bumper of the LaFleur car were damaged while the front bumper of the Donato car was damaged. The local police investigated and charges will likely follow.

BANCROFT ROAD WILL BE HURRIED BY A RESOLUTION

County Council Discusses Proposition From All Angles

TO HELP UNEMPLOYED

Some Work Started by North Development Near Millbridge

A chance request by Reeve R. S. Woods of Huntingdon Township for a little work on the roads in his section south of Madoc Village at the afternoon session of Hastings County Council on Thursday plunged councillors into a bewildering discussion of the projected Belleville-Bancroft Highway.

"Why fix the roadway, if they are going to put that highway through?" was the general question directed in the general direction of the desk of the Huntingdon Reeve, by his fellow reeves and deputies.

Reeve Woods had previously pointed out the necessity of cutting down some of the small hills just south of Madoc Village on the main road, and of straightening some of the sharp curves, if any work at all was going to be provided for the men this winter.

"We've had a lot of accidents on this section lately, and we're going to have more serious ones yet, if we don't do something about it. Poor old hard scrabble Huntingdon can't do much toward it herself, so I've come to you," said Reeve Woods.

Several Reeves, whose cars had jolted and bumped over and out of the pot holes in that section of road also voiced their support of the idea.

"That road is something fierce," claimed Reeve Wallbridge of Madoc Village. Let us have it taken over by the highway department or have something done. It is a connecting link with No. 7 Highway so there shouldn't be much trouble there."

"The road is in bad shape," agreed chairman of the Roads Committee, Mr. Jas Moore, Reeve of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe. "We put 300 yards of gravel to the mile on that this year. It needs crushed rock about twice a year."

Other Roads the Same

"There are a number of county roads in just the same shape" pointed out Reeve L. E. Neal, Marmora and Lake "We have been talking of cutting down our expenditures on roads. Instead of that we'll have to increase our expenditures. We need a lot of work on a number of them."

"Won't we be relieved of a lot of these roads by the Provincial Government if they start that highway?" asked Reeve Sayers of Tweed Village.

"I've enjoyed this discussion so far and I agree with my friend from Marmora and Lake that a lot of roads need fixing badly. But in our own homes during the past few years we, ourselves, have needed things badly also. Only for the lack of money we would have had them. There is the question of this lack of money. The road in mention is full of pot holes, I can testify to that, but if you go just north of the metropolis of the north (Madoc) you will find that the pot holes are larger and deeper and rougher".

"If we open this question of expenditures on roads then we're going to be in trouble. All the sitting members here will feel the need for battling for their own particular section."

"As I see it, if the County is going to do a little work on some of the roads, then it would be a very good idea to follow out Mr. Woods' request and have some of it done in that section. I agree with him, that it needs fixing," commented Reeve Frank Reynolds Madoc Township.

Oppose Expenditure

Deputy Reeve of Hungerford, D'Alton Clarke. "If Madoc road needs repair, so also do a number of roads in our section and probably to a greater extent. I did not intend to ask for any grant for roadwork this year, or any great amount of money, because the taxpayers are not in a position to help. But I would oppose any expenditures on any county roads at the present time."

"Mr. Woods' road is in very bad condition," agreed Reeve Arthur Burke, Sidney. "I'd like the opinion of the committee on whether or not any steps have been taken to have this road taken over by the Department. I understand, that it will be, but so far I hear it is only in the surveying stage, and it may be a long time yet before work is started."

Warden Geo. Jordan answered the question with a statement of the trip made by the Roads Committee to meet Dr. Faulkner and T. B. McQuesten, not long ago. "We were told that no steps to have the road taken over could be taken until the House meets. But we did have assurance from Dr. Faulkner and Mr. McQuesten, that when the House did meet this would be taken over", The Northern Development would take over the work this season as usual, from Millbridge North".

"The officials have already taken up their offices in Madoc and the staff is billed there for an indefinite stay", pointed out Reeve Wallbridge.

"Are you sure about that?" asked Reeve Gilroy.

"Yes".

"I believe I would like to contradict this—in a friendly way. I'm in a position to know. I have strong reason to believe, that the Highways Department will not take over any more highways at the present time. I know a certain amount of Northern Development will be done, but no highways will be taken over. This work is non-political. If I remember, the other government took over the work from Apsley to Burleigh Falls. But this is not a highway. The Government assumes no responsibility for it", added Reeve Gilroy.

Reeve James Moore did not believe that the road in question would be taken over as a highway.

"It looks too bad to have the road built within ten miles of the Garden of Eden, (Madoc), and then jump off and leave it," commented Reeve Woods.

Working in Township

Reeve James Spracket of Tudor and Cashel pointed out that a little Northern Development work was being carried on in his township at the present time. "Speaking of rough roads you want to come out to my section. You won't find them any rougher than the ones I bump over to and fro from Millbridge north, along No. 14."

Reeve Judson Gunter, Bancroft, pointed out that Dr. Faulkner must have been grossly misquoted if there was no intention of taking over the road. "We were all delighted with the announcement that the government would do so. And why should they not take it over?"

Reeve Gunter referred to the splendid network of roads through the western part of the province and the few main lines, that ran through this section.

"Since Ontario has been Ontario, Hastings County has put the entire traffic of the province from east to west and from west to east. But from north to south there is not a road in the centre of the county or at the borders. Yet this county stands the traffic of three counties at least."

"If the Reeve of Wollaston is right and the order of the road has been countermanded, we should put up a very strong protest and resolution against disbanding the program. It seems to me we should put up a fight for a Provincial road. Is it fair for the government to receive all these funds to keep up things, and then ask the isolated settlers of the rear section to bear the brunt of all the highway traffic? Our resolution will not be written with the idea of any criticism of the government, but with the idea of just asking for our dues and showing them, what is needed. The rest of the counties holler enough, and if we don't do our share, then we'll never get anything."

"I don't know much about this situation but I quite agree with the Warden, that the road will be taken over. Mr. Gilroy doesn't believe, that the road will be taken over from Madoc to Maynooth. I place implicit faith in our member in Legislature. I believe that when he says a thing it is true. I believe from the information that I have, that the work is going on and that the road will be taken over."

Believes Government Will Act

"As a member of the Road Committee I believe it will be taken over," stated Reeve Henry Larkin, Tyendinaga. "They told us up there they would, so why do we want to get something else into our head?"

"Did they say when?" questioned Reeve Gilroy.

"I believe it will be taken over from Millbridge north, on the Northern Development and from there south it will be a provincial road."

Reeve Frank Reynolds: "I believe this highway will go. If it doesn't then there will be a lot of hungry men in this county this winter. And, while I'm up, I want to ask if there's anything going, I want to ask for Madoc's share".

"I hardly concur in the remarks of the Reeve of Coe Hill but I believe that Reeve Gunter is right, and that we should prepare a resolution and present it, and then be ready to give the men work at the first opportunity", said Reeve Burke, Sidney.

"Is there any program for the unemployed of this county for the coming winter?" pointedly questioned Reeve James Sprackett.

"If this highway is going through, then all right. If it doesn't, then it will be just too bad. We have men in the Township, who are desperately hard up. They have been coming to me. I've been giving them a dollar here and there out of my own pocket to tide them over. But I can't keep this up. We do have a little Northern Development work, but it is hiring only ten men from the whole section. When—if it does—will this road start?" he added.

"The only thing I see wrong with the Reeve of Bancroft's resolution is that it is about three years too late," pointed out Deputy Reeve Phil Carr, Rawdon.

"Our elected body is a body lected by the people to do their bidding. When you want a thing you have to ask for it. We want that road. We should ask for it. The road should be taken over immediately."

"Is there any program this winter for the men? I'd say, send a resolution and ask the government to hasten this job. Press for it."

Reeve Sayers, Tweed: "I believe there is a little work on the new road from Millbridge north, and it looks as if the government was going to take it over. It will probably follow the railroad along there. We are led to believe in Tweed, that we will get our quota of men on it."

"I understand that this road is going, but who'll get the work on it?" asked Reeve Wallbridge.

"Belleville is trying to get 600 men on it," came a voice.

"No, there's nothing to that. Mayor Tice told us that if the city got the work they expected to get for relief workers, they wouldn't need to put relief men on," rejoined Reeve Larkin.

"If the road goes will each township get a fair share?" asked Reeve Wesley Gray, Thurlow.

"We have 40 in our township on relief at the present time. We can't get them anything to do......"

"You'll have a hundred before another month," interrupted the Reeve of Sidney.

"We'll have a hundred," nodded Reeve Gray.

"What about the villages in this matter of work?" asked Reeve Ford of Frankford. "We have a lot of men, too. We won't have as much relief this winter as we had last because the pulp mill took on twenty or more. But we'll have some. Reeve Wallbridge said he couldn't get any men placed in the north, we couldn't either."

Reeve L. E. Neal, questioned the probable course of the road. "I heard it was going by the old Snow Road."

"It'll pass right along the east end of Bass Lake, where it has already been surveyed by the men," stated Reeve R. C. Brett, Limerick. "They're already putting up a camp near Bass Lake."

"I feel candidly sure that this is where the road is going, and that it will be done soon. The old Hastings Road has not been followed by the surveyors. Dr. Faulkner told me, that it would be done in sections. Perhaps one gang will start at Millbridge and the second at Murphy's Corners, and so on. I believe that Dr. Faulkner is sincere in this."

"I can't understand what benefit a new highway would be through a wilderness, or what useful purpose it would be if they don't follow the old Hastings Road," interjected Reeve Arthur Burke. "I favor Mr. Gunter's resolution and I ask that it be sent speedily to the government and that Hastings roads be specified as the natural course."

Resolution Only to Help

"One of the first remarks I made in this council was that a permanent road should be built into the north," reminded Reeve J. L. Churcher of Dungannon. "I was greeted with wide smiles. I have faith in Dr. Faulkner. It takes time. We must have a little patience in the matter, and with our legislative body. Give them time to look around. This work will be started and it will be distributed evenly if we leave it to the proper authorities. I was delighted to read of the intention of the government to build this road. The north needs it. Dr. Faulkner sees the need, and his fellow officers will certainly help him on it. I favor the resolution being put "not through lack of confidence in the representative, but just to help things along."

Warden Jordan: "We've had almost an hour's discussion on this matter. I'm rather surprised at Mr. Gilroy in stating, that the road would not be built. But I got word right from Mr. McQuesten, that it would be. As far as the 600 Belleville men are concerned—I got word right in Toronto, that no Belleville men would be given any of it."

Reeve W. J. Davis, Bangor: "If this resolution were put through it might help speed things up some and lend some weight. When it does start the men should get an even chance. I understand, that several of the Reeves have been advised to make up a list of their unemployed already. In the meantime I believe that the Road Committee would well afford some temporary repairs to some of the roads. It wouldn't cost much to fill the pot holes and it would well repay."

"We'd like to hear from the county road superintendent on this," invited Mr. Gilroy.

Mr. Fox: "Dr. Faulkner told us some time ago, that the men would be hired according to the number of unemployed in each section. It will take a little time, but I am sure, that the work will go on. As far as running the road through the other section, I believe that the engineers haven't taken proper cognizance of the importance of the old road. No doubt if proper pressure were brought to bear the road could be put in the proper place."

"We have no planned program for the unemployed of the county this winter. We had one drawn up, but we were told by the government to cease all work on December. Why do they do this? I believe, that the government has other ideas and that the work will be started soon enough to give work."

The motion will be prepared.

HEADACHE, BACKACHE?

FOR young girls growing into womanhood, for women in middle life going through the "change," or those who suffer from headache, weakening drains, backache and nervousness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is just the vegetable tonic needed. Mrs. Elizabeth Dadson of 523 Simcoe St., London, Ont., says: "When rearing a family of five children my health broke, I slept poorly, lost weight, went down to 90 lbs. I had pain in my back, and headaches almost drove me mad. After taking the first bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I noticed a big improvement in my health—I felt stronger, my nerves became quiet and normal and I rested better." New size, tablets 50 cents, liquid $1.00.

OLDEST MARRIED COUPLE IN CITY ARE HONORED

Celebrate 67th. Anniversary of Marriage on Wednesday

On Wednesday of this week, Mr. and Mrs. S. Schryver, 81 Highland Avenue, who claim the distinction of being the oldest married couple in the city, celebrated the 67th. anniversary of their wedding. Enjoying fairly good health, Mr. and Mrs. Schryver received many messages of congratulation and good wishes on the observance of their anniversary.

Residents of this city since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Schryver are well and favorably known here. Mrs. Schryver was born in Ireland, coming to this country in her youth while Mr. Schryver has always lived in this vicinity, having been born at Schryver's Hill, West Huntingdon. Their marriage took place in old St. Andrew's Church, 67 years ago.

Mrs. George Gulliver, Charles St., Mr. A. R. Schryver, 81 Highland Avenue, and Mrs. W. B. Martin, Guelph, are children of Mr. and Mrs. Schryver. It is interesting to note that the anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Schryver falls upon the same day as that of Mr. and Mrs. G. Carter, also residents of West Belleville. The latter celebrated their sixty-sixth anniversary on Wednesday.

Hunter Henry to the banquet.

The program was opened with a toast to the Royal Family which was proposed by the toast master. Mr. Rutherford stressed the importance of the recent Royal wedding and extolled the virtues of the King and Queen, stating that each and every individual in Canada should be very proud to be a member of the British Empire.

The National Anthem was sung.

Famous Doctors

To Dr. S. Eagleson came the signal honor of proposing the toast to the guest, Dr. Dafoe. Before entering the medical profession Dr. Eagleson was the assistant principal of Madoc Model School. Dr. A. R. Dafoe was a pupil then attending the school. In his speech Dr. Eagleson made mention of three outstanding men in the medical world who were natives of Ontario. The first, Dr. Grove of Fergus, performed the operation of removing a human appendix in 1873 and thus initiated a service that has saved many lives. The second, Dr. Locke of Williamsburg, internationally famous for his remarkable cures of arthritis and other troubles caused by stiffened muscles, fallen arches and diseased joints. The third was Dr. Roy Dafoe of Madoc, Ont., world famous physician of the Dionne quintuplets. Dr. Dafoe's father was a highly respected citizen and medical practitioner in Madoc for over half a century.

Dr. Dafoe's Own Story

Dr. Dafoe's reply was very informal. He outlined the conditions in the Dionne home. On May 28th. he received a call to go to this house. At birth Dr. Dafoe weighed the five children on an old pair of scales used around the house. They weighed over 13 pounds. One week later they weighed about nine pounds. He had three nurses helping him and praised their efficiency. The smallest baby weighed nine ounces at birth but now weighs 5 pounds. Dr. Dafoe said he measured their hands and feet. Each was about one and one-quarter inches long. The babies were placed in small incubators sent through Dr. W. Dafoe of Toronto. The babies were fed rum and while he received many letters of protest continued to use it.

Shortly after the birth of the children the father signed a contract with some Chicago promoters and this caused considerable trouble. The entire countryside became a beehive of curio seekers. Some persons attempted to disturb the Dionne home and they had to have assistance from the Mounted Police.

Night and Day Work

Dr. Dafoe and his nurse assistants had to work hard day and night, the doctor said. Much aid however, was given by such organizations as the Red Cross and the Sick Children's Hospital.

The doctor thanked his many friends for the welcome and expressed deep regret that his father and mother were not alive to be present.

A vote of thanks was moved by Dr. S. R. Beatty of Madoc, and seconded by Dr. F. Nickle of Eldorado.

Mr. Will Fletcher sang "On the Road to Manadalay."

Mr. George West briefly outlined to the members the plans of the Club to have their annual Christmas tree in Madoc two weeks from Saturday. He solicited the financial assistance of all members. He also proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Blue for the service and cooperation given the Community Club at their banquets.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing "God Save the King." Dr. Dafoe, Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Marcellus then left to attend an informal reception being given them in the auditorium of the High School.

Informal Reception

At 8.30 over four hundred friends and acquaintances of the Dafoe family assembled in the school auditorium to pay tribute to the old Madoc boy and now an internationally famous figure. Dr. Dafoe and his two sisters, personally shook hands with and spoke to each guest. Mr. Robert Bristol, member of Madoc village council and boyhood chum of Roy Dafoe acted as the chairman. The friendship between the Bristol's and Dafoe's was of long standing and received a fitting climax when Mr. Bristol welcomed Dr. Dafoe to Madoc. Mr. Bristol called upon Reeve Wallbridge to welcome the guests to Madoc on behalf of the Madoc village council. Reeve Wallbridge being absent, Councillor W. J. Hill acted instead. Mr. Hill narrated the honours coming to Dr. Dafoe and made mention of the glory brought to Madoc by so distinguished a son.

Welcomed to School

Mr. W. E. Connor chairman of the Madoc School Board, welcomed the guests to the school. He mentioned the great number of pupils turned out by the late Mr. A. H. Watson, the first principal of Madoc High School and stated that plans were being made to secure his portrait to hang in the school.

Mr. R. P. Bristol then called upon Dr. Dafoe for a few remarks. Again Dr. Dafoe made a very informal speech. He briefly narrated the home life of the Dionne family and his own trials during the great work to keep the five babies alive. The Bell Telephone installed a private line between Dr. Dafoe's office and the new hospital. Through the efforts of Hon. David Croll, hydro was installed also.

The new hospital that was erected cost $10,000 but materials such as the furnace, were donated by well known manufacturing houses, so that the actual cash outlay was between $4,000 and $5,000.

Thousands of Letters

Dr. Dafoe has been the recipient of thousands of letters from all over the world. He personally has attempted to answer each letter. Some contained advice as to how to raise the babies. Ever since the papers disclosed his lonely life up in the north country, he has had many letters from spinsters and widows.

He related the incident of pulling a tooth of an old prospector from Alaska. His home has been subject to depredations by thousands of visitors, some carrying away the birch bark off the trees, others removing rocks and some even taking some soil from his garden.

The doctor thanked his old friends for the reception accorded him and his sisters.

Mr. Bristol called upon Mrs. John McCaffrey (nee Martha Whytock), a school teacher of Dr. Dafoe and close friend of the family and upon another school-mate ex-Warden Walter Whytosk. Both made mention of the great work of the doctor and related personal occurrences in the school days of Roy Dafoe.

A brief musical programme brought to a close the very simple but most impressive welcome to a most distinguished son of Madoc.

The program was given by:—

Miss Henderson — contralto solo "My Ships".

W. Scrutton—violin solo—"Chanson Indone".

Mrs. (Dr.) Alexander— soprano solo—"Thank God for a Garden".

Miss Henderson—"Danny Boy".

Wm. Scrutton—"Kiltie Lament", "The World Is Waiting For the Sunrise".

Ladies' Trio—Mrs. (Dr.) Eagleson, Miss Edna Salisbury, Miss Norma Fair—"The End of a Perfect Day".

"God Save the King".

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, Mrs. J. E. Marcellus and Mrs. Hunter Henry returned to Toronto on Friday, where with many other Madoc friends and relatives they will spend Friday evening together before Dr. Dafoe leaves for New York and Washington.

Mr. Colin Dafoe of Queen's attended the reception given to Dr. A. R. Dafoe in Madoc on Thursday evening.

The Madoc Community Club presented Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Marcellus with a lovely corsage of roses before the banquet at Blue's hotel.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world, admitted Thursday at Peterborough that he is more frightened at the prospect of addressing the audience in Carnegie Hall, during his planned visit to New York, than he was that night, more than six months ago when the Dionne sisters began to arrive one after another in that lonely Northern Ontario settler's cottage.

"I'm filled with apprehension as I look forward to it," Dr. Dafoe said. "Certainly I feel more frightened than I did that night when I pulled the big stunt. I'm not used to making speeches; never had a gift that way. And those people will probably expect something that I can't give them. But I am a Canadian, and I am going to give it a great big try."

"How about this Nobel Prize they are talking of giving you?" he was asked.

"It would be very nice," Dr. Dafoe said simply. "Very nice indeed. But I honestly feel that they would not be giving it to me for anything I may have done. It would be a recognition of the indebtedness the world owes to the general practitioner, the unknown man."

Rev. Dr. A. W. Mackenzie, Principal of Grove School where Dr. Dafoe was visiting his son offered a suggestion of the sacrifice Dr. Dafoe has made for the Dionne quintuplets.

"Perhaps he would not tell you," Dr. Mackenzie said, "but I asked him about that side of the affair. He admitted to me that he was out of pocket $400 owing to his services to the quintuplets. Besides that he knows that he has endangered his practice because of the great time and attention he has had to give the Dionne babies."

Father Is Model

Lakefield, Dec. 7—At the Grove, Lakefield on Thursday, Dr. Dafoe visited his 17 year old son William who has been a student there for 8 years.

"Is Bill going to be a doctor too?" the reporter asked.

"Yes, he insists that he will take up medicine; he has shown strong leanings that way. My father was a doctor for 55 years down at Madoc. Anything that I have done is nothing compared to what my father used to do. He covered the whole district around Madoc. He used to ride about on horseback to see his patients. Often he would be called away to Bancroft and sometimes his practice would keep him away from home for a week. My father was a great man. I'd like to be just like him.

The doctor delights in talking of his model man, his father. "I cannot say anything too good about my father, because he was a good man and far more capable as a doctor than I. Many of the old people in the district will remember him," he remarked.

"It's good to have a holiday. This is the first one I have had since I went north. I have been looking keenly forward to my visit down around Tweed. I have wanted to see Dr. Mather an old friend of my father and Rev. Father O'Riordan, another of his stout old friends. I have wanted to see my old home at Madoc and meet up again with some of the chaps down there that I used to go to school with. It is going to be great to see all those homefolks again."

"The Gang"

"The quintuplets are fine. Of course I'm keeping in close touch with the gang up there but then they are getting excellent nursing and everything will go along fine. I have a great staff of helpers up there and the co-ordination I have received on all sides has made everything much easier. I am sure the babies are all right or I would never had left them for a moment."

Daily messages reach Dr. Dafoe from the special hospital at Corbell. The progress of Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie is therefore known to him. "The child of a millionaire could not be getting any better care than they are," remarked the doctor.

"I have no favorites. They are all dandy babies, and I like them all," he said.

"How do they compare with other babies of their age?" the reporter asked.

"Well they are six months old now, but of course they were only seven-month babies when born. Now any of them would compare favorably with any four-months-old baby. But at their present progress at the age of a year, they will be year-old normal babies. You see they are catching up on the other infants of their age."

"Are they dark or fair?"

"All dark. They had grey eyes when they were born, but now they are turning brown. They have lovely complexions, and they are very bright—above the average in brightness. Now Yvonne has the nicest smiles for me, but Cecile makes the nicest gurgles," Dr. Dafoe said with all seriousness. "But Annette is coming along splendidly."

Dr. Dafoe did not wish to talk about the night the babies were born. "Anything I did that night any other country practitioner would have done, and probably just as well as I did," he stated.

"Now take my father. He had more difficult things than that to deal with; he was a real pioneer. He was a better man than I am. He was, really."

The Doctor Himself

Dr. Dafoe is a small man with kindly blue-grey eyes. Eyes that saw nearly 1,500 children enter the world before they opened with amazement as the five Dionne sisters were born in the little farm cabin of French-Canadian Oliva Dionne. His hands are small, delicate like a woman's, but skilful.

Dr. Dafoe impresses one as a man who would tackle any difficulty with the best of his ability. He is kindly, the sort of man one can be really friendly with. A man that one would welcome to the fireside and enjoy chatting with, because one knows instinctively that his heart and mind are true.

ROSS McTAGGART ELECTED PRESIDENT OF MISSION BAND

Thomasburg Dec. 7.—The Sunbeam Mission Band held their monthly meeting, the president, Burton Vance, taking charge. The meeting opened with a game and a sing song followed by sentence prayers by some of the boys and girls. The roll call followed. The offering was taken by Ana Morton. Lantern slides on India were then shown and the new officers were elected which resulted as follows: President, Ross McTaggart; vice-president, Marion Bateman; secretary, Helen McTaggart; treasurer, Annice Adams.

Mr. Howard Thompson is able to be at his work again following a recent illness.

The pupils and teachers of the local school enjoyed a holiday on Thursday last in honor of the marriage of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina.

Word has recently been received of the death of Mr. Robert Morton at his late home in Detroit. The late Mr. Morton was well known in community having lived here until about fifteen years ago, when he and Mrs. Morton moved to Detroit. Mrs. Horatio Peterson is a sister of the deceased. To her is extended the sympathy of the community.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Adams (nee Lila Tanner of Stirling) on the birth of a baby boy.

Mrs. Stanely Webb has sufficiently recovered from her recent operation at Belleville hospital to be able to return to her home.

Mr. J. H. Blakely was in Toronto for a few days last week on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Carleton and family were Thursday evening visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beatty at Zion Hill.

Miss A. English who is attending Peterboro normal school spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. English.

Mr. Athol Dudgeon has been engaged as cheesemaker for the coming season at Moneymore factory.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Kellar of Belleville visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Porter on Sunday.

Mrs. G. H. Sherry is ill.

Mr. Russell Bateman, principal of Marlbank public school, spent the week-end at his home here.

Mrs. W. S. Embury has returned home after visiting relatives at Sutton.

Miss Evelyn Reid spent the tea hour on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Carleton.

A quiet wedding took place on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 29, at the United Church parsonage when Miss Mary Middleton of Toronto became the bride of Mr. Thomas D. Moran of Zion's Hill. The bride was becomingly dressed in wine satin. Rev. H. B. Herirngton performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Moran will reside at Zion's Hill.

The ladies of the United Church Women's Missionary Society held a very successful fifteen cent tea on Wednesday evening last in the vestry of the church. Following the supper a very interesting program was given.

The Anglican Church was filled to the doors at the evening service on Sunday last, it being the occasion of the annual visit of the Lord Bishop of Ontario, the Right Rev. John Lyons, M.A., D.D., and Confirmation. Seven candidates from the parish were confirmed. Bishop Lyons delivered his sermon from the subject "I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build My church".—St. Matthew 16:18. The church was nicely decorated for the occasion with potted plants and baby 'mums.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" Provides Laughs, Thrills and Homespun Philosophy

Just as though the immortal characters of the famous book had sprung to life, the characters in Paramount's "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch", which comes to the Belle tomorrow (Saturday), provides chuckles, heart-throbs, tears and thrills of recognition of one of the most charming films it has been our pleasure to view in a long time.

To those millions who have read the book and to the other millions who have seen the play Paramount's film version of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will be more than satisfying. To those for whom it is a new story, it will be revelation.

Pauline Lord Excels

The picture brings to the screen one of the most important new film personalities of recent years in Pauline Lord, noted stage star. Resisting all film offers for years, until she was given the opportunity of playing Mrs. Wiggs, she handles the part with all the grace, delicacy and imagination which have won her the plaudits of the critics throughout the country. Her performance is amazingly flexible and correct, from the comedy scenes with the immortal "Cuby" to the touching death scene with Young George Breakston who plays Jimmy.

The story is too well known to bear repeating. W. C. Fields, plays a featured role after his recent starring pictures, and ZaSu Pitts provides a hilarious romance. Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor, teamed for the fifth time, are excellent in a more romantic bit of love interest.

Child Plays Excellent

The five "Wiggs" children, portrayed by George Breakston, Jimmy Butler, Carmencita Johnson, Edith Fellows and Virginia Weidler, are excellent, which is to be expected as all are experienced troupers. Tiny Miss Weidler is particularly fascinating with her stunt of holding her breath.

Norman Taurog directed and again proves that he not only can handle children but also that he is a master of comedy and drama.

"Them Thar Hills," Funny

"Them Thar Hills" is the title of the new and uproariously funny Stan Laurel-Oliver Hardy comedy to be presented on the same program with "Pro Football" with its famed gridiron stars and thrills, and at the Saturday matinee, the world's greatest animal trainer, Clyde Beatty with the greatest aggregation of wild beasts ever assembled for a motion picture will be seen in "The Lost Jungle".

"The Gay Divorcee"

Highlighted by the inspired dancing of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, R.K.O. Radio's sumptuous musical comedy "The Gay Divorcee" closes a highly successful engagement at the Belle tonight.

It is really and truly, one of the first musical comedies to issue from Hollywood boasting of a genuinely complete and laughable romantic story—one so complicately funny that it cannot be described in detail without detracting from its punch.

Rivaling the astonishing verve of Astaire's performance is the brilliant work of Ginger Rogers, Alice Brady, Edward Everett Horton and Erik Rhodes. It is crammed with tinkling melodies and many other novelties too numerous to mention. Don't miss it.

8TH SIDNEY WEEKLY NOTES

AT THE CAPITOL

"Girl In Danger" Exciting! Thrilling! Different!

Inspector Trent in the person of Ralph Bellamy, again provides a feature production full of the thrills and unexpected situations motion picture audiences have come to expect from these Police-Detective dramas.

Seen at the Capitol Theatre last night, "Girl in Danger" unfolds a fast and gripping story of a society girl, who, looking for thrills assists in a jewel robbery without considerating the consequences, which are swift and serious leading to the death of one man, her own kidnapping, and, for a time threatening her own safety.

Gloria Gale, society girl, bored with her mode of living, assists Dan Terrence, young and personable crook in the theft of the famous and valuable Cortes emerald. He leaves it with her, promising to send a messenger for it in the morning. Instead of the messenger, it is Inspector Trent who makes an appearance.

Mistaking the detective for a crook, Gloria almost discloses the hiding place of the stone. Trent certain he is on a hot trail, takes the girl to a cafe to dinner, where she sees Danny murdered by a member of the gang he had double crossed. Gloria escapes and goes back to her apartment.

The leader of the gang, of which Danny was a member, suspecting, like Trent that the gem is in the girl's possession, tries to get it from her. From then on there is a contest between the forces of the law and the underworld for the possession of the jewel, with honors divided until the finish of the picture, which Trent triumphs over the gangsters, and recovers the emerald for its rightful owners.

Others in the cast include Shirley Grey, Arthur Hohl and Charles Sabin.

MY SONG FOR YOU

A rich musical treat is in store for all music lovers who see "My Song For You", the tremendous successor to "Be Mine Tonight", and starring Jan Kiepura, who has been termed the greatest tenor since Caruso.

The story concerns Gatti, a famous opera tenor, who falls heavily for Mary Newberg a charming girl whom he believes to be a member of the Opera House chorus. She s courted by Kleeberg a wealthy old man, but is in love with Theodore, a musician whom she attempts to help by cultivating Gatti's friendship.

Theodore however, lets her down, and following this she quarrels with Gatti. Gatti unaware of her name, goes to great lengths to find her, and his secretary, Charlie, eventually does his trick through a charity performance. Mary, guided by pique, determines to marry Kleeberg, but Gatti turns up at her wedding, and with the aid of his voice, persuades her to exercise the feminine prerogative.

Capitol News and a clever cartoon "Scrappy's Auto Show" are to be seen on this programme. Last complete show at 8.35.

TOMORROW ONLY

Buck Jones and his wonder horse Silver in "The Red Rider", thrilling serial.

LEAD ALL YUGOSLAV ....

By JAMES A. MILLS

(Copyright, 1934 by the Associated Press)

Szeged, Hungary, Dec. 7—(AP)—After intermittent forays across the frontier into Hungary this morning, Serbian troops attached to the Yugoslav army retired, temporarily relieving a highly dangerous situation.

As the forces remain only a short distanct from the frontier, however, their presence is a source of great anxiety to Hungary.

The official Hungarian News Agency said the "Chetniks" an organization of armed men, made midnight raids on evacuated Hungarian homes in Yugoslavia, carrying off valuables.

A program, the agency said, was announced by the Chetniks to be impending against Hungarians.

Banker Urges Proven Methods in Business Revival Efforts

BANK OF MONTREAL ANNUAL MEETING

Sir Charles Gordon, President, Sees Consistent Recovery in Canadian Business—Reviews National Problems—Government Railway Losses Greatest Leak in Canada's Finances.

W. A. Bog, Joint General Manager, Discusses Bank's Loaning Policy—Credit Is, and Always Has Been, Available For Sound Commercial Purposes—First Duty Is To Depositor.

Declaring that Canada had moved forward consistently on the road to recovery, Sir Charles Gordon, in his presidential address before shareholders of the Bank of Montreal at their recent annual meeting urged adherence to tried and proven methods in efforts undertaken towards business revival in Canada.

"It is instructive," he said, "to seek reasons why Canada's progress has been more steady and pronounced than that of many other countries. Among the reasons I think we must count the fact that we have not been so ready as have some others to seek a panacea in the control of industry, or in economic experiments of one kind and another."

In Great Britain, whose returning prosperity he termed an inspiring object lesson, the people had made a united effort to promote business. In this single-minded objective, he said, extraneous reforms and experiments had been side-tracked, and there had been no attack on private initiative.

"It is a reasonable deduction," the president continued, "that the wisest course for us to follow is to give single-minded devotion to reviving business by the methods which experience has shown to be fundamentally sound and not to interfere with the improvement now under way by applying new and untried theories and enacting hampering legislation. There is comforting statistical evidence that the clouds are lifting, and comforting evidence, too, that our resources are so large and so varied that when one door of opportunity closes another always opens."

Bank's Loaning Policy

Speaking of the course of the Bank's business during the year, Sir Charles frankly admitted that a larger proportion of the institution's assets than the directors might like to see had perforce to be invested in high-grade securities, for the simple reason that customers were in a large measure able to finance the present volume of business from their own resources.

W. A. Bog, who is joint general manager of the Bank with Jackson Dodds, said, in discussing this subject: "We never lose sight of the fact that lending money for commercial purposes is the back-bone of our earning power: we are ready, and always have been, to consider applications for loans which fall within the category of prudent banking risks. We have emphasized this feature in advertisements in recent months in order to controvert a widespread misconception that there is a lack of banking credit. These advertisements did not announce a new policy, or even the revival of a policy; they simply restated a policy from which the Bank has at no time departed, namely, that of affording every reasonable accommodation to commercial borrowers. We might add in this connection that the total of credits authorized for our borrowing customers is very largely in excess of the amount which they have found that they can use to advantage."

Bank's and Depositors' Responsibilities

Referring to the responsibilities of the Bank to its depositors and the duty of the latter to use their influence to prevent any undermining of the banking structure of the country, Sir Charles Gordon said: "The total of assets under administration by our chartered banks is nearly three billions of dollars. In the banks of Canada there are some 4,700,000 depositors, our own bank having over a million. Depositors received during last year some $37,000,000 in interest. The interest which shareholders in the banks received was $12,000,000. I think we may therefore consider that this vast body of depositors, who outnumber the people who voted at the last general election in Canada, are vitally interested in the strengthening of our banks and the maintenance of their earnings."

In amplification of these statements, Mr. Bog said that the average deposit was relatively small, and that depositors tend to invest when their deposit balances accumulate. Yet for a great host, money in the bank represents the sole bulwark against misfortune. "Borrowers as a class," he said, "are property owners; as a rule, fairly well-to-do; not seldom wealthy. But the average depositor is relatively a poor man; our first duty is to protect him.

"It is well to bear in mind that had our banks operated under the unit system as in the United States there would have been many failures in distressed districts," the General Manager continued. "In contrast to what happened in that country, the depositors' funds in Canadian banks were always available—no one was kept waiting for his money. The ultimate loss to depositors in closed banks in the United States will be not less than $2,000,000,000. Such a loss if applied to Canada, on a basis of relative population, would amount to $160,000,000."

The Railway Problem

In discussing national problems, the president paid particular attention to the railway problem. The Government railway losses, Sir Charles declared, constituted the biggest leak in the country's finances and the greatest deterrent to her financial recovery.

"It is inconceivable," he said, "that there should be undue delay in adopting effective remedial measures. We have to remember that today railways face extraordinary competition. Electricity, by carrying power to the sources of raw materials, has dispensed with much hauling of these materials to power plants, while canals, coastwise shipping, aeroplanes, automobiles and trucks now all compete with the railways. Railways competing with each other can never succeed in adopting a common policy to meet these other forms of competition. The task before us is to co-ordinate all forms of transportation, not by the throttling of competitive systems, but by the elimination of useless competition by means of intelligent direction. A first step is the co-ordination of our railways. A second step is the regulation of all forms of transportation under a Federal Board of Transportation Commissioners vested with powers similar to those of the Board of Railway Commissioners, but on a wider and more comprehensive scale."

Unemployment

Turning to the unemployment question, Sir Charles declared that never before in the history of Canada or the United States had the problem of unemployment and direct relief loomed so large as it did today. "It has become", he said, "the greatest problem we have had to face since the war."

The problem in Great Britain, he felt, had been dealt with in a most thorough manner. "Some of us thought," he said, "when we first heard of old age pensions, unemployment insurance—misnamed the dole—and other measures, that Parliament was going too far in introducing social legislation of this nature. It has taken some 25 years and many acts of Parliament to construct in Great Britain the organization which is now carrying on so effectively. It is not a haphazard way of dealing with the situation, but a highly organized department of government whose function it is to distribute to those who should have it the relief to which they are entitled.

"Legislation to deal with this whole subject will have to be undertaken by the Governments of Canada and the United States; otherwise, the problem will get out of hand and it will be impossible to control the proper expenditure of the vast sums which are being voted for the purpose of unemployment relief."

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—The industrial share market slowed down today leaving Distillers Seagrams, Massey Harris, Nickel and Ford A. to carry the bulk of the volume load. The whole price level was mainly firm.

Distillers Seagrams and Industrial Alcohol A, recorded gains, brewery shares were slow and unchanged and Nickel, Ford A. and C.P.R. were steady in the early afternoon. Loblaw A was stronger in the foods and Dominion Stores sold a fraction lower.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Dec. 7. — Scattered profit taking continued in the stock market today, but the trading volume was sharply reduced from that of the preceding session.

While various specialties moved up in exemplification of the extreme selectivity of the list, most of the leaders held to a narrow groove and there were a number of recessions in some groups. Bonds were firm in early dealings, but later reacted a bit under realizing.

Among Canadian stocks, Dominion Stores, McIntyre, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were all about unchanged. On the curb, Lake Shore sold a trifle lower. Dominion Government bonds were steady. Canadian dollars eased one-eighth of a cent at 102⅛ cents.

Despite the irregular trend, new highs for the year were recorded by Radio Preferred B, Interboro Rapid Transit and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit. These were up a point or so each at one time, but slipped back later. Rubbers displayed a better tone. Gains of fractions to around a point were shown by U. S. Rubber Common and Preferred, Goodyear and Firestone.

MAROONS WIN FROM AMERKS BY 8-2 SCORE

Gorman Has Montreal Team Close on Heels of Leafs

AMERKS OUTCLASSED

Switching Smith Back to Third Line is Smart Move

Montreal, Dec. 7 (CP)—Tommy Gorman, who led Chicago Black Hawks to the Stanley Cup last year seems to have indulged in some more of his well-known masterminding and as a result the record of Montreal Maroons today stood at five straight wins. Maroons won their fifth straight in speeding to an 8-2 victory over New York Americans here last night in the National Hockey League's game of the evening.

Gorman's strategy was questioned earlier in the season when he shifted his veteran centre, Hooley Smith, to the third line, with Herb Cain and Gus Marker, green youngsters, flanking him. That it was a smart move was proven last night when the line garnered 12 scoring points. Hooley Smith snared five assists, Herb Cain a goal and three assists, and Gus Marker three goals.

The win for Maroons, who played brilliant hockey to keep a crowd of 5,000 fans on the edge of their seats, firmly consolidated their grasp on second position in the Canadian section standing of the National Hockey League, four points ahead of Americans. The eight goals they scored duplicated the feat of Detroit Red Wings who scored eight against Rangers earlier in the season.

Herb Cain and Allan Shields tallied in the first before Red Conn scored for Americans. Stew Evans made it three for Maroons before the end of the period. In the second Earl Robinson and Gus Marker made the Maroon margin four goals with Red Dutton reducing the long lead by tallying on a pass from Chapman at the 16-minute mark.

Amerks Outclassed

Americans were completely outclassed in the third session, Russ. Blinco counting on Robinson's pass and Gus Marker scoring two in a row on plays with his line-mates, Smith and Cain.

The game served to call to attention the remarkable comeback after a year or more of comparative inaction of Alex. Connell, the visiting fireman from Ottawa.

Connell, guarding Maroons nets in succession to Dave Kerr, who is still being carried by the club, has established himself as a strong early season contender for the Georges Vezina trophy, held by the late Charles Gardiner of Chicago Black Hawks. White-faced Alex has been beaten but 13 times in eight games, a record which compares favorably with that of George Hainsworth of Toronto Maple Leafs, who has 15 against in ten games.

Maroons, with two games in hand today rested six points behind the speedy Leafs who have 18. Toronto has lost one game and Maroons two so that actually Tommy Gorman's horde is closer on the heels of Conn Smythe's squad than the standing makes it appear.

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

A few days ago the Peterboro sport scrivener hinted to all and sundry that Eddie Thomas and his Quinte intermediate pucksters would most likely "squawk to the high heavens" in protest to the proposed intermediate O.H.A. groupings afforded the locals. On the contrary Skipper Thomas was well pleased with the six team intermediate group afforded the locals, but apparently other clubs named in the group are dissatisfied. Already, we understand, there is a movement afoot to form a new group leaving the Campbellford Maroons, Lindsay and the local outfit out in the cold. The following sport note taken from the Port Hope Guide speaks for itself. It reads:

"At an organization meeting at Cobourg the intermediate hockey club decided to enter a team this year in the Western Lakeshore Group, with Port Hope, Peterboro and Bowmanville. Officers elected were: Honorary president, Frank Lowe and W. E. Edwards; president, Cecil Wilson; vice-president, William Wills; secretary, Jack Mulhall; and treasurer, J. Hutton. Jack Burnett, who presided over the meeting, was appointed manager."

It's a pretty kettle of fish when certain clubs can band together and tell the O.H.A. when and where they'll play, especially after the subcommittee of the organization has released the season's groupings. Peterboro, Campbellford, Belleville and we believe Lindsay were quite satisfied with the original grouping, but apparently Jack Burnett's Cobourg Ponies proved the flies in the ointment. No dissenting voice was heard from Port Hope, so outwardly it seems that the new group idea was hatched in Cobourg. Whether the O.H.A. will consider the new grouping suggestion is problematic as such a proposed loop would leave Belleville and Campbellford in the east alone while poor Lindsay, with their new arena, would be literally left out in the cold. The original grouping would materially assist hockey in the east and do much to stimulate the interests of the O.H.A. in this surrounding district.

Promoter Clem Allen called us up to call us down yesterday in reference to the statement we published on Tuesday relating to a return bout between Duggie Robinson and Mark Storms. Originally this bout was to have gone on, but at the last minute it was substituted with a go between "Rusty" Langman and Ted Harris. Langman incidentally is a brother of the famous Jack "Beans" Langman and also pitched consistent ball for the local junior baseball team last summer. If Langman can toss leather with the same degree of accurateness as he can the horsehide, well Mrs. Harris' little lad had better be on his toes. At any rate Promoter Allen has eight well-matched bouts, four being of the inter-city nature with a quartette of Peterboro mittsters battling four local boys in the main affairs of Monday night's boxing show.

Secretary Charlie Jeffs of the South End A.C. announced today the enlargement of that organization when a women's sport section was added to the club. The executive of the club apparently saw the advantage of ladies' sports and grasped the opportunity. They will meet in the club rooms every Thursday evening and will eventually cover all sport activities, both indoor and out, eventually. The minimum age for affiliation for the ladies was set at fourteen years and all interested are invited. Recently the S.E.A.C. held their annual men's trophy night when cups, shields and trophies won by the club or its members were presented. The evening proved most interesting and added considerably to the interest so keenly demonstrated throughout the early days of the club.

Up at the Alemite plant the other afternoon Harry Morgan and Garnet Sinfield were honored by their fellow employees when they were awarded the Harry MacKay trophy, emblematic of the tennis championship of the Stewart Warner-Alemite A.C. During the summer an extensive tennis tournament was indulged in with Morgan and Sinfield winning out. W. E. Rowsome, Jimmie Varley and Harry MacKay, donor of the prizes, occupied prominent positions during the presenation. Other trophies and medals were presented to victors.

A new racket is being introduced to sport fans at the City Hall on Saturday night when the rugby club is staging a bingo game with fowl as the major prizes. . . . For the luck ypersons it looks like a rather economical way in which to procure the Christmas turkey . . . The O.H.A. announced yesterday that the Kingston junior group, including Gananoque, is to have a B3 rating. Originally this group was rated Junior A. . . . Further announcements say that at last the Brockville Magedomas have landed a bearth in organized hockey. . . . After considerable controversy the Fulford-owned outfit wiggled into the Senior B. group. Pretty soft for the yachtsmen, eh?

After some argument the St. Thomas Yellowjackets have agreed to meet the Ottawa Rangers for the Dominion intermediate football championship on Saturday. The St. Thomas squad won the intermediate championship of Ontario, defeating Peterboro in the finals. Ottawa Rangers won the Quebec title. The Rangers agreed to defray their own expenses to "Mitch" Hepburn's home town for a sudden death game to determine the Dominion intermediate title. When the Peterboro intermediates advanced to the O.R.F.U. finals and made such a creditable showing against St. Thomas it naturally raised the stock of the Belleville team that chased the Petes to the wires in hte local group schedule.

4 INTER-CITY BOUTS CARDED

Boxing Show on Monday at "Y" Will be Full of Thrills

Four inter-city boxing bouts, between Peterboro and Belleville mittsters, are to be featured on the third monthly Stewart Warner-Alemite A. C. boxing card to be presented at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening. Promoter Clem Allen has scoured the central Ontario area in an endeavor to procure the best possible ring talent for his show. Six bouts that warrant main attraction featuring have been arranged with six out-of-town boxers meeting six local boys while two novice scraps are being offered to add spice to the program. These novice bouts usually prove crowd pleasers.

The main bout of the evening sees the return to a local ring of Len Minicola, conqueror of numerous lightweights in recent years. Minicola meets Bobby Vieau, now under the tutorship of Coach Hudson of the S.W.A.A.C. boxers. Ken Mayberry, who recently beat Bill Crawford, meets a stronger opponent in Freddie Parry while the return to a local ring of Jack "Beans" Langman will be welcomed by all local fight lovers. Langman meets Eddie Bruce, the 147-pound champion of Cobourg. Two other local scrappers, Bill Crawford and Howard Wheeler, are fighting to regain lost laurels, they meeting stiff Peterboro opposition.

The card:

1. "Wally" High, S.E.A.C. vs. "Ernie" Nolan, S.W.A.A.C.; 108 pounds.
2. Ted Harris, Aajmaa A. C. vs. "Rusty" Langman, S.W.A.A.C.; 145 pounds.
3. Reg. McMillan, Peterboro, vs. Tom McCarthy, Vancouver; 150 pounds.
4. Eddie Bruce, Cobourg vs. Jack Langman, S.W.A.A.C.; 147 pounds.
5. Pete Vitarelli, Peterboro vs. Bill Crawford, S.W.A.A.C.; 135 pounds.
6. Tony Ronco, Peterboro vs. "Dynamite" Wheeler, S.W.A.A.C.; 118 pounds.
7. Ken Mayberry, Oshawa vs. Freddie Parry, S.W.A.A.C.; 140 pounds.
8. Len Minicola, Peterboro vs. Bobby Vieau, S.W.A.A.C.; 147 pounds.

Trotting Futurity Prospect Purchased by Local Horseman

Royal McKillop, From Cruikston Farm Now in City

A Belleville owner will have his name on the score card for the trotting futurity at Toronto, next fall, providing no mishap occurs in training for a two year old colt was purchased last week by Elmer LaBarr of this city from W. P. Currie of the Cruikston Stock Farm. This colt called "Royal Killop" was brought to the city last week by Mr. Shibley, who broke and gave the colt its early education and who will continue to train this colt for the important stakes for which he is entered throughout Ontario, this coming season. Mr. LaBarr did not buy a cheap horse but one of the best bred colts in the Province and his early training has indicated he will go far and fast. Since his arrival the colt has been inspected by many horsemen who know a good horse and all admit he is something out of the ordinary. The colt will be three years old the first of January as ages of horses are fixed and at present stands fifteen hands two, with well matured wethers and fine moulded front shoulder. He is deep chested and heavy barrelled which shows his stamina. The animal is kind and has shown no traces of meanness and delights in his daily workouts, which are at present nothing but light jogging to get him well legged up for the heavy grind to come.

Mr. LaBarr has given to the sports column an extended pedigree of the colt and the blood strains are the best procurable. Royal McKillop was sired by Peter McKillop, his dam being Vera B. Grattan, a consistent race mare around Ontario. His grand sire is the famous Peter the Great, one of the really great trotters and grand dam on the sire side was Katie Todd. On the dam's side his grand sire is Grattan Royal, a fast pacer and his Grand Dam is Vera B. On the sire side he traces back to Pilot Medium and Santos, through to Happy Medium and Grand Sentinel while on the dam's side he goes back to Grattan and Hal B. The colt is a square gaited trotter with excellent stride and long reach. It is to be hoped the horse comes along in his training and that his owner and trainer have unlimited success in the racing game. Mr. LaBarr has been connected with the race game for years and when he went back in he procured the best available to start his stable.

FORTUNE FOUND ON SEA SHORE

Lump of Ambergris, Valued at $16,000 Used by Boy For Play

Rockland, Me., Dec. 7 (AP)—Young Roderick Crandall of this city became a member of that most exclusive and envied circles—the finders of Anbergris. At the same time he became the potential owner of a sum estimated at approximately $16,000.

Roderick's father, H. K. Crandall, a Rockland carpenter, said last night that chemists had reported that the 17-pound lump of yellowish wax which Roderick picked out of the sea at Islesboro was genuine ambergris. The youthful Roderick discovered the opaque mass while playing on shore, and for several days utilized it as a plaything—pushing it into the water and watching it bob out again.

Spying the object, his father suspected that it might be the rare substance sought by perfume manufacturers and sent samples to a chemist.

Meanwhile Maurice L. Decker, an Islesboro fisherman awaited chemical analysis of a 50-pound mass of similar substance he found in West Penobscot Bay.

Residents believed that the ambergris was deposited last summer by whales in Penobscot Bay.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—(CP)—W. B. Cleland of Troy, Ont., became a favorite to win the rich $1,000 stake for jumpers at the final Horse Show of the International Livestock Exposition when his crack hunters finished first and second in the jumping class last night.

"Dunadry", ridden by Mr. Cleland, won the triple-jumps over a field of 18 of the nation's finest mounts. His "Roxana," ridden by his brother, Marshal Cleland, was second. Third place went to "Briney" ridden by Corporal Batton of the 4th United States Cavalry.

OPIUM SEIZED

Vancouver Dec. 7.—(CP)—Royal Canadian mounted police today, were in possession of 40 tins of opium valued at $4,000 and five Chinese were charged with attempting to smuggle the drug ashore from the Canadian Pacific Liner Empress of Japan. The arrests and seizure were made last night. Two of the five accused were members of the Empress of Japan crew and three were Vancouver residents. They will be arraigned in court here.

Major Wemp Addresses Members of Tweed Club

Community Enterprise Discussed by Speaker

FORMER TWEED BOY

W. E. Tummon, M.P. Proposes Toast to Ball Team

Tweed.—Tweed Community Club got off to a splendid start in its winter activities with a dinner in the basement of the Presbyterian Church on Monday, December 3rd, at 6.30 p.m. The ladies of St. Andrew's Church, athough few in numbers, provided a dinner of which they may justly feel proud. One hundred men gathered to enjoy the banquet and to listen to Major Bert Wemp deliver a fine after-dinner speech. Major Wemp, a former Mayor of the City of Toronto, and at present Provincial Editor of the Evening Telegram, is an old Tweed boy, having been born on the Main Street.

At the head table, along with Major Wemp, sat Dr. W. A. Paul, President of the Community Club; Mr. I. D. Corcoran, Vice-President; Mr. S. R. Curry, Secretary, and Rev. R. R. Ncholson, United Church minister.

In the centre of the hall stood a table which was occupied by the members of the Softball team, winners of the Eastern Ontario Division, who were guests of the Club. On their table three fine trophies which they had won during the season occupied conspicuous places.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., as song leader, called upon the gathering to sing "O Canada". This was followed by grace offered by Rev. R. R. Nicholson. At the conclusion of the dinner, the toastmaster, Dr. W. A. Paul, called for the toast to the King. The National Anthem was heartily sung followed by the drinking of the toast. Several familiar songs under the direction of Mr. Tummon, with Miss Lois Richardson at the piano, were sung by the assembly.

The President appointed Sam Curry as Sergeant-at-Arms to collect fines from any who were not singing. His "eagle eye" soon spotted Tom Beatty who contributed the customary fine. Tom confessed that he was not singing because he had eaten too much. Others called on to contribute were C. H. Kerr, A. B. Allen and M. J. Quinn.

Mr. Jack Marchen rendered a pleasing solo with Mr. Raphael [illegible]otte playing the accompaniment.

The President then called upon Mr. Sam Curry who introduced the speaker. He referred to the fact that Major Wemp was born on the Front Street of Tweed, moving at an early age to Toronto. He still retained fond memories of Tweed and district which he knew so well. Major Wemp served overseas as a member of the Flying Corps. He was elected to membership on the Toronto Board of Education to the City Council, to the Board of Control and later defeated Mr. Sam McBride in the contest for the Mayoralty. He served the city well as its chief magistrate.

As Major Wemp rose to his feet to speech, he was greeted with the song, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and three rousing cheers, a fitting reception for one of Tweed's most famous sons on his first appearance in a public way.

Major Wemp expressed his appreciation of having the opportunity to be present at a community affair. He referred to his drive from Toronto and noted that in all his trip in only Belleville and Tweed did he observe signs of the Christmas spirit evidenced in a public way with trees, coloured lights, etc. He spoke of the splendid road from Belleville to Tweed which recalled memories of early days spent in Tweed. In talking with some of the old-timers who remembered his parents and grandparents he recalled that his grandfather had organized a stage route and driven a stage from Bridgewater (now Actinolite) to Belleville over corduroy roads. Then Actinolite was a thriving centre, superior to Tweed. It had a hotel of a hundred rooms with Billie Flint as proprietor. The speaker complimented the Softball team, saying that every place needed an athletic organization.

Speaking then on this main theme Major Wemp said that a community organization can do a great deal for a community, in fact there was little it could not do if everyone determined it should be done. He said that places are known by the efforts of its citizens. Some areas are made known by the men who come from them while in other instances men are known because of the places from which they came. Large centres mean little or nothing other than that they are made up usually of men who have come from the smaller centres and occupy high positions. Several instances of the results of community efforts were cited: the Hydro Electric Power System of Ontario stands out in the history of the world as probably the greatest example of community effort where many communities work together with a common purpose. The Canadian National Exhibition and the Royal Winter Fair are two outstanding examples of where men, outside of the staff, have given unsparingly and gratuitously of their time and effort. The members of the Rameses Shrine and the Knights of Columbus are noted for their community work. They take every child from various institutions in Toronto and give them a free trip to the C.N.E. each year.

Evidences of the success of community effort in Tweed are the Pavilion, the covered rink, Memorial Park, the Agricultural Society's Fall Fair. The speaker said that in every community there were too many men who were "shysters" and gossipers. Nothing destroys confidence so quickly as idle gossip, an easy habit to get into but a hard one to get rid of. In conclusion he recommended that before one talks about others he asks himself "Is it necessary? Is it worth while? Does it do yourself injury or the other man?"

Mr. I. D. Corcoran, Vice-President, briefly expressed the thanks of the men to Major Wemp for his excellent address and for his generosity in coming, those who had assisted with the programme and the ladies of the church.

Mr. W. E. Tummon in proposing the toast to "Our Guests, the Softball Team" said that one of the finest things which ever happened to man was when he learned to play. No one knows how long ago, but in 776 B.C. the first Olympic games were played. When team play was originated then each one forgot himself as an individual and thought only of himself as forming one of a group. Every advance made in civilization is due to team-play, to co-operation. A person to win a place on a team must be physically fit, well-trained, hold respect for his antagonist and have a strong sense of fair play toward his opponents. The speaker drew attention to the fact that most of the greatest games are played with a ball. He said that the spectators play an important point in games; the fans are in the game to a great extent. Speaking directly to the members of the team he complimented them on their fine record of winning three fine trophies, and becoming champions of Eastern Ontario, being eliminated only in the semi-finals with Barrie. Of greater importance than their success in winning victories was their gentlemanly conduct both on and off the field. This was even more to be admired. After three cheers for the team, Jerry Quinn, playing manager, in response said that their success was due in a great degree to the perfect harmony which prevailed during the season among the players.

The President, Dr. Paul, took advantage of the opportunity to enquire of the business men their views regarding the Community Christmas Tree. Several, including Mr. S. R. Curry, Dr. P. T. Bowlby and Mr. C. H. Kerr expressed themselves as strongly in favour of the project. Dr. Bowlby said that we owe it to the younger generation, many of whom do not get much candy at Christmas. He thought it would do much to inculcate the Community spirit in the children who are the coming citizens. These expressions of opinion were followed by a vote which was carried unanimously favouring the scheme.

The following committees were appointed:

Finance Committee—Messrs. T. N. Beatty, Ed Rath, Dr. Bowlby, R. Rashotte.

Tree Committee—Reeve W. H. Sayers.

Light Committee—Messrs. M. R. Rose and S. B. Rollins.

It was decided to leave the matter of purchasing candy in the hands of the Finance Committee.

A motion was passed favouring Saturday, December 22nd, as the day on which the parade should be held.

Mr. T. N. Beatty reported that the Township Hall could be obtained rent free and that the Club might go ahead with any project they wished for painting, cleaning and kalsomining. Contributions almost sufficient to defray the expenses of the Christmas Tree were received at the meeting.

BRITISH HIGHWAYS PLANNED

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(CP Cable)—A comprehensive and systematic survey of the highway development required in Britain will be announced to all highway authorities in the Greater London area tonight, the House of Commons was told today.

WHERE TWO PERISHED IN FIRE AT TORONTO

Said to have been celebrating the receipt of a pension cheque, two men, Norman McGaham, 35, and Edward Workinson, 70, both of Toronto, were burned to death when their room caught fire. Rescue was impossible and two men had narrow escapes attempting to drag the two men to safety. The would-be rescuers were forced to stand by and watch the two men burn to death. ABOVE shows a scene from room and the bed under which the body of one of the men was found.

Sidelines of County Council

Things look better this year in the back sections of Hastings County, in the opinion of several of the councillors. They volunteered the statement that less acute distress is noted among the poorer residents of the township than in the hard and severe weeks of this date last season. "More work for them this year. Farming has been carried right along, and many other odd jobs and outside operations have been kept up owing to the fine fall. In my section of Dungannon I can notice the difference," commented Reeve J. L. Churcher.

For the first time on record a woman may oppose the office of Reeveship for the township of Limerick this year. A present township councillor, Mrs. McMullen, well known in this city as well as thruout the northern townships has not stated definitely that she would not accept the nomination. And in the meantime, Reeve R. C. Brett who has held that office for these many years is receiving the usual amount of good-natured joshing and cajolery from his brother Reeves, who unearthed the secret.

There will be several new faces on the floor of the council chamber this coming year, it is predicted by many of the older Reeves, who keep track of nominations and elections as religiously as they attempt to pare down the estimates of their respective bailiwicks. And in nine times out of ten, with their hand so close to the pulse of popular feeling throughout the rural areas, they can spot and name their man weeks before his name goes before his own electors.

It is reported that in the rocky hills of the Township of Tyendinaga some unknown resident is cross breeding a wolf with a police dog in a remote out of the way place where prying eyes do not penetrate. And from the results of his careful and canny breeding an exceptionally fine litter of ferocious huskies have been obtained—merely for their pelt and the $15 bounty which a beneficient province pays on the official vermin and terror of the sheep herds. But if such is the case the genial Reeve of Tyendinaga, H. Larkin, does not know of it. And if he did know of it, his attempts to stop it would be useless. Because an already suspicious government has refused to have anything more to do with questionable pelts that ostensibly have come from the backs of the grey Tyendinaga sheep raiders. And County Treasurer J. W. Haggerty has already been officially informed of the fact.

Those in the city who have been harboring the notion that home soap making is a lost art may quickly disprove themselves of the idea. Because it has come to light, through the prying of an unamed county councillor that the county jail building is a happy hunting ground for a number of old timers who insist that the lather from home-made soap is the best for the family washing or the Saturday night bath. And the jail house? The reason is that since wood has been ordered as the standard fuel for the county buildings by the County Council some time ago, the fine ash from the ash pit of the big furnace has been the best procurable for the home-made trade of soap manufacturing. And one councillor regretted that he had not brought a bag with him to get some. "Because since I cut all the wood off my lot I've got to burn coal in the family stove now," he added.

Councillors on Thursday afternoon in open council sat patiently while warm sunlight flooded thru' the windows on the west side. The mellowness of the afternoon tempted sleep. One councillor's head hung heavy on his chest and he took a brief cat nap. The chairman droned through a lengthy legal barrage of 'whereases,' 'wherefores' and so on prominently and annoyingly peppered throughout the three closely spaced typewritten pages. As the chairman neared the end, the exertion betrayed itself in his voice. He was tired. The last line had been reached. He concluded. Looked around for some comment from the councillors. A sudden nudge from a compatriot at the next desk startled the sleeper into action. He awoke with a start. He was, he believed, expected to say something. In the very dim stillness of the room, he asked in a loud clear voice: "What was that again?"

MAIN ROADS KEPT CLEAR OF SNOW

County Council Gives Authority to Superintendent

Hastings County main roads will be kept free and clear from snow this winter following the adoption of a resolution to that effect moved by Reeve Judson Gunter of the Village of Bancroft at Thursday morning's session of Hastings County Council. The resolution which received unanimous endorsation by council was seconded by Reeve Gilroy of Wollaston. The resolution in full is:

"That whereas a large revenue is received through gas tax and the sale of auto licenses by our Provincial Government, and the tendency of the said government is to deal liberally in advancing funds for our country roads and taking over entirely main and leading roads throughout the county. Therefore this County Council deems it expedient that our chairman and Road Superintendent are hereby authorized to keep the main county roads free enough from snow during the fall, winter and spring of 1934-1935."

The question of snow removal had previously been brought upon the floor of the chamber by Reeve Gilroy. Although he had favored economy in this matter in the past, advancing heavy traffic on roads at the present time, and not too good train service in the rear northern sections of the county had greater demands for snow removal. Mr. Sim. Fox, County Road Superintendent was asked regarding the matter:

"I didn't want to make any plans regarding this snow removal this year without asking council on the matter, and having the backing of the councillors. I wanted to get some expression on this before adjournment was made."

To secure the feeling of council on the matter the resolution was put by Reeve Gunter.

DONNYBROOK FAIR SCENE AT PROBE

Verbal Battle Breaks Out Over Mass Buying Evidence

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—The mass buying commission had its stormiest session this morning with a verbal donnybrook breaking out over evidence relating to Dominion Stores, Limited. Before peace was restored, counsel for Dominion Stores had been lectured by Chairman W. W. Kennedy and members of the commission threw heated advice to each other.

It all started when Norman Sommerville, commission counsel, put witnesses in the box to refute evidence presented yesterday by Dominion Stores. Dominion counsel objected to the procedure, Arthur Ellis claiming he had never seen anything like it "in all my experience as a barrister".

Before it ended, Chairman Kennedy told Rupert Broadfoot, another Dominion lawyer, not to make "dissertations of that sort", advised Ellis he could not dictate to the commission and to "please keep quiet". At another point, the chairman said the whole protest by the Dominion Store lawyers was "window dressing" and permitted Sommerville to go ahead with the evidence.

Once or twice, members of the commission wrangled among themselves. Sam Factor (Lib., West Toronto) clashed with Hon. H. H. Stevens over the form of a question. Although the former trade minister said "we will get nowhere if we allow the narrow intrepretation of the police courts to guide us" the Toronto member's appeal to the chairman was sustained and the question was not answered. Before that, however, J. L. Ilsley, (Lib., Hants-Kings) entered the verbal lists, advising Mr. Stevens not to "steamroll your way".

Charles E. Reid of Toronto, one of the witnesses put in the box by Sommerville, said he saw one of the Dominion Store supervisors, Jack Smith, put his thumb on the scale when weighing a leg of lamb. Reid also said Smith saw him manipulate a string attached to a scale so as to give short weight and did not reprimand him.

Another witness, Stanley Atkinson, formerly a Toronto meat department manager, said he took over a store formerly managed by James Woods, a witness who appeared yesterday, and found a piece of fat under the deck of the scales. He said Smith never examined the scales as long as he was manager.

Atkinson told of a government inspector finding one of his scales short three-quarters of an ounce. He said he told Smith about it but did not lose his job.

WM. REYNOLDS ADDRESSES CLUB AT BONARLAW

Interesting Meeting of St. Mark's Men's Club

Bonarlaw, Dec. 7—On Tuesday of this week St. Mark's Men's Club met in the Sunday School rooms and despite several other attractions there was a good attendance. The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. Wm. Reynolds of Delore, Past President of St. Paul's Men's Club of Marmora. Mr. Reynolds address contained many helpful suggestions which were much appreciated by the members of St. Mark's.

Games were played while the members were assembling and after the business session an impromptu program was rendered consisting of solos, duets, talks, stories and orchestra selections.

On Thursday evening of last week the Organized Girls' Class, "The Willing Workers" of St. Mark's Sunday School held a banquet and social evening and invited as their guests the members of "The Argonauts Class and Rev. Canon and Mrs. Swayne.

Dinner was served about 7 p.m. and included hot roast beef, vegetables (several kinds) bread and butter, pickles, etc, pie, coffee. Mr. W. J. Barlow, People's Warden, acted as toastmaster. The toast list was as follows:

The King. "God Save the King."

The Church. Replied to by Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne, Rector.

Various Church organizations.

The choir, Mrs. (Rev.) W. G. Swayne, choir leader.

The Men's Club. Mr. Ernest Stiles, Secretary.

The Sunday School. Mr. W. F. Baker, Superintendent.

The W.A. Mrs. W. J. Barlow, Secretary.

The Junior W.A. Miss Margaret Brown, Treasurer.

Willing Workers Class. Mrs. J. F. Baker, Teacher.

Miss K. McComb, Treasurer.

As the banquet was held on the day of the wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina a toast was given to the bride and groom.

After the tables were cleared there was community singing, group singing, rounds, etc., also games of various kinds.

BEE HIVE GOLDEN CORN SYRUP A GREAT ENERGY FOOD

The regular meeting of the Springbrook Women's Institute was held on Wednesday afternoon of last week at the home of Mrs. Everett Sine. The atendance was somewhat smaller than usual owing to a funeral in the neighborhood. The meeting was opened by all singing the Institute Ode and repeating the Lord's prayer, Mrs. W. J. Barlow presiding.

It was decided to make application for the usual grant from the department, the money to be used for relief work in the northern part of the county, the relief committee to have charge of same.

Mrs. A. H. Reid, legislation convener, took charge of the program and gave a short paper on legislation and also a splendid paper on "Right Motives and Right Thinking." Miss Iva Brown gave a reading, "The Inventors Wife." Some community singing, led by Mrs. W. G. Swayne, organist, was much enjoyed. The paper on the motto, "No one is useless in this world who lightens the burdens of others" was prepared by Mell Fitzgerald, but owing to her absence was read by Mrs. J. F. Baker.

A contest was put on by Mrs. A. H. Reid and the meeting was closed with the National Anthem after which a dainty lunch was served and a splendid social half hour was enjoyed by all.

Word has been received of the death of Mr. Wm. Burkitt at Proctor, Minnesota. He was a brother of Mr. Christopher and John Burkitt and Mrs. Samuel McComb. Messrs. Chris, John, Clayton, Charles Burkitt and Mrs. Chas. Burkitt left by motor Thursday last to attend the funeral.

The many friends of Wm. Webb of Toronto, regret to hear that he has been quite ill but is reported as better this week.

Mr. Lorne Hartman shot a large hen hawk on Monday a.m. of this week near his home. It is the largest hawk ever seen in this district weighing three pounds and measuring three feet ten inches from the tip of one wing to the other. The creature almost got away with a six pound plymouth rock rooster but Mr. Hartman frightened it to a nearby tree and secured possession of his shotgun in time to shoot it from there.

Mr. Robert Foshay of Ivanhoe, and Mr. Cecil Baker of Peterboro were week end visitors last week.

Mr. M. Fitzgerald loaded a large car of hogs on Wednesday of last week.

AIR VIEW OF CENTRE OF EUROPEAN WAR OF DIPLOMACY

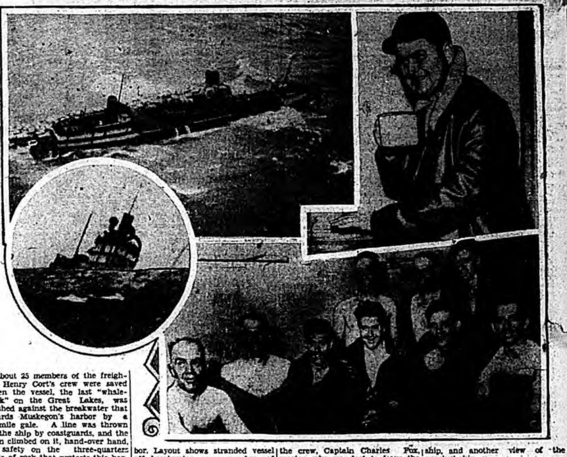
Despite the quietness of the European scene for a few days (that is comparatively) the Saar Valley still remains as the crucial centre of European diplomacy. With the plebiscite approaching (January 13) both Nazis and France are making efforts to assure that the vote will swing to their country, although observers concede the rich district to Germany if the vote is held. Pictured above is the residential district of Saarbrucken, largest and most important town in the valley. The Saar is wanted for its coal and iron deposits.

No Deal With France

JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP

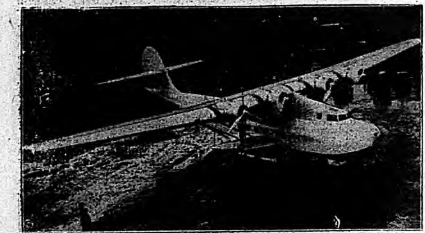
Reported returning to Germany, Joachim von Ribbentrop, personal envoy of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, was said to have failed to see high authorities in Paris concerning his presumed mission of negotiations for French recognition of Germany's rearmament in return to Geneva as a member of the League of Nations.

THRILLING RESCUE AS TWENTY-FIVE SAILORS SAVED FRO MSINKING FREIGHTER



About 25 members of the freighter Henry Cort's crew were saved when the vessel, the last "whaleback" on the Great Lakes, was washed against the breakwater that guards Muskegon's harbor by a 60-mile gale. A line was thrown to the ship by coastguards, and the men climbed on it, hand-over hand, to safety on the three-quarters mile of rock that protects this harbor. Layout shows stranded vessel off breakwater, some members of the crew, Captain Charles Fox, master, who was last to leave the ship, and another view of the wrecked ship.

SECRET OF "WORLD'S LARGEST LINER" MADE PUBLIC AT LAST



Its construction guarded with the greatest secrecy over a period of two years, the giant flying clipper, No. 5, said to be the world's largest air liner, has at last been shown. It was revealed for the first time to a small group of aviation executives and experts at Baltimore, Md. No. 5 was built for trans-Pacific use by the Pan-American Airways. It is a gleaming giant of chrome metal, measuring 90 feet in length, and 24 feet high, and it has a wing span of 130 feet. It weighs 23,100 pounds, empty. It will take the air, with its full crew, 50 passengers and capacity load of freight, weighing 51,000 pounds.

RED LEADER KILLED

SERGEI M. KIROFF

Said to have been groomed as successor to Stalin as head of Soviet Russia, Sergei Kiroff, little-known but influential leader in the Soviet was assassinated "by an enemy of the working class." It is reported from Moscow that 10 army leaders have been executed for taking part in a counter-revolutionary plot. Kiroff's assassin was captured after he attempted suicide.

"NO. I WOMAN PUBLIC ENEMY"

When Helen Gillis was trapped with two other women during raid on Dillinger hangout in Wisconsin, she hid her face from photographers and tried to conceal her identity from authorities. She and other girls obtained their freedom. Now "D.J." men know her as the wife of "Baby Face" Nelson, said to be native of northern Ontario and they are seeking her in connection with the killing of two federal men by Nelson just before his violent death. The face she hid in Wisconsin pictures is shown here.

GOLD CHILD CONSENTS TO POSE

The gold child relents! After her second Sunday of worship on Long Island, little Gloria Vanderbilt poses for her picture. She is accompanied by her aunt and guardian, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, as she leaves St. Mary's Catholic Church at Roslyn, L.I. A Pinkerton detective guards her. Gloria is attending church under the provisions of Justice Carew's decision in the custody action brought by the child's mother, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt. Last week Gloria attended St. Joseph's Church at Garden City, ten miles away.

WIFE ACCUSES HER

Named as an alleged former sweetheart of Gatty W. Jones, sales manager of an automobile firm, Betty Compson, above, screen actress, figured in an amended cross-complaint filed in Los Angeles by Elsie Mae Jones to her husband's suit for divorce. Jones declared he and Miss Compson had been friends since their high school days in Salt Lake City.

LEAVES MOTHER; GOES TO GRANDMA

Another Vanderbilt-Whitney case may be precipitated by Carroll Wainwright Jr. (RIGHT), eight, who ran away from his mother, now Lady Hector MacNeal of Bermuda, stowed away on a ship, and went to his grandmother, Mrs. Carl F. Wolff in New York. He was homesick, he said. Lady MacNeal, daughter of the late George J. Gould, United States financier, and her husband are shown.

MAY SOON AWAKEN

PATRICIA MAGUIRE

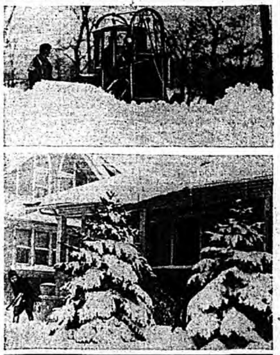
A victim of sleeping sickness since February, 1932, Patricia Maguire (ABOVE) has been is a state of coma since that time. For the first time since she was stricken, Miss Maguire raised her head a few days ago, and physicians now see some hope that she may soon awaken.

RIDERLESS—Coming in first but riderless, Soon Over is disqualified in a handicap at Bowie, Md.

Denies Air Romance

While Hollywood speculated on the possibility of another air elopement, after Katharine Hepburn, screen star, had flown to Albuquerque, N.M., with her manager, Leland Hayward, the actress went on to New York by train, leaving Hayward to wait for his private aeroplane to fly to the eastern metropolis. And Katharine said, "Of course we're not eloping." Both are shown ..BOVE.

BLIZZARDS HIT THE WEST



One of heaviest falls of snow since 1928, accompanied by a blizzard, struck middle-west United States and parts of Western Canada. Eight inches of snow fell and was piled by wind into drifts 12 feet deep. Photos show snowplows in St. Paul, Minn., and what the home-owner had to face to get out of his house. But it all makes more merry the Christmas shopping season.

HOLD CHINAMAN IN DEATH OF CHILDREN

Charlie Kee (ABOVE), charged with the murder of twin infant boys whose bodies were recovered from the bottom of Halifax harbor by a diver after a watchman reported seeing a Chinaman throw a bundle from pier 24. Kee confessed, police say, that Marion Celeste Durant (SHOWN) of Pomquet, Antigonish county murdered the babies by placing their heads in a bucket of water. The babies were not more than a few days old. Kee is charged with murder, the charge being laid before finding of the bodies. Miss Durant was charged with neglecting to provide assistance at childbirth. A feature of the case was the discovery of two Canadian copper cents in box containing the bodies. The cents are believed to be "grave goods" for use of the dead in the "other world."

Ann Steps Out

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

A twelve o'clock every one was either in bed or had departed for town. Ann, Nick, Doug, and Angela were still in the living room, and Ann thought now of how little she had seen of Doug during the week end. He had been with this girl and that and now he was with Angela at the other end of the room.

Nick tried to make conversation but was unable to get her mind away from Doug and Angela, sitting close together at the far end of the room, each intent upon what the other was saying.

Nick thought, looking down on her bronzed head, of what Angela had said: "Unless love makes one happy, it isn't the right kind of love. Is Doug so sure of her that he can ignore her like this before marriage?"

Angela got up with that sweeping grace of hers, walked to a cigaret tray and mashed out her cigaret. "The view is beautiful this time of the night," she said to Doug."

"I was thinking the same," he said and smiled at her.

Nick, watching them go past and out to the verandah, wanted to cry out, "Angela, dont do it! Don't hurt her this way! Don't disillusion her!"

But he said nothing and gave no warning because he hoped and believed now that Angela was right.

They stayed out there a long time and no word passed between Nick and Ann. Nick saw the expression on Ann's face. It was not an expression of jealousy. It was rather a hopeless look. She got up, slim and straight, and took a step toward the door. Nick could not restrain himself. With a pained look on his brown face, he put out his hand to stop her.

"Don't," he said.

Ann did not feel his touch, nor see him. She went to the door that led out on the verandah. Nick could not see her face but he saw the quick intake of her breath, the tension in her body.

Ann saw Doug—and in his arms Angela—their lips pressed together.

Ann could not move. She could say nothing. She did not cry.

She didn't know that it was the death of love.

She felt no anger toward Doug or toward Angela; she knew after a moment that she felt nothing. No feeling—no hurt, only a wounding of pride and a kind of self-pity because she had been so wrong.

It was not the kiss. It was not finding him with another woman, but seeing him like this, she saw other unfaithfulness, other women with their heads on his shoulder as Angela's was now.

Doug released Angela and Angela saw Ann. Then Doug turned and saw her, too.

"Ann........"

Saying her name—once it had stirred her. It had brought her to him whenever he needed her. Now it was an empty, meaningless thing that came from his lips.

"Ann....please...." Doug's voice, imploring.

Nick was beside her. Curiously, she had reached forth her hand and Nick had been there to take it—a gesture more significant than words. Nick, there, beside her. That was right. That never failed. Nick beside her, tall, distinguished. Nick with brown eyes and tanned face.

Doug stepped forward into the light. "Ann, forgive me," he said. "It wasn't anything. It didn't mean anything...."

"You told me," said Angela, ready and willing for Ann's for Nick's sake, "that it meant a great deal to you. You said...."

Ann lifted her hand. "What does it matter?" She turned to Doug and said, not unkindly, "I saw then how wrong I've been about you. You didn't come back humbly after Gail left you—to me—to Ann Dryden. You came back to Ann Hamill, a new girl, you thought, a girl with money. I'm not a new girl. I'm the same. But money blinded you. It was between us. We could never have been happy with that between us."

"Please......" said Doug.

Ann smiled.

"I was willing, knowing that every one was against me, to marry you because I believed in you. Now I don't believe in you. Nothing you can say or do will make me believe. It isn't your kissing Angela —not Angela. It's coming out here—seeing a woman in your arms. I knew then it would be only the beginning of many stolen kisses for you."

Her voice was not shrill or angry. It was low and even and controlled.

"Won't you let me explain?" asked Doug.

"Explain kissing Angela?" she asked, mocking him, wondering why she felt absolutely nothing toward him, wondering why she had ever loved him, believed, waited, despaired for him. "It doesn't need an explanation. I don't blame any man for wanting to kiss Angela."

"You mean," he asked, "we're through? You mean you won't marry me now?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I see. You think I'm not good enough for you—for Ann Hamill. That's a laugh, all right. What did you used to be? John Hamill's stenographer, a girl who wasn't anything, who didn't have anything, a girl I was ashamed to ask to my college dances! But you are Ann Hamill now—and the Hamill's bend to you—even the old lady herself."

"This won't help you," said Ann. "It will only make us bitter."

"I'm not good enough"! he cried in the tones of an outraged child. "I'm no pauper, even if Dad did make his money during the war—the Hamills probably call him a profiteer. There are still plenty of girls willing to take a chance with me." He strode out by her. "I'm leaving and I'm taking my car. You can get back to town the best way you can. Nick," he gave Nick a quick, cynical glance, "will take you back—one Hamill to another."

He went out and slammed the door. When Ann turned, Angela was nowhere in sight.

"Where is Angela?" she asked.

They walked back into the room again. "Angela went away," he said. "I heard her leave in my car. Ann, this was Angela's trick. Now she's gone away, back to New York to marry Ronald Farber, an old admirer of hers."

"A trick? Oh, I see. I thank her for it. It was that that made me see him as I should have seen him years ago—weak, without strength. Nick I've been so blind, so wrong! I've given so much to the wrong man!"

She sat on the cushion before the fire and ran her fingers through her hair.

Nick stood over her.

"It was funny," she said, "the way everything became so clear—like a revelation. Everything was blurred before—like trying to walk up a dark street. Doug is gone and I feel nothing. No anger, no hurt—nothing. "She lifted her head and her lips parted. "Perhaps I shouldn't tell you this, Nick. Perhaps I haven't the right. But when I reached out my hand tonight for you, for something to hold onto, and you were there, tall and strong I had the same feeling that I used to feel with Doug. I've been fighting something I've wanted for a long time. I don't know why I know now" her voice was low,' I know now—that all the time I've loved you."

He came down on his knees beside her on the soft rug. He put his arms around her. Ann put her face close to his.

"One night you kissed me," she said, "and it was a kiss I never forgot. I tried to forget it but it always stayed with me. Nick—kiss me again like that."

He kissed her full on the lips and held her close.

"I've been so wrong, so foolish, like a groping child," she said, "but the price won't have to be paid now."

"You'll marry me, Ann?"

She nodded. Her eyes were clear. Her face smiling. Not even the memory of Doug remained.

"I'll marry you," she said, "in the morning."

In the morning, he thought. In the morning they would go to town and be married quietly as Jaan and Dick had done. Then they would catch a train to the New Hampshire mountain lodge. In the morning the rain would be gone and the sky would be bright again.

He held her close and put his cheek against hers.

"In the morning," said Nick.

The weight of the ape-man crushed Sheeta to earth, the long knife imbedded in his side. Once the panther attempted to rise; but only to sink to earth again. Sheet was dead.

The ape-man placed his foot upon the body of his vanquished foe, raised his face toward the thundering heavens and screamed forth the wild victory cry of the bull-ape.

Having successfully driven the panther from his lair, Tarzan gathered an armful of large fronds and climbed to his dripping couch.

When the rain ceased the trail he had been following was entirely wiped out. It was a sullen, surly brute that moved into the southwest hoping to again pick up the trail of the Reds.

ACCUSED CAPTAIN

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked and pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair, saying, I saw a remarkable gadget for sharpening razor blades today. It looked like a cross between a meat grinder and a windmill and a bewtiful red haired gerl was demonstrating it in the window of a drug store. Now that I come to think of it. I dont know why a gerl, however, bewitiful or Titian locked, should be demonstrating razor sharpeners, but at the time it seemed quite appropriate and even simbolic. I'd be the least serprised man in the werld to find myself buying one of those gadgets, they ony cost 6 dollers with full directions included, pop said.

Now Willyum if you threw away 6 more dollers on another silly shaving invention, I dont care if it was demonstrated by the entire Zigfield Follies, I declare to goodnest I'll throw it away bodily before it has time to demonstrate its own uselessness, ma said, 6 dollers may be only 6 dollers, but if you put it at compound intrist for an indefinite time you'd be amazed, I was reeding an article on that subjeck yestidday. So why waste another 6 dollers when you alreddy have a perfeck museum of dust laden gadgets? she said.

But this one seemed to be the perfeck ideal one that all the others have been patiently leeding up to, so if I dont get it that meens I'll really be waisting all the money I spent on the others, and besides they're offering a stunning little brass clock for a lady's dressing table free as a premium with each sharpener, pop said, and ma said, Really? Well, I dont want to be narrow minded and condem the future by the passed. Perhaps after all, as you say, this mite be the exception that disproves the rule, she said. Is the clock really attracktive? she said.

O that I just made that part of it, pop said.

And he laughed till ma threw a cushion at him and then he laughed even more.

YULETIDE SUPPER AND TEA SERVED BY "Y" AUXILIARY

A Yuletide atmosphere prevailed at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday when members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y. entertained at a delightful Christmas tea and supper. Rows of tall Christmas trees sparkling with tinsel and twinkling with gainly colored lights formed an avenue from the entrance doors to the foot of the stairs. Wreaths of evergreen with poinsetta were hung from the wall lights. In the reception room where afternoon tea was served the same attractive background was arranged. The tea table was particularly charming, centred with Christmas flowers and roses, with four tall vases of baby 'mums striking a note of accent. Streamers of red crepe paper were caught to each corner of the table and the whole effect was unusually effective.

The guests were received by the President, Mrs. [illegible] Hickey, and Mrs. Jos. Shortt and invited to the tea room by Mrs. C. O. Greenleaf. Miss E. Corbett and Miss Elsie Forman were conveners of the tea. Mrs. B. F. Jennings and Mrs. J. A. Seymour poured tea while those assisting in the serving were Mrs. Hitchon, Miss Aileen McKeown, Mrs. Stanley Russell, Mrs. Norman Edwards and Mrs. G. W. Michael.

At six-thirty a dinner was served in the lecture room of the Y. The long room was transformed into a splendid dining-room and its tasteful decorations made it very inviting. Small tables were arranged and a place card for each person who had purchased a ticket resulted in guests being assigned their seats in a very orderly fashion.

Each table was centred with a cherry tree, while the colorful jellies and the touch of green in the fruit cup carried out the shades of green and red. As the guests entered the room they were greeted with the strains of music played by Bridge Street Sunday School Orchestra, which contributed a splendid program of classical and ballad music.

The conveners of the supper were Mrs. J. N. Boyd and Mrs. Talbot Ketcheson. At the tea table centred with a mass of mums, Mrs Stillman, Mrs. Scantlebury, Mrs. LaRue and Mrs. C. Finkle poured tea while ices were cut by Mrs. Arbuckle, Mrs. Harry Hill, Mrs. Crozier and Mrs. Clare.

A delicious meal was provided for the guests, every delicacy being available and faultlessly served by those in charge. They were Mrs. McMurray, Mrs. Ragsdale, Miss Mary Greenleaf, Mrs. W. Boyd, Miss Arbuckle, Mrs. Moncrief, Miss Shortt, Miss Sulman, Mrs. Harry Thompson, Mrs. Hartmann, Mrs. Roblin, Miss Boyd, Miss Coulson and Miss Stillman.

During the evening community singing was enjoyed with Mr. Stan Wilbur acting as song leader, assisted by Mr. Russell Wotten.

The efforts of the members of the Auxiliary were warmly commended by the guests who agreed that the supper was one of the finest served in the city during the season.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Chicago, Dec. 8 (CP)— Bird lovers are going in for "jazz singing" canaries rather than rollers or "opera singers", Tom Cook told the Greater Chicago Cage Bird Club at an open show in which more than 500 birds were entered.

He said this was probably due to competition with music in the modern home.

New Castle, Del., Dec. 8 (CP) —Mr. and Mrs. Sam Franks decided to do some poultry raising when they moved to the country from the city.

So they acquired 180 chickens and turkeys but became so attached to them as pets they couldn't bring themselves to kill one for a Thanksgiving meal.

They've just admitted they drove to Wilmington to buy a turkey.

Hamburg, Pa., Dec. 8 (CP) — Soaked to the skin after tramping through woodlands in the rain searching for deer, a group of hunters sought refuge at a country hotel near here.

While there, nine deer, five doe and four bucks, came leisurely down the hill, passed the hotel, and then swam the Ontelaunee Creek.

The hunters dashed to the field, and all fired, but too late. Not a deer fell.

Saint John, N.B., Dec. 8 (CP) —Royal Canadian Mounted Police lived up to tradition and got their man but they didn't hold on to him and he escaped. Arrested for illegally possessing liquor, John McCarthy broke away from an R.C.M.P. officer while being escorted down the steps of the county jail, jumped from a roof 35 feet high and escaped.

Granby, Que., Dec. 8 (CP) — Adrien Lacroix, 27, an electrician was electrocuted yesterday when he is believed to have slipped and fallen on a high tension wire while working atop a telephone pole. He died instantly.

Montreal, Dec. 8 (CP)—Convicted in Recorder's Court of having shipped milk contaminated by manure to Montreal markets, three St. Johns, Que., milk producers were sentenced to pay $10 and costs or spend 15 days in jail. The men are Raoul Ethier, Joseph Ethier and J. A. Champoux.

Chicago, Dec. 8 (CP)—Mrs. Edward Schmidt came into court today with an unusual story.

Her husband beat her while she slumbered, Mrs. Schmidt said, but he apologised and said he had done it in his sleep.

She moved to another chamber, the woman went on, but she was beaten again. Schmidt explained that, she added, by saying he must have walked in his sleep and was unconscious of his actions.

Judge Joseph B. David awarded the plaintiff a divorce.

MONTREAL SPREAD IN WELSH COAL URGED FOR PROBE

Belleville Chamber Open Forum Would Refer Matter to Inquiry

RECOMMENDATION MADE

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., Has Figures of Dealers' Margins at Ottawa

Acting on the opinion that the price spread in Welsh coal between the price of the fuel as received at Montreal and the price charged when shipped from that point to Belleville is entirely unwarranted, Belleville Chamber of Commerce Friday evening, at the New Queen's members meeting in open forum, Hotel, recommended that the problem be referred to the Mass Buying and Price Spread Commission now meeting at Ottawa for complete investigation.

While the meeting was given a figure which is believed to represent the gross profit of Belleville dealers on Welsh anthracite, and which was said to be below that made by Ottawa dealers, no reference was made in the resolution to the local phase of the question. It was the profit at Montreal which concerned the meeting.

No information was available as to cost laid down at Montreal.

Mayor George O. Tice, seconded by Past President H. E. Fairfield of the Chamber of Commerce, the resolution incorporating the expression of views of the membership at the open forum meeting,—

"That this meeting of members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in open forum assembled, is of the opinion that there is an entirely unwarranted spread between the price of coal as received at the Port of Montreal and the price charged when shipped from that point to Belleville.

"This meeting therefore, strongly recommends that this problem be referred to the Mass Buying and Price Spreads Commission now in session in Ottawa, so that a thorough investigation of every phase of the subject may take place."

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings, guest of the Chamber of Commerce dinner, presented certain phases of the Welsh coal problem particularly as to price and the multiplicity of grades. The chairman of the open forum, Mr. C. W. Browne, in introducing him, said that Mr. Tummon had been asked to assemble what data he could on the coal question.

Mr. Tummon was able to show that Belleville dealers at the same price paid at Montreal, were making less gross profit per ton at the prices they charged here on Welsh coal, than were Ottawa dealers.

Local Situation

In the discussion which followed Mr. Tummon's address, nothing was said to indicate that there was any belief that the local dealers had made too big a spread, Mr. Tummon showing that at $16.50 per ton, the Belleville coal men had a margin of $2.80 as against the $3.25 margin in the sales at Ottawa.

Mr. Tummon was able to gather figures for Ottawa over a term of years, for the three months of January, June, and December of the years 1928 to 1932, for five months in 1933 and for the year 1934 up to the end of November.

In January 1928 for Ottawa Welsh coal wholesaled f.o.b., Montreal at $13.25 and with freight of $1.50 per ton, cost the Ottawa dealer $14.75 which he retailed at $18.50 a dealers margin of $3.75. In the five years to 1933 the lowest f.o.b. price at Montreal was $11.00 which was in May 1933. This coal which cost the dealer at Ottawa $12.75 was sold at $16.25 meaning a dealer's profit of $3.75. In January of that year the dealer's margin was $3.65 and for other months it was $3.50 and $3.00.

In the year 1934, in November the price f.o.b. Montreal was $12.00 which meant coal cost Ottawa dealers $13.50 at Ottawa after paying freight. This allowed $3.25 profit at the sale price of $16.75. In January of this year with the f.o.b., Montreal price of $11.75 the profit at retail of $16.75 was $3.50. In May 1934, the import price was $11.25 which allowed a dealer's margin of $3.75 at $16.50 per ton retail at Ottawa.

Mr. Tummon pointed out that provided the same f.o.b. Montreal prices rule, with freight of $1.70 to Belleville (instead of $1.50 to Ottawa), the dealer at Belleville made $2.80 per ton at $16.50 retail. This margin of course does not take account of dealer's expenses. The Belleville difference is 45c lower than the Ottawa at present, being 25 cents less for the coal, and 20 cents more for freight.

Wing Commander Breadner, D.S.C., Leaves Airport to Take Staff Course

Distinguished Flier Studied Under Famous Orville Wright, First Airman—Speaks Modestly of His Own Career and Post-War Service—Sees Present Type of Airplanes as Standard, With Possibilities in Autogyros.

WILL STUDY AT LONDON, ENGLAND

When Orville Wright and his brother were tinkering with a "fool contraption" called an aeroplane at their workshop in Dayton, Ohio, and finally astounded the world by their successful flights with a heavier than air machine, no one followed the development work of the determined pioneers with greater interest than a young, alert boy in the district of Carleton Place, Ontario. Flying was in his blood. He thrilled to the daring exploits of the hard working and ambitious Wright brothers. He dreamed of the day when he, too, might soar through the blue in a flying machine handled by himself. Later that boy was destined to not only realise his ambition of becoming a full fledged pilot, but of studying under those who first made flight possible.

In the executive offices of the Royal Canadian Air Force base on the Trent Road, Wing Commander L. S. Breadner, D.S.C., sat at a polished desk and reviewed those earlier days of flights and flying when but a mere handful of the nation's birdmen were qualified to call themselves pilots of the then shaky machines.

On meeting the Commander one is impressed with his engaging personality that immediately puts you at your ease. He has a well knit figure, not tall but with the fine broad shoulders of the athlete. His voice, too, is of that splendid robust quality that never requires to repeat a statement in order to be heard. Altogether, Commander Breadner appears to be the type of man that is qualified to act as leader and who always does the right thing in an emergency.

Enters Imperial College

It was a sort of a goodbye interview arranged between Commander Breadner and a representative of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer. For Commander Breadner is leaving the airport where he has been in command for the past three years and later in the month will journey to Halifax. From there he will take ship across the Atlantic to England and will enter the Imperial Staff College at London for one year. Whether he will resume command of the local base upon his return is not known. During his absence Wing Commander G. O. Johnson of Ottawa will take command.

"Flying is a little different now than it was then," he admitted with a smile in answer to the question in reference to the old days.

Outside on the tarmac a silver grey speedy looking plane droned through its warming up period. A beggogled pilot swung a leg up and slid into the cockpit. Standing mechanics hauled the chocks from the wheels. The motor burst into a crescendo. Effortlessly the trim, speedy plane lifted from the ground after a short run and with a sonorous drone headed almost vertically into the hazy sky. One of the base pilots was out on a practice flight.

"A little different in those days from the planes we have now," added the Wing Commander, glancing through the wide-paned bay window of the office.

MAYOR TICE HOPES FOR CO-OPERATION OF ALL

Request No-Parking Laws Be Observed During Christmas Season

"I'll go further than merely suggest to the merchants of the city that they observe the no-parking law during the Christmas shopping season" stated Mayor Geo. O. Tice today.

"On Monday I intend to issue a proclamation in respect to this matter, and if that doesn't produce the necessary results I guess we'll be forced to introduce a no-parking bylaw in city council at an early meeting."

"Last year I suggested that same thing, that merchants of the city agree not to park their automobiles along Front Street during shopping hours in the stores. Hundreds of would be shoppers, who visit the city here to do their shopping can't find parking space when the streets are blocked with cars, and they travel on to some other place. We are going to try and do something about it this year".

"If the merchants only knew it, the observance of the no-parking rule is more for their own benefit than to anyone else.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIES A TNEW HIGH

Following the declaration of a bonus of $1.50 which brought the dividend payments to a new peak of $6 a share on common the stock moved up to a new high with only a small block offered even at 185. Two years ago the shares sold at under 50.

SIR JOHN SIMON WRIT IS ISSUED

Announcement May Mean Steps Begin For Libel Action

London, Dec. 8 (AP)— It was announced unexpectedly today that a writ has been issued in behalf of Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, in respect to statements that he was interested in armament firms and that his conduct of British foreign affairs was thereby affected.

This brief announcement from authoritative quarters in London was all that was available for the moment in what appeared to be a sensational development in the proposed British inquiry into the manufacture of arms.

(While the exact nature of the writ issued in behalf of Sir John Simon could not be determined from London advices it was considered probable the action was preliminary to libel proceedings.)

It was recalled in these quarters that Sir John recently took a prominent part in the House of Commons discussions concerning a possibility of a British inquiry similar to the Washington Senate investigation.

Sir John Simon's name figured also in the arms inquiry at Washington this week. Official quarters in London said they had no information in this connection excepting what had appeared in the press.

Late this week Sir John was subject to criticism in some newspapers in connection with British participation in policing the Saar territory under League of Nations jurisdiction during the forthcoming plebiscite.

Anthony Eden announced in Geneva that British troops would cross the channel to supervise the plebiscite, and editorials immediately demanded to know why only a few days previously Sir John in the House of Commons had indicated that British troops would not be used.

EAST SHIVERING AS WEST WARMS

Klondyke City is One of Warmest Cities With 54 Degrees

(By The Canadian Press)

An eastbound cold wave struck Ontario and swept across Quebec into the Maritime Provinces last night shoving temperatures down into the zero and below-zero register, while the West relaxed under a return of milder weather.

At 8 a.m. Dawson was enjoying a temperature of 54 degrees Fahrenheit; Victoria thermometers read 40, with Calgary tapering off to 34 and Edmonton 20 degrees.

In Moosonee it was 28 below zero; Sault Ste. Marie, London, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto all awoke to zero weather today, although the official reading at Toronto was three degrees on the warm side.

FRENCH AVENGER WINS ACQUITTAL

Jury Frees Father Who Killed Son-in-law Who Slew Daughter

Paris, Dec. 8—(CP-Havas)—Jules Lissoir, 65, who exacted an eye for an eye after tracking down the slayer of his daughter, walked the streets of Paris today a free man.

The prosecutor at Lissoir's trial for murder told the jury yesterday, "this man did his duty as a father and head of a family," and the 12 good men and true agreed.

Back in 1925 Lissoir's son-in-law, named Van Der Horst, slew his wife at Liege, Belgium, because she sought to divorce him. Van Der Horst was condemned to 20 years at hard labor but his sentence was lightened and he was given liberty in 1932.

Knowing the great hate his father-in-law bore him, the young man sought refuge in France. However, after a long but never faltering hunt the aged Belgian found Van Der Horst in Paris and killed him. He gave himself up to police.

In court Lissoir expressed only satisfaction that he had been able to avenge the murder of his daughter. The case for his acquittal was built on the promise that the old man's reputation was excellent, whereas that of the son-in-law had been poor.

WARN HOTELMEN AGAINST EVASION

Cannot Open Dining Rooms After Eleven Unless Meal Served

Toronto, Dec. 8—Hotelmen who try to skate around regulations and use dining rooms as beverage rooms between 11 o'clock and midnight, placing "rubber sandwiches" before customers, will lose their licenses, Arnold Smith, deputy commissioner of the Liquor Control Board, said today.

A report that beverage rooms in some places were closed promptly at 11 o'clock and customers then herded into dining rooms where "something resembling a sandwich" was put before them so they could continue drinking until midnight gave rise to the warning by the deputy commissioner, who said the minimum cost of a meal must be 25 cents.

ONTARIO HORSE WINS STAKES

Chicago, Dec. 8—(AP)— The $1,000 horse show stake at the International Livestock Exposition was held today by W. B. Cleland, of Troy, Ont.

Cleland, whose prize jumpers have featured every show of the week, rode his black mare, Margot over the hurdles last night to win the rich first prize and then added $150 for third place which was won by his bay gelding, Activity.

His other two mounts finished seventh and eighth to share in the purse.

BODY PROBABLY ROBBED

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—An overcoat, a watch and possibly a sum of money were missing from the person of Dr. Beverley Z Milner, 15 Glencairn Avenue, when he was found dead in his automobile on Jackes Avenue near Yonge Street Thursday police learned last night.

The police are searching for a thief who probably discovered the doctor first after he had suffered a heart attack, and divested him of his coat, watch and money.

PROTEST DISMISSALS

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 8—(CP)— The North Bay branch of the Canadian Legion at its annual meeting last night protested to the North Bay Liberal Committee dismissals from Government positions of ex-service men.

It was estimated that ten returned soldiers in North Bay have been discharged from their jobs.

Alex. M. Stuart was elected president of the Branch.

GUILTY OF EXTORTION

London, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP)— Harvey Taylor, last member of London's blackmail ring to come to trial, today was found guilty of conspiring with Mrs. Mae Turnbull to extort $2,100 from "Mr. A" and was sentenced to spend nine months to one year in the Ontario Reformatory.

"AL" SMITH TO SHOW DR. DAFOE SKYVIEW OF N.Y.

Will View City From Atop World's Largest Building

VISITS NIGHT CLUB

Will Speak in Carnegie Hall on The Dionne Quintuplets

New York, Dec. 8— (CP)—From atop the world's tallest building Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to Ontario's quintuplets, will get a skyview of New York's wonders under the guidance of another great lover of humans—Alfred E. "Al" Smith.

The programme for the three-day visit the country doctor of international renown starts Sunday was made public today, and showed the hustling life he led in bringing Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Dionne's five amazing daughters through six months of live, will stand him well in New York.

An early Sunday train will bring Dr. Dafoe to the city, along with his brother, Dr. W. A. Dafoe of Toronto, and the latter's wife. After some food, he will receive the press in a downtown hotel. It probably would be closer to the truth to say he will be engulfed by the press.

George M. Gales, president of the Drug Company, which is behind Dr. Dafoe's trip—he patronizes their store in North Bay—will rescue the visitor and his party and hustle them off to the quiet of the Gale estate at Locust Valley, L.I.

See Sights Monday

The doctor's expressed wish to see the city, the statute of liberty, the Bronx zoo and Bellevue Hospital will be satisfied Monday. It will be a sky panorama of the city he will receive. He has an appointment with "Al" Smith at the latter's office in the Empire State Tower at 10.30 a.m. They will look down from the 103rd floor observation tower upon the metropolis and, if visibility is good, upon New Jersey, the Atlantic, Connecticut and more. With "Al" the excuse-me-while-I-point man, Dr. Dafoe should not miss much.

Monday evening, in storied Carnegie Hall, the big little doctor from the north will tell of the quintuplets in a 6,000 word address. The first 3,000 of the 20,000 persons who sought the free tickets to the lecture will listen in.

Going to Night Club

Tuesday purposely has been left open so the noted visitor might do anything that tickles his fancy. Having expressed a desire to see a New York night club, arrangements have been made for that and he will likely spend a part of that evening satisfying the whim.

Wednesday he goes on to Washington, probably to be received by President Roosevelt. Thursday he will be at Baltimore at Johns Hopkins Hospital, and that night the long journey back to Callander, Ont., and the quints will be started.

MAN DIGS WELL THEN FALLS IN

William Dermedy, Stirling, is Patient in Hospital

Stirling, Dec. 8— (Special) — Turning quickly, William Dermedy suffered a painful injury to his left knee and side when on Tuesday evening, forgetful of the well obscured by darkness which he had himself helped to dig but that afternoon, he slipped partially into its depths wrenching his knee and side most painfully. Dr. E. A. Carleton was summoned and pronounced the injuries to be of a minor nature, the ligaments of the knee being torn and the side badly scraped. The injured man is having an x-ray of the injured member taken in Belleville on Thursday. Meanwhile Bill will be incapacitated for some little time.

SEARCHERS REDUCED

Honolulu, Dec. 8 (AP)—The search for Flight Leutenant Chas. T. P. Ulm and his two companions continued today with a reduced force of naval surface craft.

Although hope of locating the flyers, who were forced down in the Pacific five days ago on a flight from Oakland, Calif., to Honolulu appeared slender, three destroyers and three coast guard vessels were ordered to proceed northward to retrace areas previously covered in the darkness.

Held in Greece

ANTHONY FOKKER

After discovery by officials of photographs alleged to have been taken of an arsenal and other fortified places in Greece by Anthony Fokker, the famous German aeroplane designer was forbidden to leave the country. Fokker has spent most of his time in recent years in the United States.

FRANCE UPHOLDS JUGOSLAV ACTION WARNING WORLD

"Moving Frontier Post" Troublous to Peace of Europe

PROOFS OF COMPLICITY

Geneva, Dec. 8—France today reiterated her warning to countries demanding revision of treaties that whoever "moves a frontier post troubles the peace of Europe."

The phrase was used a second time in two weeks by Pierre Laval, the French Foreign Minister, during his address today before the council of the League of Nations sitting in on Jugoslavia's charges that Hungary harbored the Croat terrorists who plotted and executed the assassination of King Alexander.

In issuing this direct challenge to the demands for treaty revision made yesterday by Dr. Tibor De Eckhardt, Hungarian delegate to the League, Laval at the same time affirmed that only an international agreement on terrorism could avoid repetition of the Marseille tragedy and bring swift punishment to future offenders.

The proofs brought by Jugoslavia of Hungary's complicity in the Marseille affair were impressive, the French Foreign Minister said.

"In this grave problem," he declared, "France is at Yugoslavia's side.

"France was struck at the time as Yugoslavia. In striking at the knightly King Alexander, first to unify Yugoslavia, the assassin struck at peace and wished to nullify the king's work. That work persists and depends on us, we the Council of the League of Nations, and we must see to it that peace is not imperilled."

HENDERSON WINS 1934 PEACE PRIZE

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 8—(AP)—Arthur Henderson, President of the League on Nations Disarmament Conference is to be awarded the Nobel peace prize Monday, it was learned here today.

London, Dec. 8—(AP)— Arthur Henderson, whose work as President of the Disarmament Conference has brought him much into the public eye, was lying low and dodging inquiries as to whether he had received official notice of the Nobel Peace Prize award today.

CHIEF JOHN LOCKE PROFUSE IN THANKS

A letter of appreciation for favors received while in Belleville, was received today by Chief Kidd from Chief of Police J. L. Locke, of Ontario, Cal. Incorporated in the letter Chief Locke wished to thank all the members of the local force, who contributed to his general entertainment, while in the city some time ago. Chief Locke spoke highly of Canada and Canadians and expressed a desire of some time revisiting Belleville and renewing acquaintances. Some personal reference to the Vermilyea matter in which Chief Locke is interested, was also made.

FOREIGN CREDITS OF ALL ITALIANS TO BE CONVERTED

Gold Hemorrhage From Italy Forces Il Duce to Stern Measure

CONVERSION INTO LIRE

Heavy Penalty Will Be Imposed on Those Who Refuse

Rome, Dec. 8.—Forcible conversion of all foreign credits held by Italian citizens was ordered today by the cabinet presided over by Premier Mussolini, in a final attempt to halt the gold hemorrhage from the Bank of Italy.

The cabinet ordered all banks, business men and private citizens of Italian nationality to turn over to the National Institute for Foreign Exchange all their foreign credit for which they will be given lira at the current rate of exchange (about 8½ cents).

At the same time the cabinet ordered Italians under heavy penalty to register with the Bank of Italy foreign bonds and foreign currency bonds which they hold abroad.

The Institute for Foreign Exchange can then use these foreign credits instead of gold to pay for imports.

It was estimated Italian subjects hold about 2,000,000,000 lire in foreign security. The last ten day report of the Bank of Italy shows a loss of gold amounting to 110,683,000 lire ($9,408,000), reducing the gold coverage to 41.2 per cent, the legal limit being 40 per cent.

WEATHER

Toronto, Dec. 8—Some light local snowfalls have occurred in the lake region but in other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair, decidedly cold in Ontario and Quebec, but mild in the western provinces.

Lake Superior, Kenora and Rainy River—Fresh to strong winds shifting to northwest; somewhat milder with occasional snow.

Western Provinces— Moderate to fresh westerly winds; fair and comparatively mild.

City and District News

NO AUTHORITY FOR CANVASSERS

It has been drawn to the attention of officers of various ex-service men's clubs in this city that householders have been annoyed during the past week or so by a number of needy appearing canvassers making the rounds of houses in the city seeking donations for Christmas funds for the associations. In return for the donations, they offer calendars and other minor items. It has been reported that when donations are not forthcoming they sometimes resort to abuse. It is emphatically announced by the officers of the local clubs and organizations that these men have absolutely no authority for the use of the name of any organization. "Just call a policeman," they advise the harried householders.

BELIEVED DROWNED WHEN DREDGE UPSET

According to information received this week by Mr. and Mrs. Joel Goodmurphy, Wellington, Prince Edward County, their son, Garnet, is believed to have been drowned in the St. Lawrence River when the dredge on which he was chief engineer upset near Quebec. Details of the fatality were not given. He was 46 years of age.

STOLEN TRUCK FOUND ABANDONED

Found abandoned on the 3rd concession of Sidney, a light Ford delivery truck, the property of Walter Roblin of this city, was recovered by local authorities last night. The truck had been reported stolen by Mr. Roblin early last Thursday morning. When discovered the vehicle had been stripped of its battery and coil, while other minor parts were also reported missing. Mr. Roblin personally towed the vehicle into town. At first it was the belief of the authorities and Mr. Roblin, that the truck had been taken in order to steal the tires, but later it was discovered that certain accessory parts were the objects desired by the thieves.

2 REEVES ANNOUNCE THEIR RETIREMENT

It is definitely known that at least two replacements will be made in Hastings County Council during the year 1935. Reeve E. C. Metcalfe of the town of Deseronto, will be succeeded next year by Mr. Good Campbell, former Indian Agent of Deseronto. Mr. Campbell was introduced to the sitting members of council on Friday afternoon.

"I'm going south for the winter. The town is in pretty good shape now and I feel that I will not be missed," stated Reeve Metcalfe when questioned.

"I'm through, too," announced Reeve W. N. Gilroy, Wollaston. "I won't be back this year". Reeve Gilroy did not announce any particular reason for his retirement.

RELIEF OFFICE IN NEED OF CLOTHING

The first actual nip of winter on Saturday morning sent scores of needy applicants to the office of the Central Relief Bureau in the city today with the request for some sort of warm clothing, which might see them through the colder weather just ahead. But officials of the Bureau could offer them little help. They pointed to the depleted shelves and the fact that donations so far this season of old clothing have been few and far between.

"We're in desperate need just now, particularly for children's clothing. We need warm coats, warm stockings and even boots and shoes. And we also need bedding for many families," stated Miss H. Lynch, in charge of the Bureau in appealing to the residents. Just phone 69W and a call will be made.

Clarke; Recording Secretary, Frank Howes; First Lecturer, Joseph Hollinger; Second Lecturer, Clifford Wilson; Treasurer, Stanley Shaw; Committee, H. L. Gerow, A. J. Gough, F. Law, M. Reynolds, B. Way. County Master gave a short address and installed the officers.

CITY IN GRIP OF COLD WAVE

Moira River Partly Frozen and Cars Tied up From Cold Spell

A swollen Moira River was running in a sluggish stream of chilly anchor ice throughout the day Saturday, emptying into the Bay of Quinte which during the night had become covered with a coating of ice varying from one to two inches in thickness. Scores of cars driven along city streets trailed behind them a smoking plume of steam from their frozen radiators. Coal dealers were experiencing one of the biggest rush orders since the commencement of colder weather. Garages were filled; tow trucks worked overtime pulling stranded cars from downtown streets and home garages. It was one of the coldest days of the season on Saturday, with the mercury standing at its lowest point during the morning of just 2 below.

A keen north wind during the late evening Friday, turned the thoughts of shivering residents to home fires and brightly blazing furnaces. But hope is held out for relief from the cold blast which is sweeping Ontario. It may be warmer on Sunday, according to the forecast of the weather man.

Just one frozen water pipe was reported by the city waterworks department.

Police News

The largest number of transients to grace the cells at the local police station yet far this month were afforded a warm night's lodging last night. Eighteen cold, weary "travellers" applied at the sergeant's desk and were put up for the night. When registering it was found that one Swede, one Bohemian and one Scotchman signed the register, while the remaining 15 were all Canadians. Last night's bitter cold spell is attributed to the increase in numbers at the police station.

Harry Darrah, Belleville, was arrested by Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard on a charge of theft yesterday and remanded by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., until Monday for trial.

Darrah was charged with breaking, entering and stealing a large quantity of valuables from a C.N.R. boarding car stationed near the Belleville C.N.R. depot. The articles reported missing were two gold watches, with gold chains attached, one pair of gold cuff links one kodak, one silk shirt, two white shirts and other smaller articles of wearing apparel. The information leading up to the accused man's arrest was received by the authorities from Stanley Galleum, local C.N.R. foreman. Darrah will face the theft charge in Monday morning's police court proceedings.

All highways and local streets were free from motor accidents during the past twenty-four hours.

NEW BUSINESS FRONT IS NEW AND NOVEL

Mr. J. A. McFee Introduces Something New in Business Premises

Belleville's business section is constantly changing in appearance by reason of the progressive nature of the business men—improvement has followed improvement during the past few years until this city now has one of the finest business sections in the province, frequently commented upon favorably by tourists from the larger centres of the United States and others. The most recent improvement to the Belleville business section is one entirely out of the ordinary in the new front just completed by J. A. McFee, optometrist, adjoining the old established jewelry premises of Angus McFee, Front street. While the new front is entirely different from any other front on the street, dignified artistic and attention compelling, the interior has also been remodelled upon original lines and in keeping with the profession of optometry, making, all in all, a very creditable production by the W. E. Phillips Co. of Oshawa, and local craftsmen.

Constructed entirely of black vitrolite, framed in special stainless steel, the window spaces are probably the most unique features. These are only about one and a half by two feet, enclosed in walnut, with concealed illumination. The door and side panels are finished in chipped glass, with the sign in raised white porcelain letters—the whole forming a very unique and attractive variety in the long row of business places.

Interior Arrangement

Reception room, spacious well equipped examination room, fitting and training room and office, all served by a corridor leading to the laboratory which is completely equipped for the mechanical and manufacturing processes required in preparing glasses to suit the requirements of patrons.

It is a matter of general interest that nowhere in the Dominion is there a more complete and all-embracing optical service than is afforded now in Belleville.

The laboratory, in charge of Mr. L. K. Scott, whose technical training was obtained at the immense plant of the Bausch and Lomb Optical Co. at Rochester, N.Y., is adequately mechanized for not only all manner of repairs and replacements, but to surface and grind practically any lens required. This is one of the limited number of places in the province licensed to manufacture and finish from the rough "blanks" the modern forms in single focus lenses such as Tillyer, Corectal and Toric as well as the highest types of bifocals known as Panoptik, Univis, Ful-Vue, Monostep and the now old type Kryptok.

A Tale of Forty Years

Graduated forty years ago by the Optical Institute of Canada, under the tutorship of Mr. Lionel Laurance, now of London, England, an authority, whose teaching and text books enjoy international respect in the optometric and medical professions, Mr. McFee has always maintained his routine of visual analysis abreast of contemporary technique by constant study and attendance at lecture courses in a dozen or more American cities. His practice, allegedly, is characterized by a limited number of appointments daily, catering only to persons who are primarily interested in a capable and conscientious analysis of their visual conditions, and advice as to whether their need be glasses, muscle-training or medical treatment.

A Different Service

Mr. McFee, commenting upon his forty years' experience and the great advance made in optical science in that period, said he wished to make it plain that the optometric service he gives "is distinctly different from a spectacle merchandising enterprise, such as conducted by certain large stores where the optometrist in charge sells his services for a weekly salary or a commission, conditional upon his ability to turn over a requisite aggregate in 'sales of glasses'."

The desire on Mr. McFee's part to give the public the very best service possible has resulted in the premises now completed, said to be one of the most complete and all-embracing optical establishments in the Dominion.

On Provincial Board

Widely recognized for his ability and his sincere desire to protect the profession and promote the highest type of ethics and business practises, Mr. McFee has been honored with appointment to the Provincial Board of Examiners in Optometry.

No Change in Jewelry Business

Previously the optometry department has been a part of the jewelry store conducted by Mr. J. A. McFee under the firm name of Angus McFee, founded in 1860, and the removal into a separate establishment does not involve any change in the ownership or management of the McFee jewelry business conducted under the store management of Mr. Edson Logan, a specialist in diamonds and fine jewelry, with whom is associated in the store management, Angus McFee, Jr., and staff.

ATTENDANCE DOWN DUE TO WEATHER

Prices on Local Market Range Same as Last Week

Cold weather prevailing apparently had the effect of decreasing the usual large attendance upon the Saturday market. The interior of market building was by no means filled up, whilst many vacant stands on the outside were noticeable. There were but few changes to note in prices for farm and garden products.

Dressed poultry consisting of chickens and ducks and one lone turkey found ready purchasers. Chickens retailed from 60c to 75c each according to quality, while ducks sold from 80c to $1 each. The vendor offering the turkey asked $3 for it, being about 22c per pound.

Eggs were quite plentiful with prices fairly good, ranging from 25c for pullet eggs to 35c for extra No. 1. The ruling price for butter was 45c for a two pound roll.

Home-made cooking was much in evidence, consisting of bread, buns, cakes and pies. The greater portion was disposed of at remunerative prices.

Meat vendors were apparently busy, their chief product being beef, pork and sausage, the latter selling at 15c per pound, two pounds for twenty-five cents.

There were no changes for vegetables. Potatoes sold at 50c and 60c a bag. A few would-be purchasers searched in vain for fish, but none was offered for sale.

In the fruit line, apples only were offered for sale varying in price from 25c to 40c a peck according to quality and species.

EARLY START ON PROPOSED ROAD ASKED BY COUNTY

Ask Survey of New Road East of Old One be Abandoned

NEED OTHER WORK

Discussion Follows Grant to Wallbridge Agricultural School

Hastings County councillors through a formal resolution passed during the dying moments of their last session of the year on Friday afternoon will request through the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, representative of the riding, that the efforts of the Provincial Government be directed toward an early start on the proposed Foxboro-Maynooth highway.

In urging that the work be commenced without delay, the resolution will point out that in this manner of providing labor the necessity of direct relief will be avoided to a great extent throughout the county.

It is further recommended in the resolution that the men needed for the work be registered "according to need" and that the road survey said to have been made some miles east of the present old road, which it is reported the new highway may follow, be abandoned as not in the best interests of the county.

The resolution, moved by Reeve W. N. Gilroy, Wollaston, and seconded by Reeve Frank Marrett, Marmora Village, was passed unanimously.

Reeve W. N. Gilroy pointed out that Reeves of the various townships should not place too much dependence on work, that might follow the start of the road. "We need other work besides that highway for our many unemployed men of the county," he told them.

As an example of other work, that could be done, the Wollaston Reeve cited his own occupation, that of lumbering. "Pulp woodcutting, for example," he remarked. "When work like this is carried on there is direct benefit all around. The Government gets from two to four dollars a thousand for delivering it. The men are paid to cut it and the trucks and truckers to haul it. We can't go on indefinitely spending money on roads," he reminded.

"I think we should urge that this road be put through where there is not already one, to give this industry a chance," he added.

Three Routes Being Urged

Reeve Judson Gunter, Bancroft Village, pointed out that three routes were being urged for the new road. "It is essential, that we agree on one route and then try to hurry it up."

Road-building—plenty of it—was upheld by Reeve Gunter. "The pulp wood industry doesn't pay a living wage any more. It is up to us to find some other asset. The tourist trade is the one I refer to."

"We have a hundred million residents across the border clamoring for us to build roads. 'Put your roads through, and then we'll come and visit you,' they tell us. It seems to me the Government should build roads and more roads. They are the best asset this county and this province has."

Reeve Wallbridge, Madoc Village: "From the way Mr. Gilroy spoke I didn't think he wanted a road at all."

"I urged that it be started at once," pointed out Mr. Gilroy.

At this point a second resolution was introduced by Reeve A. Burke of Sidney Township: "Whereas there is a growing need for work, and no program has been planned for this winter by the county, be it resolved, that the men be taken on this work from the various sections of the county according to number of population." It was seconded by Reeve Henry Larkin, Tyendinaga.

"The working of that should be changed," commented Reeve Gilroy before a chance had been given to put the motion. "I believe that the hiring of the men should be based on the real need and the conditions of the particular locality."

Judson Gunter: "I'm of the same opinion. If it is based only upon the percentage of population it wouldn't be as fair. There are a lot of wealthy people making up the population in the front here, compared with the north."

"Change that word 'population' to 'need' and we'll vote on it," asked the Reeve of Bancroft.

"We thought that the greater the population was, the greater the need," demurred Reeve Burke. "I hope the Reeves of Bancroft and Coe Hill will understand, when I say, that I didn't think of doing any injustice to our friends from the north."

Thurlow Biggest Township

Reeve Wesley Gray, Thurlow: "We are the biggest township in the need of work the most. It is getting real serious in our township. Back in the north, you can generally get enough fuel to burn, but down here we have to buy every scrap of it at a dear price. Living is also cheaper in the north. I think that as far as Thurlow goes she is more in need of work than any other township in the county."

Philip Carr, Deputy Reeve of Rawdon: "The Reeve of Bancroft has advanced the best suggestion. Just change the word 'population' to 'need'."

Reeve Gunter: "I don't think there is anything fairer than registered applicants for the work."

Reeve E. C. Metcalfe, Deseronto: "I've just been listening to the serious talk of the Thurlow Reeve. Well, we may need a special grant, too, to get through the winter. We're getting hard up. I might mention, that while the men of the north were being given work on the roads and on the Northern Development and so on, not a thing was given us, even though we had to help the north on the matter of providing work."

"How did the south help the north on this?" questioned Reeve Bronson, of Mayo.

"We helped pay for the roads," pointed out Reeve Metcalfe. "We've always paid twice, through the nose."

"We didn't have a man on No. 7 Highway; we had to supply our own work," stated Reeve Sayers, Tweed Village.

Front Townships Hard Hit

"The front three townships are hit harder than any of the rest of the townships in the county," affirmed Reeve Burke.

"Come up and see us some time in Rawdon," invited Deputy Reeve Philip Carr.

Reeve Frank Reynolds, Madoc Township, wanted to know how they could tell whether a person really needed relief or not when they applied on the lists. "How are you going to investigate them. And who is the hardest up, the farmer with a small farm from which he gets nothing to keep keep himself and a bunch of kids, or the laborer, who is in the same fix?"

"Just as soon as this road starts, the little bit of Northern Development road work that is going on now in the county will be stopped, and then we'll be harder up than ever," stated Reeve James Sprackett, Tudor and Cashel. "This will mean that a very small percentage of men from each township will get work. What are the rest of them going to do?"

The question was left up in the air as the resolution was put.

In the Committee of Ways and Means, with Reeve J. B. Ford, Frankford Village, in the chair. An account from the Department of Welfare as the county's share toward maintenance of the Old Age Pension, totalling $1292.70, was ordered paid.

Whether the incoming council in January or the present Finance Finance and Public Property Committee will wrestle with the problem of whether the jail corridors need new concrete or asphaltic floors, as recommended by the Inspector of Prisons, remains to be seen.

A price of $545 for a one-half inch gray rock asphaltic plastic floor given by a local firm was pondered. It was finaly decided upon motion to refer the matter to the Finance and Public Property Committee who will advertise for tenders and carry out the work if they see fit. A rider, that all materials as far as possible be used from the County of Hastings and that pris-

60 CENTS A DAY FOR MAINTENANCE OF WARDS ASKED

Concur in Resolution Asking For Amendments to C.A.S. Act

AUDITORS NAMED

Also Caretakers For County Buildings and Shire Hall

In the belief that mounting expense of the upkeep and maintenance of wards of the Children's Aid Societies should be curbed, members of the County Council on Friday went on record as unanimously concurring in the resolution adopted by Norfolk County Council at a recent session that the Provincial Government be asked to amend the Children's Aid Society Act to change the cost of maintenance of the Society from 75 cents per day to an amount not to exceed 60 cents per day. A copy of the resolution will be sent the Ontario Minister of Welfare by the local Council. The resolution was moved by Reeve R. C. Brett and seconded by Reeve Gray, Thurlow.

At a salary of $75.00 each, two auditors Mr. Walter Brett, of Madoc, and Mr. Walter Whytock, Madoc, were appointed by council as auditors for the County of Hastings for the next year. Three applications for the position had been tendered. The by-law under which the appointments were made called for two. The third applicant was D. G. Morton of Tweed, highly recommended to council by Reeve W. Sayers. The appointed auditors were the ones, who carried out last year's audit of county business.

Caretakers Appointed

Under a second by-law two caretakers, one for the county buildings and the second for Shire Hall and the registry office were also appointed by council. The governor of the jail and the turnkey will be given the position at a salary of $75.00 each per quarter. The previous salary had been $395.00 for the governor and $415 for the turnkey for the same work per annum.

Reeve Burke, Sidney, favored the idea of hiring an outsider for the work. "It doesn't seem as if there were any applications in for the job so we should hold this over."

The belief that the work could best be carried on with the cooperation of the county building and jail staff advanced by Warden Geo. Jordan swayed the councillors in choosing the jail governor and turnkey for the work.

"They have been handling the work very satisfactorily and have lots of help. The buildings receive good care and during the past two or three years remarkable improvements have been made. I believe it is, in the best interests of the county to have this under their supervision".

On the vote of council the motion was adopted.

A resolution will be dispatched the Ontario Minister of Highways asking that St. Lawrence street in Madoc Village be taken over as part of No. 7 Highway following the motion advanced by Reeve Wallbridge of the Village of Madoc.

"This road is a direct link with the Highway and should be taken over," argued the Madoc Reeve. The recommendation had previously been passed by the Madoc Village Council before its adoption by Hastings County Council.

SCHOHARIE NEWS OF PAST WEEK

Schoharie, Dec. 8—Mrs. Jennie [illegible] who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cleave for the past two weeks is spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. W. Cleave, Gilead.

Mrs. Harold Walters and Miss Rose Walters were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Yott, Bloomfield, on Thursday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hobson and Miss Lillian Wiman were tea hour guests of Mrs. Alice Tobey of Picton on Tuesday evening.

The pie social held under the auspices of the Live Women's Circle at Orser Church on Friday evening last was a decided success, the neighbourhood being well represented. An interesting event of the evening was the drawing of the ticket on the autographed quilt, the lucky prize winner being Mr. Kenneth Warren.

Mrs. Harold Walters and Miss Rose Walters also Mrs. Lewis Yott and Miss Gena Yott of Bloomfield were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Trompson, Consecon on Tuesday.

All welcome Mr. and Mrs. Burton Baxter and family of Hillier to this neighborhood. Mr. Baxter has purchased Mrs. Harper Shaw's farm. Mr. Edward Smith who has been on this farm for the past two years has moved to Bloomfield.

Mrs. J. G. Leavitt of Picton was a week end guest of her son Mr. Charles Leavitt and Mrs. Leavitt.

The teacher Miss Lillian Wiman was called to her home in Peterboro on Thursday owing to the death of her grandmother who died at her home in Pickering.

MUNITIONS LEADERS APPEAR BEFORE U. S. SENATE PROBE

H. P. Beebe (LEFT), president of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, and Samuel Stone, president of the Colt Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company, are sworn in at the U. S. Senate munitions hearing at Washington. Mr. Beebe insisted that his main interest was to see that sporting arms and ammunitions were not included in any prohibitions written into international treaties. Senator Nye, chairman of the committee, produced an affidavit indicating that Mr. Stone made a trip in 1908 and 1909 to Russia, Turkey and Greece and made the observance that a world war was impending.

PROUD MOMENT AS 6 SONS VISIT 100-YEAR-OLD MOTHER

This interesting picture comes from Peterboro, and shows Peterboro's centenarian with her six sons. To the right of Mrs. David Huggins, who celebrated her hundredth birthday on October 4, stands her eldest son, Robert Huggins (hat in hand), while following along the line, in order of their age, are Thompson and Shep of South Monaghan, Braden of Bailieboro, David and John. Three daughters of Mrs. Huggins are Mrs. George Hunter of Detroit, Mrs. H. Miller of Toronto and Mrs. D. J. McLeod of Peterboro. Mrs. Huggins has lived in South Monaghan, Ontario. Besides the six sons and three daughters there are 31 grandchildren, 39 great-grandchildren and one great-great grandchild.

FOUR BURNED IN TENEMENT FIRE

Same Number Injured And One May Succumb to Injuries

New York, Dec. 8—(AP)— Four persons lost their lives in a fire which swept a five-storey tenement house in the Bronx early today.

Four persons were injured, one, a 70-year-old crippled woman so seriously she may die.

The dead were: Mrs. Catharine Gibney, 36, her two sons John, seven, and Lawrence, two, and Mrs. Minnie Johnson 67, all of whom lived on the third floor. Death was caused by burns and suffocation.

Mrs. Lillian De Sena, the crippled woman, was carried down a ladder by firemen.

The fire started between the second and third floors. Arthur Palumbo, owner of the building was awakened by his daughter and ran through the house arousing the tenants. The buildin was tenanted by 24 families.

The tenants were forced out into the bitter cold, and water poured on the building quick was transformed into ice, hampering the firemen. The fire raged more than two hours before it was brought under control.

MAY GET MILLIONS

From college professor to multi-millionaire—that is the rosy future that looms for Dr. Oscar J. P. Wetklo (ABOVE) former language professor at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, and until recently rector of Trinity Episcopal church. Dr. Wetklo owns a 30 per cent interest in what looks to be the most productive gold and silver mine in Mexico. Dr. Wetklo declares that most of the fortune he anticipates will go to religious institutions of all denominations.

PART OF BAY HAS COATING OF ICE

A thin coating of ice covered the Bay of Quinte out as far as the lighthouse early this morning following last night's cold snap. The mercury dropped as low as five degrees above zero during the night while many smaller ponds and pools of water located about town were frozen hard enough to withstand considerable weight. The bay presented its usual interesting enchantment for those to live within its proximity early today. The surface of ice close to the north shore withstood the efforts of children, who hurled large stones in order to test its solidness.

GORDON ERSKINE IS IDENTIFIED

Claimed He Was Introduced as "Detective Allen" to Party

London, Ont., Dec. 8 (CP) — Gordon Erskine, alleged to have been a member of London's onetime blackmail ring, went on trial Friday on a charge of conspiracy to demand money as the Crown neared the close of its campaign against operators of a "shakedown" racket.

Erskine was alleged to have conspired with Mrs. Mae Turnbull and Vincent T. Foley, former lawyer, both now in Kingston penitentiary, to obtain money by menace from two Toronto businessmen known as "Mr. B." and "Mr. C." At the midday adjournment Erskine had been identified by Mr. B. as the man introduced to him as "Detective Allen" on an occasion in connection with a party at a London Hotel in May, 1933.

Inspector T. W. Cousans of the Ontario police also identified him as a man he brought back from Detroit during hearing of charges against Foley and Mrs. Turnbull. He said Erskine had disappeared after being ordered to appear as a Crown witness in the case and that he had been paid to vanish.

RUM RUNNER SEIZED

New York, Dec. 7—(AP)— The fishing boat "George N. Earl" carrying a cargo of alleged contraband liquor, was captured today by United States customs officials in the East River off Hell Gate.

The George N. Earl was the first ship seized in local waters for rum-running since repeal of prohibition. The boat, of British registry, was believed to have gone from a Canadian port, and to have entered the East River from Long Island Sound.

ONE MILL SAVED COUNCIL IS TOLD

Treasurer Gives Unofficial Report to Hastings Council

"We're a mill to the good this year," County Treasurer James W. Haggerty told the Hastings County Council in submitting his unofficial report to members on Friday.

"We have bank loans on Nov. 30, 1934, amounting to $285,500.00. This is made up of a carry-over from 1933 of $56,000.00, and an advance of $229,500.00. We have a credit balance in the current account of $23,987.08. At the close of business on Nov. 30, 1933, the loans stood at $229,000.00. We had a current balance on that date of $3,480.77," pointed out Mr. Haggerty.

"We have paid to the Department of Highways $32,559.03 which we do not generally pay until Dec. 20, but as the government fiscal year ends on Oct. 31, they wished us to pay the subsidy which would leave us in about the same position as at this time last year. We have paid on debentures $11,878.84 leaving a balance of debenture debt of $92,179.34.

This Year's Figures

We have paid so far this year: Indigent accounts and industrial schools, $21,683.60; old age pensions to September, $13,972.66, last year, $13,269.99; mothers' allowance, to September, $15,237.50, last year, $14,649.00; Children's Aid Society, to July, $12,968.65, last year, $7,926.29.

County rate for 1930......16½ mills
County rate for 1931......15½ mills
County rate for 1932......15½ mills
County rate for 1933......14 mills
County rate for 1934......15 mills

Balance of county rates due Dec. 6, 1934, $9,248.19; balance of hospital accounts due Dec. 6, 1934, $8,654.89.

"As you will remember," remarked Mr. Haggerty as he concluded his report, "we put that extra mill on to avoid issuing debentures for the overdraft. That makes us a mill to the good."

Mr. E. V. Ilsey, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce who was invited by Warden George Jordan to comment upon the reading of the report called attention to the criticism that was heard when the county council decided to add the extra mill to the rate to take care of the overdraft which then existed.

Sound Business Shown

"But that was sound business," he asserted. "It is unfortunate that the tax rates can't be cut and lowered from year to year, but as one who is interested in the financial affairs of the county, I can speak only in commendation of the act."

"Your county is in excellent shape," Mr. Ilsey told his audience of councillors. "The county taxes have been reduced and you have only some $20,000 in uncollected taxes. It is this bug bear of unpaid taxes that is making gray heads of executives of municipalities grayer all the time. But I want to take the opportunity of congratulating you upon the state of your county. This year due to a certain variety of factors, prospects were improved greatly. We had considerable lumbering operations through the north while in the south the farmers concentrated on cash crops for their produce and sold them to the canneries at a good profit. The farmers are in a much better position than they were a year ago. This, we expect, will be reflected in better payments of taxes all through the county during the coming year." Their paying capacity at the present time is very much greater than it was this time one year ago."

"During the past year I have had every assistance by the officers of this county council, and I would just like to take the opportunity of expressing a little of that appreciation I feel for the courtesy and help that has been given me. The efficiency of every member of the council is something that can be remarked upon," added Mr. Ilsey.

TABERNACLE W. A.

The December meeting of the Tabernacle Women's Association was held in the Church Parlors on Thursday, December 6, with Mrs. Lent, the President, in the chair.

The meeting opened with the singing of the Doxology, thus giving thanks for a most successful year about to close. The President spoke of the splendid co-operation of the members and thanked all for their assistance.

Rev. Mr. Naylor led in prayer and two verses of hymn 298 were sung.

Reports were received from Secretary-Treasurer and conveners of various committees. It was decided to give twenty-five dollars to the M. and M. Fund of the Church.

The Scripture Lesson was read by Mrs. G. G. Bell from the second chapter of Matthew. This was followed by a reading, "Love Came Down At Christmas" by Mrs. Shorey. Mrs. Froats then sang a lovely solo entitled "I Am Happy in the Service of the King". Mrs. Fisher read an article on "What Have We Done To Christmas?"

Mr. Naylor spoke of the White Gift Service to be held in the Church Sunday morning, December 16th.

The President vacated the chair and the nominating committee, which had been appointed at the previous meeting, submitted the list of officers nominated for the coming year and Mr. Naylor proceeded with elections which resulted as follows:

Honorary President—Mrs. G. F. Lent.
President—Mrs. H. Hall.
First Vice-President—Mrs. H. Froats.
Second Vice-President — Mrs. Goodfellow.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. A. Naylor.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. Gausden.
Corresponding Secretary— Mrs. J. R. Davis.
Pianist—Mrs. R. Johnston.
Assistant Pianist—Mrs. J. C. Smith.
Visiting Committee Conveners—Mrs. W. Boyd, Mrs. A. H. Fisher, Mrs. A. Martin.

INDIANS CLAIM TOWNSITE

Orillia is facing an odd situation as the Rama Reserve Indians threaten to claim the town. The ninety-nine year lease is near an end and the Indians say the white man will have to pow-wow with them. The Indians on the Rama reservation have a notion that they are not fairly treated in the distribution of treaty money, John George, spokesman for the Indians claims hunting and fishing are disappearing because the pale faces have taken over the Indians' lands and the red man has not obtained the luxuries of the white.

George's demands sound very modern, a car and a radio for every Indian. He says the treaty money he got the last time, namely three dollars won't keep his dog for six months.

George claims for the Indians on Rama, ten miles from Orillia, that the fishing and hunting rights were to be enjoyed as long as grass grows and water runs, but the hunting and fishing are diminishing because of thte busy white man who has monopolized the rights.

Orillia will go on as it has gone, and as other cities would do even in the face of such a claim.

The most interesting part of the story is the revelation of the changing conditions which have affected even the Indians in their quiet reservation.

SUGAR CONTROVERSY

The little boy who has been told that sugar is bad for his teeth and the sugar which has been blamed for a long long time as harmful to teeth, have a comeback, at least a partial comeback, for at a meeting in New York it was claimed that the fine teeth of the Hawaiians are due to use of sugar cane and molasses, leafy greens and other alkaline foods. Dr. Martha Jones claimed that tooth decay among plantation children could be arrested by the use of concentrated sugar cane juice.

Her argument was opposed by Dr. Weston Price, who said diets rich in acids produced fine teeth among the Eskimos and said that persons living on their indigenous foods had perfect teeth but that when they fringed civilization, dental diseases immediately set in.

GOOD LISTENERS

Good listeners are as rare as white robins. The great talkers have it by a large majority. They should have learned something from Macaulay, who occasionally had his "brilliant flashes of silence." During them he seemed much more interesting, and a better companion, than when his flood of discourse poured over the whole table. There is, in fact, an easy way of making a reputation by being so good a listener that the other monopolist of the conversation goes away to praise you for your unusual tact and intelligence. The verdict will be: "I never met a man who showed such a ready grasp of my theories of the universe." At the same time, it saves the good listener from a lot of trouble trying to understand what the other man is saying. Just set your face in an appearance of eager interest, close your eyes as if in deep thought, and you may safely invite your soul to an interval of intellectual rest. In that way you may qualify for membership in the glorious association of men of whom Shakespeare wrote that "some men are accounted wise for saying nothing." Such is the merited reward of the good listener.—New York Times.

VALUE OF LEAF MOULD

The advice is late to be of any value here this year, but Dr. Thomas L. Martin, of Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah, this week claimed the burning of leaves is one of the most costly acts of man. The blue haze which the smoke of burning leaves in the autumn makes is the haze of burning wealth, for the soil needs just the organic matter which is in the leafy mould.

Millions of leaves are annually destroyed every autumn in the smallest centres and the loss is immense.

Dr. Martin pointed out that for continued productivity the soil must remain fertile.

SHOP EARLY

Christmas is little over two weeks away and already the feeling which is associated with the season is in evidence. Preparations are beginning in the homes for the great annual festival and as a result in the shops buying has picked up. Stores have put on their Christmas decorations and helped to create the festive mood.

With so little time ahead, it is needful that buying be attended to at the earliest moment in order to have the advantage of a wide selection of gifts. Early buying means less confusion and haste, more attention in shop service and generally greater satisfaction

Unfortunately this is not the mood of some people to whom Christmas brings worries because these persons will not see to the orderly arrangement of their purchases some time before Christmas. While the stores welcome even the last minute shopping, they would be more satisfied and they know that their customers would be more satisfied if the purchasing was made a little in advance.

The little over two weeks which remain between now and the festal occasion will rapidly pass and the procrastinating buyer will find himself or herself almost a wreck with anxiety at the season's end. A word to the wise is sufficient.

LITERATURE TO GET CLEANER

The pendulum of literature, which in the post-war days swung to the "smart to be dirty" side is due for a return to wholesome decency, thinks Channing Pollock, distinguished author and dramatist.

In recent years, says Mr. Pollock in the December Rotarian Magazine, authors have not been slow to learn their lesson—"that the way to preferment, praise and prizes and prosperity, lay through the nakedest possible dealing with what hitherto had been the secrets of bedroom and bathroom. 'Dirt' has become genius, modernity, sophistication, and its enjoyment no longer evidence of an inmature mind, but the very contrary. What had been surreptitious smut in our youth, at last flowed from the presses of our best publishers, handsomely bound, fearlesly advertised, wildly acclaimed, to find itself unashamed on library shelves and tables throughout the land. It was smart to be dirty, and it was also easy. Much easier than being clever."

However, with all his criticism of modern literature, he maintains "that for authors to be held to Little Rollo and Elsie Dinsmore is, of course, sheer nonsense. We have done well, I think, to abandon the priggishness of the period in which Kipling, advised by cable that 'a character cannot drink whiskey in our pages,' wired back, 'Substitute Mellin's Baby Food.' Superficially, manners and morals do change, and should. But certain fundamental faiths are the crystallized wisdom of the ages, founded upon centuries of experience with what is good and bad for the race, and no civilization has long made light of them and survived.

"Fortunately, our leanings of the last few years seem to have been only a phase. We are too sane and vigorous a people to be permanently deceived by shallow poseurs. Wallace Irwin, wise and smiling author of countless works, reports to me that recently his seventeen-year-old son laid down a book by a "sophisticated' friend of the family, with the remark, 'Mother, why does Mrs. Blank write like that? It so definitely dates her as of the post-war period.'

"How cheap, and nasty, and adolescent that period may seem when we are all as discerning as Donald Irwin!"

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS

That the famous Aegean monstery surnamed the "Great Grotto" has been utterly destroyed by fire is news that will be learned with profound regret by all who are able to understand what a grievous loss to the literary world this event entails. The hermit "laura" which has thus been reduced to ruins was one of the ancient cloistered retreats in which were archived many of the most valuable manuscripts of the Byzantine empire, and the statement made that this monastery had previously been ravaged by three fires, the earliest of which occurred in the year 840, carries the venerable traditions of this renowned monastic "keep" back to within little more than a century after Leo III. ascended the throne at Constantinople and instituted that reformed social and political regime which, builded upon the shattered fragments of the Roman Empire, opened a new era in the East and proved to be the most formidable factor in checking the sovereignty of the Saracens who in the eighth century deemed they had the Eastern world within their grasp. The accession of Leo the Isuarian took place in 716 A.D. It was followed by the reign of what are termed the Iconoclast dynasts who founded the Byzantine empire which supplanted the militant system of Rome and has been described as a continuation of the ancient Roman polity under a more liberal suffrage and invested by those intellectual quality which ultimately wrought a vast change alike in the Eastern and Western worlds. This was done at a period when nations writhed under the unsettled conditions of a transitional age, and confusedly groped their way between things old and new. They were in the pinch of a crisis "twixt one world dead and another powerless to be born." That is a long story. But how aptly has Matthew Arnold put the gist of this struggle in a single quatrain—

"The East bowed down before the blast
In patient, deep disdain.
She let the legions thunder past,
And plunged in thought again."

This is quite true. But what is not so well known as it might be is the fact that the monastic system in the Aegean exercised a greater influence than either arms or political conclaves, and that although the monastic spirit did not make its first start in the Grecian isles, nor was the special property of its Christian devotees, these folk whom Pliny describes as a "solitary race, but constantly replenished by penitents from the outer world" became the mediators between East and West; and quietists as they were, they preserved the records and indited a horde of manuscripts which have outlasted the ruin of empires.—Montreal Gazette.

SOURCES OF PEACE

Wise is the man made happy
Not by what gold can buy,
But by the peace descending
Out on a sunset sky!

Lying alone on a sand strip,
Just as the twilight falls;
Hearing, yet all unheeding,
Gulls' cries and pipers' calls;

Musing on rays of color
Slanting along the land,
Noting the soft lights deepen
Over the sea and sand;

Watching the shadows taking
Headland and hillside tall,
Thus can a man learn truly
Earth and its cares are small.

Fullness of joy is garnered
Here, where the great tides surge,
Hearing the night wind rising
Up from the world's far verge.

"IN THE STOCKS" was an ancient and severe punishment, when those convicted of minor crimes were seated in the public square with their head and hands imprisoned in "the stocks" for all to revile and sling mud at. A reversal to this procedure was ordered by a Kentucky Judge this week when he ordered three young men chained to power poles in the business section as punishment for a minor crime. Log chains and 25-lb. iron balls kept the young men closely moored to their respective poles for several hours when the Judge relented and had them returned to the jail house. They had refused to work out fines imposed for drunkenness and the judge is determined that they will work or wish they had.

Soldiers—Then and Now

—by—

Theodore Goodridge Roberts

Frederick George Scott is an archdeacon now and a doctor of divinity, of laws (canon) and of literature. I saw him at the great reunion of the Canadian Army Corps of August last. He was the star, the darling and the hero of that reunion. Not only the first but all the reassembled divisions, cheered him and cried for him. He was in the hearts of tens of thousands of those "old soldiers". Men who had not known him personally in those years 1914-1918 had heard of him from comrades. One said to me, "All I came in from the farm for was to see the padre an' maybe shake his hand. Then I'll go home—an' glad to get there again. This kind of thing would suit me all right if I was younger an' could stomach the rotten beer. Worse than French beer! All this does now is make me lonely—lonelier than I was before I came—for the fellows who ain't here. There's the padre now—bless the old smirk on his face! I've seen that same smirk on him when everything the devil ever invented was coming over an' busting right on top of us an' the sandbags were flying like birds."

Other chaplains have written of him as follows:

"One man of outstanding personality caught the imagination of all denominations and all ranks. That man, of course, was Frederick George Scott." "Wherever things were most dangerous and help was most needed, the canon was to be found. He brought more credit to the Chaplain Services than any other man. His appearance among a battalion or in a crowded theatre evoked such scenes of enthusiasm as are rarely seen. At Passchendaele he walked through falling shells, looking for wounded, where it seemed that nothing could live. An officer, scanning the churning mud before him, turned to a companion and said 'There's someone out there looking for death'. The other turned his glasses on the wanderer. 'It's Canon Scott.' 'Oh! They can't hit him'."

But they did hit him, after nearly four years of trying.

The Yellow Mare

Padre Scott had a yellow mare. It was his custom to ride forward as far as riding was fairly safe for the mare, then to dismount and hitch her in some convenient cellar or shell-smashed house and continue his advance on his own feet overland, or up communicating trenches, and so into the support and fire trenches to pass the time of day with the front-liners of his aggregation. Always welcome on fire-step and in dugout, the padre took his time; and when he had talked to every man and officer he knew (knowing them all) and worked his way back to battalion headquarters and swapped yarns with the O. C., the chances were against his coming out at the point at which he had gone in. It was always dark by then; and even a yellow mare is a hard horse to find in the dark, in a region of hundreds of shell-smashed houses. But the padre usually found her. When he didn't, somebody else did; and the time came when she was discovered by an M.P. and reported to the A.P.M., and the padre was taken officially to task for having neglected a horse and deprived it of food and water. He who would have given the yellow mare his last shirt or his dinner was accused of this thing. It was a laugh—but the padre was too shocked and hurt to laugh. But everyone else, including the yellow mare, saw the joke; and the A.P.M. had the grace to feel ashamed of himself.

Warden Jordan Points Hopeful Picture as Year Ends

TRIBUTE TO WARDEN

Gold Watch Bears Message of Good Will From Fellow Members

Always the most difficult moment in the experience of any Warden of a County Council who is retiring from his seat with a record of a good year's work behind him, the farewell address of Warden Geo. Jordan on Friady afternoon at Shire Hall to members of Hastings County Council who had so nobly assisted him during the previous twelve months, was marked by little of the dramatic tenseness or austerity usually associated with such an occasion.

There was little sign of seriousness or graveness on the countenance of the Warden as he arose from his chair on the rostrum and stood facing the expectant members, fingering the gold seal of office as he groped for words.

The last bill had been passed; the last bylaw read. The echoes of the previous discussions that had rattled through the council chamber during the afternoon had rolled into silence down the corridors of the building. Only a little of the work had been left as unfinished business. But it would be tackled by a new and fresh incoming council who would take their places in January.

Splendid Year's Work

"There isn't much to say, or much that I want to say, except this" began the Warden as he stood before them. "I just want to thank every member in this council for the wonderful assistance he has given me in the past year. I want to congratulate every committee and the chairman of every committee for the splendid manner in which they have performed their task."

"And now it's time for me to step down. The year's work is finished. But before I go I just want to review some of the work."

"During the past year we have our debt of the county down to some ninety-two thousand dollars. True the rate was raised one mill this year, but that was no fault of the 1934 council."

"Your county is in excellent shape. It is the best just now of any in the province as far as financial affairs go. That it is in this condition can be laid to the efforts of every one of you during the past year."

Warden is Honored

Warden Jordan referred to the death of the late Mr. Nugent, former county clerk. "His loss left a distinct gap in the ranks of the council as well as the county, but his place has been ably filled by the present clerk appointed."

"It has been a pleasure to serve you during the past year," he told his fellow councillors. "And it was one of the proudest moments of my life when I was elected as your chief executive."

Rolls of applause greeted Warden Jordan's remarks.

As dean of the present council, Reeve Judson Gunter requested the liberty of asking the honorable member from Deseronto to take the chair. Reeve Metcalfe then assumed the Warden's seat. Reeve N. Gilroy advanced toward the standing Warden at the dias and faced him. He was assisted by Reeve Wm. West, Stirling. The address of presentation was then made by Reeve Gilroy:

"We your fellow workers in County Council here assembled this last day of session, in December, 1934 at this time wish to in this small way convey our sincere appreciation of your presidency in so able a manner during the past year of 1934.

The work has not been an easy task, but with your calm way and fairness to allow all members to express their opinions, and also your firm decisions, everything has been settled amicably, with the result that a current of kindly feeling and hearty co-operation has prevailed throughout the ranks of the County councillors and officials.

"Health and Prosperity"

"We your fellow councillors and officials sincerely wish you health and prosperity and trust that you will long be spared on this sphere to help and cheer fellow men, and as a small token of our esteem for you, please accept this little gift, and when you look at it in the future, think kindly of the men in the county council who have been associated with you and have been guided so successfully through the intricate and trying period of the year 1934. This token is extended you on behalf of fellow councillors and officials of Hastings County."

And on the plush lined bottom of the case presented the Warden lay a beautifully engraved gold watch, whose tick was as steady and unwavering as the loyalty and sincerity with which he had been served by his fellow councillors during the year just ending.

"Thank you." replied the Warden, deeply touched by the tribute. "This year of 1934 will long be remembered by me. It is one of the most pleasant years I have ever put in...."

And the remainder of his remarks were drowned out by the three cheers and loud hand clapping reserved as an especial tribute.

PLEDGE CARD PLAN TO SOLVE PARKING PROBLEM IN CITY

City Merchant, Clerk, Professional Man Asked to Sign

LATITUDE TO FARMER

City Car Owners Urged Not to Cause Street Congestion

Moral suasion instead of the iron hand of a restriction by-law, pledge cards instead of summonses, mark the attitude advocated by the Open Forum of the Chamber of Commerce meeting at the New Queen's Hotel last evening in preference to Belleville's perennial parking problem. The new scheme will be at once tried out.

After half an hour's spirited debate which was opened by Mr. E. V. Illsey, the members endorsed a scheme proposed by E. Shapiro, seconded by Fred B. Smith whereby the Chamber will send out pledge cards to members, professional men, manufacturers and others asking them to abstain from prolonged parking on the business streets of the city during the week and on Saturday nights. Mr. Shapiro promised that the Retail Merchants members and clerks, would be asked to take similar action so that the city streets might be cleared of a large number of city motorcars so as to leave the streets free for visiting motorists for their shopping and for city car shopping.

The attack was on the offending city cars. Speaker after speaker advised a lenient attitude to agricultural visitors and a welcome to the visiting motorists.

An amendment to set a parking limit of one hour fell without ample support.

Mr. C. W. Browne, chairman of the Open Forum was in the chair. Mayor Tice was outspoken in his depicting of the notty problem which parking presents to the police commission. The Mayor promised cooperation by asking motorists by proclamation to aid in the solution of the issue.

Debate is Opened

Mr. E. V. Illsey opened discussion of the problem, declared it could be greatly improved and suggested that the incoming council could take a hand in endeavoring to solve the question.

"I do not think there is a town of our size which has this system, I believe there are like systems in Picton and Trenton but that should not necessarily be our guide," he said. The other morning early it was found that ten out of the twenty-four cars found between Campbell Street and Bridge Street were still there at noon.

Mr. Illsey claimed that the present system was not fair to any place of business unless it were restricted as to time. He doubted if it was well for the merchants and professional men in the long run to help block the street as their cars tend to do.

"Obstructive and Lazy"

"I think our present system is obstructive and lazy", he added, referring to the delay caused by a car halting to let out a passenger or to take on goods or passengers. "I think it is detrimental to the best interests of the city, that this should be so and I think that the visiting people should be allowed space when they come to the city." He pointed out that there were places where cars could be parked as on Pinnacle Street and behind Kresge's store.

He favored a parking limit, of half to three quarters of an hour or even an hour.

"To think of ten out of 24 cars left all morning in the congested area."

Chairman C. W. Browne of the Open Forum expressed the view that the present system was unsuitable as business men left cars parked all day with the result that people shun Belleville.

The difficulty in the way of a solution of the parking problem was faced by Mayor G. O. Tice, who declared "This parking question is like the beer and wine question." (Laughter.) He related how the council accepted the recommendation of merchants in 1930 on parking and soon were back to have the by-law rescinded. "They found their business losing," they said, "as people were not coming to the city, when they could park for only half an hour."

Parallel Parking Frowned on

The Mayor came out boldly and declared parallel parking was out of the question on Front Street. "We have not four accidents a year as a result even to bumping fenders," he stated.

"Apparently in Belleville, every man wants to park where he is doing business and if he cannot he gets mad. The parking system is bad I know, but I do not see what you are going to do. Fourteen men in council cannot tell you what is to be done in everything", he said, and told how a survey for a week showed that seventy per cent. of the offenders were business and professional men. For two months some time ago conditions were ideal and then this ended". The Mayor said that the Kresge parking space was not taken advantage of as it should be.

"If the men in business would keep their cars off the street this parking problem would be three quarters solved", he declared. "If you can make any suggestion to me as a member of the parking commission, which will help us solve the matter, I shall be glad to have it."

"Surely to goodness a place the size of Belleville can afford to have thirty minutes parking", was the opinion of G. C. Weir."

"This system just makes us look like a small town. True enough, merchants and others are mostly to blame. Still I favor half hour parking."

The opinion was given that farmers and visitors should not be held to such restrictions.

Mr. E. Shapiro said that Saturday was the only day of congestion with cars and it was the day when the farmers should have all the space they require. He told how he parked his own car off the street on Saturday.

Forty-five minute parking was advocated by Mr. Fred B. Smith.

Alderman Ben Safe, warned that fining people was something which should not be advocated.

"Howl" by Traveller

"Look at the howl that traveller made when he was fined a dollar for parking at night in the way of the sweeper though he had been warned four times', the mayor pointed out.

"The parking problem is terrific", was the pronouncement of Mr. Laurie Lewis, "The only day when there is not a parking problem is Sunday. The reason there are no accidents on the street is that the drivers of cars on the street have to move so slowly in fear of striking some one.

"We must clean up this situation. I hear it all the time from customers 'We can't get near the stores.'

"We are making a lane out of the street. I would suggest we let donkey carts, banana waggons and so on come up if you want to make a monkey out of it. We must clean it up.'

"Calling himself one who did not offend, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, J.P., expressed himself in this way: "I believe if we could eliminate the city automobiles and leave the street open, the problem would be solved. I believe the greater part of the space is taken by city merchants and professional men. Now a motorcycle has a right to the same space as a car, that is how foolish it is. I have seen four cars straddling the white lines of the space of six.

Latitude to Farmers

"Eliminate Belleville motors occupying Front Street as an all day garage and allow all latitude to the farmers and your troubles will largely be over. Of course I know people do enjoy sitting in cars watching others go by."

Mayor Tice told his audience that he would like to co-operate, "but you have not gone into the problem at all. The downtown area is too small. We have had to have one way parking on certain streets.

"People are here to park on Front Street and other streets. How are you going to eliminate the trouble by half hour parking. It cannot be done."

Mr. Laurie Lewis said: "The police know visitors and can use a great deal of discretion. They can pass up on the out-of-town peole. But when they know people are in cars all day, doing trading, they should get them fast. We want our places open to business. If I lived out of the city I would not want to come here to go through the gruelling of finding a parking space. We are losing hundreds of dollars through it."

Mr. W. B. Deacon, favored one hour parking though he said the parking problem was general. He had found it acute in Bancroft on a Saturday night. "I believe in a little moral suasion and advertising of the desire that Belleville has to invite visitors and that local cars will be kept off parking spaces for the afternoons and Saturday evening," he said, suggesting a red card be placed by police in cars owned in the city which stay too long in a place. This would be just a gentle reminder that the people expected more fairness of a motorist than the monopoly of the streets as a public garage.

TRUCKS ON "SPOT"

Mr. Deacon came out against trucking through the business streets and railed against the long truck projecting over the white lines so as to impede freedom of traffic. "I think a policeman should have power to make this fellow move on.

"Let's try the gentle persuasion for the next three weeks and then for a period of four months and you will see the difference in the creation of a spirit of co-operation by elimination of clogging of the street by city merchants and professional men and clerks. Then ninety per cent of the evil would be overcome he thought."

It was at this juncture that Mr. Ed Shapiro moved that the Chamber of Commerce send a pledge card to every business man, Professional man, manufacturer, and merchant asking them to sign to keep their cars off the business streets every day of the week. Mr. Shapiro promised to have this matter dealt with by the Retail Merchants with a similar pledge.

The esplanade reared its head again as Mr. Deacon remarked that it would have provided space for three or four hundred cars.

Mr. Shapiro commenting on the parking in the free space back of Kresge's said there was parking at all angles which led to cluttering of the space. He suggested that the city engineer's department might with the consent of Kresge's mark off parking spaces on this lot.

Appeal to Fairness

Mr. Illsey advised the mayor to ask by public proclamation in the press the people of Belleville to assist the solution of the question this present season by keeping their cars off the streets as much as possible so as not to make the streets a garage. The Mayor agreed.

Mr. Shapiro's motion was seconded by Mr. F. B. Smith and carried, an amendment by Mr. Lewis seconded by Mr. G. C. Weir, favoring hour parking being lost.

Mr. J. T. Delaney explained that Front Street was not the only street with a parking problem, mentioning Victoria Avenue and Bridge and Campbell streets and also expressed opinion in favor of extension of the Christmas lighting and decoration.

The chairman, Mr. C. W. Browne, reported that Mr. H. W. Ackerman sent regrets and the hope that he would some day see the esplanade an accomplished fact.

The meeting adjourned.

PRESENT AT SHOWER FOR NEWLYWEDS

Hillier, Dec. 8—The Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church held a bazaar and food sale last Saturday evening. Owing to the inclement weather it was not as successful as it would otherwise have been.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Adams attended a shower near Roslin at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jordon in honor of the newly-weds, Mr and Mrs. Donald Vance (nee Miss Merla Jordon) granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Palmer. There were two hundred guests present and the happy couple were the recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts.

Mr. J. Alexander is attending Agriculture College at Kemptville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hegadorn and son Mr. Charlie Hegadorn, Miss Merras and Miss May Hegadorn of Rochester, N.Y., were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hegadorn on Nov. 24th. They also entertained Miss Vera Hegadorn and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Gamble of Centre, and Mr and Mrs. Norton of Bloomfield and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hicks of Picton and Mr. Etchells of Oshawa on Sunday.

Donald Alexander was one of the fortunate boys who won a trip to the Royal Winter Fair at Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Jones were callers at Bonny Brook, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Gamble are moving from Centre to the Levi Palmer farm.

Mr. Austin Palmer is down from Oshawa visiting relatives a few days.

The sale at Mr. Burton Baxter's Monday was well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thompson visited relatives in Picton Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. John Charlton has been staying with her son Mr. Harry Charlton and Mrs. Charlton during the last illness of her father Mr. Ira Cook. Mr. Cook who had reached the ripe old age of ninety-three, passed away early Wednesday a.m. Much sympathy is extended the bereaved family.

Mrs. Alice Liddon has moved into Mr. Rupert's house in the village.

Miss Margaret Stewart's many friends are very sorry ot hear of her illness and hope she will soon recover.

A fine baby boy has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wes. Smith. They are receiving the congratulations of friends.

Mr. A. H. Lloyd of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, Bloomfield was a caller in this locality Saturday.

Mrs. Sherwin spent the week end with relatives in Toronto.

The patrons of Willowdale canning factory met at Mr. Garnet Istead's the proprietors to settle for tomatoes delivered to the factory during the season.

IT IS WISDOM to buy a cloth coat with fur trim, even if you have a fur coat, for it will save your expensive coat. A charming coat is in black woolen with a capelet of the fabric outlined in snow-top fox, the same fur making a high, round collar.

Personals

Mrs. A. J. Bristol, Victoria Ave., who underwent an operation on Thursday is progressing favourably.

Miss Lazelle Brown and Miss F. McIndoo were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower held at the former's home last evening in honor of Miss M. F. Ross, bride-to-be.

Miss Grace Graham and Miss Charlotte White will be tea hostesses at the Belleville Badminton Club this evening.

Today being the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, Masses were celebrated at six, seven and nine o'clock in St. Michael's Church, the last being a High Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Doyle and family, of Toronto, are spending the week-end in the city. Mr. Doyle will leave Monday from Detroit by airplane to Los Angeles.

Miss Loretta Doyle, Alexander Street, has returned from New York City where she spent several months.

Betty Cavanagh, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Cavanagh, 81 West Moira Street, was rushed to the hospital Thursday for an operation for appendicitis and is progressing favourably.

The second annual "Spinsters' Dance", sponsored by the Ranger Cadets, was held last evening in Johnstone's Academy and was a splendid success. The many guests were received by Mrs. Leo B. Riggs, Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, Mrs. C. E. Argue, Miss Jessie Tuite and Miss Hilda Collier. At this novel dance the feminine guests are required to act as escorts and all entered into the spirit of the evening, the girls doing all the "asking" for dances. The Commodores played a delightful program for dancing.

Weddings

CORRIGAN—WHALEN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Sacred Heart Church, Rochester, on December 1st, when Miss Helen Whalen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Whalen, of Rochester, became the bride of Mr. John Joseph Corrigan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corrigan, of Read. Miss Anna Hunt, cousin of the groom was bridesmaid, while Mr. Dennis Whalen, brother of the bride, was best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the bride where a sumptuous wedding dinner awaited them. They were the recipients of many beautiful and costly gifts. They will reside in Rochester.

Mrs. Oliva Dionne Most Outstanding Woman in 1934

New York, Dec. 8—(CP)— Mrs. Oliva Dionne, the French-Canadian mother who presented to an admiring world and an astonished husband five little girls at one time, is given the place of honor among the outstanding women of 1934 by Arthur Brisbane.

The well known United States editor and news commentator, writing on "the women of 1934" in the January Pictorial Review, holds that women are by far the more important half of the human race "because they create the other half". He says no woman has painted one of the world's great pictures or written one of the great poems, then hurries to add:

"But women have created the men who painted the pictures and wrote the poems. And women, therefore, have created all that the great men have done."

Producing babies is the most important work on earth because it perpetuates the human race, Mr. Brisbane contends in naming Mrs. Dionne the most outstanding of the year's outstanding women.

He says the fact the five little infants up in Callander, Ont., are all living speaks volumes for modern medical skill.

Mae West in Honor Roll

Next to the world's super-mother as the writer sees it, comes Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the U. S. President, "mother of five children, an American woman of intense energy and high principles devoting her life to public welfare."

Others in his roll of honor are the late Madame Curie, who, with her husband who died before her, was co-discoverer of radium; Marion Fisher, New York golferette who wore short panties on the links for comfort and was accepted "because the world is acquiring common sense." Mae West of the movies, whose "task is to help the tired businessman to relax"; Mrs. Aimee Semple MacPherson, whose "business is to save his soul in case he relaxes too much;" Anna Goldberg and Judith Figarsky, who "risked life and suffering worse than death to help children, undergoing vaccination with infantile paralysis germs."

Advice to the Lovelorn

DOMESTICATING THE RECORDING ANGEL

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When Robert Louis Stevenson said for a man to marry was to "domesticate the recording angel," he said a mouthful. I've got a nice, capable wife and have managed to remain loving and faithful though she drives me to the verge of madness.

Before I married, I belonged to a card club and we played at each others' house once a week. Afterwards, we had beer, sometimes the real article, sometimes "near". It was all very pleasant and jolly. When I married, I thought I'd show the boys what a perfect wife would do in the way of a little supper.

But my lady doesn't see it that way. She has tantrums when the fellows come to play cards. She won't fix a supper and she raises Cain over the cigarette ashes which are sometimes spilled. To shame her, I rented a private room in a restaurant, when it was my evening to entertain. Then she fussed about my being out late.

Sometimes I wish I had married a slattern.

Martyr Husband.

Just tell the little lady, when it's your time to entertain the card club, that you intend to throw a party, and let her make the best of it. It's ridiculous for a man not to be able to receive his friends in his own home.

OFFICE CUPID'S DARTS HIT THE WRONG PEOPLE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We all work in the same office. The boy I'm crazy over, the girl he loves to distraction, and myself. He talks to this other girl whenever he gets a chance, and spends most of his wages in gifts to her. She shows these around, and laughs at his devotion.

I don't know him very well. We talk sometimes, but I see his face before me all day long and I'd give anything—years out of my life—if he'd only care for me a little. I used to be so happy, but now the things that made me happy—dances and shows—don't interest me in the least.

Sometimes, when I glance up from my work, I find this boy looking at me, and he seems almost as unhappy as I am.

Ishbel McC.

If you find the young man looking at you wistfully, that seems to me a pretty good symptom. He probably realizes that you're interested in him, and compares your restrained admiration to the other girl's flaunting of her conquest. In time, these things tell, and I haven't a doubt that he'll lay his bruised affections at your feet. Keep up your courage.

POOR COFFEE BRINGS DOMESTIC DIFFICULTY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I belong to a big family, and before I was married, our house was the meeting place for all the young people in the neighborhood. My mother was perfect. She let us cook, entertain, dance, and have the best times in the world. For these parties, I usually made the coffee, and I had a great reputation as a good coffee maker.

When I became engaged, the crowd said, teasingly, that my husband married me because of my coffee. And, would you believe it, I make it just the same way now, and I never get a word of praise—only complaints. I've tried boiling, percolating, making it in a bag, with hot and cold water, clearing it with egg-shell and without, but it never pleases him. So I have come to the conclusion that I have domesticated a grouch.

We have four children. I do all the work, and this foolishness over the coffee has certainly got on my nerves.

Janet.

Why not suggest to your husband that he make his own coffee. Some men are very good cooks, and in a household where no help is kept and there are several children, and complaints about coffee, the most sensible solution to me is to have the gentleman make his own. If it turns out badly, he will probably grouch less.

HIS FRIEND CHEERED HER UP TOO WELL

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I fell in love with a young man I met at a dance. He always used to see me home. Then he got into some trouble through some "buddies" of his who were arrested. Later, he was detained as a witness.

During this time, a friend of his tried to cheer me up. He took me to several dances, always bringing me home and treating me swell. The upshot of this was that he not only cheered me, but I fell head-over-heels in love with him. One day he told me he was engaged and showed me a photograph of his fiancee. The shock nearly killed me.

Now, my friend, who got into trouble, through his friends, has appeared on the scene again, but I find I don't like him, and am not interested in going out with him.

—Nineteen.

It is natural for young people to fall in and out of love easily at the romantic age of 19. The young man who tried to cheer you up has been very square with you in telling you that he was engaged. And you have discovered that you do not care for the first young man as much as you imagined.

Just wait a little while and see if the fates may not have in store for you a third young man, whom you may find more attractive than either of these two. At 19, one can afford to wait a little while.

Woman's Guild Elects Officers

Yesterday afternoon the Woman's Guild of St. Thomas' Church held their annual meeting in the Parish House. The vicar, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, presided for the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Honorary President—Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne.
President—Mrs. F. Potter.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. J. S. Bigham.
2nd Vice-President—Miss Amy Wallbridge.
Secretary—Mrs. Jas. Arbuckle.
Treasurer—Mrs. John Watson.

The Guild has had a most successful year and Major Jones, the People's Warden, in a brief address conveyed to the ladies the appreciation of the Wardens for the assistance they have given during the year.

GIRL GUIDE NOTES

An interesting ceremony in the Brownie program took place at their regular meeting last week when five were enrolled as Girl Guides. Of these, Peggy Harvey, who earned her wings, had the distinction of "flying up" to Guides, an honor for which Brownies work faithfully. Betty Fenn won the "golden hand" (first class) and the other three to be enrolled, Marjorie Cooke, Rhoda Moult and Mary Cooke, won gold bars (second class). Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, Captain of Company Three "A" and Miss Ana Gartley, Tawney Owl, conducted the ceremony.

On Thursday Mrs. Chas. Dracup (nee Clela Simmons) who has been a member of the Guides since she was old enough to be enrolled, was presented with her Captain's warrant and takes charge of Company Three "B". Guide officials are very proud of the work of this young officer who has risen from Guide to Captain of her own company. For the first time she was able to enroll new Guides into her Company.

JOHN STREET W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of John Street United Church was held on Wednesday, December 5th. The meeting was opened with the Call to Worship by the President, Mrs. J. Moore. The hymn 58, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" was sung and Mrs. P. Fletcher, who was in charge of the devotional period read the second chapter of St. Luke. She also read "A Christmas Story" by Henry Van Dyck and Mrs. P. G. Denike offered prayer.

The regular business was transacted and reports were heard and after the singing of hymn 360, as this was also the election of officers, Mrs. Archibald, who was convener of the nominating committee, was asked to give her report. Mrs. Archibald began her report by a short talk, urging those who were elected to office to be willing to serve and to be careful not to give the old reason, "Oh, I am so busy with everyday affairs" or "I am so nervous." These excuses would seem very trivial if Jesus were to come and ask why you did not do the Master's work. His work is infinitely more important than any other work and His hand is ever ready to stretch and to help in times of weakness.

After the officers were chosen, they rose and rang, "Take my life and let it be consecrated Lord to Thee."

The Mission Band gave a Christmas play and Irene Singer, President, made a few remarks.

The characters were:

Mary with the Christ Child—Marion Lashbrook.

Angels—Shirley Hitchon, Gloria Norris, Wilma Judge, Helen Douglas.

Shepherd Boy—Jean McCabe.

Others who took part were: Joyce McLellan, June Crosby, Betty Sharland, Jean Taylor, Mildred Boomhoover, Irene Singer, Margaret Day, Doris McCabe, Isobel McCabe, Joan Lashbrook, Marion Kilbank.

The play was very well done and was enjoyed very much and Mrs. Moore and Miss Jean Catcher deserve a great deal of praise for their interest in the Mission Band.

The meeting was closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

COUNTESS COVADONGA

Denying that she was to separate from Count Covadonga, eldest son of former King Alfonso of Spain, Coutness Covadonga, ABOVE, daughter of a wealthy Cuban merchant, is pictured arriving in New York where she told reporters "it's all a terrible misunderstanding." The countess said the report her husband told her if she went to a certain dance she needn't come home was not true.

Mrs. J. A. Daniels Chosen President of Women's Association

Foxboro, Dec. 8—A number of the young people of Foxboro are attending the school at Wallbridge.

A box social was held on Wednesday evening on behalf of the Ladies' Association.

Mrs. J. Gowsell Sr., has an attack of erysipelas.

Miss E. Ross of Belleville spent a day recently with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. M. Wickett.

Mrs. Murney Reynolds is spending some time in Frankford with her sister, Miss Maggie Gay who is ill.

Miss Helen Davis spent Sunday afternoon at Mr. Wilmot Rose's.

Mr. W. Prentice and Mr. Watts attended a funeral at Peterboro on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Sherwin and Miss Bernice Dainard of Hastings spent the week end at Mr. H. Stewart's.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Kilpatrick and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bartlett spent Wednesday in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Davis spent Thursday in Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Hodgen and Dale had Sunday dinner at Mr. Wm. Hodgen's.

Mrs. Richard Hanna and Miss Mae Reynolds of Belleville, Mrs. Emma Reynolds and Mrs. Embury spent Tuesday with Mrs. Murney Reynolds.

Mrs. Ewart Sills had supper on Wednesday at Mr. S. C. Gay's.

Miss Pansy Lansing of Stirling, was a tea hour guest of Miss Marion Daniels on Wednesday.

A Mission Band dinner was held in the Sunday School rooms on Tuesday and a goodly sum realized from the dinner. Just after the noon hour, a meeting and reorganization of the Ladies' Association was held.

President—Mrs. J. W. Daniels.
1st Vice Pres.—Mrs. J. Gowsell.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. (Rev.) Mutton.

The next meeting will be held jointly with the association at the home of Mrs. W. Wickett.

The Mission Band was held on Sunday morning when a Christmas programme was given. Doris Dafoe and Marjorie Teney sang a Christmas hymn and Miss Marion Daniels gave a story of different kinds of houses in foreign lands. Lois Spencer and Betty Hodgen are responsible for the programme for next month.

Everyone is pleased to note that Hubert Young was sufficiently recovered to be able to be removed home from the hospital one day recently.

The Library Corner

"The Romance of Archaeology" by R. V. D. Magoffin and Emily C. Davis could not help being interesting. Its subject is that one which appeals to everyone. Canadian, European, Modern History—they are all eventful, but interesting only to a certain few. However, Ancient History—Archaeology—is fascinating to everyone. Then, apart from this inherent interest, there is another factor, the purpose of the book to tell the story of the unexpected resurrection of the past into the liveliest, most fascinating form of modern science, archaeology, once the sport of kings, now the royal sport of scientists. This hope has not been a vain one. In its three hundred and twenty-four pages and with its one hundred and forty-six illustrations, one is taken to the Mediterranean and the Aegean and made to feel that he actually is excavating Troy or Cnossus, rising from despair at the clumsiness of someone who has chipped the nose from a bronze statue to delight at finding dice, cups and counters, which although two thousand years old could be used conveniently in the fairly modern game of parchesi.

In "Retreat From Glory" by Bruce Lockhart we find re-created the atmosphere of the immediate post-war period when men, exhausted by the war lost balance and sense of justice.

The book opens with the author back in London where he is a three-days sensation due to his adventures in Revolutionary Russia. On his return he is received by Lord Balfour, Princess Beatrice and King George himself. From London he goes to Prague as secretary under Sir George Clerk. Here Czechs, Rumanians and Jugo-Slavs are destroying the remains of the Habsburg Empire. Exchanges collapse and extravagance sits cheek by jowl with starvation and despair. Feeling that he has exhausted the possibilities of an official career, Lockhart sends in his resignation and starts in on a banking career. His financial affairs take him all over Europe. He describes his meeting with Sir Ramsay MacDonald, then plain Mr. MacDonald, and gives us a birds-eye view of the Bohemian countries. Shortly after this he accepts the position of Manager of the Intelligence Department of the Anglo-Austrian Bank in London. This new job lasts exactly three years and ends suddenly with the death of an official and the consequent merging with another bank. With no great difficulty he obtains a position with Lord Beaverbrook on the Evening Standard. Before beginning his journalistic career, however, he takes a year's holiday, ostensibly to write a book, but spends his time in a species of farewell tour of the continent. On this trip he meets the ex-Kaiser and later obtains the first interview he gave for the Standard. The account of this meeting makes very interesting reading and gives one an altogether different view of the Kaiser whom Lockhart describes as "a very sad man feeling terribly hurt by the one country he loved—England."

This book is intensely interesting and should be read by everyone, especially those to whom the post-war period is only a vague shadow.

In "Peace With Honour" A. A. Milne has completed a book which everyone interested in his country should read. He is against war. He thinks it wrong. He also thinks it silly. He regrets that the Prime Minister, Sir John Simon, Lord Beaverbrook and the leading men of all the European countries do not think as he does that war is a Bad Thing but merely that it is Much Too Much of a Good Thing.

This is not "just another' war books." It is a plea for peace by one who knows the horror of war.

—The Pen Club.

LILA LEE WEDS

Lila Lee back in pictures after recovering from tuberculosis, is back in matrimony, too. She eloped to Harrison, N.Y., with Jack Peine, scion of a Chicago clothing millionaire. They're shown celebrating.

"It's funny, Molly — Peggy's always loved the ride before. But she's been acting just this way for a whole week!"

"She's not hungry either. I've found, Nan, that these symptoms mean it's time for a laxative. Give Peggy Castoria tonight."

"We want to report that Peggy's fine today — a perfect lamb! We both can't thank you enough for suggesting Castoria."

"A good laxative was all the child needed, Nan. And Castoria is made especially for children. I'ts the best first-aid treatment for a cold that I know, too. And children never mind taking it because it tastes so good. Then, it hasn't any of the strong drugs in it that make some grown-up laxatives so unpleasant, and sometimes so harmful for children to take."

Correct Manners

ACCEPTANCE OR REGRET

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just received my first invitation to a luncheon and bridge. I do not know whether I shall be able to attend. Will you please give me the correct form of acceptance or refusal? What style of stationery should one use?

Laura.

I cannot tell you what form of acknowledgment to use without knowing the form of the invitation. If it is informal.... that is, if it is written in the form of a letter.. .. you answer in letter-form, in the first person. If the invitation is formal (that is, written in the third person), the formal type of acknowledgment is also in the third person.

Miss Mary Elizabeth West accepts with pleasure
Mrs. Henry Loring's
kind invitation
for luncheon and bridge
on Friday, the fifth of January
at one o'clock

For the regret, this is the usual form:

Miss Mary Elizabeth West
regrets that she is unable to accept
Mrs. Henry Loring's
kind invitation
for luncheon and bridge
on Friday, the fifth of January

Use the conventional letter-paper, and write on the first page only. Space the lines as I have indicated, so that they look well on the page.

RINGS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Does the bridegroom purchase both his wedding ring and the bride's or does the bride purchase his ring?

Elsie

The groom purchases the bride's ring, and the bride purchases the ring that she gives to her groom.

TO THE BRIDE AND GROOM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me if it is proper to congratulate a bride as well as a groom? If not, what would be the proper thing to say to a bride?

Constant Reader.

It is not considered correct to "congratulate" the bride. That word is assigned to offering one's felicitations to the groom. That is, we congratulate the groom on having won such a charming wife. In offering our felicitations to the bride we use the expression "Best wishes" or "Every good wish for your happiness", or "May I tell you of my best wishes for your happiness." If you keep these two appropriate expressions "congratulate" for the groom, and "best wishes" for the bride, and add to them any other friendly comment, you will always be assured that your felicitations will be in the best form.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am giving a golden wedding anniversary dinner at a hotel or tea-room. Will you please tell me how the wedding cake should be served?

2. Also, kindly tell me if the ladies should remove their hats?

Katherine.

1. Why not have the wedding cake as the central decoration for the table? It is charmingly effective when used in this way, and dramatizes its significance.

2. If the occasion is an informal one—for instance, if the affair is held in a tea-room or in the main dining-room of a hotel, it is better form for the women guests, who probably will be informally dressed, to wear their hats.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers).

CANADA'S TRADE GROWTH CHEERING

Corbyville, Miss Margaret Reynolds.
Foxboro, Miss Vera Rose.
Zion Hill, Miss Doris Bunnett.
Plainfield, Mr. Orville Rollins.

Spoke on Council

Mr. W. Gray, Reeve of Thurlow township gave a short talk on the County Council. He explained the heavy expenditures of the county mentioning Old Age Pension and the relief. Mr. Gray told how he had brought about the lowering of the expense of the township in regards to the pupils of Thurlow attending Belleville Collegiate. The members of the club appreciated Mr. Gray's work in this matter.

A short address was given by Mr. J. Hill M.P.P. for East Hastings. Mr. Hill spoke well of Mr. Gray in the work he had done. Mr. Hill spoke chiefly on the proposed Bancroft Highway and the lack of the Hepburn government in starting this highway, which meant so much to the people in the northern part of the county, who need relief.

An inspiring address was delivered by Mr. Ernest Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings. Mr. Tummon spoke chiefly on the convention held in Brockville recently, and discussion of the trade of Canada with other nations. He was pleased with the representation of this district at the convention. This was the largest convention held in Brockville in recent years. Mr. Tummon said, that it was the genius of Mr. Bennett and his government that was bringing Canada out of the depression and on the road to prosperity. Certain class of people are finding fault with trade of Canada with other countries, he said but Canada is fifth among the nations in the volume of trade. Canada is trading with the same countries she was when Mr. Bennett came in power. Mr. Tummon closed his address asking: "Are we going to trade with the British Empire through Mr. Bennett or with the United States through Mr. King?"

Between the addresses musical numbers were given. Solos, Miss Elsie Hamilton of Plainfield and Miss Edna MacConnell of Point Anne. Instrumental, Miss Reta Clarke of Corbyville and saxophone solo, Miss M. MacDonald of Point Anne and vocal solo by Miss P. May.

The meeting was closed by a short address given by the new president after which refreshments were served.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, Dec. 8. — The stock market dipped rather listless today under moderate week-end profit taking by traders who decided to take a chance on getting back in at lower prices. There were scattered firm spots, however, and extreme pressure against any particular group was lacking. The close was heavy. Transfers approximated 450,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 8.—The mining section of the Toronto Exchange was a tame affair in today's short session compared with the three preceding sessions. Trading settled down to a slow drag and prices were barely firm, most of the adjustments showing on the down side.

Only four stocks, Little Long Lac, Premier, McKenzie and God's Lake boarded anything approaching normal volume. Senior golds had only a few sales among them with Dome and Hollinger selling unchanged and Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves showing losses of a few cents each. Little Long Lac eased down 20 cents to 5.70 while Siscoe lost 6 cents, San Antonio 5, Sylvanite 4, Macassa 3, God's Lake 3 and Pickle Crow 4.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—A flop in the market for Distillers Seagrams carried the rest of the industrial list to lower levels in today's Toronto exchange session. Aside from Seagrams, volume was small and losses were mainly of the fractional variety.

Distillers Seagrams was sold heavily in blocks up to 500 shares and the price broke to 14 and closed there for a loss of 1 3-4. The other liquors were carried down in sympathy, Industrial Alcohol A losing 5-8 and Walkers common 1 1-4. Moderate changes in the oils appeared on the down side on normal volume.

OUTLOOK

Irregular trend in Industrials and Commodity prices developed Friday but there was a strong undertone to the market. Buying of selected preferred stocks was quite steady. Volume was substantially the same as the day previous but it is reported there are substantial bids behind the market. Evidently designed to take advantage of any profit taking periods. All in all the market is moving true to the form of a creeping advance.

Mines were quite irregular strong volume of bids on the floor has thinned out and the recent rally seems to have pretty well spent itself. Profit taking appears to be in order.

CHAINS ARE HIT

Financial Service Montreal says: —"The investigation of the Chain Store System has hurt the business of these companies by about 25 per cent. it is learned. The individual grocer of course has benefitted. The decline in market price of such securities as Dominion Stores and Thrift is attributed directly to the disclosures made at Ottawa. Whether the managements of the Chain stores are being justly or unjustly accused of unethical business methods the business volume in their stores has dropped.

ISLAND LAKE

Policy of careful exploration is being continued by Island Lake Gold Mines according to J. M. Dunlop, M. E. mine manager. Mr. Dunlop states that there are more than 100 men working at the plant. The 50-ton mill is handling about 40 tons a day. There are about 50 tons of rock brought to the surface every day.

NEW SWIMMING RECORDS MADE

100 Yard Mark and 200 Yard Relay Mark Falls in Civic Meet

Hamilton, Dec. 8. — There were new figures for the swimming record books today and new laurels for Toronto's tank artists. They came in a big drive for Canadian crowns in the first title meet to be held at the civic swimming pool here last night.

United States colors appeared during the meet to gain Canadian honors, but the point margin rested with Toronto Dolphinets and Toronto Broadview Y.M.C.A. swimmers. The crown taken across the border was worn by Jack Thompson of Buffalo who recorded a new Canadian mark when he splashed his way in front in the 100-yard free style race for junior men.

Thompson's time was 58 seconds, 3-10 seconds faster than the century has been travelled before in the Dominion. His record splash was accomplished in the second heat. Jack McCormick of Hamilton won the initial heat when Bob Dunstan of the Broadview "Y" was second and Aurel Thomas of the Montreal St. Louis Swimming Club third but Thompson emerged in the lead in the next two heats with Dunstan second in the final and R. Knowles, another Broadview swimmer, third.

Dolphinets' swimming prowess was displayed when they cut two seconds from the Canadian mark for the junior 200-yard women's relay in taking the championship in 2.04 2-10. The Border City Swimming Club of Windsor entered the mermaids that took second place in this event.

MAY TAKE OVER LEAFS

New York, Dec. 8—There is a strong possibility that Cincinnati Reds of the National Baseball league will take over Toronto's International League club next season it was stated here today.

"If the National League club does not assume full control," the newspaper adds, "it is likely the operating company will be reorganized and Arthur Lehman named president to succeed the late Geo. Oakley."

The Cincinnati club has been working with the Leafs but only under a co-operative agreement relating to exchange of players.

MAY MAKE TWO TRYS

London, Dec. 8—Sir Malcolm Campbell said that if he was not successful in breaking his world auto speed mark in February on the Daytona Beach, Fla., sands he might remain in the United States and take a whirl at it again on the salt beds of Utah.

"I haven't decided anything of course," Sir Malcolm told the Associated Press, "because I am not entirely hopeful of success at Daytona. However, there's a faint possibility that I might try my luck at Salt Lake City. They tell me it's a marvellous course."

CURRENT SPORT

(Day By Day)

With the advent of colder weather a battery of men started to prepare the Belleville Arena for the season. All day yesterday the skating surface was being levelled and placed in condition for the water. Owing to roughness considerable filling was necessary and it is very doubtful if water will be applied before this evening. In the meantime Manager Redner is busily engaged getting everything shipshape. A large number of tickets have been disposed of about town and it is hoped to have the rink ready before Christmas.

President Stanley Wilbur of the Belleville Figure and Fancy Skating Club announced that skaters will hold sway at the old curling rink this winter. The fancy skaters have acquired the old rink and have an ideal location. There is a large reception room, glass enclosed, at this rink where spectators may watch in comfort. On Thursday night the first application of water was sprayed on the surface and providing the weather remains sufficiently cold enough, the rink is expected to be ready by the 15th. of the month. The club enjoyed a very successful season last year, making numerous appearances outside the city as well as presenting a gala demonstration at the Arena. The art of figure and fancy skating has firmly taken root in this city and the success of the organization seems assured.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Basketball Association is being held in Kingston tonight. Ralph Morden is the official delegate from this city and will represent three local teams, the Y.M.C.A. intermediates, the group champions, Deacon A.C. juniors and a new entry, St. Michael's A.C. juniors. The grouping in the junior league this year may cause trouble as Kingston, Queen's, R.M.C., Napanee, K.C.I. and two Belleville squads are all being represented Last winter the Belleville juniors were grouped with Queen's and R.M.C., while Napanee, Kingston and K.C.I. composed a second group. A play-off between the group winners failed to materialize when Napanee, winners of "B" group refused to meet the Deacons. The same group of intermediates will again face the barrier with Belleville Y, Kingston Y, R.M.C. and Queen's comprising the loop. Speaking of basketball it might be of interest to know that Phil Brockell, who has been ill in the Kingston General Hospital for some time, is greatly improved. Phil was at once time general secretary of the local "Y", later taking over the physical instructor's duties. He subsequently accepted a similar position in Kingston. Local sportsmen will be glad to hear of his improvement.

When Bill Crawford and Howard Wheeler suffered defeats on the last S.W.A.A.C. card they naturally were forced into minor roles by Promoter Allen on his Monday night's show. Despite the fact that Wheeler and Crawford are not in the limelight, they have been passed rather tough opposition from Peterboro, Wheeler meeting Tony Ronco, the Italian 118 pound champion of the Lift Lock City, while Crawford tangles with Pete Vitarelli, who starred for the Peterboro junior hockey team here last winter. Of course from a local viewpoint all eyes will be focussed on Jack Langman and Freddie Parry, the two local mitisters who turned professional and recently were awarded their amateur status by the A.A.U. of C. Eight bouts in all have been arranged by Promoter Clem Allen for his third local boxing show at the "Y" Monday.

Apparently the Cobourg suggestion to form another intermediate group, leaving Belleville and Campbellford out in the cold has gone wanting. The latest changes of groupings issued by the O.H.A. does not include the one brought forth by the Cobourgites. . . . The Peterboro sport quibbler for once agrees with our suggestion of having three or four teams in the local intermediate play-off, a la N.H.L. . . . Over in Trenton the hockey inclined minds have threatened to link up with the Trent Valley League now that the Belleville City League moguls hoisted them into oblivion. . . . Which reminds us that the local city leaguers are to convene on Tuesday night. All managers will be on hand to receive league certificates, these being the only signed certificates to be recognized by the league executive. . . . A merry battle is looked for. . . . Drop around to the city hall tonight and win your Christmas turkey.

CHAMPIONSHIP SOFTBALL TEAM MOULDED FROM BASKETBALL TITLISTS

St. Catharines Grads, senior "B" softball champions of Ontario for 1933 and 1934, have received an intimation from President Ernie Smith of the parent O.A.S.A. that they will be "stepped up" to senior "A" rating for 1935. This diamond unit was organized on the return from Vancouver in the spring of 1931 when the Garden City athletes, as basketball challengers for the Dominion championship, won the eastern Canada title and went west in search of the national honors. Keeping the cage aspirants as a unit for summer sport resulted in the origination of the softball organization. They were defeated for Ontario laurels by Brantford in their first year of competition, but in 1934 won their second consecutive provincial championship. In basketball they are commencing their twelfth successive season in Ontario competition, with a record of eight championships during that period. Top row (LEFT to RIGHT)—R. Pollock, pitcher; H. Keehl, centre field; W. Newman, utility first baseman; F. Dixon, pitcher; T. Hallett, second base; H. Millington, third base. Middle row (LEFT to RIGHT)— H. C. Maguire, executive; H. MONTREAL SPREAD IN WELSH COAL

Test Made at Ottawa

The South Hastings member pointed out that considerable Welsh anthracite came to Canada as large "lump". A test was made at Ottawa, not for any dealer, but for public purpose, to show how this large "lump" coal acted when it was "broken down", that is, crushed. One hundred tons left the following result:—

Domestic cobbles 54 tons.

Smaller sizes such as buckwheat, nut, peas, 21 tons, degredation (dust) 23 1-4 tons.

Loss 1 3-4 tons.

As to the dust or "degradation", Mr. Tummon said there was none of this shipped out of Montreal. It is sold in competition with coke screenings at from three to four dollars and a half a ton. Owing to its fine and dusty character, it is difficult to handle and burn in its natural state, even with specially designed stokers. It is stated that this "degradation" is being mixed with soft Nova Scotia coal and used for heating purposes. It has a tendency to decrease the quantity of smoke that usually comes from soft coal.

About 17 per cent. of all sizes obtained is buckwheat coal and this sells in Montreal at a price about equal to the importation price. Pea coal runs about 4 per cent. and sells about $1.85 per ton above the import price. At the time this test was made the cost per ton of 2000 pounds was given as $7.00, or a total of $700. The various sizes of coal with degradation would bring a total of $891.46, a profit of $191.56 on 100 tons or a margin of $1.91 for the cost of breaking down and handling.

Many Grades Baffling

"I endeavored to find out what the cost of Welsh coal was in the old country," Mr. Tummon explained, "and then I ran into difficulty. There seems to be a multiplicity of grades of Welsh coal. I find even while I have obtained prices f.o.b. Swansea, I am not certain whether these prices prevail in all cases for export."

Mr. Tummon said that the best large lump coal according to the "Colliery Guardian" of October 1934 sold at 35s to 37s 6d, equivalent to $8.52 to $9.13 in Canadian money, for long tons of 2240 pounds. Transportation rate from Swansea to Montreal, he understood, is from 7 to 8 shillings per long ton.

"It seems that Welsh coal is graded according to hardness, U. S. according to chemical content. Hard and soft Welsh may have the same chemical content but the hard is better because there is less "degradation".

Mr. Tummon said that he was told that very little of the best Welsh coal came to Canada, that is the real hard coal for which there is a special market in France. What Canadians get seems to be a mixture of seconds and thirds.

He also found that there is a standardization in U. S. screens while in the old country each colliery has its own sizes, so that when the coal comes to Canada, Welsh has to be rescreened. Mr. Tummon explained that large Welsh lump coal is the coal taken directly from the mine and passed over a six inch screen.

Asks Price Laid Down at Montreal

Secretary-Manager J. O. Herity of the Chamber pointed out that it had been stated in the Toronto Mail and Empire and other newspapers that the cost of Welsh coal was from $5.00 to $7.35 per ton laid down at Montreal. If that is the grade sold to the dealers in Belleville which they sell for $16.50, and for which Belleville dealers have to pay $12. at Montreal and then pay freight, it would look, he said as if there were an unwarranted spread between the price f.o.b. Montreal and the price paid for the coal arriving in Montreal. He pointed out that the intention of the motion had nothing to do with the prices paid at Belleville but the prices paid at Montreal.

Mr. Tummon in explanation said that large lump coal does not constitute half of the Welsh coal brought into Canada. He showed that there are various grades which are difficult for one to understand as there is no generally accepted system of classification of coal from Welsh collieries.

It was further remarked by the member that the report made on the Combines Act is not available though the evidence of any prosecutions under the Combines Act is of course public at trials.

He stated that he was informed that seventy or eighty per cent. of the Welsh mines were in charge of one Welsh company.

Need of Deepening Narrows

That there is a large amount of good coal from independent collieries which does not come to Canada was believed. It was this which some thought the solution of the situation, said Mr. Tummon. "In my opinion it can be landed here as cheap as it can at Montreal. The only drawback is the Narrows at which the water is one foot too shallow. With rock removed that one feet, vessels could come up the bay with coal from Wales.

"I think I can tell you without giving away any secrets that the work at the Narrows will be proceeded with in the spring." (Applause.)

Mr. Tummon answered a question of Mr. Herity's that he did not know what the coal cost the importers at Montreal.

When the question of the motion came up Mr. Tummon stated that the cabinet had widened the scope of the Price Spreads Commission investigation some days ago to take up the coal price question. "I talked to the chairman of the Price Spreads Committee this week and he told me that it is their intention to proceed to the study of the coal question just as soon as possible." Canneries, textiles and farm implements are to be investigated first, however.

Mr. George K. Graham referred to the experience his father, the late R. J. Graham had with reference to a trial shipment by car of Welsh coal. This was not satisfactory and he would say that 40 per cent. was broken down to dust, so that that particular car cost ten dollars a ton, though the price was actually a trifle over $800 laid down here. A boat load would have cost about $8.30 at the docks here and screening machinery would have been necessary. If there was a screening plant and if the deepening of the Narrows were carried out coal could be laid down here at that price by boat. He was told that half of the breakage in the trial car load was due to transhipment into a car and that if the trip were made by boat alone the "degradation" would have been only half as great.

"I think perhaps that coal could be laid down at Montreal at about $7. a ton but I do not know about the quality," said Mr. Graham

Mr. Herity asked the meeting if they thought the resolution would help the hands of the Price Spread Commission by calling for an investigation of the price spread in coal at Montreal.

W. C. Springer recalled having a conversation with Mr. Garriety, trade commissioner, and he believed the price mentioned by Mr. Garriety for coal was $7.35 f.o.b., Wales, and $1.50 per ton freight to Montreal.

Alderman Ben Safe speaking of the Belleville situation said that at a meeting of dealers, with the special committee of the city council local dealers said they were possibly making $3.00 gross profit. "They did convey the idea that they thought there might be a combine in coal at Montreal but said that there was none as to prices here."

"In my mind there may be a combine at Montreal and I think it would be in line if this meeting passed a resolution on to the Price Spreads Committee."

Referring to the fine of $30,000 on a number of companies in Quebec, which was followed by a rise of half a dollar a ton, the alderman wondered if it were wise to investigate further. (Laughter).

Does Enrollment at Airport Force County to Pay Costs of Indigents Taken to Hospital?

Question Brought up When County Threatened With Suit For Bill

SIDNEY AFFECTED

Letters Received From Ottawa and Toronto Not Clear on Matter

Whether Hastings County is legally responsible for the care of indigent patients, who lay claim to residence in this county, when applying for aid at hospitals, on the strength of their being enrolled at the Trenton Air Camp previously, is a question agitating the minds of Hastings County councillors at the present December session.

Frankly, the government departmental heads are puzzled over the answer no less than councillors of the county. Advice is being sought on the matter by the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, representative of this riding, from the Director of Medical Services at Ottawa. A copy of the communication will be sent, advised Dr. Faulkner in answer to a query made by County Clerk Eric Denyes some time ago. In the meantime the matter of a bill for the sum of $76.00 from the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives has been laid over by council, in spite of a threatened suit to recover what is claimed by the hospital to be a just bill on the county.

A miniature bomb-shell was projected into proceedings at the Thursday afternoon session of County Council with the reading of the bill.

Instantly Reeve Burke of Sidney, was on his feet. "Why should this bill be paid? This man in question has never been a resident of Sidney Township. I doubt if he is a naturalized citizen (the name was almost unpronouncable). I will admit, that he had been stationed at the Air Camp for some time, but he left there and went to Toronto. Then he went to the hospital, and we're supposed to pay his bill. We have nine hundred men at that Air Camp. If they all take action like that it will ruin not only Sidney Township, but the whole county. We shouldn't be asked to pay that bill."

"Why should we pay it?" chorused Reeve Wallbridge, Madoc.

Communications Received

"I have some communication on this matter," intimated County Clerk Denyes. "One from our representative, Mr. Tummon; one from the Department of National Defense, and one from the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health.

"Inmates of the Trenton Air Camp cannot become indigent patients, and while in camp they are cared for," pointed out Mr. Tummon in his letter to the clerk.

"The establishment of these camps at Trenton, and some one hundred and fifty others throughout the Dominion was for the purpose of relieving the provinces and municipalities of the care of those admitted. The Dominion has no power to force anyone to go to the camps, and no power to compel them to remain longer than they wish. It is merely an accommodation," continued the communication.

"While they are there the Dominion Government attempts to look after them, but when they leave, they revert to the same position as citizens as anyone else and the Province, under the B.N.A. Act, have entire jurisdiction as to both hospital and relief matters. This will be plain to the council when it is remembered that for relief purposes the Dominion can give a grant to the provinces, but has no power to administer it. It is so as well in regard to hospitals or other such public institutions. The province has the jurisdiction and not the Dominion.

"May I say that the Dominion Government under their Franchise Act of 1934, Part 1 and Rule 9, states that: 'Time spent by a person at any unemployment relief camp, or in any private institution or refuge maintained either by public or private monies for the relief of the distressed or unemployed persons shall be deemed to have been spent by that person in temporary absence from his last place of residence, etc., etc.—and no person, merely because of time spent by him at unemployment relief camps shall lose his residence qualification in that place where he was residing.'

"I shall be very glad to do anything I can in the matter, but I am baffled to know how the Dominion can have any control over any one once they leave the camp. In my judgment this is a point for the province to so amend their Act that the conditions as outlined above in the Franchise Act of the Dominion will apply to such hospitalization cases as you have in mind.

"(Sgd.) W. E. TUMMON."

No Burden Writes Department

A letter from L. R. La Fleche, Deputy Minister of the Department of National Defence states:

"All men on the strength of the Department of National Defence Unemployed Relief Projects are given medical care and proper hospital treatment if required. Should they prove to be medically unfit after discharge from hospital and while on the strength of the projects, they are given free transportation to the point at which they were selected for the project, and in consequence there should be no burden on your municipality on account of those who were selected from other municipalities."

"For men who leave the strength of the project on their own initiative or who are discharged for cause, the department naturally can assume no responsibility, but from our experience, the numbers in that category who would require any hospital treatment are very small."

Dr. Faulkner in his communication to councillors was of the opinion that the county of Hastings was not legally responsible for the payment of such accounts. The Minister of Health advised that his department had taken the matter up and that communication was being made with the director of medical services. When an answer is received a copy will be forwarded.

"My personal opinion is that the township of Sidney or the county of Hastings should not in any event be held responsible for the payment of such accounts, and that it should be totally assumed by the federal government."

The matter rested there for some time until on the motion of Reeve Frank Reynolds of Madoc township and seconded by Reeve James Sprackett of Tudor and Cashel the bill was laid over.

"But we have that notice from the legal firm," reminded Clerk Denyes as the motion carried.

B. C. BANK NOMINEE

W. C. Woodward, treasurer of one of Vancouver's big department stores, is British Columbia nominee for the board of directors of the Bank of Canada. He was selected at a meeting of shareholders in Vancouver recently and has received the endorsement of similar gatherings in other B.C. cities. A son of Charles Woodward, 82-year-old founder of the well-known department store, Mr. Woodward was born in Gore Bay, Manitoulin Island, and came to Vancouver as a youngster.

WATER FAMINE SURVEY IS MADE

Britain Will Endeavor to Provide Against Future Distress

London, Dec. 7 (C.P. Cable)—Britain is to provide against further water famines in a permanent fashion. The last two summers, excessively dry, created alarm. A number of districts were placed on rations and great cities saw their supply threatened.

Now Sir Edward Hilton Young, Minister of Health, and Sir Godfrey Collins, Secretary for Scotland have decided on a comprehensive inland survey. A committee composed of persons outside the government departments will be appointed to advise on the survey and on progress of the measures to be taken.

WING COMMANDER LEAVES AIRPORT

out in the fore part of the flimsy machine, bumped off the ground into the blue on what was considered in those days a perilous flight.

"I was determined to learn to fly in order that I might join the air force as a pilot, so I went down to Dayton, Ohio, and joined the Wright brothers' school there," he went on to say. "Several other aviators were also taking the course. We learned on the old pushers where the engine was mounted on the rear, and you sat in front with a little wheel stuck right up in front of your face to control it with. People looked upon flying in those days as something of a feat, and I guess it was when you consider the machines then in use."

"Also taking the same course at the Wright brothers' training school were Roy Brown, later known as the Canadian aviator conqueror of the great Baron Richthofen who at the time of death from a machine gun in the plane piloted by Lt. Brown had an official score of over fifty allied avivators brought down; Brig.-General J. S. Gordon, now commanding the Winnipeg district, Murray Gallbraith, well known present day aviator, and others were there at the same time that I was. They were a great bunch of lads!" added the Commander.

In France in Early '16

Following his graduation from that school with a diploma of airplane pilot, Commander Breadner returned to Canada. The war was still in progress so he went to Ottawa where he presented himself to the recruiting officers. Promptly, a ticket was made out to England. "Report at the Royal Naval Air Service Base there. They'll fix you up," he was told.

After some preliminary air training in England, Commander Breadner found himself in France in the forepart of 1916. Air tactics had begun to be recognized as dangerous and risky work. But pilots and planes were necessary. They were the "eyes of the army."

Of his experiences in France, Commander Breadner modestly says little. Under questioning he will admit that he brought down "some" planes. "We don't like to state definitely how many we brought down. We might have put many of them out of commission, individually, but the number of actual crashes you could credit for yourself was different," he commented.

The purple and white ribbon of the Distinguished Service Cross on the right of the other ribbons on his tunic, however, tells of valour performed in the air, from the Somme to the coast.

After War Activities

Following the end of the war and his return to Canada, Commander Breadner was appointed on the Canadian Air Board as certificate examiner. For a considerable period he held this position and then became Controller of the Civic Aviation Branch. Later his transfer to Borden became effective with the rank of Officer Commanding. From 1924 until 1925 he held this command and was again sent to England where he entered Staff College at Andover completing a course especially adapted for permanent flight army officers. Later he returned to Canada and Camp Borden and three years ago was transferred to the Trenton Air Camp in command.

During his stay in England, Kingsford-Smith, the daring pilot who recently made a successful flight from Australia to California, was also taking some extra instruction. He was known among the men as "King Dick."

Commander Breadner became veryy well acquainted with him during this time and spoke very highly of his skill as an aviator and a pilot-navigator. Along with this he had great determination to see a thing through. This combination of qualities has enabled him to become one of the greatest airmen in the world. Certainly one of the most practical.

Flying Psychology

A survivor of many crashes and forced landings, Commander Breadner has invariably escaped with but a few bruises and scratches from the experience. "Every aviator is bound to have them," he sums up succinctly.

"If you crash in the old crate go up again as soon as you can," commented the Commander. "All wise commanders will do that with the pilots who are qualified for flight. It takes all the nervousness out of them. But, if they were allowed to stay on the ground, then they'd brood over it, and that is bad for the nerves. It's just like a car driver. He doesn't quit driving if he cracks up in a ditch some place."

Young Canada is air conscious. Yearly the department at Ottawa is flooded with hundreds of communications from would-be Lindbergs or future air aces. Requests by the score to enter and study operations at the local Air Base are received by officers at the port. But, alas, the majority of them haven't the faintest idea of what is necessary before the first steps in this service are taken.

"The majority of them haven't an idea of what is needed. Most of them have little more than ordinary public school education. And the remainder of them are simply enamoured of the service," he added.

Age of Aviators

Age limit of aviators does not figure as prominently now as it did in the days of the war when youth and daring were needed at the helm of the fighting ships on the war fronts. Scanning the list of many well known aviators of the present day it will be found that the majority of them who are making a name for themselves by their flights are sometimes well over the forty mark. Then, too, lots of older residents are taking up the science at various flying schools.

In reference to Lindbergh, he stated when Lindbergh stopped in Ottawa on his flight across the Arctic a few years ago he asked the air force experts what they thought of his chances.

"You haven't our blessing or sanction on the matter," said the Canadian officers. "Too risky. Winter's coming on now, and it would be almost impossible for you to cover that northern route with safety in your plane," they advised.

However, in spite of the advice of the Canadian airmen he took off on the flight that gained him further laurels as an aviator.

"Lindbergh is like that. He is cool and determined. And he has plenty of nerve," stated Wing Commander Breadner. "I saw him when he came to Ottawa.

"He was helped a lot on that trip by Anne Lindbergh, his wife. She is reported one of the best navigators in the field. And she is just as cool and resourceful as her husband. Anne Lindbergh gets a pat on the back, too, from key pushers all over the world. She is one of the best radio operators in the ranks. She isn't one of these umpty-iddy pounders, but can keep her key and transmitter just as clear as the best of them."

The Autogyro

Whether the autogyro will ultimately displace the conventional type plane is something that can't be answered as yet, stated Commander Breadner. "They have made great strides with them in the past few years and if they had spent as much money on the development of them as they have on the other type of planes, then we might be able to form some idea of their efficiency flexibility and adaptability," he added.

"I've been up in them a few times, but never handled the controls. The experience was weird. In that type machine I noticed that the pilot did just everything we were taught not to do. In seems certain they'll have their own particular place, even if they never do displace the other kind.

Future of Planes

"It isn't likely that the planes now in general use will ever be thrown into the discard, though, because people have associated the type for years with the best there is to be had. So unless something radical is evolved we will go right on training with the ones we have now," he concluded.

Outside on the rain-soaked landing field a second silvery pursuit plane stood with motor ticking over. The pilot slid into the seat, gunned the motor into a burst of speed and the plane rolled across the ground, gathered speed and commenced its climb. Another pilot was taking off on a practice flight. In the huge hangar a dozen other silver and yellow planes were being groomed, dismantled and reassembled in all stages of the work. Men in mechanics' overalls swarmed around them working away. The business of flying and learning to fly was still being carried on.

School Use Given to The Unemployed

Ottawa, Dec. 7 (CP)—The Public School Board has granted the use of Wellington Street school as a community centre to develop the recreational and educational resources of the unemployed. This brings to fruition a project long mooted by the Council of Social Agencies and made possible thru' the co-operation of private citizens who have been responsible for guaranteeing any financial outlay necessary.

This centre will provide a supervised program for the leisure hours of the unemployed, presenting facilities for education and entertainment which are not available in the home.

SCRAP SHYNESS IN GERMAN PLAN

Pure Unblushing German Youth is Hitler Nazi Ideal

Essen, Germany, Dec. 7 (CP-Havas)—Pure but unblushing young men, and well disciplined young women, trained for their natural mission of motherhood, are the Nazi ideal for the young, Baldur Von Schirach, leader of the Hitler youth movement, will say in a forthcoming book.

Designed to be a sort of junior edition of Adolf Hitler's gospel of Nazis, "Mein Kampf" (my struggle) book will be a call for new moral standards, in which sex problems and instinctive shyness are to be scrapped.

"For us" Von Schirach has written, "there is no sex problem. Present-day youth has an ideal, and has turned its senses to more essential things.

"Youth must not blush for its natural instincts, but in the years of its allegiance to the Hitler youth movement must submit to a common law: 'stay pure and become mature.'"

Elsewhere he sketches the ideal Nazi girl: "The generation that will form Germany's future needs heroic women. Weak 'ladies' and persons neglecting their bodies or giving way to laziness do not belong to our future."

"The Nazi girl must submit body and mind to severest discipline and prepare freely for her natural mission, motherhood."

HONEY DEW HEAD DIES SUDDENLY

R. Harcourt Lindsay Well Known as Sportsman And Businessman

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—Robert Harcourt Lindsay, President of Honey Dew, Limited, and Vice-President of the Orange Crush Company, Limited, died suddenly last night, it was revealed today. He was 50 years old.

Mr. Lindsay, prominent sportsman and businessman, was widely known here, in Winnipeg and in Chicago, cities he visited many times a year on business trips.

He was born at Springfield, Ont., a son of Robert Henry Lindsay and received his early education near his birthplace. His first job was tending livestock on his father's farm.

As a youth he entered a real estate business in Winnipeg and subsequently was associated with a wholesale oil firm in Chicago.

In 1927 he came to Toronto and was one of the organizers of the Orange Crush Company. He joined the Honey Dew Company six years ago and became its President four years ago.

Mr. Lindsay was a keen sportsman, an enthusiastic angler, golfer and rifle shot. He was a member of the National Club, Granite Club and Rosedale Golf Club and of the Hamilton Club of Chicago.

He is survived by his widow, one son and one daughter.

OFFICIAL ORGAN IS CONFISCATED

Reference to German Rearmament in Question

Vienna, Dec. 7 (AP)—The official organ of the Catholic Storm Troops, Sturm Ueber Oesterreich, was confiscated today for disobeying a government order forbidding publication of anything refering to German rearmament or statements hostile to Germany in connection with the Saar plebiscite.

The action was especially significant since Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg is supreme commander of the Catholic Storm Troop movement.

Catholics in the Saar had been urged by the paper not to vote a return to Germany until "the brown phantom"—a reference to Nazidom—has disappeared.

The paper also reprinted an article from a Geneva newspaper accusing Germany of maintaining a so-called "Austrian Legion." Thus the articles revealed that influential leaders in the Chancellor's own formation are against a possible reconciliation with the Reich.

Russians Excluded From Saar Police

Geneva, Dec. 7 (AP)—The League of Nations today agreed to a request by the German Government that no Russian or Czechoslovak soldiers be included in the International Military Force which will police the Saar Basin territory during the plebiscite next month.

Plans for the movement into the Saar of British and Italian forces already have begun and Holland, Sweden and Switzerland are being sounded as to whether they wish to contribute contingents.

JUDY MARRIES

CHAPTER ONE

Judith Denning was being married. The folding doors between the big front and back parlor of the old Denning house had been flung open, making the space into one long room.

Up in the bay window an improvised altar had been formed of a marble topped centre table, flanked with umbrella stands holding bunches of calla lilies.

Above the "altar" hung a white tissue paper bell. It was a trifle light struck on the edges because it had been borrowed from Mrs. Watson, and had served time at the wedding of each of the three Watson girls in turn before this present session.

Judge Denning was being married....

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered here today...."

It was the Reverend Lemuel Miner speaking and his old voice had a drone like a bee, Judy thought dreamily, a giant bee hovering over banks of calla lilies....

The whole thing was dreamlike. She tried to realize that she was being married but her attention kept slipping out from under the thumb of her mind.

A shade on the side window was slapping faintly in the afternoon breeze. In the tense group behind her a wedding guest shifted to the other foot—she could hear a shoe squeak. How close it was in the room. She hoped she wasn't going to faint like the heroine in a melodrama. She should have insisted on having the ceremony out in the garden. But Aunt Hetty was old fashioned. An outdoor wedding didn't seem quite legal to her.

"Do you Judith take this man—"

Her own name shocked her back to reality. She heard a thin voice answering in the affirmative—a voice which did not seem to belong to her at all.

Then her heart gave a hot wild leap. She was being married! This was her wedding day—this strange rushing dream in which paradise and squeaky shoes were oddly jumbled!

"Do you Stanley, take this woman—"

How funny, to hear Stan called that He'd always been Stan to the crowd, ever since that first night when she'd met him at Rosamond Curley's dance. A month ago.... only a month ago and now she was being married to him!

How firm Stan's voice was when he answered the old minister. Defiant, almost, as if he threw it in some one's face. She took a glance beneath her lashes and her heart leaped, as the sight of Stan could always make it leap. Almost sinful for a man to be so good looking! He was the best looking thing that ever came to this town! Secretly, Judith wondered how she had gotten him away from all the other girls. Rosamond Curley had been crazy about him.. ..

Stan's profile was set and white like a handsome head cut out of marble. There was a spangle of moisture on his forehead and she knew a rush of tender ridicule. That grim look only meant that he was scared to death ....

The old minister was speaking "For better, for worse, till death do you part......"

One moment—one little moment and there would be no more Judy Denning. There would be Mrs. Stanley Carter. Sentimental to take it so seriously. After all most people got married— some several times. But a little shiver of excitement chased up her spine.

"I pronounce you man and wife

"It was over. All over. That's all there is, there isn't any more.....

Had the minister said that? Oh, no! Of course not. Stan, turning to her, eyes strange and dark in his white face. How odd he looked—like a man dazed. She gave a little nervous laugh and said softly derisive: "It's your wedding not your funeral darling!"

He seemed to break through a frozen spell and bending, kissed her. Later, Judith thought about that kiss. A funny, hard sort of kiss. Not tender Fervent—even savage.

"Hello—my wife!"

"Hello, husband!"

The room behind them broke into a soft excited roar as they turned around and faced the crowd. Judy was descended upon, passed from arm to arm while her hand grew hot and wet about the stems of the white roses she carried.

"Well, Judy! Do I have nice friends? If it hadn't been for me you wouldn't be married today! Phil Davis' fat cheerful face.

It was true. If Stan hadn't come here to Summerfield to visit Phil whom he had known in college, Judy would never have met him. It brought home to her, with a small shock, how short a time she had known Stan after all. One short month ago, she had not known he existed. Less than four weeks and she was his wife. 'For better, for worse, till death do you part' —A little shiver of excitement passing over her; excitement edged with fear that passed as soon as she recognized it.

"I'll never forget it, Phil I'll hold it against you to my dying day"! How shaky her laugh sounded. Heavens! It was hot in here. Could they not open more windows!

Someone grabbing her, holding her for a moment imprisoned in his arms as though they were alone. Ken Baker, a defiant gallant grin on his lips and a look of hurt in his eyes. She had been Ken's girl before Stan came to town. Ever since high school days she had been paired off with Ken at dances, parties, picnics. Would she have married Ken if Stan hadn't come in like a conquering army sweeping all before him?

"I ought to hope that you'll regret turnin' me down woman!" Ken was making a gallant effort to belie the shadow in his eyes. "But I'll be a scholar and a gentleman and wish you all kinds of good luck—dear."

Judy was aware that Mrs. Watson had bustled through the crowd to them. Mrs. Watson was used to weddings and refused to be awed. Her voice was strident as she addressed Stan.

"Well, young man, hope you realize what a prize you got this day! I guess there's a lot of these young fellows here would like to call you to account for coming along like this an' stealin' our girl .Here, you kiss me this instant an' I'll maybe forgive you"!

Kindly vulgar Mrs. Watson, who had lived next door to Judy ever since the girl could remember. A voice like a buzz-saw but a heart as soft as a feather bed! Her vulgarities, her mannerisms got on Stan's nerves, Judy knew. And she winced now at the frigid boredom in his manner. Of course Mrs. Watson was crude—but Stan should know that Judy had had to invite her to the wedding! Right next door—knowing her all her life —the gingerbread men Mrs. Watson had baked Judy in years gone by. Playing in the Watson attic on rainy days. Climbing the Watson cherry tree in summer with Maudie Watson....A little thrill of mingled exasperation and shame went through Judy as Stan lowered his handsome head and delivered a kiss which was a cold rebuke. Stan did not have to be so snooty about it! It wouldn't hurt him to play up a bit to his bride's friends on her wedding day!

Mrs. Watson was blessedly obtuse, however. She had taken command of Judy, shoved Ken Baker aside with one fat red arm.

"You, Ken Baker—get out-a my way. You let the bride go now, she aint your girl no more! I'm going to take her to her Aunt Hetty!"

Dragging Judy, laughing through the detaining crowd up to the dried up old woman in the big armchair.

Aunt Hetty Denning was Judy's great aunt. A spinster whose youth went back to the days of crinolines and dolmans. This day, she stood at the end of a long vista of duty.

Orphaned at an early age, Hetty Denning had raised her own younger brothers and sisters. She had become father and mother to her orphaned nephew had seen him married, had nursed his wife through childbirth. She had set herself—at an age when most women were retiring to the armchair—to the task of raising his forlorn little daughter.

Hetty Denning had seen her grandniece through measles and school days, graduation parties and first beaux, as resignedly as a missionary sets forth on his travels. Today was her day of tired triumph. Judy was married. After today Aunt Hetty was a pensioned soldier. No longer any need to keep this house which had long been too big for the two of them. Aunt Hetty was retiring after today discharged into the home of a prosperous niece in a neighboring town, where she could fold her hands and rock and wait for death.

She gave Judy a dried and withered peck. She was not unkind, merely tired When one has raised two generations of children the third young thing that comes along is apt to be a stale story.

She shook hands awkwardly with Stan. "I wish you happiness." There was a certain grimness to her smile and her bright black eyes went sharply over his face.

"Thank you," Stan's tone was stiff. He and this old woman did not like each other.

His voice held a badgered note as he muttered to Judy. "Let's get out of here! Phil has the car parked behind the tennis court so the darn fools won't plaster it with signs. Get your things on, we'll beat it down to the train!"

Judy saw with a sort of dismayed astonishment that Stan's handsome face was strained as though with some inner fever.

But as she worked her slow way to the door she must submit to more kisses, more congratulations. Old Dr. Bartlett who brought her into the world. Miss Buckbee, the dressmaker who must whisper how nice the hem of her gown looked left uneven like that! Judge Kelsey. Mr. Arnett—Rosamond Curley—People she had known all her life. People Judy Denning had grown up among.

She found a rush of overwrought tears in her throat. Old friends—the room crowded with old friends. The only stranger here, the man she had just married!

INTO THE DARK

CHAPTER TWO

Upstairs alone in her own bedroom, Judith changed into her traveling suit.

It was more dreamlike than ever up here in the quiet, hearing the muffled soft roar of voices down below in the front of the house. Surely this was not her wedding day......It was more unbelievable than ever as she took off the big white tulle hat which framed her face and slipped out of the white georgette dress the whole affair increasing in strangeness as her image in the mirror grew familiar. She carefully folded the dress and tucked it into the packed trunk awaiting the expressman by the window.

Her wedding dress.....How often in childhood days had she and Rosamond Curley planned their wedding gowns. White satin, they were to be, with long trains.

It was part of the changed order of things that she should be wearing a ready made dress which she had driven over to Laceyville to buy three days before. A dress turned out by a factory for no one in particular. It had not even fitted her. Miss Buckbee, the seamstress, had to be called in to make the necessary alterations. There had been no time to have an outfit made. Stan had to get back to his own home town. They had to marry in haste......

Her going-away suit was her Easter suit. She remembered how she had saved for it for two months after paying Aunt Hetty her board money. Judy's salary as Assistant Librarian at the Summerfield Circulating Library had been small and the price of many a denied ice-cream soda, of a movie admission had gone into that grey crepe suit. She had made the hat which went with it. Judy had a knack with hats—even these smart, close-fitting felts.

The rope of pearls about her throat had belonged to her dead mother. Nothing new about the outfit— nothing but the circlet of diamonds on her left hand. That ring which had said she belonged to Stan Carter.

Stan had not given her an engagement ring. There had not been time for that. But this wedding ring had all the splendor of an engagement ring. Diamonds and platinum —nothing like it had ever been seen in Summerfield before. Stan said he had driven over to Laceyville, the county seat and bought it. Laceyville was bigger than Summerfield, of course, but Judy was surprised anything so exquisite could be found in its jewelry stores. It made her realize something she had lost sight of in the rush of the past few days. She was marrying a rich man—rich as such things were counted in this town, that is.

Everything ready—the trunk closed and locked. One more look at the baggage tag to make sure that it was properly addressed.

MRS. STANLEY CARTER

LOCKWOOD

California

How odd to think that she was Mrs. Stanley Carter of Lockwood, California.

She paused for a moment at the door, her eyes roving around the room in silent goodbye. This quit white room which had been her own as far back as she could remember....The writing desk which Ken Baker had made for her in his manual training class at high school and given to her for a graduation present. Poor Ken—he was going to miss her.

The pear tree peeking in between the white frilled swiss curtains. Judy's mind brushed the memory of summer days when she played dolls under its branches with Rosamond Curley or Maudie Watson — long golden afternoons dreaming up in the boughs with a book. Nights when she had lain in bed listening to the warm spring rains dripping from the leaves. When the pear tree bloomed next spring, she wouldn't be here to see it. Perhaps the pear tree was doomd. This house, this old place which had been a home for 70 years had been sold to Mr. Arnett the banker. He was going to put three modern bungalows on the ground. Everything had changed.

Hot, unshed tears in her throat choked back when she heard Phil's booming whisper up the stairs.

"For the love of Pete, Mrs. Carter what the heck's keeping you! Stan's out her champing on the bit. Come on—the engine running, you can make a grand sneak-away!

The next issue of the Summerfield Argus was to describe this wedding today, as "one of the social events of the year". Miss Helena Higgensbothem society editor, was one of the guests eating cake and coffee now in the front parlor. What Phil Davis called a "grand sneak away" Miss Higgensbothem was to put thus: "The hasty marriage plans were carried through and, the ceremony ended, the happy pair left on the overloed train for Mr. Carter's home."

What Miss Higgensbothem did not know; what Phil Davis did not guess, was the secret panic of the bride as her very new husband rushed her along the station platform to the car.

Judy twisted about to wave to Phil from the train steps. She had never been especially fond of Phil —never very intimate with him until Stan had come to Summerfield to visit. But she had known Phil always he was the last link which bound her to the town she had known all her life. She felt a lump in her throat as the train started and Phil's broad, grinning face moved from view.

Judy crushed her face against the glass. The station rolling by—the SUMMERFIELD sign on the freight shed. Gathering speed along Railroad avenue where the trainmen and factory hands lived in small white cottages with dusty sunflowers growing in the front yards. Rattling over the river tressel where a group of youngsters in swimming yelled and waved, as she and Rosamond and Ken had yelled and waved at trains years ago.

Two days later, from the slopes of Kilimanjaro, Tarzan heard the boom of cannon. He hastened on toward the distant sounds for he knew that meant Reds were there, fighting the British.

Mid-afternoon of the second day Tarzan came upon troops. He saw that they were composed of native soldiers in the uniforms of the Red invaders.

No one saw Tarzan, yet he was here and there about them. The insignia upon their uniforms was not the same as that he had taken from the dead soldier at his devastated home.

After darkness fell, he prowled about [illegible] camp, listening at the backs of tents, always searching for some clew to the slayer of his mate. A lucky chance suddenly favored him.

EARLY START ON PROPOSED ROAD

others assist in the work of repairing the floor was added.

An account of $1577.70 toward the Mothers' Allowance upkeep was ordered paid.

Fifteen dollars each to the Women's Institute of North, West and East Hastings was also granted upon motion of Reeve J. L. Churcher and Wesley Gray.

Grant To School

A grant of $100 toward the upkeep and maintenance of the Wallbridge School of Agriculture and Home Economics was voted by Council.

Although unsuccessful in their fight, Reeves James Bronson, Mayo, and W. J. Davis, Bangor, et al, battled spiritedly for the passage of a motion which would grant $200 each to the townships of Mayo and Carlow for the purpose of road repairs.

The motion: "That a grant of $200 each be given to Carlow and Mayo townships to help on Boulter and Childs' mine road, in order to place it in condition for safe travel, as the trucks have completely ruined it in loading pulp and lumber at a time when the season was at its worst. And that the same be referred to the committee of ways and means."

A protest against the grant was lodged by Reeve Larkin of Tyendinaga. "In all fairness to our southern townships this should not be granted. We have no pulp wood down here, and we have no northern development work. If any special grants are to be given out, I believe that we are entitled to them the most."

Reeve Bronson agreed that conditions were not too rosy in the south, but the grant, he inferred, was a dire need. "We see a lot more of the south than you fellows do the north. You don't know what's going on up there, or what the conditions are. I've never seen one of you fellows back there yet."

"We were never invited," returned Reeve Larkin.

Members Invited North

"Yes you have been. I've even offered to pay the railroad fare of any man from the south to come up there and see things for himself."

"The north isn't getting any too much. The people just don't understand that. If I didn't think that the request was a fair one I wouldn't have put it," concluded the Reeve of Mayo.

"How much northern development work in the township?" questioned Reeve Sayers.

"Sixteen men, including the foreman; the men work about two weeks in three months. We started in November," returned Reeve Bronson.

"I've never opposed anything before from going to the north but I feel that I'm a representative of the county of Hastings. I also feel that if any money was spent now on the roads it would be just like throwing it away," commented Reeve Gilroy.

"We have the same conditions in Wollaston. I've had to take my trucks off the roads they got so bad. We had snow at Millbridge yesterday and I guess there'll be more than that farther north. I speak not for the south or the north, but I feel it my duty to oppose this grant. I don't believe it is the right time to spend any money."

Reeve Gunter: "Reeve Gilroy has forgotten that the entire link in the boundary of the township is the county road. These townships have none. Yet they have to pay the costs of county roads. It seems to me that it isn't asking too much for this grant."

"Would the Reeve of Bancroft say that it was an opportune time to fix roads?" asked Reeve Gilroy.

"I say if the work is necessary, it should be done," replied Reeve Gunter.

Plug Holes When Occur

Reeve Bronson: "The time to plug a mud hole is when the hole is there. One of these holes cost us twenty-six dollars this year when a tourist broke something on his car. Since then they've become a lot worse."

Deputy Reeve Phillip Carr, Rawdon: "How much does the townships of Mayo and Carlow get back out of the tax on the gas that was burned on that road? How much did they get out of the license tax for their cars? There's the trouble. I think that the county council should pass a strong resolution through to the government to get some of this money back that is being made from these taxes. We should get our share."

Reeve Burke insisted that if any special grants were being given out, Sidney should be in, too. "We have obligations in the south that you fellows don't have up there. We get heavy demands for relief. Our population, a large part of it, is a floating one. We have a large amount of uncollected taxes. This lessens the borrowing power of the township. Less money borrowed means less work for our needy. If we start these grants we would be doing a great injustice to the people at home."

"There is no municipality harder up than our own," affirmed Reeve Sayers, Tweed Village. "This is a bad time for grants. Couldn't those trucks use some other road?"

Reeve Wm. West, Stirling, chairman of the Finance Committee referred to the opposition that was felt in June when the council had a lot of difficulty in getting a rate set. "You have unavoidable expenses right now. I appreciate the condition of the roads in the county but we have these overdrafts and we must look after them. It will not do to pass out too many grants."

Deputy Reeve Carr—"I agree wholeheartedly with that. We have been voting grants right and left. We just gave $100 to an agricultural school and a course in home economics in Sidney."

"We raise a pretty good crop on our farms, often too much to sell. We don't really need to go to school to learn something that most of us make our living at. We don't need the produce—we need the markets. Yet we let the roads go that are so badly needed to the farmer to get in and out."

Against Grant to School

"That grant was not for a Sidney school in agriculture or home economics" emphasized Reeve J. L. Churcher, Dungannon. "The school is for the whole south. What makes me wonder is, how can a farmer get up in open council and knock his own industry. I'm shocked at the idea of him doing so." Mr. Churches paid Mr. Jos. Wilson, agricultural representative, the highest praise for his efforts in this matter.

"I'd like to see this grant held off until the January session. Let the others struggle with it," remarked Reeve Metcalfe. "Let them put it in the next year's estimates."

Deputy Reeve Carr—"I agree with the Reeve of Dungannon when he says that the farming industry should be supported, but my point is that if some kid has to go barefooted to school to give some other kid a better education, then it is time to cut out these grants—and I still say it is."

Reeve Churches—"Why shouldn't this child be given every advantage . . . ."

"Order, gentlemen," warned the Warden. "This is not the question. We must discuss only one question before the floor."

"If you get that grant will the money be spent this fall?" asked Reeve Sayers.

"It will be spent just as soon as we get our hands on it," assured Reeve Bronson.

The question of the grant was finally settled by the motion of Reeve Sayers, seconded by Reeve Burke, Sidney, that it be laid over for the incoming council at the January session.

A bill for the upkeep and maintenance of Bancroft Community Hall, with which is connected the department of justice offices, pending for the past two years and amounting to $150 was ordered paid on the motion of Reeve Gunter and seconded by Reeve Bronson.

Membership in the Ontario Agricultural Council will be renewed at a cost of $25.

The good-natured chuckling which councillors have been indulging in at the expense of their fellow Reeve, R. C. Brett, Limerick township, over the secret that a woman, Mrs. McMullen, now township councillor, might accept the nomination for Reeveship of the township and contest the seat at the January elections, came up for official notice on the floor of the council chamber during the late afternoon.

"It has been said here by one of our most popular and veteran reeves that he might retire this year," rose Reeve Gilroy to remark. "I was just wondering, in view of the fact that a lady councillor might contest the seat of Reeve in that township if we couldn't officially create an office of Deputy Reeve of Limerick. Then we would have good representation from the township if they both come down."

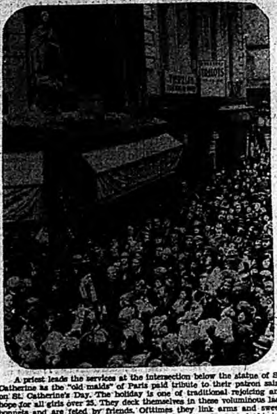
MAY BE CONSERVATIVE PARTY ORGANIZER

BRIG.-GEN. J. A. CLARK

J. EARL LAWSON

The task of organizing the Conservative party of Canada for the next election will, it is reported, likely fall to either Brig.-Gen. John A. Clark, Vancouver barrister, or J. Earl Lawson, M.P., for West York (Toronto). Brig.-Gen. Clark is thought to have the inside track, but Lawson's name has been prominent in party organization talk for the past year. Clark was an M.P. from 1921 to 1930. He was not a candidate in the last election.

CELEBRATION OF PARIS "OLD MAIDS' " DAY



A priest leads the services at the intersection below the statue of St. Catherine as the "old maids" of Paris paid tribute to their patron saint on St. Catherine's Day. The holiday is one of traditional rejoicing and hope for all girls over 25. They deck themselves in these voluminous lace bonnets and are feted by friends. Ofttimes they link arms and sweep through the streets exercising the prerogative of the day . . . . in kissing every man they meet. The statue of the saint is decorated with flowers.

PENSION BOARD GIVES REPORT

48 Applications Received and 18 Refused and Cost is $13,792.66

A total of $13,972.66 was paid out by the County of Hastings for old age pensions during the year, up to the month of September as the county's share in this cost, it was revealed in the report of the Old Age Pension Committee submitted to Hastings County Council on Friday. The increase is but a slight one over the previous year.

The following is the number of applications granted in each municipality, together with the total sum given:

Sidney 47, $715; Thurlow 78, $1280.00; Tyendinaga 45, $682.50; Rawdon 40, $619.50; Huntingdon 29, $455; Hungerford 79, $1237.00; Marmora and Lake 21, $300; Madoc 25, $390; Elzevir 43, $660.00; Tudor and Cashel 14, $240; Dungannon 16, $270; Faraday 35, $589.00; Monteagle and Herschel 41, $664.50; Bangor, Wicklow and McLure 11, $165.00; Carlow 19, $249.50; Mayo 11, $470; Wollaston 35, $520; Limerick 8, $90; Stirling Village 27, $428.00; Madoc Village 27, $451; Tweed Village 35, 564.50; Marmora illage 23, $375; Deseronto Town 74, $1236.00; Bancroft Village 23, $375.00; Frankford Village 26, $422; House of Refuge 31 $580.00; Ontario Hospital, Kingston 12, $240.00.

48 APPLIED

According to the report there were forty-eight applications considered at the meeting of the local Board held on November 27th and 28th. Of this number 28 were granted, 18 refused and 2 recommended for investigation.

The report was referred to by Reeve Gilroy of Wollaston who spoke in his capacity as a member of the board.

"My attention has been drawn to one thing and that is the questionnaires, that have been sent out to the various Reeves in regard to these pension applicants. Some Reeves send their answers back promptly and some do not. As I may not return to this council next year, I just wanted to point out that any existing Board of this nature must have the full co-operation of all Reeves in each municipality. One Reeve I know is always on the job. His replies are always the promptest and they generally contain all the information, that is needed. He is Reeve Moore."

"When do you next meet?" questioned Reeve Metcalfe, Deseronto.

"At the end of the year for the unfinished business," replied chairman of the Board, Reeve Jas. Bronson.

To the query of Reeve Wallbridge of Madoc Village as to why some of the applications took so long before action was received, he was told that the forms and applicants were sent along a circuitous route, necessary for the information and disposal of the case by the other departments.

"I know of one case where the application was put in last April and the pensioner didn't receive anything until a day or so ago," Reeve Wallbridge told council.

"We have an applicant in Deseronto, who was born in the Old Country. This case is a very deserving one, and I think, that he should be entitled to something. The trouble is he can't get any proof of his age. Would the affidavits of two people, who know his age, be any good?" Reeve Metcalfe pointed out that the applicant had been a resident in this country for sixty years or so.

"In that case he would be listed on the census returns. The affidavits wouldn't be any good now."

"And he has to state, where he has lived in the intervening years when he writes Ottawa for proof of age" pointed out Warden Jordan.

The report submitted and read by Reeve Jas. J. Bronson, chairman of the Board was adopted.

REV. FR. T. McCARTHY LEAVES READ PARISH

Half Century of Faithful Service Given to Parish

After half a century of faithful service in his parish at Read, Rev. Father Thomas McCarthy has tendered his resignation. It will take effect on January 6, 1935, at which time it is expected, that an appointment to succeed the parish will be made.

Rev. Father McCarthy, known throughout the section by friends of all denominations, is the second oldest priest in the diocese in point of service. The oldest is the Very Rev. Monsignor M. McDonald of Napanee. Father McCarthy holds a record for the diocese in serving at Read or a period of fifty years. During that time he earned the love of all with whom he came in contact, not only his own members of the parish, but the whole community.

Following the date on which his resignation takes effect, Father McCarthy will travel south, where he will enjoy a well earned rest.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"The Age of Innocence"
Edith Wharton's Heart-Stirring Love Story

"The Age of Innocence," with its strait-laced codes and tight laced bodices, its love of ostentation and its dread of scandal, has been returned to glamorous life in RKO-Radio's picturization of Edith Wharton's classic novel of that name.

Starring Irene Dunne and John Boles, the drama, coming Monday to the Capitol theatre is powerful, universal in appeal and distinguished in merit.

All the world that loves a lover will thrill to this romance of two freedom-seeking souls who are enmeshed in a net of stifled conventions, and are inhibited by the code of their own idealism.

With rare sympathy and skill, the full beauty and true spirit of Miss Wharton's book has been brought to the screen. Credit for this happy result must be divided impartially between the producers, the players, the screen authors, and Philip Moeller's directorial genius.

Miss Dunne and Boles give inspired performances as the lovers torn between the Mid-Victorian ideas of duty and the hunger of their hearts. They are accorded brilliant support by a cast which includes Julie Haydon, Helen Westley, Lionel Atwill, Laura Hope Crews, Herbert Yost, Theresa Maxwell-Conover, Edith Van Cleve and others.

The production is handsomely mounted, and its elaborate and colorful settings and lovely period gowns are a feast for the eyes added to its treat for the emotions.

Boles as Newland Archer, and Julie Haydon as May Welland, scions of New York society are engaged to be married. Just before the announcement function, May's cousin, Ellen, played by Irene Dunne, arrives in the wake of rumors that she is to divorce her titled foreign husband. Drawn together by kindred tastes, Archer and Ellen discover too late that they love each other. Archer, however, is bound by his word to marry May, and he carries out his vow. After the wedding journey he is again thrown into daily contact with Ellen. Keenly aware of the scandal happiness for them would create, and sincerely anxious to avoid hurting the innocent May, they fight bravely against their love.

The dynamite-charged situation grows in intensity right up to a poignant climax in its heart-stirring conclusion.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"
Now An Endearing Picture

One of America's immortal classics, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch", has been made into a charming absorbing and delightful photoplay by Paramount and comes to the Belle Theatre today, with Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields and Za Su Pitts in the featured roles.

Adapted from the play by Alice Hegan Rice and Anne Crawford Flexner, the film also incorporates several elements of the book which has delighted millions of readers, young and old, for nearly two generations.

All of the unforgettable episodes from the story are here; the annexation of "Cuby", the curious Thanksgiving dinner, the hilarious theatre party, Miss Hazy's wedding and the tragic death of little Jimmy.

Pauline Lord Touching

Acting in the title role, Pauline Lord justifies her stage reputation by a touching, tender and beautifully timed impersonation of quaint motherly Mrs. Wiggs whose aphorisms and homespun wisdom takes on new significance when she utters them.

W. C. Fields is excellent in a featured role, bringing to the picture the same uproarious comedy that he exhibited in his recent starring vehicles. The scenes between Fields and Miss Pitts, who is cast as "Miss Hazy", are priceless.

The film does not lack in romantic appeal, for lovely Evelyn Venable and Kent Taylor are assigned the lovers' roles as "Miss Lucy" and "Mr. Bob", and carry on the excellent team work that has kept them together in four recent films.

Five Young Stars

Five of Hollywood's juvenile stars were recruited for the parts of the "Wiggs" brood. They include Jimmy Butler and George Breakston, and little Virginia Weidler, who is a source of delight as the little 'Wiggs' who is constantly threatening to hold her breath until she suffocates.

Others whose performances in small roles are deserving of recommendation, are Charles Middleton and Donald Meek, who plays "Mr. Wiggs"—who used to sit in a chair and think himself to sleep."

Credit for the excellent directorial job goes to Norman Taurog, who has highlighted the dramatic and humorous elements of the film without losing any of its feeling of essential and delightful humanity.

Laurel-Hardy Funny

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are appearing on the same program in their new rip-roaring comedy, "Them Thar Hills", the Belle Latest News Events of the World, and "Pro Football" with its gist of gridiron stars and thrills will be exhibited on the same program.

Crawford-Gable Reunited

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are together again, this time in one of the most powerful dramatic vehicles of the year. The picture, directed by Clarence Brown, who is known out in Hollywood as the director who has never made an unsuccessful picture, is entitled "Chained", comes to the Belle Wednesday for three days, matinee daily. A special Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, it is lavishly mounted and painstakingly produced. The supporting cast is exceptional, with Itto Kruger, Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor and Marjorie Gateson prominently cast.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 10 (CP)—For the first time in her life, 11-year-old Virginia Caquattio will be able to cry "Merry Christmas" this year.

Virginia has been unable to eat solid foods or speak aloud since babyhood. The physician who operated on her for lockjaw said she may now do justice to food and words.

His prescription for Virginia is: "Smile, and smile a lot. It will help your jaw muscles."

Berlin, Dec. 10 (CP-Havas)—Sparrows had better spend their Christmas elsewhere than in Pomerania.

Due to the ravages caused to agriculture by the birds, the authorities in one region have ordered each family to deliver to them a minimum of at least 10 sparrow heads or pay a fine of 50 pfennings. A premium of one pfenning per sparrow head will be paid from Dec. 11 on.

TRUNK MURDER TRIAL UNDERWAY

Tony Mancini, Waiter, Pleads Not Guilty to Charge

Lewes, Eng., Dec. 10.—A large black trunk in which the body of Mrs. Violette Kaye, a professional dancer, was found last summer was brought into the court room today as Tony Mancini, a waiter, went on trial for her hammer murder.

The exhibit recalled the two most sensational murders England has known in recent years. Mancini is defendant in what is known as "trunk crime number two".

Mrs. Kaye's body was found jammed into the trunk in a Brighton lodging house. Also in the trunk were the head and arms of another woman—known only as the victim of "trunk crime number one".

Although presenting a dapper appearance, the waiter defendant, charged under the name of "Jack Notyre", pleaded not guilty in a faltering voice.

Hamilton Milk War May be Ended Today

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—Expectation that the milk war in Hamilton would be ended today when the Ontario Milk Control Board meets in Hamilton, was voiced by Hon. C. H. Nixon, Acting Ontario Premier.

Mr. Nixon said the Board would go to Hamilton prepared to adopt a "conciliatory attitude" towards the milk distributors there who disobeyed their verbal orders not to cut prices and reduced the price of milk to the consumer from 11 cents to 8, and in some cases 7 cents a quart.

NEED POPULATION IN THE NORTH SAYS DR. DAFOE

Physician For Dionne Babes Given Welcome in N. Y.

Says Climate in North Healthiest in The World

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (CP)—In his stride, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe continued his visit to New York today, cool and collected despite the great hullabaloo the metropolis turns loose when personages are on the scene.

On the programme of the chubby little northerner, who could well claim the title of No. 1 obstetrician for delivery of the Dionne quintuplets, was a call on "Al" Smith, New York's No. 1 citizen. "Al" was to conduct the Ontario doctor to the lofty peak of the Empire State Building for a bird's eye view of the city. The Bronx Zoo and Bellevue Hospital were other things he hoped to see.

Tonight, at Carnegie Hall, Dr. Dafoe will tell a full house of 3,000 "a medical fairy tale,' about the birth and present well-being of the five little daughters he delivered for Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne of Callander, Ont., May 28.

The grey-haired little doctor accepted with a calm, quizzical smile the formalities of his New York welcome yesterday as he was shepherded out of Grand Central Railway station by a squad of towering policemen who made him seem even smaller than his five feet something.

New Liskeard Block Burns, Loss $100,000

New Liskeard, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—A fire loss estimated at $100,000 last night and early this morning completely destroyed the Lafond Block on Whitewood Ave. The block which contained Canadian General Electric, Liquor Control Board store, Motor Vehicle License Bureau, J. E. McCrea, real estate, families and tennants, is a smouldering mass of debris today.

Firemen fought all night in fifteen below zero weather, fire which at times threatened six adjoining stores.

TAKES CLOTHES, NOT CASH

Windsor, Dec. 10—(CP)—E. J. Wilkinson reported to police today some person entered his home over the week end, spurned cash and jewelry that had been left exposed on the top of a dresser, and walked off with a used blue suit and overcoat. Entry had been made through a window.

Man and Girl Dial Death And Get the Wrong Number

Split Bottle of Poison in Phone Booth But Both Live

By Dale Harrison

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—A man and a girl dialed death today from a Bronx phone booth, and got a wrong number.

Crowding themselves into a booth at the "Royal Tavern" shortly after midnight, the couple called Bronx police headquarters. The man talked.

"We are going to commit suicide," he told the policeman.

"Who is this? Where are you?" the officer shouted.

Over the wire came the answer. "The girl is Shirley Larson, and she is 19. Me? It doesn't matter. My given name is Paul. That's enough. I'm married and the father of two children. I'm separated from my wife. Shirley and Paul, crowded into a phone booth, splitting a bottle of poison between us in a toast to death—that's the picture."

"I'll drink first. Here's looking at you, officer. Happy days."

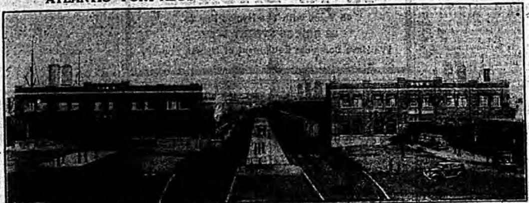
The phone clicked dead.

Officers found the couple in the phone booth, each still conscious. On the floor was a small vial that had contained poison.

At the hospital the girl, whose condition was not serious, said "Paul"—she did not know his last name—"and herself had spent the afternoon and evening drinking and quarrelling. They wrote two notes, neither of which was entirely decipherable.

"Paul" was taken to Bellevue and placed in the psychopathic ward.

ATLANTIC PORT ADDS FINE PIER TO SERVE CANADIAN COMMERCE



Front view of the new Halifax Port unit, Pier "B", which was opened by Premier R. B. Bennett today. It is 1250 feet long and 300 feet wide. The pier will accommodate four ocean steamers at one time—two on either side.

Duke of Gloucester Dispatches Plane From Brisbane to London

Brisbane, Australia, Dec. 10 (CP)—Service on the world's longest airline, the 12,846 from Brisbane to London, was inaugurated today when the Duke of Gloucester, with a wave of his hand, dispatched the first two northbound planes.

By the service Australia becomes the last continent to be reached by International Air Lines. It brings Australia within 12 days of London.

The new air line, sponsored by the Australian Government and operated by the Qantas Empire Airways, will operate a plane a week between Australia and Singapore. Where it will connect with the weekly British air service to London, via Calcutta, New Delhi, Karachi, Baghdad, Athens and Paris.

PREMIER HOLDING ONIONS

Leamington, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—Estimate of storage holdings of onions given out here today reveal Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario has 17 car-loads of 300-bags each. These onions are at Hamilton.

In addition to Mr. Hepburn's holdings it is estimated there are 440 other carloads in the province, 300 of which are stored here.

More than half the total onion crop of Ontario has been disposed of, the majority of which was distributed in Canada with a few exports to Newfoundland, West Indies and Central America.

WOMEN TRY FOR NEW ENDURANCE RECORD FLIGHT

STAFF DISMISSED AT OTTAWA STORE

Toronto, Dec. 10—(CP)—T. Kirby Bangs, Liberal Association official, replaced C. W. Anderson as manager of Liquor Control Board No. 36, at 272 Queen Street, Ottawa, today, and three clerks in the store were dropped as part of province-wide economy measures being instituted by the commission.

The three clerks discharged were: J. H. Auger; Edward Graham and J. G. Moore.

Arnold Smith, Deputy Commissioner and Personnel Manager of the Liquor Control Board, said that in keeping with the policy of economizing, the new vendor of the Ottawa store would receive a salary considerably lower than that of his predecessor.

LANG STILL IN FIELD

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—Col. Malcolm Lang will be in the field in Temiskaming South riding at the forthcoming federal elections. The new chairman of the T. and N. O. Railway Commission made this definite statement today, to quiet numerous rumors that he planned to withdraw, due to his new appointment.

"I will be right in the thick of the fight," Col. Lang said over the week end.

The Temiskaming South seat is now held by Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor in the Bennett government. Mr. Gordon will likely defend his seat, while there is a possibility of a three way fight, with Labor entering the field.

MATTHEW CURREY ON RETIRED LIST

Served Under Eight Attorney Generals of This Province

Toronto, Dec. 10—(CP)—Matthew Currey, who retired last spring after being private secretary to eight Ontario Attorney Generals was honored today by a presentation from his former colleagues.

At a gathering in the Government members' room of the Legislative Buildings Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Attorney General, presented Mr. Currey with a radio set. Miss M. Mooney of Mr. Roebuck's office, presented Mrs. Currey with a bouquet.

The Attorney-General recalled that Mr. Currey joined the Government service in 1878, four years before Mr. Roebuck was born.

"In Easter of 1874 I came down as a little farmer boy from Richmond Hill to get a job," said Mr. Currey. He started as an office boy when Sir Oliver Mowat was Attorney General and in 1902 became private secretary for Sir John Gibson.

When the governments changed he remained as Secretary and served under F. J. Latchford, Sir James Whitney, J. J. Foy, I. B. Lucas, W. E. Rainey, W. F. Nickle and W. H. Price.

"He embodies all that is best in the public service of the province", said Hon. H. C. Nixon, Acting Premier.

LIBERALS TO TAKE PART

Toronto, Dec. 10—(CP)—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature following a precedent set in 1930 by G. Howard Ferguson, former Provincial Premier and now Canada's High Commissioner in England, will take an active part in the forthcoming federal election, Hon. H. C. Nixon, Acting Premier, said today.

Mr. Nixon predicted the federal Liberal party would win at least 60 of the 82 seats in Ontario. "The Conservatives won't get two seats west of Ontario," he said, adding, "there will be a turnover just as there was last June."

FRASER TEARS UP REPORTER'S NOTES

Liberal Meeting in City Marked by Sensation This Afternoon

Thirty pages of closely scribbled copy were taken from the pages of the notebook of a reporter of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer by W. A. Fraser, M.P., at a closely-guarded meeting of Liberals in the Liberal Clubrooms, Front Street, at two-thirty o'clock this afternoon following an impassioned speech by Mr. Fraser, delegates at what was expected to be a federal nomination and general meeting of Liberals, for them to convene elsewhere.

The notes were grasped from the pad in front of the reporter, held up to the view of the crowd present and amid cheers, torn in four sections. They were tossed into the corner.

"It's in the best interests of the Party," stated Mr. Fraser.

Peter MacLaren, candidate for East Hastings at the last election, acted as chairman of the afternoon in absence of Mr. Harold Holton, secretary, who announced his resignation by proxy today.

A cheering, roaring mass of delegates who jammed into the hall despite the guard posted at the door, supposed to let "official" delegates only into the room almost prohibited the speeches of those who mounted the platform.

"Let's adjourn to the city hall", was a deep toned chant of the hundreds present. "This isn't an official meeting. Let's get the meeting where the people can know what's going on."

Delegates at the convention arose to speak. They were thundered out as fast as they rose. "Let's hold this d——ed thing elsewhere. The city hall!" was the recurring chant.

Immediately there was a rush to the door. Hundreds then convened at the city hall where the meeting was being held at press time.

TWO ENGLISHMEN RECEIVE AWARD

Hon. Arthur Henderson And Sir N. Angell in Nobel Lists

Olso, Norway, Dec. 10.—(AP)—The Nobel Peace prizes for 1933 and 1934 were awarded to two Englishmen today, Sir Norman Angell, author and lecturer, and Arthur Henderson, President of the World Disarmament Conference respectively. Henderson attended the ceremony at the Nobel Institute to receive the award, while the British Minister to Norway accepted on behalf of Sir Norman, who was detained in London on business.

Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, was among the distinguished persons, who composed the audience.

Premier Johan L. Mowinckel paid tribute to Henderson's "untiring work to create understanding and good will between nations," in presenting the 1934 award.

"It is due to Mr. Henderson's efforts, said the Premier, "that the Disarmament Conference still exists and that there still is hope it may survive.

Peace pacts and League of Nations pacts seem hardly worth more than scraps of paper while naval conventions and other agreements break down. Feelings of uncertainty increase simultaneously. Germany rearms.

Germany Must Be Equal

"The only means to attain real peace is to recognize unreservedly Germany's complete equality."

WILL BE CANDIDATE

YUGOSLAVIANS AND HUNGARIANS REACH AGREEMENT

Whole Differences Will be Smothered Out by Evening

BASIS FOR AGREEMENT

Debate Will be Terminated Tonight, League Council Feels

Geneva, Dec. 10.—(CP-Havas)—Yugoslavia and Hungary this afternoon reached an accord in principle on their differences arising from the assassination of King Alexander at Marseille.

It was expected that the whole matter would be brought to a conclusion this evening. Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal, French Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy and Kolomon de Kanya, Hungarian Foreign Minister, conferred and announced that a basis for agreement had been established.

A meeting of the Council was set for this evening to discuss this agreement and terminate the debate.

SKYSCRAPER GIVES DR. DAFOE FAITH

Native of Madoc Talks to 'Al' Smith About Babies

New York, Dec. 10 (CP)—"You wouldn't think people could build a building like this, it gives you more faith in mankind," said Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe of Callander, Ont., the expert on how to preserve five specimens of mankind, as he descended from Al Smith's Empire State eyrie today.

The doctor had a considerable discussion with the former Governor of New York on the 103rd. floor of the Empire State, mostly about babies.

"Al" asked about a report the Dionne quintuplets had lost weight yesterday and was reassured by Dr. Dafoe's statement, "they go up and down."

Talks of Children

He told Mr. Smith about how they looked when they were born, "like little rats" and said they wouldn't have lived "but for the great strength of their father and mother and ancestors."

He invited Mr. Smith to "come up and see them" and Mr. Smith said he had never been in Canada but might make the trip next summer.

They got to discussing how cold it was in Canada, a favorite topic with New Yorkers, and Dr. Dafoe admitted to 40 below but remarked he was feeling the cold here, probably because of the dampness.

James McCloskey, relief officer of the North Bay district, who with his wife and Dr. and Mrs. William A. Dafoe accompanied the docotr, presented "Al" with a picture of Mrs. Dionne and the quintuplets and remarked Mrs. Dionne now has 11 children.

Birth Controllers' View

"If Theodore Roosevelt were alive, said Mr. Smith, she'd have his picture hanging up because that was his theory."

"I wonder what the birth-controllers think of this. Did you ever get their opinion, Doctor?"

Dr. Dafoe said he had not heard from the birth-controllers on the subject."

After the photographers had taken everybody's picture, Dr. Dafoe drove back to the Ritz Carlton where he was the guest of Geo. M. Gales, President of the Liggett Drug Company, at a luncheon for doctors and nurses.

Callander, Ont., Dec. 10—Five beautiful little hand-made necklets, the gift of the North Bay Old Home Week committee have arrived for the Dionne quintuplets. E. L. Banner, committee manager, displayed with pride the little ornaments that will shortly distinguish the babes.

The necklets are of beads, strung on a gold chain and each with a little gold heart, bearing the names of the mites.

The necklets are products of W. R. Breadner, pioneer Ottawa jeweller.

BAILIFF LEAVES HOSPITAL

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 10.—(CP)—William Tremblay, Smithville, bailiff, who was seriously wounded when shot as he was making a seizure on a Vaughan station farm a week ago was discharged from St. Joseph's hospital here yesterday.

Mr. Tremblay is well on the road to recovery.

BENNETT OPENS PIER AT HALIFAX IN HARBOR PLAN

First Stage of Development of Halifax's Harbor Plans

RHODES IS PRESENT

Hon. Mr. Bennett Visits School Where He Was Once Student

Halifax, Dec. 10—(CP)—A new chapter was added to the history of Halifax port today as Prime Minister R. B. Bennett touched a button throwing open the Halifax Harbor Commission's new Pier B, one of the finest on the continent.

To "the commerce of the world" the Prime Minister dedicated the pier, amid the flying of flags and the dull roar of sirens from liners berthed at the 1,250 foot unit and along the rest of the port's waterfront.

Standing on an elevated platform looking down the long shed strewn with wares from world ports, Mr. Bennett recalled, in terse phrase, the elements entering into the development of Halifax to its present status among the world's shipping centres, culminating with today's event.

Speech is Brief

He said: "A fleeting thought...a division of a mighty port...the engineers who designed it...the detailed planning...the earnest thought...the financial burden of the taxpayers...and, lo, we have before us the magnificent pier it is my great honor to declare open to the commerce of the world."

The brief speech concluded, the Prime Minister pressed a button and outside the great shed a flag fell away from a tablet bearing this inscription:

"This pier was opened to the commerce of the world by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., M.P., Prime Minister of Canada, Dec. 10, 1934."

In introducing Mr. Bennett the commission chairman delivered a

FALLS DOWN STEPS FRACTURES ARM

Mrs. Harry Redner, an aged lady residing on College Hill was the victim of a painful accident on Saturday evening. She was about to go down the cellar steps at her home, when she slipped and fell, landing heavily on the floor. As a result of the fall her left arm was broken and elbow injured. The victim was taken to the hospital where the fracture was reduced.

IF LEAVING CITY TURN WATER OFF

Waterworks officials of the local department fearing a repetition of the difficulty experienced last year owing to frozen water pipes and services addressed a warning to those residents, who are contemplating a visit from the city during the cold weather, leaving the house temporarily unoccupied, to make sure their services are turned off from the street limits before they go. The warning is an insurance against a complete freezeup of the system in the homes and a consequent heavy repair bill.

"Although we have generally charged for shutting off the services, this year we will be glad to do it free. All a citizen has to do is call us," stated E. T. Austin, manager today.

In occupied homes much difficulty will be avoided if water pipes in exposed places are wrapped with burlap or even paper during the more severe weather. Make sure the cellar windows are closed, was another hint.

EXAMINATIONS FOR PILOTS NOW ON

Pilots'examinations for the St. Lawrence-Kingston-Ottawa district will be held in Ottawa commencing today, December 10, it is announced by the Department of Marine. These examinations will be held throughout the week for all officers and pilots engaged on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence route, who have not already received their pilots' licenses. It is required by the regulations of the department issued this year that all officers and pilots engaged in the trade above Montreal must qualify before December 31.

CHIMNEY BLAZES CAUSE OF RUNS

Cold weather with extra firing necessary in stoves and furnaces was the cause for a run of the fire brigade on Saturday evening and this morning. In both cases chimney blaze was responsible for the alarm, one on Cannifton Road and one on Yeomans street. No damage resulted.

MAYOR APPEALS FOR RELIEF AID

Mayor Geo. O. Tice today joined in with officials of the Central Relief Bureau in an appeal to the citizens of Belleville for donations of clothing and other cold weather necessities for the city's needy.

"The need for warm clothing, bedding and other things is acute. Many families are in actual distress and in the majority of cases the little children are the chief sufferers. I'd like to call the attention of every citizen to this matter," stated the Mayor today.

"If anyone has anything to give, a call to the relief office at 69W will bring a truck right away."

The Mayor called on all service clubs, fraternal oranizations and the city at large to assist the needy kiddies in true observance of the coming Christmas season.

SKATING AT QUARRY IS MUCH ENJOYED

A perfect day with only the bite of a chilly wind from the north, but bright sunshine to temper the blast, lured a city into the open on Sunday even though the mercury in local thermometers stood near zero levels throughout the day.

Shinny ice on the old quarry at Coleman Flat crackled under the sharp blades of scores of colorfully dressed skaters who found recreation from early morning until far into the night. During the darkness a flaring bonfire lighted on the shore of the pond sparkled like a beacon. On the bay and other ponds, hundreds of other juvenile residents of the city found the season's first skating.

Dry and dusty roads were filled with cars bearing passengers on a last outing of the season.

REV. DR. R. N. BURNS 55 YEARS WEDDED

Rev. R. N. Burns, D.D., one time minister of Bridge Street Methodist (now United) Church, last week celebrated the 55th anniversary of his wedding. Dr. Burns is now resident in Toronto.

He was ordained in 1879 at Barrie by Rev. Dr. John Shaw, and on Dec. 3, same year, he was married at the home of James Crossen in Cobourg to Miss Mary Crossen. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. T. W. Jeffery, of Cobourg Church. He was later stationed at Demorestville, Prince Edward County, at Belleville, Yonge Street, Toronto; Barrie, Woodgreen, Toronto; Wesley, Toronto; Oakville and at Grace and St. Paul Churches in Brampton. While at Berkeley Street Church he went overseas as a chaplain. He is now attached to the M. & M. Department of Wesley Buildings. Is fond of golf and curling and is undoubtedly one of the church's most popular officials.

MAY BE CONTESTS FOR CHAIRMANSHIPS

I tis expected that the last business of the city council of 1934 will be concluded at the last session of council being held on December 27. The council of 1935 will hold its inaugural meeting of the first Monday in January it was stated at the city hall today.

This year it is expected a considerable shifting around of the various committees will be made. So far three aldermen of the old council have been named as probable candidates for the chairmanship of the Department of Public Works. Two aldermen have been named to succeed the office of Chairman of Finance, the most important post in council.

W. E. WIGGINS TO CONTEST REEVESHIP

The municipal election at Bancroft village on Monday, January 7th will no doubt be the most exciting, that has taken place in that municipality for some time. Reeve Judson Gunter has announced his retirement and Mr. W. E. Wiggins, a former Reeve and ex-Warden of the County has announced that he is in the field. In addition to the election of a council a most important question has to be decided by the electors namely that of the sale of beer and wine in standard hotels. If three fifths or more of the electors vote in the negative. it shall be unlawful to issue authorities to hotels for the sale of beer and wine. All persons who are 21 years of age and British subjects are entitled to vote upon this question.

2ND ANNIVERSARY DINNER SERVED

Sunday was the second anniversary of the opening of the Belmont restaurant by Mr. Sam Pappas and the occasion was celebrated by a special anniversary turkey dinner served from five-thirty to eight-thirty, with music by the Commodores orchestra. The response to the advertised invitation in this newspaper was very large, despite the very cold weather, exceeding all expectations, and tables were at a premium until far into the night. As in all his other business undertakings the Belmont Restaurant under direction of Mr. Pappas has been a success from the beginning and enjoys a large and growing patronage.

PROF. A. L. GIBSON SUPERINTENDENT

Will Commence Duties at Dairy School in January

Prof. A. L. Gibson, who for more than twenty years was a member of the faculty of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and who has been appointed to succeed L. A. Zufelt, retired on superannuation, as head of the Eastern Dairy School, Kingston, will assume his new duties in January.

Professor Gibson, born in Manchester, England, has enjoyed one of the most varied lives in the industry he has followed nearly all his life. He was educated at Manchester Grammar School and at the Cheshire Agricultural College. which is associated with the Manchester University. He studied practical dairying, including the manufacture of cheese and butter and on graduation, received the appointment of demonstrator in agricultural chemistry. Later he continued his studies at Lancashire Agricultural College, subsequently passing his examinations in agriculture and dairying of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, and the Highland Agricultural Society of Scotland.

Going to Ireland, he served as travelling instructor of agriculture with the Irish Department of Agriculture, and after returning to England, was appointed instructor of dairying at Old Basing, Hants.

Professor Gibson came to Canada in 1910 and after spending some months on dairy farms in Nova Scotia, went to the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. He received the appointment in the Soil Chemistry Department and also acted as instructor in dairy chemistry. In 1921 he was named Associate Professor of Dairy Chemistry and held that position up to the time of his appointment to the Eastern School.

Professor Gibson is a brother of Dr. C. S. Gibson, O.B.E., F.R.S., of Guy's Hospital, England, co-discoverer with Sir William Pope of the process for making mustard gas used by the allied armies in the Great War.

MRS. NANCY SILLS

(From Anthon (Iowa) Herald, Dec. 3rd.)

At 1.35 a.m. Sunday death came to relieve the suffering of Mrs. Nancy Sills, well known Anthon woman who had been seriously ill the past three months.

Neither medical skill nor the loving care of her two daughters could bring her relief from the intense pain she endured the last few weeks of her illness, as she was beyond human help. She bore her suffering with fortitude and passed bravely into the land from which there is no return. Her earthly sojourn numbered 75 years, 3 months and 11 days.

Nancy Wickett was born August 23, 1859, in the Marsh Hill community, Sixth Concession of Sidney, Ontario, Canada. She attended the Marsh Hill school, and was always very proud that one of her teachers was the celebrated novelist, Sir Gilbert Parker. In early youth she became a member of the Methodist Church, North Foxboro. When the Methodist Church North and the Methodist Church South united, she was associated with the group that organized and built the new St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Foxboro, Ontario, in 1904. She became a member in full communion of this church and never transferred her membership elsewhere.

On April 18, 1881, Miss Wickett was united in marriage to Chancy Orlando Sills, and they lived on the Fifth Concession, Sidney. Two daughters and two sons were born to them; namely, Mrs. Ida Ray, Third Concession of Sidney, Belleville, Ontario, Canada; Mrs. Cora Fargey, Watrous, Saskatchewan; Earl Sills, Rednersville, Prince Edward County, Ontario, and Bert Sills of Lake City and Anthon, Ia.

Following the death of her husband, May 18, 1904, and the marriage of her three older children, Mrs. Sills and her son, Bert, moved to Canton, Minn., in March, 1906, to make their home with her aged father and mother. For several years she lived at Preston, Minn., but returned to Canton to care for her mother until the latter passed away Aug. 24, 1923.

In 1924 Mrs. Sills moved to Anthon, Ia., to make a home for her son, Bert, who had obtained employment with the Anthon State Bank. She purchased a residence here, and it was in this community that the last ten years of her life were spent.

Mrs. Sills was an active member of the M. E. Ladies' Aid, the American Legion Auxiliary, the Anthon Woman's Club and Thonna Chapter No. 423, Order of the Eastern Star. She served as matron of the local chapter at one time.

She is survived by her four children; a sister, Mrs. Mittie Stead of Canton, Minn.; three brothers, Wm. A. Wickett of Laurel, Neb., and E. Franklin and Herbert E. Wickett of Canton, Minn., 10 grandchildren and a host of friends.

Extremely active as long as her health would permit, Mrs. Sills got a great deal out of life, seeming to find real pleasure and joy in almost everything she did. That she was successful in gaining a legion of friends in the ten years she lived in this community is evidenced by the many people who thronged the Anthon M. E. Church Tuesday afternoon to attend her funeral and by the profusion of beautiful flowers.

Rev. P. O. Johnson, pastor of the local M. E. Church, preached a most appropriate sermon. A male quartette, composed of W. G. Garrison, H. P. Shedd, L. A. Thrall and Rev. Johnson, sang several selections. Pall bearers were S. W. Campbell, W. H. Clark, Bert Hart, G. B. Maddison, W. O. Risher and Bert Thompson. Following the sermon the impressive Eastern Star funeral was held.

Relatives attending the last rites were Mr. and Mrs. Will Wickett, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Wickett, Mr. and Mrs. Verner Wickett and Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Burns of Laurel, Neb.; Frank and Herbert Wickett of Canton, Minn.; Mrs. Ida Ray, 3rd. Concession of Sidney, Belleville, Ont.; Mrs. Cora Fargey of Watrous, Sask., and J. B. Sills of Lake City, Ia.

Burial was in Oak Hill cemetery.

WILLIAM HAWES

William Hawes, an old resident of Rawdon township, passed away in the Hastings County Home this Monday morning. He was 65 years of age and had been an inmate at the County Home for eight years. He had been in failing health for some time. He was unmarried.

The body of the late Mr. Hawes is resting at the Tickell and Browne Funeral Home, Church Street, and the funeral will be held from there on Tuesday to the Belleville cemetery.

LATE FREDERICK F. LUFFMAN.

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Frederick Frank Luffman, who passed away on December 4th at Mossbank, Sask., took place from the residence of his father, Mr. W. H. Luffman, 213 Dundas Street east and many old friends of the late Mr. Luffman and friends of the family were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. Dr. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, who officiated also at the committal service at the graveside in Belleville cemetery.

A Masonic service was conducted in the home by C. Crosby, W.M. of The Belleville Lodge and at the graveside the last rites of the Masonic Order were conducted by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. W. Barlow of Moira Lodge and Wor. Bro. J. S. Leggott of The Belleville Lodge.

The bearers were Messrs. D. Clapp, J. Davidson, F. Chesher, John Burgess, C. Crosby and A. Reid.

Floral tributes were as follows:

Pillow—Father and mother.

Wreaths—Brothers and Sisters; Wakaw Lodge No. 116, A.F. and A. M.; Eastern Star, Mossbank, Sask.; Order Railway Telegraphers; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sajtw, Mossbank, Sask.

Triangle—Weyburn Chapter, R. A.M.

Sprays—Cousin Nellie and Ted, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. F. Domenico, Belleville.

Baskets—Uncle Jerry and Aunt Annie, Tweed; Miss K. Brickman, Belleville; Y.M.L.S. Club, Cornwall.

PICTON COUNCIL TO GET SALARY

Mayor Gets $5.00. And Councillors $3.00 Per Meeting is By-law

"If Picton town council gets paid for its meetings how much do you suppose we in the council in this city should get for our services?" asked a well known alderman of the city council today.

Picton council has joined the list of towns in which members of the council receive remuneration for their services. The 1934 council at its Friday night meeting unanimously passed a by-law granting pay to councillor. The by-law provides that the Mayor shall receive $5.00 per day and $3.00 for members of the council when in session. The Mayor has, it is claimed, extra duties owing to the great amount of relief.

The by-law came as a surprise to the general public as there had been no hint, that the matter would be considered, it was reported.

A grant of $250 was given the retiring Mayor Cox as a recompense for the amount of relief work done by him during the past season.

"They should come over here and see what relief work really means," commented Mayor Tice today.

JIM ALLISON ELECTED TO BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Will Attend Session Between Christmas and New Years

In the election held Saturday, Dec. 8th, at the Y.M.C.A., the boys of Belleville Sunday Schools elected Jim Allison, of St. Andrew's Sunday School, representative to the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament. His opponents in this election were Clifford Bennett, of Holloway St. Church, and Lorne Gerow, of the Baptist Church. Jim will have the honor of taking part in the sessions of the House held in the Parliament Buildings in Toronto. Here he will meet with young men from all over the province and enjoy discussion and fellowship with them.

The election was sponsored by the Belleville Boys' Work Board. It was just one of the many elections held through the whole province, when boys from 12 to 21 years of age in Sunday School classes of all denominations elect their members of parliament.

The parliament meets in the week between Christmas and New Years. Jim will attend with the best wishes of the defeated candidates and the boys of Belleville who will be looking forward to profit from his experiences when he returns.

FEAST OF IMMACULATE CONCEPTION OBSERVED

Monsignor Nicholson Speaks On Significance of Evene

Last evening the solemnity of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception was observed at St. Michael's Church, with a procession by the Children of Mary in honor of the Blessed Virgin.

The young ladies, attired in white, with white veils and the blue sash of the Sodality took their places in the front pews of the church. Following Vespers at which Rev. C. E. Baker officiated, the procession took place. Small flower girls carrying bouquets of lilies and chrysanthemums led the procession which was headed by the banner of the Sodality. A statue of the Blessed Virgin was also carried. As the girls proceeded down the aisle, the choir of the Holy Angels sang the Litany of the Blessed Virgin.

At the conclusion of the procession, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., addressed the congregation on the significance of the feast which commemorates the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God. She, of all humankind, was born into the world free from the stain of original sin—the sin we inherit through the fall of Adam and Eve. It was only fitting that the Blessed Virgin who was to become the mother of the Lord of Purity should be free from the slightest stain.

The speaker exhorted his hearers to cherish devotion to the Mother of God, reminding them that they could never honor her so highly as God himself had honored her.

Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament brought to a close the evening's ceremonies. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson was celebrant, with Rev. C. E. Baker as deacon and Rev. J. J. Collins, sub-deacon.

$12.50 IS RETURNED IN 'GROUPER'S' LETTER

Damages Collected Wrongly For Insurance Admitted

The stirrings of an uneasy conscience resulted this week in one of the local insurance offices receiving the sum of twelve dollars and fifty-cents accompanied by a letter signed "An Oxford Grouper" in which the writer explained he had received this value dishonestly. It appears a car had been damaged several tmes by hit-and-run drivers, and later an insured party hit the same care, was given to believe he had done the damage. The repairs maid and paid for were not, according to the writer of the letter caused by the person blamed, and for which the insurance office made a settement in ogod faith.

POLICE COURT

The local police court was delayed fully 30 minutes today due to unavoidable circumstances. His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., heard three cases, two being rather lengthy, police court lasting until long after the noon hour.

Frank Hawkins, who gave his name as Frank Brady when arrested on a charge of intoxication on Saturday night, failed to answer to his name at the opennig of court today. Hawkins had been allowed his liberty on Sunday, with instructions to appear in the court today. The accused will be served with a warrant.

Jack Scott, Stirling, pleaded not guilty to a charge of the theft of a dog, valued over $20.00, and the property of Cecil Bedell also of Stirling. At the termination of the evidence submitted, His Worship was not satisfied with the accused man's story and enlarged the matter for one week for sentence. In the meantime Scott was instructed to produce a man named Williams from whom he (Scott) had alleged he purchased the canine.

Bedell testified that his dog had disappeared about eight weeks ago, he later finding it in Campbellford in the possession of a Mr. Glen Anderson, who in turn assured the court, that he had been given the dog by a Mr. Stanley Nelson. Nelson testified that he had procured the canine from Jack Scott, the accused man, in a trade for a Newfoundland pup. Bedell positively identified the dog as being his.

In defence Scott swore he purchased the dog from a man, giving his name as that of Williams and retiding in Trenton. Magistrate Butler informed the accused that it would be necessary for him to produce Williams in court in order to substantiate his story. The matter will continue next Monday. A. C Eastedo of Stirling appeared for the defence and B. C. Donnan, K.C., for the Crown.

A domestic case, arising out of family difficulties was also heard, but due to contradictory evidence, His Worship enlarged the matter for judgment, indicating to the parties concerned that a reconciliation would perhaps be the better procedure.

Police News

One lone inebriate occupied the local police cells over the week end he having been arrested on Saturday night and released Sunday to subsequently appear in the police court.

The Oshawa police requested the local authorities to keep a sharp look out for a Buick coupe stolen in that city early today. The motor car was painted green and bore the licence plates numbered T-4080.

The manager of the Fruit Machinery Comapny, Front Street, complained to the police that a large quantity of copper wire had been stolen from the premises of late. Immediate attention was promised in this case.

Mr. A. Glass, 270 Coleman Street informed the authorities that a motor rug had been stolen from his automobile while it was parked Saturday night. A description of the rug was given but no trace of its whereabouts was forthcoming.

Due to the sub-zero weather experienced locally over the week end motor traffic was at a rather low premium. Not a single serious accident being reported on surrounding highways since last Friday.

CLOTHING TAKEN FROM STOCKROOM

Quick and Robertson, Men's Store Entered During Night

Gaining entrance by forcing a rear window burglars broke and entered the premises of Quick and Robertson's haberdashery store some time Sunday night and stole two topcoats, overalls and other articles of wearing apparel.

The robbery was discovered by Constable Taylor while going over his beat at 5 a.m. today. The officer noticed a rear window had been broken and on trying a nearby door found it only partially secure. Upon entering the store the officer discovered that a rear stock room had been ransacked. Sergt. Harman was notified and after searching the premises thoroughly the owners were notified.

Later the officers found some old clothes that had apparently been discarded by the robbers. Leather coats, top coats, overalls and stockings had been strewn about indicating that the burglars had hurriedly gone through the stock and taken what clothes they needed. Transients are believed to have been responsible.

The full account of the missing goods could not be determined until a check-up has been taken at the store. The police were of the opinion that one burglar entered thru' a window, opening the door allowing his accomplice to enter; this door was later pulled shut.

WILL CONSIDER PUNISHMENT

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 10 (CP)—Magistrate Arnold today stated he wanted time to ponder on the punishment to be meted out to three youths and two young girls arrested in an apartment at 16 1-2 King Street, early Sunday, by officers who formed a morality squad following a complaint.

Occupant of the room Jack Rooe, 18, pleaded guilty to keeping a disorderly house. Hillyard Chapple, 16, and Earl Bishop, 17, and Alleene Primeau, 19, pleaded guilty to being "found in" as well as a 14-year-old girl, who similarly pleaded in Juvenile Court.

IMPERIALS CLUB TO HOLD MEETING

At the Sergeant's Mess Room in the Armouries a meeting will be held this evening of the Imperial Club members and all ex-service men in the city are invited to attend.

FALLS DOWN STEPS FRACTURES ARM

Mrs. Harry Redner, an aged lady residing on College Hill was the victim of a painful accident on Saturday evening. She was about to go down the cellar steps at her home, when she slipped and fell, landing heavily on the floor. As a result of the fall her left arm was broken and elbow injured. The victim was taken to the hospital where the fracture was reduced.

IF LEAVING CITY TURN WATER OFF

Waterworks officials of the local department fearing a repetition of the difficulty experienced last year owing to frozen water pipes and services addressed a warning to those residents, who are contemplating a visit from the city during the cold weather, leaving the house temporarily unoccupied, to make sure their services are turned off from the street limits before they go. The warning is an insurance against a complete freezeup of the system in the homes and a consequent heavy repair bill.

"Although we have generally charged for shutting off the services, this year we will be glad to do it free. All a citizen has to do is call us," stated E. T. Austin, manager today.

In occupied homes much difficulty will be avoided if water pipes in exposed places are wrapped with burlap or even paper during the more severe weather. Make sure the cellar windows are closed, was another hint.

EXAMINATIONS FOR PILOTS NOW ON

Pilots'examinations for the St. Lawrence-Kingston-Ottawa district will be held in Ottawa commencing today, December 10, it is announced by the Department of Marine. These examinations will be held throughout the week for all officers and pilots engaged on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence route, who have not already received their pilots' licenses. It is required by the regulations of the department issued this year that all officers and pilots engaged in the trade above Montreal must qualify before December 31.

CHIMNEY BLAZES CAUSE OF RUNS

Cold weather with extra firing necessary in stoves and furnaces was the cause for a run of the fire brigade on Saturday evening and this morning. In both cases chimney blaze was responsible for the alarm, one on Cannifton Road and one on Yeomans street. No damage resulted.

MAYOR APPEALS FOR RELIEF AID

Mayor Geo. O. Tice today joined in with officials of the Central Relief Bureau in an appeal to the citizens of Belleville for donations of clothing and other cold weather necessities for the city's needy.

"The need for warm clothing, bedding and other things is acute. Many families are in actual distress and in the majority of cases the little children are the chief sufferers. I'd like to call the attention of every citizen to this matter," stated the Mayor today.

"If anyone has anything to give, a call to the relief office at 69W will bring a truck right away."

The Mayor called on all service clubs, fraternal oranizations and the city at large to assist the needy kiddies in true observance of the coming Christmas season.

SKATING AT QUARRY IS MUCH ENJOYED

A perfect day with only the bite of a chilly wind from the north, but bright sunshine to temper the blast, lured a city into the open on Sunday even though the mercury in local thermometers stood near zero levels throughout the day.

Shinny ice on the old quarry at Coleman Flat crackled under the sharp blades of scores of colorfully dressed skaters who found recreation from early morning until far into the night. During the darkness a flaring bonfire lighted on the shore of the pond sparkled like a beacon. On the bay and other ponds, hundreds of other juvenile residents of the city found the season's first-skating.

Dry and dusty roads were filled with cars bearing passengers on a last outing of the season.

REV. DR. R. N. BURNS 55 YEARS WEDDED

Rev. R. N. Burns, D.D., one time minister of Bridge Street Methodist (now United) Church, last week celebrated the 55th anniversary of his wedding. Dr. Burns is now resident in Toronto.

He was ordained in 1879 at Barrie by Rev. Dr. John Shaw, and on Dec. 3, same year, he was married at the home of James Crossen in Cobourg to Miss Mary Crossen. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. T. W. Jeffery, of Cobourg Church. He was later stationed at Demorestville, Prince Edward County, at Belleville, Yonge Street, Toronto; Barrie, Woodgreen, Toronto; Wesley, Toronto; Oakville and at Grace and St. Paul Churches in Brampton. While at Berkeley Street Church he went overseas as a chaplain. He is now attached to the M. & M. Department of Wesley Buildings. Is fond of golf and curling and is undoubtedly one of the church's most popular officials.

MAY BE CONTESTS FOR CHAIRMANSHIPS

I tis expected that the last business of the city council of 1934 will be concluded at the last session of council being held on December 27. The council of 1935 will hold its inaugural meeting of the first Monday in January it was stated at the city hall today.

This year it is expected a considerable shifting around of the various committees will be made. So far three aldermen of the old council have been named as probable candidates for the chairmanship of the Department of Public Works. Two aldermen have been named to succeed the office of Chairman of Finance, the most important post in council.

W. E. WIGGINS TO CONTEST REEVESHIP

The municipal election at Bancroft village on Monday, January 7th will no doubt be the most exciting, that has taken place in that municipality for some time. Reeve Judson Gunter has announced his retirement and Mr. W. E. Wiggins, a former Reeve and ex-Warden of the County has announced that he is in the field. In addition to the election of a council a most important question has to be decided by the electors namely that of the sale of beer and wine in standard hotels. If three fifths or more of the electors vote in the negative, it shall be unlawful to issue authorities to hotels for the sale of beer and wine. All persons who are 21 years of age and British subjects are entitled to vote upon this question.

2ND ANNIVERSARY DINNER SERVED

Sunday was the second anniversary of the opening of the Belmont restaurant, by Mr. Sam Pappas and the occasion was celebrated by a special anniversary turkey dinner served from five-thirty to eight-thirty, with music by the Commodores orchestra. The response to the advertised invitation in this newspaper was very large, despite the very cold weather, exceeding all expectations, and tables were at a premium until far into the night. As in all his other business undertakings the Belmont Restaurant under direction of Mr. Pappas has been a success from the beginning and enjoys a large and growing patronage.

William Hawes, an old resident of Rawdon township, passed away in the Hastings County Home this Monday morning. He was 65 years of age and had been an inmate at the County Home for eight years. He had been in failing health for some time. He was unmarried.

The body of the late Mr. Hawes is resting at the Tickell and Browne Funeral Home, Church Street, and the funeral will be held from there on Tuesday to the Belleville cemetery.

LATE FREDERICK F. LUFFMAN.

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Frederick Frank Luffman, who passed away on December 4th at Mossbank, Sask., took place from the residence of his father, Mr. W. H. Luffman, 213 Dundas Street east and many old friends of the late Mr. Luffman and friends of the family were present at the service which was conducted in the home by the Rev. Dr. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, who officiated also at the committal service at the graveside in Belleville cemetery.

A Masonic service was conducted in the home by C. Crosby, W.M. of The Belleville Lodge and at the graveside the last rites of the Masonic Order were conducted by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. W. Barlow of Moira Lodge and Wor. Bro. J. S. Leggott of The Belleville Lodge.

The bearers were Messrs. D. Clapp, J. Davidson, F. Chesher, John Burgess, C. Crosby and A. Reid.

Floral tributes were as follows:

Pillow—Father and mother.

Wreaths—Brothers and Sisters; Wakaw Lodge No. 116, A.F. and A. M.; Eastern Star, Mossbank, Sask.; Order Railway Telegraphers; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sajiw, Mossbank, Sask.

PICTON COUNCIL TO GET SALARY

Mayor Gets $5.00 And Councillors $3.00 Per Meeting is By-law

"If Picton town council gets paid for its meetings how much do you suppose we in the council in this city should get for our services?" asked a well known alderman of the city council today.

Picton council has joined the list of towns in which members of the council receive remuneration for their services. The 1934 council at its Friday night meeting unanimously passed a by-law granting pay to councillor. The by-law provides that the Mayor shall receive $5.00 per day and $3.00 for members of the council when in session. The Mayor has, it is claimed, extra duties owing to the great amount of relief.

The by-law came as a surprise to the general public as there had been no hint, that the matter would be considered, it was reported.

A grant of $250 was given the retiring Mayor Cox as a recompense for the amount of relief work done by him during the past season.

"They should come over here and see what relief work really means," commented Mayor Tice today.

JIM ALLISON ELECTED TO BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Will Attend Session Between Christmas and New Years

In the election held Saturday, Dec. 8th, at the Y.M.C.A., the boys of Belleville Sunday Schools elected Jim Allison, of St. Andrew's Sunday School, representative to the Ontario Older Boys' Parliament. His opponents in this election were Clifford Bennett, of Holloway St. Church, and Lorne Gerow, of the Baptist Church. Jim will have the honor of taking part in the sessions of the House held in the Parliament Buildings in Toronto. Here he will meet with young men from all over the province and enjoy discussion and fellowship with them.

The election was sponsored by the Belleville Boys' Work Board. It was just one of the many elections held through the whole province, when boys from 12 to 21 years of age in Sunday School classes of all denominations elect their members of parliament.

The parliament meets in the week between Christmas and New Years. Jim will attend with the best wishes of the defeated candidates and the boys of Belleville who will be looking forward to profit from his experiences when he returns.

FEAST OF IMMACULATE CONCEPTION OBSERVED

Monsignor Nicholson Speaks On Significance of Evene

Last evening the solemnity of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception was observed at St. Michael's Church, with a procession by the Children of Mary in honor of the Blessed Virgin.

The young ladies, attired in white, with white veils and the blue sash of the Sodality took their places in the front pews of the church. Following Vespers at which Rev. C. E. Baker officiated, the procession took place. Small flower girls carrying bouquets of lilies and chrysanthemums led the procession which was headed by the banner of the Sodality. A statue of the Blessed Virgin was also carried. As the girls proceeded down the aisle, the choir of the Holy Angels sang the Litany of the Blessed Virgin.

At the conclusion of the procession, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., addressed the congregation on the significance of the feast which commemorates the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of God. She, of all humankind, was born into the world free from the stain of original sin—the sin we inherit through the fall of Adam and Eve. It was only fitting that the Blessed Virgin who was to become the mother of the Lord of Purity should be free from the slightest stain.

The speaker exhorted his hearers to cherish devotion to the Mother of God, reminding them that they could never honor her so highly as God himself had honored her.

Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament brought to a close the evening's ceremonies. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson was celebrant, with Rev. C. E. Baker as deacon and Rev. J. J. Collins, sub-deacon.

$12.50 IS RETURNED IN 'GROUPER'S' LETTER

Damages Collected Wrongly For Insurance Admitted

The stirrings of an uneasy conscience resulted this week in one of the local insurance offices receiving the sum of twelve dollars and fifty-cents accompanied by a letter signed "An Oxford Grouper" in which the writer explained he had received this value dishonestly. It appears a car had been damaged several tmes by hit-and-run drivers, and later an insured party hit the same care, was given to believe he had done the damage. The repairs maid and paid for were not, according to the writer of the letter caused by the person blamed, and for which the insurance office made a settement in ogod faith.

POLICE COURT

The local police court was delayed fully 30 minutes today due to unavoidable circumstances. His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., heard three cases, two being rather lengthy, police court lasting until long after the noon hour. Frank Hawkins, who gave his name as Frank Brady when arrested on a charge of intoxication on Saturday night, failed to answer to his name at the opennig of court today. Hawkins had been allowed his liberty on Sunday, with instructions to appear in the court today. The accused will be served with a warrant.

Jack Scott, Stirling, pleaded not guilty to a charge of the theft of a dog, valued over $20.00, and the property of Cecil Bedell also of Stirling. At the termination of the evidence submitted, His Worship was not satisfied with the accused man's story and enlarged the matter for one week for sentence. In the meantime Scott was instructed to produce a man named Williams from whom he (Scott) had alleged he purchased the canine.

Bedell testified that his dog had disappeared about eight weeks ago, he later finding it in Campbellford in the possession of a Mr. Glen Anderson, who in turn assured the court, that he had been given the dog by a Mr. Stanley Nelson. Nelson testified that he had procured the canine from Jack Scott, the accused man, in a trade for a Newfoundland pup. Bedell positively identified the dog as being his.

In defence Scott swore he purchased the dog from a man, giving his name as that of Williams and residing in Trenton. Magistrate Butler informed the accused that it would be necessary for him to produce Williams in court in order to substantiate his story. The matter will continue next Monday. A. C. Eastedo of Stirling appeared for the defence and B. C. Donnan, K.C., for the Crown.

A domestic case, arising out of family difficulties was also heard, but due to contradictory evidence, His Worship enlarged the matter for judgment, indicating to the parties concerned that a reconciliation would perhaps be the better procedure.

Police News

One lone inebriate occupied the local police cells over the week end he having been arrested on Saturday night and released Sunday to subsequently appear in the police court.

The Oshawa police requested the local authorities to keep a sharp look out for a Buick coupe stolen in that city early today. The motor car was painted green and bore the licence plates numbered T-4080.

The manager of the Fruit Machinery Comapny, Front Street, complained to the police that a large quantity of copper wire had been stolen from the premises of late. Immediate attention was promised in this case.

Mr. A. Glass, 270 Coleman Street informed the authorities that a motor rug had been stolen from his automobile while it was parked Saturday night. A description of the rug was given but no trace of its whereabouts was forthcoming.

Due to the sub-zero weather experienced locally over the week end motor traffic was at a rather low premium. Not a single serious accident being reported on surrounding highways since last Friday.

CLOTHING TAKEN FROM STOCKROOM

Quick and Robertson, Men's Store Entered During Night

Gaining entrance by forcing a rear window burglars broke and entered the premises of Quick and Robertson's haberdashery store some time Sunday night and stole two topcoats, overalls and other articles of wearing apparel.

The robbery was discovered by Constable Taylor while going over his beat at 5 a.m. today. The officer noticed a rear window had been broken and on trying a nearby door found it only partially secure. Upon entering the store the officer discovered that a rear stock room had been ransacked. Sergt. Harman was notified and after searching the premises thoroughly the owners were notified.

Later the officers found some old clothes that had apparently been discarded by the robbers. Leather coats, top coats, overalls and stockings had been strewn about indicating that the burglars had hurriedly gone through the stock and taken what clothes they needed. Transients are believed to have been responsible.

The full account of the missing goods could not be determined until a check-up has been taken at the store. The police were of the opinion that one burglar entered thru' a window, opening the door allowing his accomplice to enter; this door was later pulled shut.

WILL CONSIDER PUNISHMENT

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 10 (CP)—Magistrate Arnold today stated he wanted time to ponder on the punishment to be meted out to three youths and two young girls arrested in an apartment at 16 1-2 King Street, early Sunday, by officers who formed a morality squad following a complaint.

Occupant of the room Jack Rooe, 18, pleaded guilty to keeping a disorderly house. Hillyard Chapple, 16, and Earl Bishop, 17, and Alleene Primeau, 19, pleaded guilty to being "found in" as well as a 14-year-old girl, who similarly pleaded in Juvenile Court.

JAPANESE BOAT RIDING OUT GALE

Captain, Chief and Third Officer Are Washed Overboard

New York, Dec. 10—(AP)— A headless horseman of the sea, the Japanese freighter Victoria Maru rode out a mid-Atlantic gale today, with Captain and chief officer dead, the third officer lost and seven of the crew injured.

S.O.S. messages, intercepted by other ships, that went racing to her rescue, and relayed to shore, told of her bridge being destroyed by mountainous waves. The last message reported from her wireless man, however, said:

"I am alone but present conditions not so dangerous."

From the staccato story told in are meagre messages, sea-going men deduced, that the stricken freighter lost her rudder in the storm; was being directed by the movement of her propeller, and apparently was holding her own.

The drama of the ship against the sea was brought vividly into the warm living rooms ashore after the Japanese freighter told of her radio receiving apparatus being disabled and asked that she be communicated with on commercial wave lengths between 200 and 400 metres.

Regular broadcasts were interrupted to assure the surviving members of the crew, that their S.O.S. had been received, and that ships in the vicinity were steaming to give aid.

North of Azores

In the first messages last night, the Victoria Maru gave her location as lattitude 45:39 north, longitude 28:25 west; about 484 miles north of the Azores.

A message at 9:22 p.m., picked up by the S.S. Washington and relayed to the Mackay Radio Corporation's station at Rockland, Me., asked:

"What is my bearing? I am alone but present conditions not much dangerous. I gave up about my receiving set. I will send tests every 15 minutes for bearings."

The Radio Marine Corporation received a report from the German liner Bremen, that the liner Albert Ballin and several freighters were in the vicinity of the Victoria Maru and were speeding to her side.

The Japanese freighter, bound out of Hamburg for New York with a crew of 36 Japanese, is on the great circle route used regularly by trans Atlantic shipping.

She is a 385-foot vessel of 5,875 tons, owned by the Kokusai line of Japan and chartered by the United States Navigation Company of New York. She cleared Hamburg November 16 with a general cargo.

No Word During Night

Through the black hours of the dead of night, no further word came to land of the floundering freighter.

Details of her predicament were given in a message, picked up from the Victoria Maru and relayed by the Chatman, Mass., radio-marine station, which said:

"Require urgent help. Lost bridge. Position 45:39 north, 28:25 west. Course 95. Speed nine miles. Floating with help of engines. Captain, chief dead. Third officer missed. Seven wounded. Others safe."

15 MILLIONS IN CHURCH CRUSADE

Legion of Decency Stronger by Signing of Pledge Cards

New York, Dec. 10.—The Legion of Decency was a more formidable weapon than ever today against "salacious movies" following the drafting in the United States yesterday of some 15,000,000 Catholics in the crusade of the church.

In hundreds of cities and towns, persons at mass intoned the pledge, which began:

"I condemn the indecent and immoral motion pictures, and those which glorify crime or criminals."

In New York city alone, 650,000 Catholics made the vow and most of them signed individual pledges printed by the Catholic News and distributed during church services. The pledge was taken for one year. Annual renewal is planned.

The complete pledge contains a vow "to remain away from pictures that are dangerous to my moral life" and "to stay away altogether from places which show them as a matter of policy."

Issue Weekly Guide

The Legion of Decency recently announced it would issue a weekly "motion picture guide" dividing all films into three classes—class A. containing pictures approved for all; class B, those approved for adults only; class C, those condemned as unfit for public entertainment.

Gratification at the results of the campaign was seen when the first list, issued Friday, named at the top of the class B list Mae West's last vehicle, "Belle of the Nineties" Months ago when the camaign was gathering force, a Cardinal of the Church said, "what we want to stop is pictures like Mae West's". The one now approved as "fit for adults" remained in the studio some weeks following completion, reportedly for the purpose of sifting out a satisfactory title. Finally it was released to receive the approval of the Legion of Decency.

Some of the films listed under class A are Will Rogers' "Judge Priest", Wallace Beery's "Treasure Island", and Helen Hayes' "What Every Woman Knows".

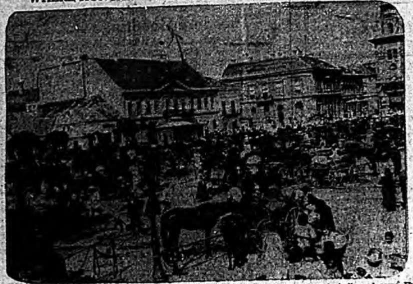
WHERE HUNGARIAN REFUGES ARE GATHERING



The market place at Szeged, Hungary, will once more be crowded to capacity now that 30,000 Hungarians are using it as a haven following their expulsion from Jugoslavia. An international "incident" had serious repercussions when a small party of irregular "hot heads" of the Jugoslavian army crossed the border near Szeged and challenged some Hungarian soldiers to a fight. Only the greatest restraint on the part of the Hungarian officers prevented bloodshed.

CARRYING PLACE WOMEN'S ASSOC. HOLDS BAZAAR

Interesting Play Follows Afternoon's Entertainment

Chilly breezes from bay to bay whistling along the roads and round houses failed to keep at home a near capacity crowd that turned out on Wednesday evening to patronize the annual bazaar presented by the Women's Association here in the United Church hall. Gathering at the hall in the early afternoon the ladies erected and prettily decorated a number of tables and booths at which fine handiwork done by the Society, candy and popcorn were sold. At the handiwork table Mesdames LaTour and Dusenbury presided ably, and a nice sum was realized as a result of the sale of these. At the candy and popcorn booth Mrs. P. Green disposed of large quantities of home-made sweets and of popcorn balls prettily decorated. During the early part of the evening the audience spent the minutes inspecting and purchasing the handiwork and visiting together. The chairman of the evening was Rev. E. F. Swayne of Consecon who presided in his usual pleasing and capable manner, and who wittily introduced the various members of the cast of the play "Sunbonnets" featured on the evening's program. Included in the cast were Mrs. Clayton Gould as Mrs. Butterfield, president of the Ladies' Aid, Charline Butterfield, her daughter, played by Miss Lela Black, Mrs. De Bois, president of the Ladies' Benevolent Society, played by Mrs. D'Arcy Stapleton, Mildred De Bois, her daughter, played by Miss Elsie Pitchett, Mrs. Phelan played by Mrs. Will Clark, Miss Trephiny, postmistress, played by Miss Nora Hennessey, Mrs. Tibbetts played by Mrs A. A. Wannamaker, Mrs. Crannan played by Mrs. E. H. Hennessey, Mrs. Pendleton played by Mrs. J. M. Hanthorn, Mrs. Martin played by Mrs. N. Innes, and Miss Spinney played by Miss Daisy Innes. The story of hte play was a quaint one, concerning the bickerings and subsequent reunion of two rival welfare societies working in the same community and meeting, in fact, in the same house.

Following the play lunch was served by the ladies. Cake, sandwiches, tea and coffee were brought in from the kitchen and duly enjoyed. However so great a supply of foodstuffs had been contributed that a little later an impromptu auction sale was needed in order to get rid of excess cakes. With Mr. Joe Hanthorn as auctioneer, and a very capable one too, several more dollars were added to the treasury as the surplus was sold. The singing of the National Anthem and the Benediction closed the meeting and brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

Dr. E. A. McQuade, Medical Officer of Health for Murray township paid a visit to the local school on Wednesday afternoon, his first this autumn. As many will remember Dr. McQuade is the one responsible for instituting the movement a year ago to give free toxoid for diphtheria to school children of the township. So successful was the project with nearly four hundred pupils receiving the three inoculations necessary to guarantee life immunity from the disease that a great deal of deserved praise was showered upon the Medical Officer of Health for his initiative and interest in the welfare of children under his supervision. Many have expected that during this winter season last year's program would be followed again with the substitution of a scarlet fever toxin in place of that given for diphtheria. However, as a sure indication that Dr. McQuade is not only even with the times but perhaps a little ahead of them it has been advised by the medical council in Toronto that the scarlet fever toxin be not given since it is yet in an undeveloped form and accordingly would, if administered, produce very unpleasant reactions upon the child. Medical research men are working night and day to perfect the toxin; yet it may be several years yet before it reaches a degree of excellence achieved by those who produced the diphtheria toxin. All this Dr. McQuade explained as he spoke to the assembled pupils of the two rooms; and went on to say that since it was out of the question to give another toxin this winter, he proposed, with the consent of the parent of each child, to administer free at his office smallpox serum. Mentioning the outbreak of chickenpox in a nearby rural centre where the complaint had assumed the proportions of an epidemic, he said that he believed it is the best interest of everyone to make use of the chances given him to insure his health. During the summer holidays, he stated thirty-three school children had tonsils and adenoids removed as a part of the project for tonsil removal planned last spring. Next summer it is hoped to continue this scheme again, and in the meantime the vaccination for smallpox is of considerable importance he pointed out. Before leaving the school a sample of the water from the "town well" was taken this supply being the one which serves the school as well as a number of homes near at hand.

A number of Murray township teachers gathered on Wednesday evening last at the school in S. S. No. 23, ninth concession for one of the regular meetings of their society. Hostesses for the evening were Misses Frances Morgan and Hilda Henderson. With the president in the chair the minutes were read by Miss L. Munroe of York Road, and following the Question Box queries were conducted by Mr. G. McGee of Wooler. Miss Munroe gave a paper "The Time Table and its Place in the School" and directed a discussion following. An intelligence test was enjoyed with Mrs Vera Teal of Wooler conducting. Games and refreshments followed, and it was midnight before all the guests had started for their homes. These meetings are held monthly, the January gathering to be at Hart's Corners north of Trenton.

But a very few days of legal navigation remain ere closing time when lighthouses and canals will shut up for the winter and their tenders will enjoy a hard-earned rest. Although the fifteenth is the legal day for closing, it is said that the local canal is merely waiting for one more boat west-bound, expected before the end of the week, and after its passing the flag at the bridge will come down.

600 SOURDOUGHS REVIVE MEMORIES

Banquet Held For Old Timers of Yukon, Moose Meat Being Fare

Seattle, Dec. 10—(AP) — Six hundred Sourdoughs many of them in dinner dress, danced, played and talked here yesteray, reviving memories of the Klondyke and the Yukon.

It was a banquet to revive the wild days of the Klondyke gold rush and the mad stampede over the Chilkoot Pass, but dinner jackets, aeroplanes and civilization crept in. The pioneers from Canada, Alaska and United States were supposed to wear Indian parkas and mukluks of fur, but they went sophisticate.

The Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, Episcopal Bishop of Alaska, started out to tell of his friendship with "Soapy" Smith, Tex Rickard, Jack London and the other old timers, and ended by confessing he used an aeroplane instead of a dog team nowadays, and found no criminals, fight promoters or authors to convert.

"Soapy" Smith, one of the slickest confidence men in the territory, was my treasurer at Skagway," the ruddy, iron-gray haired prelate said. "He used to take care of the collection for me after I preached in a saloon or dance hall in the old days. He was a good treasurer, while he lasted."

'Soapy" was shot to death by one of his enraged victims.

President Roosevelt's new gold price, which started Alaska back on the road to prosperity, was cheered, and government policies in Alaska cussed and discussed" between helpings of moose meat.

Capt. Joe Mathews, Yukon river boat operator, brought the moose from the Northwest Territory, by special permission of the Canadian government, he said.

Besides moose, there were celery from Fairbanks, smoked salmon from the Yukon, potatoes from the Matanuska, string beans from Dawson, salad with Aleutian Island dressing and Klondyke rolls.

BELLEVILLE PORT IS NOW CLOSED

Ottawalite First Boat in This Season and Last Out

"Business discontinued until the spring of 1935." This is the sign that is figuratively nailed to the door of the deserted freight sheds on the local dock today following the departure of the last boat of the season from the port.

The snug little tanker Ottawalite, owned by the Imperial Oil Company which steamed out of port yesterday after having unloaded her cargo into the local company's tanks held the honor of being the first boat to open the shipping season locally last spring, and the last boat to leave this fall.

Not only has the end been reached in the season's navigation, but also it spells finis to one of the best shipping years enjoyed by the local port for a long period.
